The Visit of the Master General of the Order of Preachers

Daniel M. Lilly, '31

Ad Perpetuam Rei Memoriam

THE visit of the Master General of the Order of Preachers, the Most Reverend Martin Stanislas Gillet, O.P., S.T.M., from September 29th to October 2nd, 1930, will long be remembered as an outstanding event in the history of our Alma Mater. Father Gillet is the seventy-eighth successor of St. Dominic Guzman, the holy founder of the Order of Preachers, and is here in the United States on an official visitation of the Dominican Provinces in this country. The visit of this great churchman and eminent educator recalled to the minds of many the visit of the great Belgian patriot, Cardinal Mercier, to Providence College in 1919, for both are synonyms for fidelity to God and country.

The Right Reverend William A. Hickey, D.D., Bishop of Providence, welcomed Father Gillet to the Diocese and to the College in an eloquent address before an audience of the assembled students in the new auditorium. Francis X. Sutton of the Senior Class delivered an address of welcome on behalf of the undergraduates. Father Gillet responded to the heartfelt expression of cordiality by the Right Reverend Bishop and the students in an inspiring and thoughtful address in French, which was rendered into English by the associate of the Master General, Dr. Thomas Garde, O.P., S.T.M. He congratulated Bishop Hickey because of the great blessings that have come to his Diocese and thanked him for the paternal solicitude that he has ever shown toward Providence College and for his kindness toward the Dominican Fathers. Father Gillet advised the students to be idealists, to aim at the lofty mountain summits, and urged all to attain spiritual and intellectual heights.

Following these exercises, a banquet was served in the professors' corridor at which there was a large attendance of the clergy and laity.

Among those at the head table beside the honored guest were: the Right Reverend Bishop, the Right Reverend Monsignor Peter Blessing, V.G., the Right Reverend Monsignor Farrelly, the Very Reverend Raymond Meagher, O.P., Provincial of the Eastern United States, the Honorable James E. Dunne, and the Italian Vice-Consul, Signore Montecchi.

The Master General was particularly pleased with his visit to Providence College and to the Diocese of Providence. He repeatedly voiced his desire to do all in his power to further the work of the Order in this educational field, and expressed sincere gratification at the results thus far attained. Having spent a long period of years as a professor at Louvain, Saulchoir and Paris, he is naturally keenly interested in the education of youth; and so on his departure he expressed the sentiment that Providence College would be ever dear to his heart —“a child of predilection.”

Rhode Island Weather

William Flanagan, '32

HALF-HUMAN in its varied moods, fickle and fabulous, touching all the chords of bright and dark emotion, the weather in Rhode Island can never justly be accused of monotony. "Wind of the night, wind of the long, cool shadows" and placid morning with her inscrutable prophecy of day are but the poles which mark the outposts of great Nature's multitudinous ways. We have a seasonable variance and a variance in the seasons, we have the glorious enchantment that is change, the sunny hour and the cool of flying clouds, the gentle fall of raindrops and the white expanse of snows. One may dislike Rhode Island weather, but his distaste will not have its source in ennui.

Rhode Island weather is New England weather and the "stern and rockbound" element is ever present. This is the steel which holds the structure of its strength, this is the backbone which lends support to that wide berth of change. Here is no arid waste, no burning sun-scorched terrain. Here is no frozen tundra, no long enduring Arctic winter. The extremes are not to be found within the borders of our State. The famine of the ice lands is foreign, the fever of the tropics is an alien thing. Our watering places are among the favored of the world. Our summer therefore must have few rivals indeed.

Everyone has a favorite season, mine is autumn. Fall—mid-October—what a picture the thought calls back to mind! These are the wondrous days. Everything is drowsy. Nature is about to sleep. There is a blue haze in the wood, the sun is gentle and a northwest breeze, that dies before high-noon, has given a tang to the air. Life is good and the earth a place to roam behind the dogs through brown, sere fields, down country lanes beside the shadowed streams, following the game, resting by an old stone wall and looking on "the happy autumn fields."

Such is one picture weather in Rhode Island brings to mind and there are countless others. I love a rainy day, a morning when the "fog comes in on little cat's feet" and when by noon the old Nor'easter is in full swing. I love the smell of the sweet, salt sea when the North Atlantic sends it in rain down upon the coast. This is real, this is Rhode Island weather, weather that has sometimes a savor of Scotland and the North Sea, sometimes a blending of the scented breath that leaves the Carribees.

Schizzo for Autumn

Red of the sumac, and purple of grape,
 Yellow of maple, and wind-swept hill,
 Blue grass sky like a lady's cape
 Whitened with clouds for an ermine frill.

Rustle of leaves, as the harmless hare
 Hops from the field to the dying wood,
 Shy as the flowers that buried there
 Fled from the seasonal change of mood.

Autumn of crimson and gold and blue,
 Tang and wine in the blood that stirs,
 Tonic and vigorous cup of dew,
 Spilled in the frost on the green, green firs.

Life in the quick, and the old brown blouse,
 Pointer and gun and a snack tucked by,
 Whirr of pheasant and roar of grouse,
 Circling into Saint Martin's sky.

New world, waking from summer sleep,
 Stirred and challenged: a ringing call,
 Rolling in from the north seas deep,
 Breaking across the hills in fall!

The Scream

Francis C. Skalko, '31

"It is true," said Markheim; "and I see clearly what remains for me by way of duty. I thank you for these lessons from my soul; my eyes are opened, and I behold myself at last for what I am."—R.L.S.

MY MIND is what I made it. No living mortal will deny that. Yet, when I consider some elements of my turbulent history, I am aware that this is not truly so. In that web of confusion, which I call my life, I believe that there existed a distinct pattern. . . True, the subtle intricacies of that design misled me, creating an illusion which nothing but comparative old age could dissipate; thus, I find myself near the end of my days a possessor of wisdom. The strange malady which broke my will and weakened my faculties I thought I knew; I tried to probe it, but found nothing, nothing save the eccentricities of my abnormal nature. This brief exposition invites, then, an understanding for the tale I am about to relate, unnatural as it may seem.

I awoke one night from an apprehensive slumber. I was sure that it was the presence of some foreign body in the room that startled my already wrought nerves and sharpened my senses for some knowledge of it. The suspense seemed ages long, but my reason, fortifying my fear, compelled me to stare into the thick blackness. I was conscious, too, of the buffeting murmur of the wind as it moved through the shutters outside. Yet, I could not speak, so tense and terror-stricken I had become. I thought I sensed a movement in the darkness; only a deathly quiet pervaded the atmosphere. What torture was lurking there in that opaqueness, the contemplation of which brought heavy beads of perspiration to my forehead? I wanted to cry out, but could only whisper.

"It is the coffee," I assured myself, "or something. . ." But here I stopped. Someone was actually present in the room! I felt, I saw him coming closer till his hot breath fanned my face.

"But it is madness, the most diabolical—" He sat on my bed. My terror was unbounded.

The phantom was speaking. "Why do you hesitate?"

I could feel the skin tighten on my face as I contorted my features.

"But it is madness," I could only whisper.

"It is quite logical," the voice replied.

"Demon, what do you want? On what mission—"

But again he said, "Why do you hesitate?"

I was frightened completely now. I could think of no answer. What did it mean?

"Whoever you are," I cried, "cease this mad questioning. Let me alone!"

"You have been waiting for this moment," said the voice, "and I have returned."

There was a loud thumping reverberating throughout the whole room. My heart pounded as if it would burst.

"I never sent you away;" I shrieked, "go now, go now!" The air was heavy. I could only gasp for breath.

"My bargain I have come to keep. Answer me. Why do you hesitate?"

I felt exhausted. My powers were inadequate in the presence of this emissary from hell.

"Hesitate?" I asked. "You speak in riddles, devil."

"You asked my aid," the voice replied. "I have given it." And now he boomed, "Mortal, the bargain! Do you remember the bargain?"

"What did I promise you?" I was too weak to utter more.

"Your soul," he answered.

"I've promised it to no one. Who are you?"

"Drink! Drink the cup!" he commanded.

I quaked with terror. "No, no, no," I yelled. I beat the air with my arms, I tore my hair.

"The bargain," he repeated. "Remember the bargain."

I felt him advance. I was conscious of the smell of lead in my nostrils. There was metal pressing against my lips. I could taste fluid. . .

Then a scream, a wild shriek of agony, filled the whole house. There were footsteps outside my room, and I could hear the loud pounding on my door. There was a gush of air when it gave way and several persons with tapers lighted hurried in. I could make nothing of this confusion, until slowly I became conscious of this reality. Many people were asking questions, but I heard none of them.

My housekeeper revived me with a drink of water. "Are you better now?" she said with an anxious look in her kind face.

"Yes, thank you," I managed to whisper. "What was the noise?"

"Marie next door thought you were being murdered," she explained.

"I feel stronger," I assured her. "Did she hear anything?"

"She heard a scuffle as if chairs were overturned and you were yelling at the top of your voice." She smiled benignly. I looked about the room and saw everything overturned. My dresser-mirror lay in fragments on the floor.

"Seven years' bad luck," I laughed. "Tell the other people I was dreaming."

The crowd departed in anxious whispers.

In Memoriam

IT IS with sincere sorrow that we record the deaths of five Providence College students since the last issue of the ALEMBIC. But a short time ago, they were in our midst, sitting in the same class rooms, treading the same paths, kneeling in the same chapel that we frequent to-day. Before them was the bright vista of youth and happiness, but God in His wisdom has called them to a better and happier home. And we who were their companions at college will keep sacred the memory of these friends and comrades of our own youth.

On May 23rd, 1930, word was received of the sudden death in an automobile accident of Patrick J. Davey of the Class of 1929. Mr. Davey was returning to his home in Greeley, Nebraska, after attending a mission when the fatal accident occurred. He was a boy of high and lofty ideals who had contemplated studying for the priesthood.

On May 28th, 1930, we heard with deep sorrow of the passing of Russell H. Paling of the Class of 1933. Mr. Paling had been among us only a short time, but he had endeared himself to all who had made his acquaintance. His reputation as an athlete had preceded him and great things were in store for him and his team on the diamond. He succumbed to an attack of pneumonia at his home in Taunton, Massachusetts, just before the close of the school year. A truly noble and self-sacrificing character!

On June 24th, 1930, we were stunned to learn of the death of Harold Fleisig of the Class of 1932. It seems only the other day that he was in class with us, listening to the same lectures. In him Providence has lost a loyal son, and his classmates will deeply miss his friendly, cheerful ways.

On July 25th, 1930, Charles J. Brady of the Class of 1933, died in his home-city, Passaic, New Jersey, following an operation. It was the second death in his family within a fortnight. To the many friends of this young man, his death came as a distinct shock, and we enroll his name among the deceased alumni with heartfelt emotion.

On August 27th, 1930, Brother Francis Bartholomew Campbell, O.P., of the Class of 1928 died after a long illness in Chicago, Illinois. His heroic patience during his last weeks of suffering is evidenced by his request to his Superior that he be permitted to suffer without the use of medicines which were helpless to effect a change in his illness and which were administered merely as anodynes. His request was granted. He was buried in the cemetery at St. Joseph's Priory, Somerset, Ohio.

To the relatives and friends of these young men we offer our sincere condolences, and we assure them that the memory of these noble youths shall long be treasured in the hearts of their comrades at Providence College.

OPENING DAY ENTHUSIASM

As the familiar sound of voices re-echoes once more through Harkins' Hall, we are most impressed by the spirit of enthusiasm manifest among all classes. Most of us have found the resumption of classes a welcome change from our summer occupations which, like all things long protracted, had of late become monotonous. Now that we are back in our proper sphere, this fresh viewpoint should serve to enliven both our scholastic work and our extracurricular activities. Usually, however, there is no dearth of enthusiasm in regard to the latter. It is only in our serious studies, which constitute the fundamental reason of our presence here, that we sometimes lack the zest for work so essential to the complete success of our endeavors. The fact that the college system of training lends itself easily to procrastination is well known to the student and he can best avoid this danger by cultivating an interest in his work at the beginning of the year while the subjects are still new and attractive. It would, indeed, be advantageous for all of us to get away to an early start in the scholastic marathon, looking forward to the enjoyment of a considerable lead at the semester finish line. Let us, then, cherish the enthusiasm of opening day for it is enthusiasm alone that renders labor most satisfactory and efficient.

WELCOME '34!

No doubt every freshman has by this time had all his illusions of college life shattered at his feet. A few days of experience suffice to reduce to nothingness the mental impressions of long years' standing. It would be useless then, Mr. '34, to attempt to tell you anything of the intricacies of collegiate existence. That you can best learn from daily experience. Rather it is our intention merely to welcome you here as the newest member of the Providence College family and to extend to you our felicitations for the coming year. We deliberately refrain from giving you any advice for we feel certain that you can be admonished from better sources. Instead we wish to accentuate our welcome in view of the tendencies of our times. In the not far distant past, as even some of you may recall, it was the custom in collegiate circles to treat the freshman as some lower form of life which, strangely enough, had the potentiality of evolving, in the span of one short year, into that superb creature, the upper classman. While, still in the un-evolved state, however, the lowly freshman was to be the recipient of specific forms of ingenuously contrived abuse and the butt of every collegiate jest. Recent years have changed all that, thanks to the mimicry of colleges by secondary schools. The upper classman of to-day is willing to accept the freshman on an equal footing. The Alembic, in accordance with the new attitude toward freshmen, congratulates you on your entrance to Providence College and rejoices with you at the passing of the custom of persecution. We are glad to be able to say without any feeling of hypocrisy, in all sincerity, "Welcome Freshman!"

Exchange

Christopher Mitchell, '31

As we embark upon the editorship of this department, following in the footsteps of worthy predecessors, we are beset by certain misgivings. These misgivings are due in part to our sense of the difficulties attendant upon literary criticism, our inexperience in such matters, and the fact that we must pass judgment upon the merits of fellow students in other institutions. However, these gloomy forebodings are more than offset by the genuine pleasure we receive in making contact with other educational institutions.

The policy of the ALEMBIC exchange department heretofore has been one of constructive rather than destructive criticism. Thus it has realized its purpose of promoting good will and co-operation between student bodies of widely separated schools by encouraging fellow literary tyros with words of commendation and appreciation. The present editor will also endeavor to realize this purpose, since this policy has proven itself satisfactory and productive of the best results.

We cordially invite all school publications that have exchanged with us in the past to continue to do so during the coming year.

THE CHIMES

The summer number of the Chimes, from Cathedral College, New York City, approaches closely to the ideal of perfection in college publications. From the attractive cover design to the loquacious "Chat-terbox," it holds the reader's attention. The preponderance of essays on leading topics of the day manifests the thoughtful trend of the contributors' minds. We are especially pleased with "The Inquisition—A Study," "Russian Literature and Two Russian Writers," and "The Litany of the American People." In the first mentioned article the author points out that the Inquisition is its own justification if we were to put ourselves in medieval men's shoes and "feel as men of the past felt." The essay on Russian literature endeavors to bring out the real character of the much-maligned Russian peasantry as embodied in the works of Dostoevsky and Tchekov. The author of the last named article bewails the decadence of good Catholic literature in this country, especially in the realm of the novelist.

We would suggest that one or two personal essays would aid materially in rounding out future numbers. The short stories, though of average merit, do not quite live up to the high standard set up by the Chimes' essayists. The Chimes could also use a few more poems. The book review department, "Bookmen," would do well to review a few novels, instead of all non-fiction works. As a whole, however, the various departments are splendidly written.

THE DOVE

We perused with interest the summer edition of The Dove. This publication does the young ladies of Mt. St. Scholastica College credit. Two poets, each great in the literature of their respective nations, are treated of in separate essays. "The Perennial Value of the Aeneid" is an appreciation of the genius of Vergil through a study of some of his characters. "Robert Burns and His Lyric Poetry" is a summary of the tragic life of Scotland's poet, and his work in the field of the lyric poem. Both these articles are finely treated and manifest a great amount of research. "My Torchlight" lends a delightful personal touch to the ensemble. The short stories do not show enough originality, which, we admit, is a rather difficult quality to discover in these days. The poetry is above the average. All the departments are conducted in accreditable fashion.

THE STYLUS

The June edition of the Stylus, from Boston College, lives up to the standards we expect from representatives of the literary Hub. The essay on Thomas Hardy, "Last of the Victorians," is well written and shows the author's deep interest. As we read about Hardy's death, it struck us as rather ironic that this apostle of gloom and fatalism should find his last resting place in Westminster Abbey, whose very existence is an expression of man's belief in a benevolent God and His Providence. "Midnight" is very imaginative and highly wrought prose. Of the short stories we liked "Innuendo" the best. It has very good dialogue and runs the gamut of the emotions. "Miracle of a Stormy Night" is a little too verbose in description.

Poetry is very much in evidence in the Stylus. Indeed, we rather get the impression that the whole student body is devoted to the Muse. Even the Exchange editor is so enthusiastic about it that his column is filled with poetic quotations. We quote the following by Mr. McGovern and commend its Keatsian imagery.

Give me the moon each night divine,
To brighten all with rich design,
To play upon the silver lake,
And over gloomy hills to break;
To shower rays all crystalline
And spread a flood of silver fine
Upon each tree and bush and vine.
For happiness and beauty's sake—
Give me the moon.

When it appears then joy is mine,
Romance and Moonlight both combine
To banish sadness and to make
The sleeping heart to gladness wake.
Let sunshine or the day be thine—
Give me the moon.

Alumni Notes

FIRST ANNUAL COMMUNION SUNDAY On Sunday, June 1st, 1930, the first annual Communion Sunday of the Providence Alumni Association was observed. The Rev. D. M. Galliher, O. P., Moderator of the Alumni, celebrated Mass and gave Holy Communion to the assembled alumni in the new beautiful auditorium. Father Galliher also delivered a sermon appropriate to the solemn occasion—the inauguration of a religious custom that will no doubt continue for centuries. Breakfast was served in the cafeteria and an informal meeting, at which plans for the ensuing Alumni Day were discussed, followed.

MEMORIAL MASS On Alumni Day, Tuesday, June 10th, at ten-thirty o'clock, the Memorial Mass for the deceased alumni was celebrated by the Rev. L. C. McCarthy, O. P., in the new auditorium. Father McCarthy said a few words at the conclusion of the services, echoing the heartfelt emotions of those present concerning the mysteries of life and death.

ALUMNI vs. RAIN Stars of the past, heroes of victories of long ago fore-gathered on Hendricken Field on the afternoon of Alumni Day to test the prowess of our much-vaunted 'Varsity. Doyle, Norton, Holland, and a host of other athletes including the famous battery, Reynolds and Halloran, were on hand to stop the advance of Flynn's machine of this present year. But a torrential downpour just before the start of the game saved the youngsters from what the alumni were sure was to be the result.

ANNUAL MEETING At the annual meeting of the Alumni Association, the following officers were elected: President, Joseph P. McGee, '24; Vice-President, John J. Halloran, '26; Secretary-Treasurer, Daniel J. O'Neill, '24.

ALUMNI BANQUET

The seventh annual Alumni Banquet was held in the spacious new auditorium on the evening of Alumni Day at which a large gathering of graduates renewed acquaintances and discussed old times.

The guests of honor included the Right Rev. William A. Hickey, D.D., the Very Rev. Raymond Meagher, O.P., the Rev. Lorenzo C. McCarthy, O.P., the Rev. Daniel Galliher, O. P., the Rev. Francis O'Neill, O. P., the Honorable James E. Dunne, and George W. Gardner, Esq. As usual, the banquet proved a delightful success and much credit is due the Banquet Committee, consisting of the following: Charles F. Reynolds, Chairman, the Rev. James C. Conlon, Francis V. Reynolds, Harold O'Connor, Victor Gabriele, and Daniel J. O'Neill.

BACCALAUREATE SUNDAY Providence College inaugurated its eighth commencement week on June eighth with the customary Baccalaureate Sunday exercises.

The Baccalaureate Mass, held in the college auditorium, was celebrated by the Rev. Martin S. Welsh, O.P., J.C.D., Vice-President of the College, with the Rev. Bernard A. McLaughlin, O.P., serving as deacon, and the Rev. James B. McGwin, O.P., as subdeacon. The male choir assisting in the service was under the direction of the Rev. Paul E. Rogers, O.P.

The baccalaureate address was delivered by the Rev. Lorenzo C. McCarthy, O.P., Ph.D., President of the College, who stressed in his remarks the harmonious relations between true science and religion.

The members of the Baccalaureate Sunday Committee were: C. P. Ritter, V. H. O'Connell, J. H. Loughran, S. J. Bednarczyk, and P. J. Rzeznikiewicz.

CLASS DAY Because of inclement weather the Class Day exercises of the Class of 1930 were held in the auditorium. The class oration was delivered by Hugo G. Caroselli, who urged his classmates to exemplify in their contacts with society the teachings of their Dominican masters. Charles R. Capace was the class historian; Joseph C. Hickey, the poet; Norman H. Boule, the odist; Siegfried Arnold, the testamentarian; and James C. Egan, the prophet.

In the evening a class social was held with Walter A. Lough as speaker.

The committee in charge of Class Day consisted of W. A. Lough, J. P. Connolly, A. Bellino, F. L. Martin, J. E. Fogarty, E. F. McCaffrey, and W. E. Brady.

Bachelor degrees in arts, science, and philosophy were awarded to 83 students by the Rt. Rev. William A. Hickey, D.D., Bishop of Providence, at the eighth commencement of Providence College on June 12th. The commencement exercises were held in the auditorium because of unfavorable weather conditions.

Two-year pre-medical certificates were given to 57 students and five bachelor of arts degrees in extension courses were also awarded.

The commencement address was delivered by the Rev. Gerald B. Phelan, A.M., Ph.D., professor of philosophy at the University of Toronto, and exchange professor to the University of Louvain. Dr. Phelan, in his address, advocated a return to the educational ideals of the ancients in which true culture would supersede mere show.

Other guests who addressed the assembly were Bishop Hickey; the Very Rev. Raymond Meagher, O.P., Provincial of the Dominican Order; the Rev. Lorenzo C. McCarthy, O.P., Ph.D., President of the College; Governor Norman S. Case, and Mayor James E. Dunne.

The Commencement speakers were Ralph S. Daniels, Ambrose V. Aylward, and Arthur L. Quirk, who engaged in a forensic discussion concerning Bolshevism.

The members of the Commencement Day Committee were F. G. Dunn, J. O. Russo, E. J. Moreau, R. J. McCarthy, L. G. Wust, and L. E. Dunn.

On September 22, Providence College commenced its twelfth academic year with the celebration of REOPENING OF SCHOOL Mass in the auditorium by Dr. McCarthy. Approximately 500 Freshmen and Sophomores were present to hear Father McCarthy welcome them to Providence College.

In his address to the students the President stressed the need of honesty in college life and the importance of counteracting dishonest practices. At the conclusion of his remarks, he informed the students that the customary hazing of Freshmen was not to be indulged in this year.

CHANGES IN THE FACULTY The most notable change in the faculty this year is the return of the Rev. A. H. Chandler, O.P., LL.D., formerly a member of the faculty, as dean of studies to succeed the Rev. Daniel M. Galliher, O.P., who has become head of the department of philosophy at Albertus Magnus College, New Haven.

We also note with regret the retirement from active professional duties of the Rev. R. J. Meaney, O.P., who for the past nine years was the head of the Latin department. Father Meaney is not only a profound classical scholar, but also one whose versatility extends to architecture, astronomy, paleography, homiletics and kindred subjects. For many years he also gave lectures in the history of philosophy and during his term at Providence he acted as treasurer of the College. Father George Smith, O.P., succeeds him as treasurer.

Other changes in the faculty include the addition of the Rev. John R. Kelleher, O.P., M.A., to the physics department, and the transfer of the Rev. R. E. Kavanah, O.P., S.T.Lr., professor in the English department, and the Rev. W. P. Thamm, O.P., head of the pre-medical school, to the Fenwick High School, Oak Park, Illinois. They will be replaced by the Rev. Dennis B. McCarthy, O.P., M.A., a former student at Providence, and the Rev. Francis L. Kelly, O.P., M.S., a graduate of Georgetown Medical School.

THE TIE-UP The Tie-Up, Providence College's daily publication, has resumed its operations for the year and has already demonstrated its effect on student activity. The co-editors, William Keenan and Louis V. O'Brien, and the assistant editor, Francis Shea, have been sponsors of two praiseworthy activities in the short time that they have held their offices. These activities were the football rally before the Holy Cross game and the inauguration of "Hello Week" for the purpose of enabling the students to become better acquainted.

We feel safe in predicting for the Tie-Up another successful year under the capable direction of Father Georges, O.P.

KALMIA CLUB At a meeting presided over by the retiring president, Carroll Hickey, the Kalmia Club elected the following officers for the coming year: President, Christopher Mitchell; Vice-President, Francis Skalko; and Secretary, Thomas Tierney. This club which is composed of students interested in poetry is making its presence felt more and more among the students because of the literary ability of its members.

The College Debating Society resumes its activities
DEBATING with many familiar figures missing from its ranks.

Ralph S. Daniels and Ambrose V. Aylward, standbys of the debating society for the past few years, have graduated, together with many other outstanding debaters. Father McLaughlin faces the task of finding capable successors to these men, but we feel assured that he will continue to produce debaters worthy of their predecessors.

We are informed that an attractive schedule of debates is being arranged and we anticipate a continuation of the success of past years.

The Aquino Club, the Italian society of Providence College, displayed splendid school spirit and loyalty in presenting to the school the bust of St. Thomas Aquinas, which now stands on a pedestal in the auditorium. Ever since its inauguration, the Aquino Club has evidenced a keen interest in collegiate activities and has become an influential factor in college affairs. We take great pleasure in congratulating the members on the excellence of their society.

On the evening of Monday, October 2nd, a FAREWELL farewell banquet was tendered the Rev.
BANQUET FOR Daniel M. Galliher, O.P., at the Provi-FATHER GALLIHER dence Biltmore by the Providence Council of the Knights of Columbus, many of whom are alumni of Providence College. For the past six years, Dr. Galliher was chaplain of the Knights of Columbus and for eleven years was dean at Providence College. Leaders of Church and State paid high recognition to the success of Father Galliher's labors here in Providence and wished him the same happy results in his new office of provost at Albertus Magnus College, New Haven. The speakers included the Right Rev. William A. Hickey, D.D., Governor Norman Case, Mayor James Dunne, State Deputy Walter Fitzpatrick, Dr. Lorenzo McCarthy, O.P., Mr. J. E. Mullen, and Mr. Thomas Cooney, the toast-master.

The Chronicle takes occasion in this issue to felicitate FRESHMAN the Class of 1933 on the success of their Freshman BANQUET Banquet, an account of which was inadvertently omitted from the June ALEMBIC. This gathering, which was held at the Woodstock Inn on May 1, was the first social activity of the Class of 1933, and proved to be a decided success. Members of the faculty addressed the assembled freshmen and urged them to fulfill the traditions of Providence College. Entertainment was furnished by some of the talented students.

Great credit is due to the committee and to Father Rogers, the Class Moderator and Dean of Discipline, for the success of the affair.

PROVIDENCE VS. BROWN

at Aldrich Field, May 17, 1930

Marsella's Explosion Routs Bruin

Chief Marsella, who until the time of the Brown series was known only as one of Flynn's freshman apprentices, pushed his stock in 'Varsity baseball circles skyward in the eighth inning of the first game in the city titular series by exploding a home run that wrecked Brown, 5-4. Until the eighth inning Brown had coasted along on a 4-1 lead behind some very excellent curving on the part of Art Sondheim. In the eighth Providence had scored a run by virtue of Capalli's timely clout to left field. Then, with the score 4-2 and with two runners aboard the bases, Marsella strode up to the plate to do the swinging for Quinton. Marsella justified Flynn's confidence in him by propelling one of Sondheim's shoots far into the left field acreage of Aldrich Field for a home run.

The game was well played throughout with fanciful fielding predominating. Sondheim, until Marsella's explosive entrance, apparently had the game well in hand. Connors, Quinton, and Artie Quirk toiled for Providence with good results.

PROVIDENCE VS. BOSTON COLLEGE

at Boston, May 20, 1930

Eagles Flutter Before Quirk

Artie Quirk turned in a six hit pitching exhibition to defeat Boston College, 3-2, and give Providence its tenth win of the season. It marked the first invasion to Boston by a Providence team that has resulted in a Flynn victory.

Quirk was the outstanding figure throughout the game. Until the ninth the best Boston College could do was gather three hits. A momentary lapse in the ninth, coupled with poor support, gave Boston College its other three hits and two runs. Providence tallied in the sixth, seventh, and ninth innings to put across the winning counters. Joe Duffy bruised the opponent pitching assortment for three clean hits.

PROVIDENCE VS. GEORGETOWN

at Hendricken Field, May 23, 1930

Senatorial Dignity Too Much for Providence

Georgetown and its Washington way of playing baseball was just a little too much for our 'Varsity in the yearly baseball singleton. Five runs in the first two innings and three more in the eighth canto were sufficient to give the Washington outfit an 8-7 victory.

Povidence, until the disastrous eighth, was leading seven runs to five but a few hits plus a bad peg on the part of Buckley gave Georgetown its winning margin. Until the time of the rally, Buckley had been twirling smoothly, retiring the visitors with clocklike regularity. His momentary fall from grace, however, was just long enough to ruin chances for a win.

Dick Chapman clouted a home run for our cause, as did Tierney for Georgetown. Joe Harraghy and Bobbie Dion were other leading hitsmiths with two blows apiece. The box score of the game:

PROVIDENCE VS. BROWN

at Aldrich Field, May 24, 1930

Adding Insult to Injury

Not content with a normal victory, Providence cut loose with plenty of power in the second game of the titular series to win, 14-2. General ineffectiveness on the part of the Bruin mound staff before the Smith Hill array of clouting artists was primarily the reason for the downfall of the ambling Bear from t'other side of the city.

A large crowd started a rush for the exits early in the game when it was apparent that the sister school did not measure up to our standard. Providence scored six runs in the second frame and four each in the fifth and sixth innings. Eddie Quinton limited Brown to six hits and coasted to victory under wraps.

PROVIDENCE VS. QUANTICO MARINES

at Hendricken Field, May 30, 1930

Bombarding the Marines

Thirteen base hits, some bunched and others exploded intermittently over eight innings, together with efficient hurling on the part of Artie Quirk, were factors in the 7-0 win over the Quantico Marines. Quirk and his underhand way of getting successful mound results, stopped the Southerners dead in their tracks each time they threatened. Four hits, all of one base dimensions, were the invaders' compensation for an afternoon of intensive effort.

Bobbie Dion, Harry Main, George Sellig, and Frank Cappalli did the Providence slugging. The score of the game:

PROVIDENCE VS. ST. JOHN'S

at Providence, May 31, 1930

Marsella Repeats

Repeating an earlier season victory, Eddie Quinton pitched our 'Varsity to a 6-4 win over a stubborn St. John's team in a well played game. Quinton scattered six St. John's hits over nine innings and struck out nine hitters.

To Chief Marsella goes the brunt of credit for driving in tallies. With the score tied at three all in the eighth inning, the broad shouldered right fielder busted one of McCormack's curve balls far and wide into left for a home run, scoring Dion and Sellig ahead of him. The crash was productive in giving us three runs and the game. Harry Main and Sellig also featured with the willow.

PROVIDENCE VS. HOLY CROSS

at Providence, June 4, 1930

Changing the Purple to Black

Some ancient philosopher once preached that patience is a virtue. And he likewise preached that patience always has its reward. Because the writer has a sporting editor's license, he has substituted patience for virtue and points as the reward a 6-5 victory over Holy Cross. It marked the first time that the Dominicans have taken the Purple in a baseball way in eight years of competition despite concentrated effort each year.

It happened thus: Providence had scored once in the third on a combination of Cappalli's hit, a fielder's choice, and Sellig's screaming single. In the fifth the Black and White unleashed a batting orgy that netted four runs and spelled the exodus of Sims, Holy Cross' leading twirler. Main tripled, Cappalli was out, Quirk scratched a tricky single which scored Main. Dion then caught the Cross infield napping by beating out a bunt. Successive hits by Marsella, Duffy, and Szydla then accounted for the remaining three runs. Holy Cross tied up the count in the late innings by scoring twice in the sixth and twice in the seventh, and once in the ninth. Joe Duffy, however, swung the victory tide our way by singling home Dion in the last of the ninth. It was Duffy's third hit of the game.

Artie Quirk pitched splendid ball for seven innings only to weaken and be removed in favor of Quinton. Sims was touched for an even dozen safe blows by Providence.

PROVIDENCE VS. YALE

at New Haven, June 7, 1930

Muzzling the Yale Bulldog

Some very expert elbowing on the part of Eddie Quinton plus a slight spasm of timely hitting in the third inning gave Providence a 1-0 win over the Elis in the annual battle between the rival ball clubs. A downpour of rain in the seventh chukker necessitated the calling of the game, but not before Jack Flynn's henchmen had piled up a lead NINE—ALEMBISC M substantial enough to win. True one run is not very substantial as a rule, but it loomed big behind the perfect pitching of Quinton. The latter's effectiveness is attested by the two hit contribution that the Yale outfit chalked up in the hit column.

Providence scored in the third on Bobbie Dion's single and George Sellig's crashing double to deepest left field. From then on the game resolved itself into a battle of mound strategy with Providence always

at Hendricks Field, June 12, 1930

By Way of Retaliation

Boston College atoned for its earlier season defeat at the hands of the Dominican forces by pasting an 8-2 defeat on them in the Commencement Day game. Sloppy fielding behind Artie Quirk's hurling was primarily the reason for the collapse of the Flynnmen before the invader's concentrated attacks in the opening and late innings of the game.

Captain Pete Herman displayed a dazzling repertoire under the chins of Providence, limiting them to two hits and fanning four. Home runs by Colbert and Creedon featured the invading attacks.

The box score of the game:

PROVIDENCE VS. HOLY CROSS

at Worcester, June 14, 1930

Providence Fails to Capture Championship

A barrage of base hits in the fifth inning that produced five runs brought joy to ten thousand Holy Cross fans and gloom to a smaller number of Providence boosters as Jack Flynn's journeymen fell by the wayside in their attempt to spike the Purple. Two runs in the first three innings and five in the fifth blended to crush the Dominicans, 7-3, in the battle to decide the baseball supremacy of the East.

Four meagre hits, not even enough to dust off a fiddle, represented the best the Black and White could do. Quinton, and Connors were knocked loose from seven base hits, one of them a home run by Farrell.

The box score of the game:

DION HONORED BY LETTER MEN

Receivers of the coveted "P" for service on the diamond honored Bobby Dion at the close of the baseball season by rewarding him with the captaincy for the year 1930. Dion was unanimously elected in appreciation of his fine work for Providence during the past two years.

It is certain that next year's ball team will prosper under Dion's regime. His splendid baseball temperament, his excellent qualities as a third baseman, and his aggressive spirit will undoubtedly make for a successful year.

The players awarded 'Varsity insignia for the baseball work during the past season were Capt. Joseph Harraghy, Captain-elect Robert Dion, John Curran, Joseph Duffy, Henry J. Main, Frank Cappalli, George Sellig, Stanley Szydla, Charles Marsella, Martin L. Gibbons, Arthur Quirk, Edward Quinton, Frank Buckley, Francis Moran, Daniel Connors, and Student Manager Frank Marrah.
