P.C. Scholars Smother Suffolk

By BRIAN MAHONEY
Sunday night, hordes of P.C. students gathered in front of Raymond Hall to greet the victorious College Bowl team. The four "varsity scholars" had come from a 75-70 half-time deto Coach Edward Brennan immediately after the victory. He received fragmentary, but candid, replies from the excited victors.

Jim Harkin "wasn't nervous until it was over." He was "more nervous in the faculty game," referring to a practice session in which the College Bowl team played a team composed of Father Haas, Fr. Hickboys for their achievement as I am of athletes for theirs."

When asked what he felt about our facing next week a "big name" school, Columbia, Father Haas replied, "The history of Ivy League and other prestige schools on the College Bowl is not too illustrious, but P. C. has never had it easy. We've always had to work from an 'underdog' position for our Northwestern; that score was 165-130.

Columbia was requested by the College Bowl in March to prepare a team. The final selections were made in April and since then they have been con-ficit to overwhelm Suffolk University of Boston by a final score of 260-75.

The P.C. team broke the scoring deadlock in rapid fashion by answering four out of the first five toss-up questions in the second half. One bonus question required the team to sing, hum, or whistle bars from "Waltzing Matilda," "Greensleeves," "La Paloma," and "Aupres de Ma Blonde." Their renditions were unprofessional, to say the least, but good enough to win 20 bonus points.

Mr. George O'Brien, P.C. Director of Public Information, spoke to the team members and ey, Fr. Fennell, and Dr. Thomson.

Brian Albino was "nervous before the game, but calmed down once it got started." Bill Stenson likewise was nervous before the game; he didn't feel secure until "about 40 points into the second half."

Mr. Brennan was uneasy during the early part of the game, but was generally confident since "we trounced them so well in the three practice games."

that most of us already knew, but perhaps the rest of the world didn't. P.C. produces an exceptionally fine grade of student. I am as proud of these successes."

Mr. Brennan expressed a different point of view: "Next week it will not be Providence College playing Columbia, but four of our best playing four of their best." He feels that our best are as good as their best.

NEXT WEEK

Next week will be Columbia's second appearance on the College Bowl. In 1959, the second game of the seven year old series, Columbia was defeated by ducting occasional informal practice sessions.

The team captain is Lia Racad, 19½, a senior chemistry major from Forest Hills, Long Island. Derek Randall, 20, is a senior Oriental studies major from New York City. Jeffrey Rosen, 20, is a junior government major from Cincinnati, Ohio. Steven Ross, 20, is a junior history major, also from Forest Hills.

Mr. Mark Flanagan is the coach of the Columbia team. An assistant dean, he is Director of Student Activities and a member of the English faculty. He is a graduate of Columbia.

Mr. Palumbo Speaks To Economics Club

Mr. Edwin P. Palumbo, special lecturer on economics here, will address the members of the St. Antoninus Club tomorrow.

Mr. Palumbo, who is a member of the Providence College Economics Department, will speak on the problems of city development and growth as influenced by industrial changes, business changes, business patterns, and new living habits.

"Mr. Palumbo is particularly competent in the field of urban economics and well known in this field around the New England," said the Rev. Charles B. Quirk, O.P., chairman of the P.C. Department.

Mr. Palumbo graduated from Providence College, and attended Boston College's graduate school. Formerly, he was a member of the Providence Redevelopment Agency as Chief Industrial Representative for the city of Providence, a mem-

D. E. S. Chapter Elects Officers

The new officers of the Theta Chapter of Delta Epsilon Sigma were announced at the induction ceremonies on October 27.

Paul Giannelli, chairman of the nominating committee, announced that Dennis A. Wentraub and James F. Slevin had been elected president and vice-president, respectively, of Theta.

He also stated that Thomas P. Clarke and Peter C. Kenny had been chosen as the senior members of the executive board, and Dennis R. Lord and Donald H. Sauvignat as the junior members of the board. These officers were selected on the basis of a write-in vote.

"First of all," said Mr. Wentraub, "I would like to congratulate the new members. You have good reason to be proud. I have been very fortunate at Providence College and I am very happy that this honor has been bestowed upon me."

College Grants '67 A Unique Privilege

November 19 will mark a milestone in Providence College's social life. For the first time in the history of the college a cocktail party will be held by the senior class.

The party will be held from 6-8 P.M. at Raymond Hall snack bar before the Folk Festival. During this time the bar will be open continuously. Only P.C. seniors and their dates, plus invited members of the faculty, will be allowed to attend.

The plan which allows these parties was evolved after many consultations between Senior Class President John Minicucci and the Administration. Mr.

Newton was an invaluable aid in presenting the students' viewpoint.

The control of the parties will be in the hands of the seniors themselves, that is, the class moderator and the class officers. Any student who behaves in an ungentlemanly manner or who exhibits any evidence of overconsumption of beer or alcohol will be asked to leave and will be subject to social probation and disciplinary action.

It is essential that the rules which have been agreed upon be carefully adhered to. The precedent which this party sets will almost totally determine whether or not more parties will be held. According to Senior President Minicucci, "The privilege which the faculty has given us has not been easily obtained, but it certainly can be easily lost if the rules of con-

Editorially Speaking

The Friar 2 plus 2 . . .

"You must admit, we're still a second half club!"

The statement was, perhaps, a bit incongruous considering the situation, but then again, maybe it wasn't.

So now it's the "Fabulous Friar FOUR" (to coin another of the Post-Sun. night phraseologies), and just what does it all mean?

It could mean that Providence College is at last "coming of age" in a long-awaited manner. We've long been successful in our athletic exploits, and nation-wide prominence in this regard has come to be expected of us, lack of the same signifying an "off" year to the more avid of our supporters. But the question must issue forth from the other parts of the country at times: "Just what ELSE do they have at Providence College?" So now we can show them!

We can show them that intellectual activity has at last become a self-asserting force here at P. C., that theological-philosophical controversies are the bare Minimum of this activity, and that perhaps, the long-awaited, much-heralded "new era" has begun in earnest. I don't suppose a "post-bowl pep rally" behind the walls of Aquinas Hall late Sun. night would be considered the ideal personification of this "era," but it says a great deal for the "new" type of P.C. Gentleman! We need to recognize this novel portrayal of intellectual capabilities, if for no other reason than for a self-recognition of a growing element.

As for Columbia . . . "touche!"

We Salute . . .

The Cowl takes its hat off to . . .

The G. E. Friars for their impressive win against Suffolk University in the College Bowl.

Rev. Damien Myett, O.P., Chaplain — In the departure of Father Myett, the college loses a Chaplain, the faculty lose an example, and students lose a dear friend with an ever-attentive ear. We learned to love him while he was here, and we shall miss him when he is gone: little more need be said. His work speaks for itself. In a little less than a year, Father Myett has made a distinct impression on this campus — a wonderfully wholesome one. And although we deeply regret his sudden departure, we wish him well in his new duties. Via con Dios!

Rev. Adrian Wade, O.P., acting-Chaplain — Father Wade assumes the duties of the Chaplain's Office bearing a full burden of classes. Inside of class and out about the campus, he is far from being unknown to the student body. Often, he will spend his dinner hours in the company of students: a man who thinks this much of his role as teacher and friend is an admirable choice for this interim position.

Dr. Donald Leary and Dr. Mark Rerick — recently named Danforth Associates by the Danforth Foundation. The purpose of this honor is to provide incentive to faculty members to better the rapport between students and teachers within the collegiate community. This singular distinction is both a personal tribute and an honor to the college.

Rev. William D. Folsey, O.P., PC's own Folk-Priest who, under the auspices of the Chaplain's Office, has introduced the now-famous folk mass to the college's resident students. Constantly open to those who approach him for help, Father Folsey has earned the deep respect of a cross-section of the student body.

The Administration, Student Congress, and the Senior Class who, in one major effort at co-operation, worked out provisions for a closed cocktail party to be held prior to the coming Folk Festival. A minor event in itself, it hopefully signals the beginning of significant breakthrough in Administration-Student co-operation. If this social hour proves successful, it is hoped that it will lead to a further liberalization on college rules, and to a more fruitful era of mutual understanding among students and administrators.

Mr. Clean ??

What is the cost of a little soap and water? Throughout Harkins Hall the lavatory facilities, with the exception of the new facility on the first floor, have deteriorated to a nauseating condition.

The offenses to cleanliness are apparent to anyone who enters the building and especially to the individuals who take pride in their college. The immediate responsibility for the problem rest with the heads of the maintenance department, for to place the blame on the presently overtaxed janitors in the building is completely unjustifiable.

We suggest that this problem could be corrected with a redistribution of custodians, notably the surplus in Alumni Hall.

It is truly ironic that an institution so "image conscious" as Providence College should allow such a situation to exist. Of all buildings, Harkins Hall, would seem the last place for anything of this nature to be present. It is frequented by most visitors to the campus, the extension students, and alumni.

For the purely practical reason of furthering the "Providence College image" such a situation should be corrected, however, a more basic motive would be to create a healthy atmosphere for the student body.

Protection . . .

Recently, a rather awkward situation developed and then suddenly disappeared from campus. We hope that it was merely a bad mistake on someone's part and not a test plan for the future. What we are referring to was the practice of the Pinkerton men noting the license plates of students returning to the campus after room check.

This sort of "policing" does not belong on the campus, especially in the hands of the Pinkerton men. A casual glance to insure that cars coming into the parking lot have PC stickers would be sufficient. But to turn in license numbers to some "central authority" would lead to a very uncomfortable situation. This could only result in confrontations such as "Where were you last night?" or "Who was driving your car?" The first should be known by the prefect and the second is no one's business.

Let us hope that campus security will continue to protect us and not attempt to harass us.

MEMO—

FROM THE EDITOR

"That was the Week that Was." The past seven hectic days have been exciting ones for the entire Providence College Community. The victorious College Bowl Team set the stage by adding an air of enthusiasm to the campus. The administration, not to be outdone by the students, granted the senior class a rather unique privilege.

But, was this the week and are these the people who deserve all the credit? We think not. In fact, we would like to express our gratitude to those who worked diligently behind the scenes to make this an eventful week.

Hats off to Mr. Ed Brennan and the four men who represented P. C. so well! How many of us think of the hours which were spent in selecting this team? This victory was no accident. Four young men were given a task—to make P. C. a winner—and they did in grand fashion. But there is more to this team than the present members. Competition, coaching, and preparations were all part of this victory; anyone who assisted the team in any area certainly deserves some credit.

As for credit, a great deal should be given to those who assisted the seniors in securing the privilege to hold cocktail parties on campus. Surely, congratulations should be extended to the seniors. Let's not drop the subject here, for a great deal of praise belongs to those other than students. One of the prime movers for this privilege was Mr. Arthur Newton who gave 100% of his efforts to this cause. Mr. Newton has often been depicted as the ogre who chases long-haired students through the corridors. However, there is another side to this man. THE COWL can vouch for the fact that Mr. Newton has gone "to bat" for the students on a number of occasions.

Together with Mr. Newton, we might show our appreciation to the Very Rev. William Paul Haas, O.P., and the rest of the administration. They were willing to meet and discuss the problem of serving liquor on campus with representatives of the senior class. A number of compromises evolved from these conferences will enable the seniors to hold such an event in the immediate future.

Since a variety of events seem to point to this week as "The Week That Was," let us hope that this week has brought about an air of cooperation which will enable us to say that "This Was the Year That Was."

“Chi Lo Sa?...”

By Georgios Pan Piperopoulos

Editor's Note: The author of this column, Mr. Georgios Pan Piperopoulos, is a member of the Providence College faculty in the Department of Sociology and a Fulbright exchange scholar.

He has served since 1960 as the U. S. correspondent for the Drasis Press Organization in Greece, and has been an editor of the “Atlantic Greek Daily” in New York.

He wrote a series of guest editorials concerning the difference between American and European students for the “Collegian.”

In plain English it means: “Who knows?”; and that's a sensible question, I think.

Sex, sex, sex, (I thought I'd mention it!). Check the movies; read the literature; hear the conversations on college campuses; pick the magazine of your choice (like the playmate?).

Sigma Epsilon XI, as real in everyday affairs as bread and butter. A controversial subject; provocative, bewildering, mystifying, troubling young and old, men and women: SEX!

And only to think that the loss of Eden would make—you know who—more sensible. O tempora, a mores. Has it ever stopped really, has it ever ceased being what it is? Depressed, suppressed, jeopardized, prohibited and yet always coming to the surface, as a balloon that you press into water in vain . . .

IT'S A GREAT NATION! You are a marvelous people! Great experimenters, never ceasing to investigate, to explore, to criticize, to analyze in an attempt to understand. But, “Chi Lo Sa?”

The conflicting ideologies, the “pro” and “con” arguments, the very subject of sex, is not something novel to me, a foreigner.

What is novel, and strikingly so though, is the simple fact that the whole approach is strange. “Sex revolution in America” it has been termed by authorities and laymen alike; and they can claim followers in “pro” and “con” from the population as well as the intelligentsia. The subject of sex, though, is a sui generis reality. It cannot be argued in an objective, rational manner; it cannot claim followers within the detached populus. Its very nature requires involvement, subjectivity.

Yet it's easy to “miss the boat” when you make it a subject matter of ethics, when you analyze it and its effects in terms of good and bad; this, in my opinion, will get you nowhere, unless you specify: Good for these reasons; bad because of these.

I hesitate to “stick my neck out” offering a solution to the problem of sex in American today; not because I am afraid, simply because I don't have any, I don't know of any: “Chi Lo Sa?”

Personal experiences of more than four years at colleges in America, and my participation in its culture (marginal though it may be) have driven me to two main conclusions:

FIRST, lack of adequate sex education in the home and the school, combined with lack of understanding between the parents and the child, leaves the latter “free” to explore, investigate on his own; should the adolescent “burn” himself or herself while indulging in this unguided (free) play with the fire, the lack of rapport with the parents will eliminate any proper consolation, and future guidance.

Thus, the little wingless lightfly, will venture into life creating around it a false facade of rationalizations that will serve as justifications for an act which is in reality so controversial (Church & Social Ethics vs. Hollywood Playboy, et al.)

SECONDLY, life in an impersonal mass society is unbearable for the individual. The man and the woman of talent, gifted with the ability of introspection can struggle along the paths of the existential predicament. . . .

But life on a college campus, or anywhere else for that matter, is a lonely affair. Plato was one of those who saw that as a sexual being, man is half a being, divided and incomplete, a being who longs to overcome the separation of existence by identifying with another.

For most, the best means of identification is sex. It's the act that fills the boredom of a school or work week and it does so with “pleasant” experiences.

But as such it becomes an end in itself; a temporary salvation, a negation of the inexorable today and tomorrow. That is where the bad lies. Used in that manner, it necessitates hypocrisy, falseness, procreates remorse, trauma, disgust (and possibly more Homo Sapiens). Whose fault is it? The society's, I think. And Society is just the men who comprise it. Society does not prohibit sex with austerity, and it does not approve it wholeheartedly. Why? Well, maybe simply because no generation has taken a stand on it that was very effective. Yesterday's adolescent experimenters are today's parents. And perplexed college students of my generation, will be tomorrow's parents.

Though the experiences from sex can be traumatic, yet the approach to the subject, was, is and “Chi Lo Sa?” may remain wishy-washy.

And I can't see why people could get surprised when they read the controversial articles on “The Sex Revolution in the U. S.”; why they search for a single answer, a standard guideline.

LIFE IS A LONELY battle; and the approach to sex, though “no man is an island . . .” is a personal choice. One thing could be done, however, and that's to keep the adolescent from independent experimentation until he reaches an age in which he or she can make a deliberate rational choice, according to his abilities. Can this be done? I think so; it was done in my culture, with the provisions of legal prostitution for the male, and a good internationalization of the female role by the female (a role praising chastity).

You may smile, you may get indignant citing the “effects” of such an “unjust” system for the individual. That's all right with me. I only said it was done this way in Greece, I didn't say it was better than America's approach.

I can recall though that I do not remember any great “sex revolution” going on there, yet.

What's best, then? “Chi Lo Sa?” fellow humans . . .

On The Aisle

By L. BRUCE PORTER

With Trinity Square Repertory Company's production of Saint Joan closing its run at the Rhode Island School of Design Theater this past weekend, rehearsals for the company's second production of the season, Tennessee Williams' A Streetcar Named Desire, are moving into their final phase. This Pulitzer Prize-winning work, which also won Williams his second New York Drama Critics Circle Award, is being directed by Adrian Hall, co-director of the Trinity Square repertory company that he helped to found. It will open on Tuesday, November 8, and run through December 2 at the Trinity Square Playhouse.

Actress Katherine Helmond, in her second season with the company, is cast as Blanche Dubois. This is a role which is regarded by most critics as the finest role Williams ever created. Miss Helmond has appeared in Orpheus Descending and many other off-Broadway successes. She was last seen at Trinity Square in the roles of Olympiada and Marya in The Eternal Husband.

Pamela Payton-Wright, who will play the role of Blanche's sister Stella, comes to Providence after a highly successful season with the Milwaukee Repertory Company. She was a prize-winner at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art in London and has also played in theaters in Birmingham, Raleigh and Sarasota.

Donald Gantry, another newcomer to Trinity Square, will appear in the role of Stanley Kowalski. Mr. Gantry has played both on and off-Broadway and is a veteran of classical roles at the American and San Diego Shakespearean Festivals and the Milwaukee Repertory Theater.

A veteran actress at Trinity Square and one of the founders of the company four seasons ago, Barbara Orson returns to the Playhouse in the role of Eunice Hubbell. She has played many leading roles in theaters throughout the country.

James Gallery, in his first season with this company, will play the role of Blanche's suitor, Mitch. Mr. Gallery, who has played in repertory theaters across the country, is well known to Shakespearean students through his portrayals on Folkways Records.

Other members of the all-professional cast include Schorling Schneider (a young collector), Joanna Featherstone (Clara), Victor Eschbach (Steve Hubbell), Brigido Cavazos (Pable Gonzales), and John Oldham (Doctor).

It is most pleasing to see that the same quartet that was highly acclaimed for its work in Saint Joan are also involved in this production. Lynn Pecktal is set designer, Roger Morgan is lighting designer, John Lehmyer costume designer, and Richard Cumming composer.

The Trinity Square Playhouse has undergone a thorough renovation for this season. A new wall replaces the old draperies around the main floor seats, and new carpeting has been laid. The entire theater has been repainted and new house and stage lighting installed.

The opening night perform-

Coskren Speaks

The Rev. Thomas M. Coskren, O.P., a graduate student at Yale University, will speak about the poetry of Wallace Stevens in the lounge of Aquinas Hall next Monday evening at eight.

The lecture is being sponsored by the Arts and Letters Society of Providence College.

Father Coskren spoke on the campus last year about the significance of symbolism in literature.

ance of A Streetcar Named Desire will be at 8:00 p.m. at the Trinity Square Playhouse at 7 Bridgham Street. All evening performances after the opening will begin at 8:30 p.m., with matinees scheduled for 2:30 Saturdays. Students and group rates are available for all performances. Tickets may be reserved or purchased at the Trinity Square Box Office, "A" The Arcade, or by calling 351-4242.

Camera Club Contest

The Providence College Camera Club plans to sponsor three photography contests this year. Entries for the first, which has "Night Life" as its theme, will be accepted until November 20.

The second and third contests, entitled "Still Life" and "Girls," are scheduled for January 20 and April 30, respectively. The only requirements for entries are that the photographs be at least 8 x 10 inches and related to the theme of the contest. Winning photographs will be published in the Cowl. In May many of the entries will be displayed in an exhibit in the Harkins Hall rotunda.

Members of the Camera Club are entitled to free use of the darkroom, chemicals and tanks for developing, a dryer, and an enlarger. The club works closely with the Cowl and the Veritas. Also available for use on assignments for these student publications is a new 35 mm. camera.

Besides the customary coverage of campus social and athletic events, club members intend to do a great deal of work in color photography this year. Those who are experienced in this field will instruct others.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

Much has been said about the general student apathy on this campus; but has anyone every thought that its cause may be in the administration and faculty? What I am saying is the cause of student apathy is administrative and faculty apathy.

As Collegiate Council for the United Nations State Chairman, I worked with the state, city and the college in arranging a UN Week Program. One of the main events was a UN and U. S. flag raising at Alumni Hall. As State Chairman I could have had this at any place, including Brown University, but because of my connection with PC, I planned it for this campus. The administration was fully informed of what was taking place and expressed interest in it. The faculty was sent a letter and a program, which was posted in the Faculty Lounge. Both groups were asked to attend because of the importance of the event and because it was to be covered by the press. However NOT ONE member of either group attended. NOT ONE member of the administration, faculty, or Student Congress had the interest or enough pride in the college to attend.

The administration has been forever crying about student apathy when they are responsible for it. If the students see that the administration and faculty do not give a damn then what are they expected to do? Ideally they would show more interest but this is not the case. If the college administration expects the students to have pride in their college should not they have some pride also, or is it a one way street? Many students want to do something; to take pride in THEIR college but if they do not see the same or greater pride in their so-called leaders what are they expected to do?

We have made College Bowl, we have won awards, and we are moving up in the world. We may even change our ridiculous Theology courses so that we may rank with the best institutions in religious studies. Some day we may be a great institution of learning. But this can never happen unless we develop a pride in Providence College. A pride that extends from top to bottom. No college can claim greatness if even one part of it is dead with apathy. It does not mean that the students have to develop this pride first, although more power to them if they do, but that those in charge show the students that they have something to be proud of.

One day after the unattended flag raising at PC I was the guest of another institute on the other side of the city, for a small dinner honoring a member of the UN Secretariat. It was a small dinner and very few were invited but very conspicuously in attendance was the dean of the university. He was not there as a special guest but as an official representative of the university. Maybe this is why that institute is a great center of learning. Maybe this is why they are proud; because the administration and faculty also have some pride in the university.

Is it really too much to ask for a little bit of pride and interest from those who run and work at the college. If it is then many of us are at the wrong college. If there is no reason for us being proud of PC then why should anyone of us give a damn! Why do not we just let it rot in its medieval past? WHY NOT? Because whether the administration and faculty realize it or not there are reasons to be proud of PC. Maybe someday they will realize it. I only hope they do soon.

Sincerely,

John S. Dawber, Jr. '68
CCUN State Chairman

Editor's Note: The following letter is addressed to Robert Fried, author of the weekly sports feature, "Fried's Fearless Forecast."

Dear Fried,

Although I have had the opportunity to read and comment on only four issues of The Cowl, I must say that I enjoy it immensely (including your column). I think that the student body of Providence College is very fortunate to have such an excellent weekly school newspaper (indeed, it is much better than what I was accustomed to in high school).

However, last week you made a faux pas, and one that was very serious. Your column is very good, but you should stick to sports. Your first Bowl prediction was in very bad taste, and I am certainly rejoicing that you were wrong.

As you know (or you may not) the score yesterday was 260-75, naturally in favor of Providence. This is very far from coinciding with your brilliant prediction.

Where is your sense of school loyalty? Have you no confidence in your own classmates? Your prediction led me to believe that you lack both, and this is very serious. Are you trying to undermine your own college's cause? Why don't you give your college and your team a vote of confidence?

I suggest that you apologize to the team and wish them congratulations and success for next week when they meet a much more formidable opponent, Columbia University. And, please, make your second Bowl prediction a bit more realistic. Show your school spirit. Let's not have a defeatist attitude! Providence can win!

Sincerely,
Alan Curtis '70

To the editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate PC's victorious College Bowl team. Although I picked them to lose in my column, I was honestly hoping that they would smash Suffolk. So why did I go against them?

Several reasons:

1. Many students were only vaguely interested in our Bowl appearance.
2. Those who were aware of the appearance were complacent to the point of not fully supporting the team. Many had the "in the bag" attitude.
3. By picking them to lose, I feel that I aroused further student interest which should have been there in the first place.
4. Some might think that I lacked school spirit, but it was that very spirit that motivated me to come out with a prediction that put "my reputation" on the line.

Last year, thousands of lawyers, bankers, accountants, engineers, doctors and businessmen went back to college.

And not just for the football games.

We'd like to clear up what appears to be a misunderstanding. It is somewhat popular on campus to decry a business career on the grounds that you stop learning once you start working for Cliché Nuts & Bolts.

That idea is groundless.

We can't speak for Cliché, but we can for ourselves—Western Electric, the manufacturing and supply unit of the Bell System. 6 out of 10 college graduates who have joined us over the past 10 years, for example, have continued their higher education.

How're these for openers:

W.E.'s Tuition Refund Plan lets employees pursue degrees while working for us. Over 6 thousand have attended schools in 41 states under this plan. We refund more than $1 million in tuition costs to employees a year.

To name another program: advanced engineering study, under the direction of Lehigh University, is conducted at our Engineering Research Center in Princeton, N. J. Selected employees are sent there from all over the country for a year's concentrated study leading to a master's degree.

You get the idea. We're for more learning in our business. After all, Western Electric doesn't make buggy whips. We make advanced communications equipment. And the Bell telephone network will need even more sophisticated devices by the time your fifth reunion rolls around. The state of the art, never static, is where the action is.

At Western Electric, what's happening is the excitement and satisfaction of continued doing and learning. If this happens to appeal to you, no matter what degree you're aiming for, check us out. And grab a piece of the action.

Fried's Fearless Forecasts

Last Week's Record: 17-8
On the Season: 85-25-1 772

Well, fans, I guess I should have stuck to predicting football games because I sure don't know anything about college bowls. Congratulations to a fine team and a fine team effort. Even without that loss, old fearless still had his worst week ever and saw his coveted .800 fly out the window. Shaky, but undaunted, I see Sunday's papers reporting the following:

UCLA 31, WASHINGTON 15—The Huskies have been both hot and cold this year. The Uclans have been sizzling all season. UCLA must prevail to keep its Rose Bowl hopes alive.

NOTRE DAME 38, PITT 7—The impotent Panthers have yet to win—the Irish have yet to lose. The South Bend second stringers should have a field day. Pick N. D. in a cake-walk.

FLORIDA 17, GEORGIA 14—Both teams are tied with Alabama for the Southeast Conference lead. The Gators are undefeated; Georgia has only a one point loss to Miami marring its record. This game has been sold out for months. QB Steve Spurrier, my candidate for Heisman Trophy honors, could spell the difference.

MICHIGAN ST. 42, IOWA 10—The Spartans have a breather in the hapless Hawkeyes. They play Indiana next week—and then "the big one," against Notre Dame.

NEBRASKA 20, KANSAS 7—The Cornhuskies looked like "world beaters" in their romp over Missouri last Saturday. They are currently riding on a wave of a 17 game winning streak.

ALABAMA 17, LSU 3—The tide will not change this week—Bama will remain undefeated.

HARVARD 21, PRINCETON 10—The Tigers usually manhandle the Crimson, but John Harvard will put a "tiger in its tank" this Saturday.

ARKANSAS 27, RICE 15—The Razorbacks have regained the lead in the "topsy turvey" Southwest Conference. Harry Jones, Arkansas HB, could run for mayor of Fayetteville in his spare time.

MIAMI 24, TULANE 6—The Hurricanes pulled a stunner over USC last week. They have lost two games by a total of five points, and they were without the services of QB Bill Miller. Bowl selection committee should look twice at Miami.

SYRACUSE 21, PENN ST. 14—The Orangemen are a vastly improved club. They still have an outside chance for the Lambert Trophy—symbolic of Eastern Football supremacy. This game has always been a fiercely contested rivalry.

OTHER GAMES: Purdue 35, Wisconsin 15; UMass 21, Holy Cross 13; Geo. Tech 41, Virginia 0; Yale 16, Penn 14; Dartmouth 34, Columbia 7; Cornell 31, Brown 0; Tennessee 35, Chattanooga 0; U.S.C. 28, California 15; Wyoming 17, Wichita St. 8; Baylor 7, Texas 7; Vermont 30, Middlebury 7; SMU 17, Texas A & M 15; Army 21, Geo. # Pete Louthis Builds PCIAA

The Intramural Program here at Providence College has kept up with the recent expansion of other college facilities. Under the guidance of Mr. Peter Louthis, the Student Intramural Council has been able to offer a wider range of activities to the students.

After Mr. Louthis graduated from P.C. in 1943, he entered the service for two years. Upon his discharge, he engaged in a brief but successful career in boxing. Competition was keen in those days, but Pete was a step above as he won the amateur Champion of Champions title in 1946. After giving the professional ranks a try, he accepted the position of athletic trainer at Providence College. Fourteen years ago he assumed the duties of intramural director and, under his direction, it has steadily progressed. Despite his busy schedule for the past eighteen years at P.C., Mr. Louthis managed to find enough time to earn his Masters in Physical Education from Boston University.

The main function of an intramural director is the organization and supervision of an athletic program for the students. The main problem Mr. Louthis has faced at P.C. has been limited facilities. This year, for example, there are 28 teams in the football league yet there are only two fields. Since the welfare of the student is part of the program, other sites, such as the area behind Raymond Hall, cannot be considered. There is hope, however, that soon better accommodations will be made available.

This year's intramural football race is one of the best in the PCIAA's history. The talent is spread pretty evenly throughout the league and no one team is going to win in a cakewalk. However, there is one sour note that keeps popping up. The games are well played and hard fought but they are also getting out of hand.

Last week's near riot in the Scolly Square-Met "B" game was in very bad taste. Both the reason for it and the trend it represents could go a long way toward wrecking the intramural program. There will always be complaints about refereeing, but some are man enough to play harder to overcome the bad breaks. Also, the trend toward tough play is hardly in the spirit of touch football. Good, fair blocking can never be condemned, but this year's attitude leans more toward well aimed elbows and forearms and cheap shots.

No one can blame the referees who for the most part have done a very good job. Ken Soska, Jeff Duffy, and Steve Saradnick, among others have tried to do a very conscientious job. While last year you never knew how many referees would work a game or where they came from, this year there are always two or three refs assigned by the council. They have also attempted to keep some of the unnecessary roughness out of the games with penalty calls. But it will not be successful until they rigidly enforce the "no roll blocking" rule and other infractions.

It is hoped that those who are not satisfied short of "blood and guts football" will find a more suitable outlet in club football next year.

More on Club Football

We've got some more word on the progress of the club football pledge program. Champeau and Dunphy have completed the first canvass of a dorm on campus and it resulted in an 86% pledge. There are 160 residents of Stephen Hall and 137 have pledged at least five dollars. There were only five definite refusals and eighteen people could not be contacted. Not counting those eighteen, the percentage goes up to 97%.

The response in other dorms was as great or greater. Fourth floor Meagher had forty-four for forty-four and third floor McDermott pledged all but one out of forty-three, including three ten dollar pledges and one twenty dollar pledge. Of course a lot still depends on the freshmen and commuter students' support which has not been tested. Also, we will have to wait and see if the pledges materialize on Nov. 14 . . . remember the date!

future for our cross-country team. No less than five of the frosh members have shared in the limelight this year. Together, they have bested all of the opposition. Remaining on the schedule are the New England and the IC4A. These two events present a formidable obstacle in the path of the freshman, who are in quest of an unbeaten season. The balance that has dominated over the frosh schedule should provide the necessary prescription for the arduous task at hand.

Sports Car Club Holds Display For Enthusiasts

Last Thursday the Providence College Sports Car Club sponsored a Sports Car Show in front of the Alumni Hall Cafeteria. The club secured the help of several local automobile dealers in presenting the display in the interest of the student body.

The Providence College students had the opportunity to examine a wide variety of automobiles ranging from a Fiat seen through the Mustang GT to the Aston Martin DB6. Also on display were the MGB, Triumph TR 4A, Sunbeam Alpine, MGB T, and an Austin Healy 3000. In another class altogether were the Lotus Elan, Griffith, Porsche 1S, Shelby Cobra and the Egan.

The Sports Car Club and the student body are grateful to the dealers and individuals who loaned their automobiles. These included Auto Show, Inskip, Tasca Ford, Picard Motors, J. Kaplan, and Continental Motors.

The dealers were pleased with the response and knowledgeable interest shown by the student body. They were a bit bewildered for a while until someone explained that a faculty member's loud calls for a security officer to ticket the cars on the sidewalk was only in jest.

Club members were also fortunate to be able to see a reconditioned 1951 Allard JE, a race designed British roadster. This car has dual windcreens, wire wheels, a leather strapped bonnet, foot deep hand-rubbed finish, etc., etc. The Allard was the pride of Al Picariello and Ed Blyerby, friends of the club's moderator, Dr. Rerick. The car's owners gave a lecture with slides on their experience in the work of refurbishing the Allard.

Harriers Triumph; Seek Fifth N. E.'s

The Friar harriers won their final race before the all-important New England Championships, taking the first five places and their third consecutive championship in the Eastern Intercollegiate Athletic Association's annual cross country run last Friday. Coach Hanlon's goal is to have his squad at their peak of condition for Monday's New England championship, and the finish of the same five scorers that nosed out Brown for the State title, indicates that they are ready for the big one.

Co-captain Al Campbell ran the kind of race that he will have to run on Monday, finishing second in a field of the East's finest small college harriers. Al passed teammate Bob Crooke with a mile remaining on the 4.6 mile course and prevailed by 35 yards. Bobby Powers took fourth and Larry Olsen was fifth, reversing their finish against Brown last week.

Paul Harris went out harder than he has all year, and he led the ten team race by 25 yards, only a mile into the race. Never being seriously challenged, Paul hit the tape in 23:17, with plenty of daylight between himself and teammate Campbell. The next three finishers wore black and white, for a perfect score of 15, besting second place Trinity College of Hartford by 50 points. Running close to the top was Dan Gavin in eighth, finishing in the sixth spot for P.C. for the second straight week. Brian Nolan was eleventh.

Coach Hanlon must now pick his top seven men for the New England. Last week team was not as good as could be hoped for. But the squad did run well, especially hard at the start; this being the key to next week's race. This is one year in recent New England championships that the title is up for grabs, the team that wins is going to have to go out hard and stay together all the way to the wire.

The fine efforts turned in by the co-captains, Harris and Campbell, will have to be turned into an even bigger effort this Monday if the Friars are to make it five consecutive New England crowns. Powers, Crooke, and Olsen are ready for the biggest race they will run all year, perhaps the biggest of their varsity careers. The team will be rounded out by Grange, Nolan, Gauvin, and Donnelly. Monday is the day and balance is the key.

Meet Paul Harris, Man on the Go—Harrier, Editor, Committee Chairman

Harrier Co-captain Paul Harris is P. C.'s "man a la go-go." He seems as comfortable writing his editorials for the Cowl as he is breaking the tape across the finish line. You might find Paul clad in a grey-sweatsuit practicing for an upcoming meet—or as head of P.C.'s food committee you might see him in a shirt and necktie discussing milk machines and salad dressing with Mr. Murphy.

Harris is a 5' 11" 140 pounder from Poughkeepsie, N. Y. His family recently moved to Boulder, Colorado, and Paul is anxious to see his new home during Christmas vacation.

Off to a fast start this fall, Harris has won all but two of his meets. Some are comparing him to the Friars graduated All-American Barry Brown. "Barry was the most dedicated runner I've ever seen," commented Harris. "He had that quality inherent in all great distance runners—desire."

Harris is not what you would call the "typical ideal runner." Due to his many extra-curricular activities, Paul has time for only one practice session a day. He puts all his energy into the one afternoon session. Both Barry Brown and Jerry Riordan of last year's squad practiced in double sessions. Also absent from Paul's life is the "track atmosphere" that most track coaches encourage. He rooms

Football Story: Met 'B' Takes Two

November has arrived, bringing not only her cold, gusty winds, but also a string of crucial football pairings that will determine the outcome to this year's pennant race.

The Met B Club continued to defy the losing tradition common to New York athletic teams by downing the Scolly Longhorns 12-0, Thursday, for their fourth consecutive victory. Although the offense was spotty, the Met defense was superb, as it accounted for one score and set up the other. Pete Meade registered the first score by way of an interception and Ken Soska tallied the final six points later in the second half by catching a pass after a Longhorn punt.

The victory was marred somewhat as the result of a player riot after the final Met score. An over-zealous Longhorn objected bitterly to a judgment call by referee Terry May thereby sparking the battle royal. The game was called at this point and action was taken immediately. Personal gripes against the abilities of the referees must be taken up with the Intramural council only.

In yesterday's action, the amazing Met B Club virtually eliminated the Beantown Bombers from the pennant race by edging the Hub 12-7. The game was a thriller from the start, but the biggest surprise was saved for the finish. Down 7-6 with 30 seconds remaining Met QB Pete Meade's desperation pass from his own 40 found its mark in Kieran O'Callahan, who raced into the end zone for the clincher. The big game between first place New Haven Elms and New Bedford was called on account of darkness and has been re-scheduled.

Friday the Waterbury Wonders toppled Western Mass. A from the ranks of the unbeaten, 11-6. Defense was the dominant factor in this game, as the Wonders pinned the Mass. quarterback twice in his own end zone for two safeties. Western Mass. led 6-0 at the half as the result of Jack Doyle's 20-yard paydirt pitch to Bob Mathews. In the second half Waterbury quarterback Dan Samela threw 5

P C Soccer Club Battles R. I. College To Standoff

The month old Providence College Soccer Club came close yesterday afternoon but couldn't quite pull out its first victory of the year, as the R.I.C. booters scored on a penalty shot early in the fourth quarter. For the Friars, however, this was their finest game of the season. The 1-1 tie now gives them a record of 0-4-1.

Yesterday afternoon the PC booters were not outmatched as they had some good plays and a few good shots on goal. With a break or two they might have wrapped up their first win. On two occasions in the game shots taken on goal were just a little wide of their mark.

From the start PC dominated the game and things pointed towards their first victory. Their old menace, the fourth period, proved true again, however.

The Friars scored their only goal in the third minute of the second quarter on a shot by Romeo. The score held at 1-0 until the penalty in the fourth period which wrecked the PC hopes. George McMahon had the penalty charged against him for touching the ball. The penalty was a free shot on goal by RIC which was good. Bob Silvia couldn't quite reach the sizzling shot as it hit the top of the net.

The game was marked by some brilliant offensive plays, among them was the "dribbling" of Phil Senechal. Phil, at one point, put on a dazzling exhibition of footwork which brought the crowd to its feet.

RIC had only six shots on goal throughout the game, while the Friars managed eight. Three of these shots came during the fourth period as PC tried to score the winning marker which continues to elude them.

Following the game, Coach Piperopolous stated in an interview that the response among the students has been so great that he will organize a varsity and junior varsity this spring.

Soccer Facts — Father Haas was present at the game yesterday and was very impressed by what he saw . . . Bob Silvia turned in another good performance in front of the nets as he turned away ten shots . . . The Friars seem to tire out in the fourth period, as all the games this year have been lost in the final minutes of play.

PAUL HARRIS

on the third floor of Raymond Hall with Rich Caesar and Dave Moynihan. "We have a relaxed atmosphere in our room. This helps to relieve some of the pressure that builds before a big race."

When asked about the Friars' chances to take the New England for the third year in a row Harris said, "If we run our race we have an excellent chance to repeat as champions. This was supposed to be a rebuilding year, for us; but spirit, especially among the sophomores and juniors, has made the difference. Anyone of our five backmen have a chance for a high finish. It's the spirit of these men—men who usually don't make the headlines—that has made our team this year."

Individually Harris has his eyes set on the New England and the IC4A's in New York next week. Upon graduation Harris plans a future in public relations or advertising. What then? An impish grin spread across the senior's face—there is a certain young lady who lives on River Avenue. . . .
