Note:
I think our responsibility, as teachers and as artists, is to help our students to develop their voices and to give our colleagues a platform from which to share their work. I’m so thrilled that so many talented women chose to share their stories (six of the seven pieces were written by women), and I’m equally thrilled that women are directing and acting in tonight’s festival in numbers that (I imagine) far exceed the traditional gender ratio in the professional theater. We only grow when we tell everyone’s story, and we only learn when we listen. I’m glad to step out of the way and let these artists speak for themselves.

Dave Rabinow, Curator for the Creative Writers Festival

Special Thanks
Jimmy Calitri, Ali Boyd, Susan Werner, and the entire TDF Department; Jonathan Coppe and Sabrina Guilbeault, for going the extra mile to make the CWF happen; every student who submitted work, acted, or staged a play: every act of creation is an act of resistance to destruction, and I’m proud to share your voices.

Please note:
This production’s locations will move. Please be sure to follow the actors and House Managers when prompted. Locations of each piece are included.
