Biographical Information

William Henry Chamberlin was a prolific American historian and journalist. Influenced by his experiences abroad during the 1930s, Chamberlin became a staunch conservative and strong proponent of individual liberty. Despite these political leanings, Chamberlin's works are described as impartial and keenly insightful. Chamberlin's scholarly approach and passionate style has led him to be considered a legitimate authority on critical issues from the mid twentieth century.

William H. Chamberlin was born in Brooklyn, New York, on February 17, 1897. He attended the William Penn Charter School before entering Haverford College for undergraduate studies. A recipient of several awards in recognition of his academic achievements, classmates attest to his intelligence and passion for Latin, Greek, Russian, history, and literature. In addition, Chamberlin was an active contributor to the college newspaper, the Haverfordian.

Upon graduation, Chamberlin secured a position on the staff of The Philadelphia Press. At age twenty-five, Chamberlin moved to Greenwich Village, New York, where he worked for Heywood Broun, a book editor of the New York Tribune. In Greenwich Village, Chamberlin was surrounded by pro-Bolsheviks and likewise adopted these sentiments. Writing under the pseudonym A.C Freeman, his pieces support socialism and the Communist regime in the USSR. It was at this time that he married his wife, Sonya Trotsen, a Russian-born immigrant. They would have one daughter, Elizabeth Chamberlin.

In 1922, Chamberlin took a position with the Christian Science Monitor as their Moscow correspondent, a position he would hold for twelve years in addition to working for the Manchester Guardian. Chamberlin's first book, Soviet Russia (1930), maintains his initial support of Bolshevism but also provides the first glimpse of disillusionment with this ideology. He increasingly became disenchanted with Soviet censorship, suppression, and terrorism. When Chamberlin and Sonya witnessed the devastation of the 1932-1933 famine in the Ukraine and Northern Caucuses, he completely denounced communism.

As a foreign correspondent in Germany, Japan and France, Chamberlin's opposition towards any form of absolutism and collectivism solidified. Upon returning to the United States in 1939, Chamberlin worked as a free-lance journalist, contributing to The New Leader, The Wall Street Journal, and the Russian Review. His pieces espouse a deep commitment to personal liberty, faith in human reason and freedom, and political conservatism. Chamberlin also continued his career as an author, eventually writing eighteen books, which focus mainly on Soviet history.

Chamberlin additionally served as The Wall Street Journal political and economic commentator. He disagreed with American involvement in World War II and continued to contest U. S. policies of intervention and appeasement after the war, especially in regards to communist countries.

Aside from writing, Chamberlin was a great enthusiast of classical music, baseball and football. He was also a member of the John Birch Society, an organization which shared many of his more conservative stands. Furthermore, Chamberlin was especially devoted to his wife Sonya, who often assisted him in research and supported his literary career. Devastated by Sonya's death in 1969, he only survived her by nine months. Suffering from a stroke during a trip to St. Moritz, Switzerland, William Henry Chamberlin died on September 12, 1969.

Extent: 1 box(es)(.25 linear feet)( folders)
Material types:
case histories
congressional committee reports journals (periodicals)
publications
reviews (document genre)

Scope and Content Note

This series contains a number of publications which relate to topics William H. Chamberlin studied, analyzed and focused on in his articles and books. The major subject matter of these works is Germany and Eastern Europe during the Nazis regime as well as post-World War II. Several of these publications were written by Klaus Epstein, Elizabeth Chamberlin's first husband.

In addition, there is United States Congressional Report on Soviet Communism, prepared by the Commmittee on Un-American Activities, U. S. House of Representatives. As a foreign correspondent and political-economic commentator, Chamberlin would have found the materials in this collection as pertinent to his work and interests.

Arrangement

This series is arranged chronologically.

Scope and Content Note

This series contains Chamberlin's family diaries and his personal journals which reflect his work as a journalist as well as his personal interests. The journals are handwritten and include notes and comments on world affairs and drafts of articles Chamberlin wrote. Two of the notebooks also include baseball statistics recorded by Chamberlin, who was an ardent fan of the sport.

In addition, the series includes 8 microfilm rolls containing copies of the Chamberlin family diaries beginning in 1855 and Chamberlin's personal diaries beginning in 1912. Four of the microfilm rolls are positive rolls and the other four rolls, which are the negatives, are duplicates.

Although not part of the original collection, two doctoral dissertations on microfilm - Robert Hobbs Meyers (1973) and Eduard Maximilian Mark (1978) - are included in this inventory. These dissertations lend insight and analysis into Chamberlin's political views on Soviet Union policies.

Scope and Content Note

This series covers a range of materials pertaining to the life of William H. Chamberlin. Biographical information on Chamberlin's attendance at Haverford College, as well as documents detailing the Union Army commission of his grandfather are included. The series also contains personal correspondence between Chamberlin and his wife Sonya, his daughter Elizabeth, and his grandchildren. There are also a number of photographs, greeting cards, and news clippings of a personal nature.

Additionally, there are letters from research consultants and political figures, as well as notes of gratitude from authors whose works Chamberlin gave favourable reviews.

Arrangement

The series is arranged alphabetically. The correspondence, however, is divided into general and personal catagories, which are in chronological order.
