Fr. Vanderhaar Discusses Church and War Aspect

Last Wednesday evening Rev. Anthony Vanderhaar, O.P., the Newman Club director at Wesleyan University, spoke on "The Bible is the 'God is on our side' type of thinking. In civilized religions the supreme being is God in all nations; thus, it is incongruous to pray to the sword. Christ also told us that our society is traitorous, and men as basically good and nobly-motivated. There is a process going on in this country, which the former feels that any attempt to criticize the core of our system is traitorous, and he will use any means available to protect American traditions. The latter sees the system as it now stands as itself an intrinsic evil and he is ready to fight for the job, as the administration was unwilling to give him the course and the promise of substantial savings, because of their preference for a professional moving team. Kevin, known as 'Weasal' to his friends, observed that he can move all ninety-five thousand volumes in the library, which include those of the science library, for about five cents a volume, compared to a cost of from ten to twelve cents for a professional firm, thus saving the college four thousand dollars.

Experience

He has had three years' experience in the moving business.

Library Contract Awarded to Bowler

By MICHAEL McBride

A contract for moving books and equipment from the present library in Harkins Hall to the new library has been awarded to junior moving company of New London. Fr. Vanderhaar pointed out that "both St. Augustine and St. Thomas Aquinas devised just war theories." They tried to assimilate the "love your enemy" teaching with the practical necessity of fighting in a war. They both believed that bid for his unusual undertaking. The proposal was formally in-}
Salve to Make an Appearance?

Earlier in the semester, student leaders at Salve Regina College in Newport originated plans to stage co-educational class days between the Salve and PC student bodies. Student Congress president Dan Ryan was contacted, and the idea received enthusiastic approval from the other Congressmen.

No doubt a project gain momentum, however, than several from imposing obstacles cropped up. Perhaps most basic was the Salve Regina solution which prohibits male visitors to the school during weekdays. This regulation was later modified after much discussion, thus paving the way for the co-education day.

Providence College has no similar rule which would interfere with the proposed project. Thus, an additional potential greater obstacle looms on the campus. Rules and regulations can be erased; long standing and ingrained attitudes are not so easily overcome. It is the very domineering, repressive, and antiquated values, that the students have done so to gain for a 3.25 requirement instead of the original 3.1. It is beyond question that the Committee on Studies has done an excellent job in its effort to raise the standards for the Dean's List requirement until the end of the academic year. It also appears that the Committee on Studies has done a serious injustice to the Class by not reconsidering it.

The decision which it involves is whether or not the new requirement should have been imposed on all classes at once or phased in, beginning with the present sophomore class, or preferably, with the present freshman class. The Congress argued that the juniors have been geared to one set requirement and that it is unfair to phase in a new requirement, especially in a year which has proven to be very difficult for many members of the Class.

As to phasing in the new standards, the Committee decided that this was not the way to do it. Their reasoning behind this decision is similar to the students'. It is beyond question that the Committee in this matter was right in phasing in the new requirement, especially in a year which has proven to be very difficult for many members of the Class.

We would ask the Committee on Studies to meet to consider the Student Congress proposal and to either accept or reject it. We urge the Congress to give the students a voice in important matters. Bringing these ideas together will make the committee more aware of the student's feelings and desires.

Senate Elections: A Wrong Turn

The election of Mr. Roger Pearson and Fr. Lloyd Mahler to the Faculty Senate makes obvious the friction between the progressive students and the conservatives. Mr. Pearson, by his critical assessment of the faculty evaluation in The Cowl "Letters" column (October 30), is obviously at least symbols of the element of Faculty Senate. Providence College student his right to have some say in how his tuition money is spent.

Providence College student his right to have some small say in how his tuition money is spent. It is disturbing to students, and to a good portion of the faculty, that the conservative bloc has limited its power and influence in an area so critical to the progress of the College. Many of the important causes that the students promote hinge upon the decision of the Faculty Senate, e.g. Project Equality, and academic freedom. Providence College student's right to have some small say in how his tuition money is spent.

Aside from the lack of unity among the liberal faculty, we feel a deep sense of betrayal on the part of that 41.4% of the faculty that did not bother to vote. Prayerfully, the outcome of this election would have been quite different had this group come to the box to vote. These men pompously preach progressiveness to their docile students, admonishing them to rise up and challenge society. Yet, in something so elementary and so important as voting in this Faculty Senate election, they choose to remain aloof.

If these faculty members are so concerned about the future of Providence College then we, the students, should ignore their views, actions and rebukes. Their indifference jeopardizes all that students have been striving for and the stagnation which they cause stifles the growth of the College. Providence College student's right to have some small say in how his tuition money is spent.

Mr. Pearson and Fr. Mahler were elected by the well-organized conservatives. Early plans by liberal faculty members called for a united effort to elect Mr. Louis LeMay to the Faculty Senate. By the election day, it was decided that the real threat to the reality of the coeducational class days at PC. The real threat to the reality of the coeducational class days at PC.

Must social contact with girls be limited at Providence College? It has been for all practical purposes, to the Friday evening mixers! The idea of a co-education class day is to furnish a more complete view of members of the opposite sex to portray that side of both the male and female psychology which remains submerged in ordinary social situations.

On the academic level, men and women bring different approaches and different viewpoints to their matters. Bringing these ideas together in the classroom can only improve the education and outlook of the participants.

Student leaders have taken the initiative in seeking to arrange co-educational class days. The administration and faculty members are now in a position to determine the success or failure of such a project. Hopefully, we will contribute their enthusiastic support.

A Need for Reconsideration

The Student Congress has requested the Office of the Dean to lower the Junior Class' requirement for the Dean's List from a 3.25 to the original 3.1. It is beyond question that the Committee on Studies has done an excellent job in its effort to raise the standards for the Dean's List requirement until the end of the academic year. It also appears that the Committee on Studies has done a serious injustice to the Class by not reconsidering it.

The decision which it involves is whether or not the new requirement should have been imposed on all classes at once or phased in, beginning with the present sophomore class, or preferably, with the present freshman class. The Congress argued that the juniors have been geared to one set requirement and that it is unfair to phase in a new requirement, especially in a year which has proven to be very difficult for many members of the Class.

We would ask the Committee on Studies to meet to consider the Student Congress proposal and to either accept or reject it. We urge the Congress to give the students a voice in important matters. Bringing these ideas together will make the committee more aware of the student's feelings and desires.

Somehow we have to realize that nothing is going to get done; nothing is going to change; nothing will result but a lot of friction, bitterness and self-pity. Unless we find in the midst of all the tension, bureaucratic red tape and bickering a common sense of purpose. Perhaps tonight's discussion on the role of the student will shed some light on the picture. Perhaps a few of us will come away with a new sense of hope and some concrete ideas as to how to bring the campus together. But I doubt it. We're all going to sit back and still. Perhaps a few of us will come away with a new sense of hope and some concrete ideas as to how to bring the campus together. But I doubt it. We're all going to sit back and still.

We'll return to class in the morning exposing the same old causes, calling the same people the same names, and feeling the same frustrations at us as before.

I feel helpless. I know that there is a lot that has been done, it is being done, and will be done to make this a better College than it already is. I think it is a good College. But, where is it all leading us.

I participated in the drafting of the editorial that appears in the left of this column. And I helped write the words that lashed out against the evil subversive element that wants to tear Providence College apart and bring it back to the stone age. Baldwin. I don't believe it myself. But I think; either lashed out and attack or site back and die a quiet death by indistinctness.

So I will go on lashing out. I will go on attacking "injustice" and incompetence and indifference and all the evils, imaginary or otherwise, that pervade this institution. There seems nothing more to do that is in keeping with my own sense of well being. And, who knows. Maybe someday it will all prove to have been worthwhile.

MUCH has been said since the election of Mr. Nixon concerning the problems facing the country and the elected body of establish- ment. To explain it rather bluntly, we are now feeling sorry for ourselves, licking our wounds, and vowing we will not make the same mistakes in the next election.

Certainly, another, a similar situation is occurring within the Providence College faculty as a result of recent events. We have two new members of the Young Faculty Senate. Again being brief, the social liberals within the faculty lost, allowing two conservative candidates a narrow victory. Considering the fact that certain important student demands would be considered by the Senate, progressive innovations at PC may be seriously undermined.

The political benefits of the Senate are self-evident. Time and again we have seen that the Senate, as a group, has been more effective in promoting the interests of those students who are accepted by the establishment. The political benefits of the Senate are also clear. By allowing themselves to be dominated by the Senate, the establishment is again able to maintain its power structure.

We are not saying that the Senate is not important. The Senate is important, but we are saying that the Senate is an important problem. The Senate is a problem because it is able to maintain its power structure. The Senate is a problem because it is able to maintain its power structure. Students Selected for Dept. Curriculum Committee

Dr. Eymount Friedemann, Chairman of the Political Science Department, has announced the selection of the student members of the departmental curriculum committee.

The Committee on Curriculum Development will include among its members five students together with three faculty members of the department. The students who were just recently elected are: Brian O'Hare and John Kenny, seniors; Mike Kennedy and Thomas Brunnock, juniors; Paul Roche, sophomore. The faculty members include the three junior members of the Political Science Department, Richard Aalfield, John Lepper, and Neil Romans.

These faculty appointments were made by Dr. Friedemann in an effort to assure a youthful and striving rapport between professor and student. Being younger professors, they are much more able to appreciate and work with the creative ideals of the students, while tempering their enthusiasm with administrative practicality.

The scope of the committee's function, as seen by Dr. Friedemann, reflects the type of student participation which should exist in our academic careers. Here the students definitely have a piece of their own democratic heritage of due process. After all, this academic community is theirs and they should rightly hold a voice in maintaining and guiding it. This is student representation that has real substance to it, for they have tangible power.

Conceivably, the five students could influence their faculty counterparts. But to Dr. Friedemann, this is not the point. He is less concerned about the power of veto they could theoretically wield than he is with how well they will use the opportunity of initiative they find themselves with.

As he stated bluntly, he has no fear of student power, for he has faith in the intelligence and maturity of his students. When confronted with all the problems and practicalities, he is certain of the opportunity they find set reasonably and maturely.

In conclusion Dr. Friedemann has faith in the intelligence and maturity of his students. When confronted with all the problems and practicalities, he is certain of the opportunity they find set reasonably and maturely.

Shanley Guides 2 New Courses

Beginning with the second semester, two new elective courses on the contemporary world will be offered to Juniors and Seniors.

One course will emphasize an interdisciplinary approach to the problems of the contemporary world, while the second will treat the economics of developing nations.

The interdisciplinary course will involve six departments and study the historical, demographic, anthropological, sociological, economic, political and ethical factors of world reich and poverty.

The setup of this course will allow for in-depth discussions of the developed and underdeveloped nations of the East and West, the technological age and its struggle to keep pace with our increasing population, the cultural and social effects of affluence and poverty upon individuals, families and nations, the concept of power politics, and modern Christian teaching on riches and poverty.

The interdisciplinary course, coordinated by the Rev. Thomas J. Shanley, Ph.D., will be open to selected Juniors and Seniors and will satisfy credit requirements of the participating departments.

The second elective course entitled "The Economics of Developing Nations: Emphasis South America" will be open to Juniors and Seniors who have fulfilled the prerequisites of Economics 10 and 20.

A survey will be made of theories and policies of developing nations with attention given to such economic problems as geography, nature and human resources, food, machines and people, government planning, monetary and fiscal problems, foreign trade and aid, and integration as a solution to more rapid development.

Juniors and Seniors interested in taking courses should contact Fr. Shanley on the pre-registration days.

Where Rock Is

I've always wanted to write an article on the place of Rock and Roll music in the latter half of the twentieth century, and now I get to divulge my views to the nation on the subject.

Where Rock Is

I think very frankly, that it is absurd not to recognize the increasing impact of rock on all facets of our lives.

That vast ocean of sound, that beautiful aspect of the sixties, has in the last five years matured to a new, heretofore unseen form whose effects are strangely intriguing and, strangely, often difficult to define.

It's lyrics, its tunes dance con-

Letters to the Editor

Dear Friends,

I would like to dispute the decision of the Cowl editorial board to delete the cartoon I included with the manuscript of the second part of my essay on Black Power. Since the Cowl has a right to decline a disclaimer of the opinions I expressed, I feel that it is at the same time abdicated its right to amend the article. Whether or not the Cowl felt the idea the cartoon attempted to put across was not "in good taste" seems, therefore, irrelevant. I sincerely hope that in the future the Cowl will at least consult be before printing. I would have to decide I should have.

Sincerely,
Robert S. McIntyre, '70

Interpretation Group to Have Pre-Xmas Program

The Oral Interpretation Club will present "Mysticism Then and Now" on Friday, Dec. 13.

The program will be an oral and musical interpretation of the works of St. John of the Cross, a sixteenth century Spanish mystic, and Alan Ginsburg, a twentieth century poet who claims he is able to experience mysticism through drugs.

John DiGaetani, director of the program, stated, "The program will try to come terms with mysticism, and no moral evaluation will be attempted, we will merely present the poet of both individus." Mr. DiGaetani also stated that what is especially interesting about the two poets presented is that they both used imagery of sexual love making. Miss Judy Weidman will perform a dance interpretation of "Aether" Allen Ginsburg's latest poem.

Fast and his Jug Band will provide musical accompaniment for the poetry of St. John of the Cross. Terence Daniel will provide the musical accompaniment for the poetry of St. John of the Cross.

The program will begin at 8:30 p.m. and will be held in Aquinas Lounge. Admission will be free of charge.
Coeducation Days With Salve
Under Consideration By Congress

At the invitation of the Salve Regina Student Council, members of the P.C. Student Congress will meet on Wednesday, Monday for an inter-governmental dinner and discussion.

Salve Regina permitted by students to consider common problems and also to examine preliminary plans for the proposed co-ed class days at the two schools.

In recent years, the activity of Salve's student government has proven somewhat ineffective. Salve's leaders hoped that through the exchange of ideas the Student Council might gain added impetus in its efforts to assume a true leadership within the student body.

The principle concerns of the students at Salve involves the restructuring of the College Council, a joint student, faculty, and administration board which up to this year has been a decision making body whose voices were divided equally. It was composed of six representatives from each of the student, faculty, and administrative levels.

With the inauguration of the new College president, Sr. Christopher, and at her request, the voting power of the Council was suspended under the provision of facilitating more direct communication between the administration and the rest of the College community.

At that time, the membership on the Council was also reduced to a smaller student body represented by each of the student body, faculty, and administration.

In effect, the College Council was relegated to the position of a strictly advisory board. To date, the channels of communication, which the change was expected to open up, apparently failed to materialize. It was pointed out in the discussion that for this year the Student Council has submitted numerous proposals for improvement of the college, but it is not clear if none of which have yet been acted upon. One of the Council representatives pointed out the situation even further.

The major problem is that the president is simply too involved in Newport community projects. Thus, at present, the students find themselves deprived of their decision-making voice of past years and having received no compensation in return.

Certain rules and regulations, concerning the co-ed days, have been set up for the holiday students and for the students of the rest of the College community.

Mr. Richard Fritz, director of purchasing, reports that there have been no major mechanical problems encountered with the new Centrex System.

Mr. Andrew DelCorso, assistant director of residence, has indicated that students and faculty members pleased with the new telephones.

Commenting on the phones already installed in Raymond Hall, Mr. DelCorso said, "The faulty installation of the long-distance telephone strike this point out a bug in the system not gone by the supervisory personnel who assumed such tasks during the strike." He pointed out that the New England Telephone Company is aware of this problem and is trying to repair the defective phones as soon as possible.

Some reducing the number of co-ed days at Biafra? The President of College Food for Nigeria/Biafra Committee has been forced to help students eat now while the need is immediate.

The target date for the continuation of the number of co-ed days is February 7. The P.C. Student Council, after the student petition has been acted upon. One of the College representatives pointed out the situation even further.

As it stands now, Salve's first co-ed day is scheduled for February 7. The P.C. Student Council has acted upon the student petition and will have a second co-ed day shortly after. According to tentative plans, Rhode Island College and Regis will also participate in addition to Salve. The latter two of the four co-ed days will be scheduled at a later date.

Freshmen Elect Officers Thurs.

Freshmen elections for class offices, fire alarms, and a speech by the day-in-the-day in the annex of Alumni Hall.

The polls will be opened from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. All freshmen are invited to participate in the voting on that day. The speeches will be held on the stage of the Harkins Auditorium at 1:30 p.m.

During this convention, the students will be able to see the candidates view propost of Freeport, and then answer permitted for the students and candidates present. Each presidential candidate will speak for a maximum of five minutes, vice-presidents for three minutes, secretaries, treasurers, and social chairman for two minutes.

The presidential candidates are: John Miller, well, New Jersey; Mark Decker, New Jersey; and the administration for the business department for the business department.

Kevin said that the job is basically an inventory and controlling, where all movement is precise. He will control the packing of the books, and his brother Mike, a very meticulous worker, will take charge of the unpacking operation. There must be a constant and even flow of packing and unpacking for the operation to work. Thus, the day will begin at seven o'clock on the morning of December 20, and should last until the twenty-third to complete, requiring approximately forty hours of work. Bowler, along with a team of seventeen other PC men, will use four thousand cartons for packing, one hundred dollars, wagon trucks, and necessary equipment for the project. Trucks for transporting books will be supplied by the owner of one of the work team, who owns a trucking firm.

Kevin said that the job is basically a job that can be done by anyone, and that anyone can learn the system. He said that he has learned the system from experience and that it is important to have a systematic approach to the job.

Kevin's employees are non-union, are paid a job rate, and will be asked to sign contracts to work for them. The contract will be signed by both the employer and employee. The contract will state that the employee will not work for more than four hours a day and that the employer will provide a place to work.

Kevin has already put fifty to sixty hours of work, mapping the tree with a computer program. The main floor will contain books according to the Dewey Decimal System, and Library of Congress classification. The second floor will contain books according to the call numbers, and rare book sections. The main floor will contain the main library, all periodicals, reference books, and the Library of Congress classification.

Business Major

A Dean's List Business Major, Kevin said that he has received a job offer in the business field upon graduation, and he plans to enter the field in some capacity.

Kevin said that the job offered is an "opportunity to apply theoretical business concepts to the PC business world." He sees the job as an "opportunity to save the library some much-needed funds and to allow himself to earn a profit. It was a good incentive for taking the job."

He noted that he is interested especially in the detail, planning, and concentration required for successful business operations. He views the contract as indicative of the increased trust that the administration has in him as a student at the University.

Kevin's responsibilities include the scheduling of employees, the maintenance of the inventory control system, and the supervision of the work team.

COWL Top Ten
(Ed. Note.) Starting with this issue and running until the conclusion of the collegiate basketball season, the COWL will publish its top ten teams for that week. Compiling and contributing to the list is Greg Sullivan and Vin Papi. Ed Skiber and Jim Crawford of the staff are also members of the panel of experts. Non-COWL pre season poll contributors include the competent Bob Brown and Brian Hussey of the "in" crowd, and Joe Hadioppi from the pool hall. Here is the way the COWL views the college basketball season with its pre-season rating, 10 points are awarded for first place, nine for second, etc.

Booters’ Mike Thompson
COWL Athlete of Month

The COWL Player of the Month for November has been awarded to Mike Thompson. Thompson, senior co-captain of the 1968 Providence College varsity soccer squad, was selected because of his tremendous leadership qualities throughout the fall campaign. Coach Doyle referred to Thompson as, "the heart of the team. He truly gave us his best at all times."

After the injury sustained by Pete Lobb for the other co-cap­tain, it was mainly due to Mike's hustle and determination that any offensive threats could be mounted by the Friar booters.

Commenting on the season, Thompson felt that the extreme­ly tough schedule faced by the yearling squad was the main reason for the Friar's inability to chalk up significant wins. For example, coach referred to the 70 loss handed the Friars by a tough Clark squad. Clark Uni­versity was invited to the N.C.A.A. Championship. As far as the future is concerned, Thompson feels that if the proposed season for 1969 is studded with teams which are within our caliber then next fall should produce even more successful season. Although the booters are losing six seniors from this year's squad, Thompson feels that the presence of some of the more promising underclassmen that the season would not be quite as long for next fall.

Coach Thompson placed most of the season at the center forward position and had his best game against Bryant in the Friar's initial effort. In that contest, Mike scored two goals and his pin point passes helped set up the other tally as Bryant went down 3-1. His assists throughout the season were instrumental in keeping the Friars in the top three wins.

Coach Doyle has secured the gymnasium for indoor practices on Monday and Wednesday and he hopes to field a determined and well drilled group next year. He will miss the services of players like Thompson be­cause a hustler with the desire to compete is invaluable.

ridiculous sounding undertak­ings succeed, and often partial success is of great importance, too. One cannot ignore it, however, as the Black Panthers seem to have done. They advo­cate violence in such a way as to incur the separation from the majority of Americans and they seem to feel that they would have a real chance in a violent revolution. How they ex­pect to get any white support except out of fear is hard to conceiv.e.

To conclude, while I hope that there is a real chance to reform our society short of violent rev­olution, I am pessimistic about the present attitudes of the Congress, of the President, and of the American people, both black and white. I do feel that there is a real chance that a solution will be found, and I advise all my brothers to work towards a peaceable solution to end rac­ism on both sides, to make of Black Power the honest alter­native to revolution that it was originally intended to be.

The Audio-Visual center at the college will video tape Thursday's game with Northeastern and Friday morning this will be played back for the students viewing in the Leatherman. Joseph Hall. According to the center's direc­tor, if enough interest is shown, this might become the first fixture of a fixture at the college. No charge for view­ing will be charged by the department. Watch the way they are playing it could be something to see.

Packsters Impress Despite Tough Losses

A revitalized Providence College hockey squad under the direction of Lou Lamarillo has opened the 1968-69 season with a style indicating a bright future. Although the Friars (4-2) have lost two of their first four games, they have shown enough flashes of brilliance to give hope for the future.

However, Brown's brilliant junior, Curt Bennett, evened the score up at the 11:16 mark of the period when a shot by Bobby Badyk managed to go wide of the penalty when John Henderson was called for a highstick. The visitors' cage was netted by Mike Leonard at the 4:48 mark of the period. The Friars took the lead quickly and displayed a very strong and highly skilled Larry sectet jumped off to an early lead in the first period when Wilkinson and Cameron tallied for the St. Lawrence squad. However, the PC sextet continued to press the action in the opening period and finally found the right combination when John Tibbets, a fiery young forward from sophomore John Marchetti, blasted the puck into the net. The Friars, for the most part, dominated the play in that period, netted the equalizer at the midway mark of the period when Bobby Badyk managed to put the red light on during a wild scramble in front of the visitors cage.

St. Lawrence pulled in front in the final minute when a shot caromed off a Friar's defenseman skate while the PC sextet was penalized. The Packsters again manifested outstanding persistence in that period and their persistence finally was re-warded when Sheenan, assisted by stars Yelle and Wood, blasted the puck into the Rhode Island Auditorium. The Providence squad managed to hold this lead through the second period when senior Wilkinson and St. Lawrence was pulled in front in the final minutes of the action when senior Zachery was called for interference.

The Friars opened the season against the Rutgers Scarlet Knights Saturday at the Alumni Arena. The final buzzer the Friars were down 3-2.
