2016

Slavery in Rhode Island: Awakening a Forgotten Past (brochure)

Abudu Adeboye
Providence College, aadeboye@friars.providence.edu

Cassandra Caggiano
Providence College, ccaggian@friars.providence.edu

Cassandra M. Chisolm
Providence College, cchislom@friars.providence.edu

Marisa DelFarno
Providence College, mdelfarn@friars.providence.edu

Brian Nicholas
Providence College, bnichola@friars.providence.edu

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.providence.edu/black_studies_students

Part of the Race and Ethnicity Commons, Social History Commons, and the United States History Commons

---

Adeboye, Abudu; Caggiano, Cassandra; Chisolm, Cassandra M.; DelFarno, Marisa; and Nicholas, Brian, "Slavery in Rhode Island: Awakening a Forgotten Past (brochure)" (2016). Black Studies Student Publications. Paper 2.
http://digitalcommons.providence.edu/black_studies_students/2

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Black Studies at DigitalCommons@Providence. It has been accepted for inclusion in Black Studies Student Publications by an authorized administrator of DigitalCommons@Providence. For more information, please contact mcaprio1@providence.edu.
Do We need to learn more?

Answers from Our Peers
We conducted a survey testing the knowledge of our peers regarding the History of slavery in Rhode Island.

Do you strongly agree, agree, neutral, disagree or strongly disagree with this statement: Students at Providence College receive an accurate representation when educated on the history of slavery in the United States

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Answer Choice</th>
<th>Responses</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Strongly agree</td>
<td>3 (6.98%)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Agree</td>
<td>5 (10.53%)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Neutral</td>
<td>14 (28.62%)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Disagree</td>
<td>15 (30.38%)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Strongly disagree</td>
<td>4 (8.12%)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Who We Are?

About Us
We are a group of Providence College students enrolled this semester in an Introductory course on Black Studies, seeking to raise awareness about the historical past of Rhode Island. Our project is dedicated to exploring the elements of slavery in Rhode Island that are omitted from what we are taught in historically influenced classes at Providence College such as The Development of Western Civilization.

Instead, the history lessons we are taught are most often centered around a Euro-centric view, but we aim to challenge these narrow teachings and widen our perspectives by constructing alternative narratives that go against the metanarrative.

We see to recover the truth and acknowledge the agency, the set of skills, and the sense of humanity that black individuals managed to retain during and after their enslavement.

By overlooking Rhode Island’s involvement in the slave trade, we as college students remain ignorant to how slavery was not just concentrated thousands of miles away from us, but occurred in the familiar places we travel to everyday. We would not only like to shed light on the hidden history of slavery, but to raise consciousness about how this history should play a vital part in our education at Providence College.
Providence

Brown University:
The fortune used to fund Brown University on the East Side of Providence was acquired by the trafficking of slaves throughout New England. The Browns family controlled slave trade in Rhode Island.

The Cathedral of St. John:
The Cathedral of St. John has begun to create a museum to educate on the Church’s involvement during the 1700s—where a majority of Rhode Island’s shipbuilders worshiped.

Newport

Newport Rhode Island Museum of History:
This building was used as a slave market. The Newport Slave traders also bought sugar canes from Caribbean plantations and turned it into rum. They would then have exported it to the West coast of Africa in exchange for rum.

Touro Synagogue:
This is the oldest synagogue in the America dating back to the colonial times. One of the leading contributors toward its construction was Aaron Lopez, who was a Jewish merchant and one of the wealthiest man in Newport. Lopez was heavily involved in the slave trade and controlled close to 30 slave ships by the start of the American revolution.

Bristol

Linden Place:
This was the home of George DeWolf, who was also the nephew of James DeWolf, another famous slave trader and the second-wealthiest man in the United States. Despite its involvement in the slave trade, it is still hailed as being the “architectural crown jewel” of Bristol’s waterfront district.

DeWolf Tavern:
DeWolf Tavern is situated in the historic building once known as DeWolf Rum Distillery. The restaurant’s website lightly notes them as “maritime merchants.” However, James DeWolf was actually one of the most famous slave traders.