Urban Council

OEO Volunteer Conference

Problems concerning the coordination of volunteer action was the topic of the Northeastern Regional Conference of the National Student Volunteer Program attended by five P.C. representatives this past weekend.

The Office of Economic Opportunity sponsored this program, held at the University of Vermont. Ralph Caruso, President of the Urban Council, Ray McKenna, Bob Banfich, Bill Schach and Art Careau represented P.C.

Among the major problems discussed, according to Mr. Caruso, were problems with Organization and Recruitment.

Concert Honors Music And Musicians

"Music for St. Cecilia's Day" will be presented for the third consecutive year this Sunday evening, as the annual program honors the patroness of music with renaissance songs and instrumental suites. This récit recalls an ancient university tradition of Europe, which presents music and poetry in honor of music and musicians on the feast day of St. Cecilia.

The Phi Sigma Tau Society will hold an organizational meeting on Wednesday, November 18th at 7:00 p.m. in Room 101 of the Library. Benjamin U. Fay, O.P., moderator of the philosophy society, urges all students interested to attend.

once again read Dryden's "Alexander's Feast—or an Ode in Honor of St. Cecilia's Day," a piece traditional for this occasion.

On the program will be a trio sonatas of Telemann, songs by Italian and English renaissance composers, and pieces for flute and viola da gamba. The musicians will be Alison Fowlie, gamba player with the N.Y. Pro Musica; Ihe Schaler and Deborah Robin from the Providence Recorder Society, Kate Young, soprano, and Paul Philibert, harpsichord.

This will be the third program in the Student Congress Fine Arts Chamber Recital Series. It will be heard in The Friar's Cell, basement of Stephen Hall, at 8:00 p.m. free of charge.

"Voluntary Education and Training," Caruso states that 10 of the 18 conferences are taped and 16 of the 18 we have notes on.

According to Caruso, three types of groups were represented at the conference. The first group was just starting volunteer programs such as Fastleigh Dickenson, whose program is in the planning stage. The second group has volunteer programs that lacks coordination or clearing houses. Overall campus coordination marks the third group. I've seen five schools that seem to have this. University of Maine at Orano, Boston University, University of Vermont, Tufts and P.C. have these Clearing Houses. This shows the foresight the Administration had in starting the Urban Council.

Mr. Caruso also stated that the Conference, "helped me to understand my duties as Chairman of the Urban Council."

The Urban Council will hold its November meeting this Thursday in the Aquinas Hall lounge. The principal guest at the November meeting will be Mr. Joseph McCarthy from the Financial Aid Office of Boston College. Mr. McCarthy will address a discussion group on the administrative aspects of Federal Work-Study programs for off-campus community service. At present, students at Providence College primarily receive Work-Study funds for on-campus work.

Mr. Caruso encourages all organizations and groups to be involved in the Urban Council.

Congress About To Disband?

by PAUL GALLOGLY

In a special session held Monday the Student Congress entertained an amendment by its Treasurer Rich Marra to abolish itself. . . After a suspension of the rules Congress members discussed the proposal, centering their attention around the legislative power, or lack thereof, legally invested in the Congress. The consensus of opinion among the members was that the Congress has no power to legislate for the student body and therefore has no raison d'etre.

The meeting, however, did not end with the abolishment of the Congress, as many of the implications of this action were yet to be explored and evaluated. One question raised was the effect the adoption of this amendment would have upon the accreditation of the College. Several Congressmen were under the impression that because of an established requirement of accreditation, namely that of having a student government, Congress would necessarily lose its accreditation if the Congress disbanded. Moreover, many Congress members were simply frightened off by the radical nature of the proposal. It became evident in the meeting that the members were unsure as to what exactly their constitution stated and what legislative powers they did, in fact, have. A ten minute recess to examine the legislative powers of their constitution attested to this fact. A further indication of the Congress's attitude toward itself was the uncertainty among even the Executive Board as to whether or not their constitution had even been accepted by the Administration.

Several Congressmen felt that the Congress should begin a discussion and investigation of its present constitution before it can even consider itself a representative body of the student. They thought it ridiculous to propose abolishing a body about which there exists no knowledge of its present capabilities. The entire Congress finally came to this conclusion and passed a proposal to "go into negotiation and discussion of the Congress with the Administration, the President of the Faculty Senate and legal council" and to hold "a meeting of the student body for the purpose of gaining a consensus on student feelings." It is hoped by Congress members that these discussions to be held thru Wednesday of this week will clarify the powers of the Congress and its function on this College campus.

Haas Convenes Council

Reverend William Paul Haas, O.P. has announced that the President's Council will meet for the first time this year on Wednesday, November 18, at a luncheon. The agenda is a general one, slated to cover all facets of the College, from the fund drive to the new Curriculum.
Dear Uncle Al:

I was very disappointed when I came back to school to learn that W.D.O.M. is off the air. This is not true I hope. Can you give me any information.

Joe Nells, ’72

Dear Joe,

W.D.O.M. is scheduled to go on the air on November 20. I would like to say that the planning of those concerned with moving the station was very poor. In case you didn’t know, W.D.O.M. is now located in Joseph Hall.

I was unable to buy books for my courses. Also, I purchased a Biology book at Brown for $3.00 cheaper than we sell it here. Is this what I am getting for $4.00 per year?

A Desired Student

Dear Student:

I was amazed at your accusation so I investigated and found your complaint true. There was supposed to be a committee formed to investigate into the book-store operation. I would suggest that students with complaints address their letters to the Student Congress, for this is their department. Maybe it is about time that we find out what is happening. The funny thing is that they have the nerve to check our pockets where half the time they have nothing for us to steal.

Dear Uncle Al:

The job market is dead for part-time employment on or off campus. I am in desperate need for money, is there any place I can get any kind of job?

Faithful Follower

Dear Faithful:

Check the Placement Office in Donnell Hall and the Donnell Hall ad in the Providence Journal. If you have no luck there, there are a few temporary agencies listed in the past these agencies have hired PC students to do odd jobs. The pay is decent, but the hours are weird.

“Sympathy For The Devil” On Campus This Weekend

“Sympathy for the Devil,” the first film to be made in England by Jean-Luc Godard and the first film to feature the Rolling Stones, is a fascinating enigma. It is making its Rhode Island debut Thursday, Friday and Saturday, November 19, 20, and 21 on the Providence College campus in Albertus Magnus 100 at 7:00 and 9:30 on all three nights and also at 11:30 on Friday.

Concerned with people groups involved in the modern social triangle, it moves from scenes of Rolling Stones painstakingly working out the recording of their LP ‘Beggars’ Banquet to Black Power activists in a used car dump, where white girls are taken out to be shot, whilst a background voice quotes from Ed-dridge Cleaver and Stokely Carmichael. A pornographic bookshop, Iain Quarrier passes the floor reading from Mein Kampf” as a small child slaps the faces of two Jews. Anne Wiazemski, representing the voice of liberal democracy, wanders about in a summer field answering a barrage of complex questions asked by a reporter.

Recurring scenes of the Rolling Stones show the gradual development of a recording session as the music of “Sympathy” comes together.

Cast and production crew constantly appear together and, in the final scene, where Anne Wiazemski’s body is draped over a crane between the emblem flags of Black Power, it is the Director himself who runs into the scene to spray her white shift with plastic ‘blood’.

Despite these reminders that “Sympathy for the Devil” is just a film, one feels disturbingly involved, and Godard leaves us in a little doubt that, film though it may be, we may all be in it.

The overall aura created by the film tends to lead the viewer to see two definite themes: one of destruction and one of construction. The constructive theme has the balance in its favor. Vincent Canby of the New York Times explains why: “...if only because the Rolling Stones, doing what they do, are more mysterious and liberating than Godard’s didactic proxy militants. Then, too, the entire film, so beautifully and carefully composed stands as a kind of testament to Godard’s very original, creative impulse, which is undimi­nished by the world he would an­nihilate.”

15,000,000 COLLEGE STUDENTS CAN’T BE WRONG!

By conserva­tive estimate, more than fifteen million college students now read Cliff’s Notes since we became America’s first literary study aid. This prefer­ence continues to build for two big reasons:

1/QUALITY — The easy-to-understand commentary and explanation you get from Cliff’s Notes result from painstaking work by our board of authors. Predominantly Ph. D.’s, these scholars are specially selected for their knowledge of particular works and for their ability to make these works meaningful to you.

2/AVAILABILITY — Cliff’s Notes concentrate on giving you all the plays and novels most frequently assigned in college. If your teacher is temporarily out of the title you need, ask him to call us on his special “Hot Line.”

Buy Cliff’s Notes today — they’re a bargain in understanding college literature assignments.

New World Revisited?

Will Huston's Brave New World and Orwell's 1984 soon become realities in our society? Are we irrevocably headed in this direction? A faculty seminar dealing with these questions will be presented this Thursday in the Guild Room of Alumni Hall at 3:30 p.m. by Dr. Clinton Anderson and Dr. George Raymond of the Department of Psychology.

The title of the Seminar will be: IMPLICATIONS FROM BEHAVIORAL RESEARCH FOR THE FUTURE CONTROL OF BEHAVIOR. We quote from the memorandum sent out by the office of Dr. Paul V. K. Thomson: "Those who have read Roszek's widely discussed The Making of a Counter Culture will recall his reference to a BBC broadcast on the future role of the National Health Service in Britain: 'The NHS, it was suggested, would have to look forward to the day when its psychiatric facilities would take on the job of certifying "normal" behavior and of adjusting the "abnormal" -- meaning those who were unhappy and inefficient to the exacting demands of modern society.'

This might be a rather interesting event for students as well as should there by any room available. We're sure the faculty wouldn't object to any student presence.

Political Student Organization Prompts Court Reprimand

Washington, D.C.-(I.P.)-In one of the more unusual actions against political student organizations with the procedural rights of student organizations, a U.S. District Court judge has ordered Central Connecticut State College to hold a hearing on whether to recognize a local chapter of Students for a Democratic Society.

The dean of students, three faculty, and some students recommend that the administration grant recognition to Students for a Democratic Society.

The court's decision concluded that no group is entitled per se to recognition, and did not deny the president's authority to refuse an organization.

It ruled, however, that once a school allows student groups to organize and operate, it must apply constitutional safeguards to those groups that seek recognition. These safeguards include adequate standards governing the content of the speech and a fair application of these standards to all groups.

Students for a Democratic Society at the University of Miami (Fla.), Marymount College (N.Y.), and Washington University in St. Louis are suing administrators who cancelled classes in response to the Kent State killings. Students and parents of students at Ohio State University sought injunctions against the president, several teaching assistants, and four student leaders who claim they led activities which resulted in disruption on campus.

Bob Mayoh

The American hero is always a simple young man, looking for work in a decrepit economy (and what hero couldn't be of a decent sort, are we to assume he is a dope pusher or a sodomist?) And yet, for all his decency and hominess he is suddenly confronts with the society around him, estranged from the maddening crowd in a decided removal from the panic of his youth and again because trouble, which he somehow cannot elude, has a way of finding him. Whether it's a new kid on the block (if it isn't Jason McCord, the hero of "Five Easy Pieces"), a new kid on the block (if it isn't Jason McCord, the hero of "Five Easy Pieces") or a returning kid (for you for quite some time, McCord.) There is the ever persistent yearning to travel in the American spirit, to be on the road with Jack Kerouac. The wandering American is a hero, a creation for the ideal America, as Wyatt and Billy seem to be unequaled in "Easy Rider" (heroes lately do not fit the classic mold in every respect and Billy seem to be)

For Robert Eroica Dupea (Jack Nicholson) in "Five Easy Pieces" the road is always there beckoning, providing an easy escape hatch from an intolerable reality. Dupea has been a wanderer most of his life, forsoaking a career on the piano for an endless succession of menial jobs, refusing the ties and commitments that bind most of us. He is not rootless by birth but nonetheless alienated and lost, searching for the "happens to get away from himself. "I travel around a lot," he will say at one point. "I'm looking for anything but because I've got to get away when things get too much."

For Dupea, in a film that critic Jacob Brackman has termed the "wonder of the decade, things are either always bad, or quickly becoming so."

Dupea, Nicholson is an oil rigger in California (a long way from the interiors), living with a ne'er-do-well named "Bud" to another Tammy Wynette (singer Wynette is heartbroken, probably because of the fall (and) Dupea bowls a lot, guzzles a great deal of beer, and lines up used looking for the bowling alley for some later get-togethers. All in all, he appears as nothing especially like a most of us, than we may be missing a good deal of the point. The wandering American is a laborer essentially because there is nothing of enough value or positive substance of living capable of living to get himself and calms his troubled mind. He is alienated and means to move on again traveling without direction or purpose like the pioneers in Bertenc's poem, moving on always. "And where it is you go, you do not know. You can always buy and the fact of this, is he doomed, or is he saved? Who can tell for sure?"

At a roadside gas station on a rainy highway in Washington, Dupea leaves his wallet, clothes, his car and a pregnant Rayette, secretly hitching a ride north with a logger bound for Alaska. As the film closes, the loggers trudge is disappearing down the wooded road and Rayette is walking dryly to the rest room that Dupea had gone into minutes before. There he had looked into the mirror at himself and realized that it was time to move on again.

"Five Easy Pieces"

The Franklin County court granted a temporary restraining order against the specified disruptive action by most of the individuals involved, but did not rule on the merits of the case against the organization organizations because of legal technicalities involved.

In actions against state officials a 1971 political student organization, the American Association of University Students, filed a suit against individual plaintiffs sued Kentucky Governor Lou Nunn and University of Kentucky President John W. Oswald under the Civil Rights Act of 1871.

They charged that Nunn's action against them was in violation of the 14th Amendment guarantee due to process.
One More Try

The following editorial is written only for the more forward thinking and serious-minded students on the PC campus who are genuinely interested in making this College a more respectable academic institution. Super-jocks, free-loaders, and all you unconcerned and uncommitted "students" can stop reading this right now. We're not interested in talking to you.

Now, everyone else, please turn to page six and read the letter to the editor submitted by Bob Phelan, '71. We like it. We think it's enthusiastic and creative. This is the kind of suggestion and initiative that could eventually make Providence College a first rate institution. Whether you students realize it or not, apathetic paralysis has crept into almost every segment of this "College" community. Perhaps our student "Congress" (Who are they? What the hell do they do?) might get this ball rolling... if they still exist. How about an open forum and a referendum? And if the students concur, a $100 assessment could be added to each student's tuition bill. Of course, that's only if you guys care. But do you know what we think? We think it's hopeless. Most of you people are just too busy doing your own thing.

In the last six issues of THE COWL, we've tried our best to confront our readers in an honest and intelligent manner. As more and more comments are made about the innocuous and bland tone of THE COWL, we have become more dubious over the success of our approach. Yet despite our frustration, we are still convinced of our obligation to this campus as a spokesman and forum for responsibly articulated opinion. So once again we point out for the students' attention something we feel will benefit the entire community.

We are faced with another challenge. What will you do this time?

"I must be cruel, only to be kind"

Hamlet Act III, Scene IV

MEMO--
FROM THE EDITOR

These are very disheartening times. Criticism comes from every front and assistance is an elusive phantom. Frustration and discouragement have become my bylines.

Following last Thursday's ill fated general student meeting, which no one attended, my personal evaluation of the Providence College Community reflects a drastic bottomless slide.

We of THE COWL have tried to present to Providence College a newspaper that is truly worthy of a responsible, concerned and sensitive campus. We have failed at times, perhaps, to present what you deem worthy readable material. This failure can be shouldered only by our staff. Even greater, however, has been our failure to recognize that we have misjudged this campus's atmosphere. Responsible, concerned and sensitive are words that the majority of people on this campus have never fully understood.

THE COWL has pleaded for support and found the College wanting. THE COWL has called a meeting for anyone concerned enough to help us establish more relevant guidelines in our future direction. We have been left with no other options. We will now assume that the College Community can accept THE COWL as the tool of a few. THE COWL will very seriously scrutinize all future criticism, and the sincerity of its source will be studied in even greater depth.

Thank you for your vote of CONFIDENCE.

JAMES M. CRAWFORD
Bernard F. McKay

The Election is over, the votes are all counted, the sham commercials are taking a rest. Dick Nixon has won, but has it won him a lot of political energy.

President Nixon was supposed to have taken control of the Senate and House. But the Democrats have held on. With virtually no money they held onto it. A brilliant and combined assault by George Murphy and Ralph Smith in the Senate. Perhaps their defensive skill was psychologically important as well, for Smith held an anti-Nixon Democrat, Everett Dirksen. The Democrats also pulled up 9 seats in the House. But Nixon has been making all the Democrats take control of a majority of the nation's Governors.

Why did Richard Nixon's hand-picked candidates fair so poorly? Why did Agnew and Nixon's rhetoric only succeed in a handful of states? I believe the answer goes far beyond the politics of the moment.

Some writers have suggested that Mr. Nixon's recent search for relatives in Ireland is a case in point. Richard Nixon, unlike just about every President in recent memory, did not come to the White House to learn his job group. He did not assume the Presidency and put his own special imprint on the job as his predecessors did. Lyndon Johnson, John Kennedy, Dwight Eisenhower, Franklin Roosevelt, and most other Presidents, have brought to the White House a particular vision, a character, a personality, some thing which distinguishes one particular personality from another. Richard Nixon did not, or could not, do this.

And so, Richard Nixon hunts through the hills of Ireland for an identity. He has no ranch by the Perdanas, no hideaway compound in Cape Cod, no farm in Gettysburg, no homestead in Independence, Missouri, no retreat at such dubious success in our own political and economic wisdom. He merely wanted to be respected, to have a certain kind of character, a character that can stand on its own when separated from the camera, from the television, from the commercial. He need not be a God-man, but he should not be average or mediocrity, but rather should be as a leader of men. He should be a superior man. When he runs for office we are going to have a look at his character. What will he bring to the Presidency? What is his emotional stability? He is one of the few reactionaries among you who seems to have no charisma, and that he did not expect to be loved. He must be something that makes you tend towards him, so that he could lead. I fear that Nixon's respect is only equal to that of a good old country boy. How can he be led without some kind of public theater, some public support, some public confidence? To be a leader one must have followers. Perhaps Nixon's failure on this year's campaign trail is not as strange or inexplicable as it might have seemed. Perhaps it is a pattern and was to have been expected.

Open Letter to Timothy Leary
We Have Won

Dear Good Doctor Timothy:

Congratulations! The only positive memory I have of all those legal experiences was getting away. A good escape almost makes up for it. But listen to me, please, with a stillness. Listen to me as you would any fellow felon and fuga ble and, mainly, friend. With stillness, old timer, and patience, because I must say this carefully and with no chance you have not the media. It is October 10th, the Day of Atonement. Before beginning my first fast of midnight I dropped some sunshine and now I have to make my try.

I've also been doing a media fast, a little last summer's style to try for six months to the trick our feed a beast which I am convinced is nourished by the blood and anguish of combinations which the beast itself promotes. So all magazines, newspapers, TV or radio have been re freshingly sobered up, there are no more nut with a gun. I know what jail makes you feel but don't let them have your head in their cow-boys-and-Indians script. They can plant a deep enough rage in you make you feel alive. Rage is mainly a media brew any way, concocted of frustrations and self-righteousness, for the purpose of making headline ink. What we need is a little light and lightness, creation, some Harvard holy man I suppose there is much to be said for the vision wherein lies our only true hope. If it still comes up guns then God be with you in your part of the battle, but if it doesn't come up guns I beg you to print a reconsideration. I do not mean to scold someone so much my senior in so many ways, I just don't want to lose you. What I really mean is to have us stay cool and alive and high and to lose you. What I really mean is to have us stay cool and alive and high.

In this battle, Timothy, we need every mind and every soul, but oh my doctor we don't need one more nut with a gun. I know what jail makes you feel but don't let them have your head in their cow-boys-and-Indians script. They can plant a deep enough rage in you make you feel alive. Rage is mainly a media brew any way, concocted of frustrations and self-righteousness, for the purpose of making headline ink. What we need is a little light and lightness, creation, some Harvard holy man I suppose there is much to be said for the vision wherein lies our only true hope. If it still comes up guns then God be with you in your part of the battle, but if it doesn't come up guns I beg you to print a reconsideration. I do not mean to scold someone so much my senior in so many ways, I just don't want to lose you. What I really mean is to have us stay cool and alive and high.

Speculations were rampant and Joyous. "I hope he gets to India or someplace. Old Leary deserves some good R and R because man, how long's it been? Ten, twelve years now and right there all those people are coming and never a whisper and you can tell, man, working where it counts what a shock that was and time..."

Then that letter, came out. "You read the letter from legendary Leonard in the Free Press! Saying it's sac red to shoot cops and that he's armed and that he doesn't sound like something he's put out. It sounds like some of them motorheads out of cages.

I read the letter. Halfway through I came to what he said. "And I don't mean by that put off by the style of their protest, but rather the style of their absence and I am convinced that, far from being the result of their being the voice of the peace and hope. Let us thank God for those voices. Thank you."

Don't misunderstand me, doc tor; I wish in no way to cool your fervent protest. I wish in no way to cool your protest. I wish in no way to cool your protest.

Prof. Rodney Delesanta

Thanksgiving?

(Editor's note: The following is a speech given by Dr. Rodney Delesanta to the American College of Physicians. Switzerland last year on the occasion of the annual Thanksgiving program of the American College Program.)

"I must confess to a certain anxiety when Mr. Grooske plucked me from the ranks of the available for this post-panulal talk. The prospect of an over­ thirty professor saying anything meaningful about that high-feast of the Christian calendar is a thanksgiving to a group of expatriate American students who (I am told) have no pot and no pie to start the talk, and are probably stung this talk, I say, and in saying so, I am a little bit like a recruiting sergeant trying to get Elridge Cleaver to join the army or, the American Legion. For I suspect that even the few revolutionaries among you who whom James Reston has called Agnostics—must wonder about the appropriateness of this holiday at a time in our national life when con trition might seem more order in Thanksgiving: when we have lost the respect of the country, when we must feel about the drugging of the blessings of Vietnam, when we have lost even the most chauvinistic among us must question the propriety of this holiday. But even in this time of political and economic wisdom which, after all, is as much such dubious in our own spastic society. But if the young feel that I am grossly misrepresenting your mentors here who are not too young to remember the hope which we have lost, the spirit of the late sixties began, I must confess to a certain romanticism in those days when we seemed to have the power to change the American power almost ten years ago passing from the beneficent philanthism of the 50's to the call do dynamism of the 60's. As Wordsworth said about another
To the Editor:

One of the big complaints of students today is that they have very little to say in the decision making of the staff of their university. All of us have, at one time or another, engaged in a bit of that "If I were in charge . . ." thinking. In the past, the main weapon of those who sought to try to do something about this situation was protest. No one has to be told about the various forms of protest, or about how frustrating and divisive it can be. There is an alternative, however. One that is more mature, dynamic, constructive, and also more likely to succeed.

The alternative is the endowment of an academic chair by the students. When money is donated to a college or university, it often comes with "stings attached," specifications on how the money is to be used, how it is to be distributed and by whom. One form of money donation is the endowment of a chair.

Basically, the endowment of a chair involves the investing of a sum of money, the interest of which pays the salary and cost of bringing an emeritus scholar in a given field for a specified period of time (usually one or two years.) For instance, a chair in the psychology department could conceivably be offered to a man like B.F. Skinner, who would then teach some regular courses. This could be done for a day or two, if you will, a leader in your own particular field offering courses in your own department. The quality of your education could improve immensely. A chair is offered to a man as a recognition of his accomplishments in his field, and it is not an honor to be turned down lightly. If the students of Providence College, or any other, for that matter) were to endow a chair, they would have complete control over it, stipulating which department it went to, who would be considered to fill it, etc.

A working model of how the chair would be administered might run like this:

In any given year, a committee consisting of five representatives each from each of the four current classes that year, plus two representatives from each of the previous five graduating classes would have the ultimate responsibility for administering the chair. It might be stipulated that the chair would be awarded to a different department every two years, chosen by the committee on the basis of which department had upgraded itself the most since the chair was last awarded (or for the first time, which had upgraded itself the most within a given period of time).

The committee would then accept nominations from the faculty of the department the chair was awarded to as to who would be offered the chair, as well as suggestions from the student body at large. From these suggestions, the committee would select candidates for the chair, with first, second and third choices, in the hope that the men were unable or unwilling to accept the post.

In one move the students would be in a position to hire and fire certain faculty members of their own choice. They would be in a position to enforce demands upon the departments to shape up, rewarding those departments which are sensitive to student needs. The myth (?) of the apathetic and immature student would be buried forever. The chair could also be used in dealing with the administration and corporations—if they became inscrutable in their dealings they could be faced with the humiliation of seeing the chair awarded outside the school every once in a while.

The presence of the chair would be a terrific benefit for the whole college, improving the quality of education and attracting serious students and scholars who would wish to study under and work with the men occupying the chair. It would also enhance the reputation of the school and its student body.

A chair is not, however, an easy thing to endow. It would cost approximately a half million dollars. The problem is not as insurmountable as it might first appear, however. The Ford and Rockefeller Foundations, or even the Federal Government might be willing to match funds. In that case, the student body would be faced with the prospect of having to raise only a quarter of a million dollars, which, in a college the size of P.C. comes to approximately $110 per student. $110 may seem a little steep for the average student, but it certainly isn’t a crushing burden for most of us, especially if it is spread over two or three years. For $110 each we can do the college and ourselves a great service, and get a chunk of power for ourselves as well. About a half million dollars worth of power.

I certainly don’t expect the students now to wildly expose the proposal and raise the money overnight. I’m making the suggestion in the hope that it will be considered and that someday a student body will have the maturity, guts and determination to pick up this challenge and see it through. It may not be as easy or as fun as the confrontation game, but it is certainly better.

Sincerely

Robert E. Phelan ’71

Letter to the Editor

You know him, but have you ever been to this house?

Sure, you got through Shakespeare in class. You can even quote lines from his plays. But have you ever walked down the streets where he walked? Like Henley Street where he was born. Or visited Hall’s Croft, the home of his daughter Susanna? Or some other spot? Hundreds of thousands of British tourists do it on a very limited budget. And in Britain you can travel through thousands of years of history. And you can do it on a very limited budget.

To find out about accommodations for as little as $3 a night (full English breakfast included), places where lunch or dinner costs $1.50, special discount tickets and lots more ways to save money, send for our free booklet: Britain for Young People.

Pucksters Strong Offense; Pumple Leading in Defense

The Hockey Forces of Lou Lamoriello will get the jump on the other Winter teams when they face-off against the Catamounts of the University of Vermont on Friday night at Rhode Island Auditorium. This will be the Friars home opener highlighted by Tony Pumple. The Friars will participate in three tournaments this year: the Duluth Tournament, the Boston University Tournament, and the Loyola College Tournament. The Duluth Tournament will have the University of Minnesota, Michigan Tech, Providence, and the University of Calgary. The Boston Tournament will feature Northeastern, Notre Dame, Boston University and Providence.

Besides these two tournaments during Thanksgiving and Christmas, the Friars will scrimmage with several teams like ourselves. We look for improvement this year in all aspects of the game, including skating.

We missed out on the playoffs last season's foes Brown, Boston College, Harvard, and Cornell, and the host team R.P.I. The Friars scored 38 points in their freshman year while playing on the same line with Gaffney and Ferrio. Also returning after an absence of several years will be Jim Murphy who served a tour of duty with the Marines in Vietnam. The former Burville All-Stater could be the highlight of the Friars this year. Murphy has scored 39 points in 19 games this year.

The returning from last year's frosh team will be defencemen John Yerxa and Bruce Gage, and forwards Fran Connors, John Haggerty and Larry Charest. Spearheading the defensive corps is senior John Marchetti who was the Second Team All-American last season's regulars: senior John Marchetti and juniors Glen Dollard and Al Evans. The three defencemen combined for 39 points last year.

In goal this year will be junior netminder Brian Reynolds. Brian made 43 saves last year, and he and Pumple is holding the Friars to an 11-1-2 record.

Dear Supporters,

The Football Club of Providence College would like to thank all those who over the past five years have kept our intercollegiate football program here at P.C. During the five years of its existence the football Club has provided the students with three major benefits: 1) a chance to play intercollegiate football, 2) a chance to run a business which annually has a budget of approximately $15,000 and 3) a chance to cheer for a team that has never had a losing season.

I am not going to dwell on the first of these benefits. I believe that the enthusiasm and dedication of the players are evident. As far as the second and third benefits go, however, the P.C. student is gratified by this desire. We need you to return the netminder Brian Reynolds. Brian made 43 saves last year, and he and Pumple is holding the Friars to an 11-1-2 record.

In closing I would like to remind the reader that football will remain at P.C. only as long as the students want it. Students must play, students must work for it, and students must support this club, otherwise there cannot, and should not be football at P.C.

Pat Murphy
President of Club Football

Friar Eleven Split Road Contests; Murray, Dorgan Grid Co-Captains

The P.C. gridders closed out the current campaign on a dismal note, bowing to New Haven College, 18-14. This crushing setback to a team with a 1-6 record came on the heels of a brilliant win over the previously unbeaten University of Hartford Club football team, 12-7.

The loss to New Haven, in New Haven, evened the club's mark at 4-4. The defeat can only be explained in terms of the Friars' inability to get up for a supposedly patsy New Haven team. This has been indicative of Friar play all season; a series of "highs" and unaccountable "lows."

Friday's downturn forced the movement of the game from its original site, Ken Strong Field, to Rice Field, a high school practice field.

Inclement weather coupled with the rifle shot arm of New Haven quarterback, John Beauvais, spelled P.C.'s defeat. It was always the opposition's aerial game that PC was unable to handle during the course of the season. Beauvais split the secondary for three touchdown passes. One a 51-yard bomb which put the host team their first score.

Vin Macey bolted in from eight yards out in the second period and Jay Sinatra's PAT split the uprights to give P.C. the lead at 7-0. But New Haven wasn't through. Beauvais took his team to their second six-pointer of the afternoon, as he pitched a five yard touchdown pass just before the half ended. New Haven went to the locker room on top, 12-0.

Provide took advantage of their only break in the game when they converted an aborted fourth-down punt by New Haven into a score. Vin Macey, by now a familiar name to Friar followers, plumbed over from three yards out, and into the game's two point conversion, to put the Friars 12-7 at the half.

The second period was a quiet period for both teams, as New Haven's scoring defense was superb. It never seemed to be able to mount a drive, bigger, stronger, and had a well-organized attack. The Friars never seemed to be able to mount an attack.

The Rams kept the ball in the Friars' half of the field. They outshot the Rams 52-8, and some good goal-tending by Rocky Derenski kept the goal total from going higher.

Charlie Correira paced the Rams offensive unit, booting home the Rams first goal on a penalty kick with two minutes left in the first period.

Correira's second goal in the fourth period broke the game wide open for the Rams. He beat Rocky with a low shot into the left corner.

HOLDEN SCORES FRIAR LONE GOAL

Early in the second period, at the three minute mark, Tom Holden tied the game at 1-1. Holden played a strong game, but was often double teamed. Holden took a pass from Clint Reardon, dribbled into the center and drilled a low shot into the right corner of the net. The Rams Rich Crocker, Bruce Goff, and Joe Hooks were unable to score against them.

The Friar offense tallied 32 goals. Freshman booter Tom Holden, probably the best soccer player to lay foot on this campus, led the scorers with 10 goals. Tim Gilmore, another freshman who shows a lot of promise, booked home 7 goals.

The PC soccer team would like to extend its thanks to its manager, sophomore Jack Donahue, for a fine job.

Mal Brown Dinner

According to general chairman Charles E. Hagen '52, the Mal Brown Dinner will sport annual sports dinner and basketball clinic on Sunday, November 29th. The dinner will be at 6:15 and the clinic 8:15.

Attendance to the supper will be limited to 500, 250 for the dinner and 250 for the clinic. The Friars allowed only 10 goals to be scored against them, with six of those coming in the final two games.

Freshman Signal caller Brian Carey (10) led FRIAR Eleven to victory.

BY PETER GOBIS

The Providence College soccer team's successful season ended on a sour note, and wiped out their chances for an undefeated season, when the URI booters drubbed them 4-1.

It was a frustrating afternoon for the Friars, who had their hopes high. The Rams were bigger, stronger, and had a well-organized attack. The Friars never seemed to be able to mount an attack.
