

THE PROSE POEM: AN INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL

Volume 6 | 1997

Charlemagne Sends A Proposal Of Marriage To The Empress Irene Of Byzantium Gail White

© Providence College

The author(s) permits users to copy, distribute, display, and perform this work under the following conditions: (1) the original author(s) must be given proper attribution; (2) this work may not be used for commercial purposes; (3) the users may not alter, transform, or build upon this work; (4) users must make the license terms of this work clearly known for any reuse or distribution of this work. Upon request, as holder of this work's copyright, the author(s) may waive any or all of these conditions.

The Prose Poem: An International Journal is produced by The Berkeley Electronic Press (bepress)
for the Providence College Digital Commons.
<http://digitalcommons.providence.edu/prosepoems/>

Gail White

CHARLEMAGNE SENDS A PROPOSAL OF MARRIAGE TO THE EMPRESS IRENE OF BYZANTIUM

My ambassadors will say all this in more flowery language, suitable for the Mistress of the East, but my way is to come to the point: why shouldn't we two make a pair? Yes, I know all about your son—you blinded him, I understand, in the room where he was born. A nice maternal touch! But he was your enemy. I know how to overlook a thing like that. And don't you believe all you hear, either. Fastrada was a meddling bitch. But that's not the point. The Pope crowned me because you're a woman, and a man should be Emperor, right? But with a woman like you a man is twice a man. Back me up with the Pope and I'll back you up with your Patriarch. Why shouldn't the church have icons and statues, both? Lady, when we lie down together like logs, the sparks will fly upward. Our children will mangle the Vikings with a single frosty breath.