DANCE NEWS: PROVIDENCE COLLEGE SEEKS CHOREOGRAPHERS

Providence College seeks choreographers for two separate projects to take place on the Providence College campus in September of this year.

The first project is a Choreographer's Showcase for professional Rhode Island choreographers. The performance will present the work of 6-10 artists in the Blackfriars Theatre on September 4th and 5th. It will be an opportunity for choreographers active in the state to show their work in a new context. Audiences will have the benefit of seeing an array of indigenous, professional creative work. Rhode Island State Council on the Arts has granted money towards this project.

Inclusion in the Showcase will be based on artistic excellence, and the selection process will include viewing of videotapes or live performance. All qualified choreographers are encouraged to apply. No fees are available for artists, however, free rehearsal space will be provided for those involved.

The second project is a commission for professional choreographers interested in working with college students. The Theatre Department is seeking one or possibly two choreographers to set a work on members of the student dance group, PC Dancers, for presentation in the Student Dance Concert in early December. Selection will be based on artistic excellence and experience in working with college students. A $500 fee is offered.

Please contact the Providence College Theatre Department if interested in either of these projects: 865-2327.
