U.S. Fund Withdrawal
Hits NIH Program at PC

The National Institute of Health (N.I.H.) has announced that it will withdraw its financial support of the Science Honors Program at Providence College within the next two years. On Monday, December 1, Dr. Edward A. Healy, director of the Honors Program, received notice that federal funding of the experimental biology training program would not continue beyond the present award period ending on June 30, 1970. Dr. Healy was later informed, however, that the College would be permitted to apply for additional funds to support the Honors Program for another year. Thus, the possibility exists that federal support will not terminate until June, 1971.

The experimental biology training program was established at Providence College as a governmental experiment in science education, conducted under the auspices of the National Institute of General Medical Sciences, a branch of N.I.H. The College was one of four schools in the nation chosen for this program. Since the inception of the program in 1960, the federal government has contributed between $180,000 and $200,000 per year to finance student research in biology and related fields.

In a letter dated November 21, 1969, Dr. Trygve Tuve, chief of the Research Training Grants Branch of the National Institute of General Medical Sciences, informed Dr. Healy that the National Advisory General Medical Sciences Council, meeting on November 14, had "concluded that the program has been successful in its initial goal of demonstrating the value of training grant support to undergraduate colleges."

The letter continued, "The Council unanimously agreed that the experimental nature of the presently supported programs was completed. Consequently, the Council could not justify continuation of support of the four currently active grants."

With the eventual loss of government funds, the future of the Science Honors Program is left in doubt. However, Dr. Healy stated that the College will make every effort to retain some sort of honors program. However, the funds to finance a program such as this would most likely have to come from within the College itself.

Dr. Healy felt that the loss of federal funds for the Honors Program would have only a minor impact on the regular science programs currently in effect at the College. "It may mean that a few new pieces of laboratory equipment normally provided under the federal grant will have to be purchased by the science department," he stated.

As far as the science departments themselves are concerned, he added, "they have been operating on a shoestring for a long time and have been operating without the permanent status that Science Honors must have to be dropped from the College program.

Action Due From Senate On Brennan

At the Faculty Senate meeting on Friday, December 12, the Senate's Committee on Appeals will present its decision on the appeal filed by Edward Brennan concerning his request for tenure.

Brennan was notified by the College Committee on Rank and Tenure on October 21 that it had found grounds for not giving him tenure at Providence College. Upon learning of this recommendation, Brennan immediately lodged an appeal with the Senate Committee on Appeals.

Dr. Mark Rerick, chairman of the Committee on Appeals, stated that information relevant to the Brennan appeal has been obtained from Brennan himself, from Dr. Paul van K. Thomson, chairman of the College Committee on Rank and Tenure; and from Dr. Theodore Bosack, chairman of the Psychology department, of which Brennan is a member.

After reviewing this documentation, the Peals Committee composed of Dr. Rerick, Rev. Thomas Faley, O.P., and Dr. Theodore Galkowski, will formulate an opinion on the appeal and will present their findings to the Senate's Committee of the Whole.

A closed debate will follow, after which the Senate will vote on the Appeals Committee's decision in an open session.

Should Brennan's appeal fail against the Rank and Tenure Committee he supported by both the Committee on Appeals and the Faculty Senate, a resolution that the College will not be given tenure status at the College. Upon learning of this recommendation, Brennan immediately lodged an appeal with the Senate Committee on Appeals.

Committee members have been operating on a shoestring for a long time and have been operating without the permanent status that Science Honors must have to be dropped from the College program.

The pieces of legislation in question deal with the Faculty Senate having a role in the selection of future presidents of the College and that Senate legislation will become operative unless vetoed by the president within 21 days after it is received by the president.

At its meeting last Sunday, the Corporation listened to arguments on behalf of the Senate of the two measures given by Senate President Mario D'Amato and vice-president Fr. Thomas Fallon, O.P. The Corporation has not yet formulated its reply.

Irk's 'Naval' Staff

Three members of the Wooden Naval Coffee House's advisory board resigned their posts at a meeting on Monday night.

Gary Dimondes, former chairman of the board; William Miller, former co-chairman; and Frank Toher, former chairman of the sound and lighting committee, all gave personal reasons for their resignations.

Reportedly, however, an underlying factor in the resignations of Dimondes and Miller was the continuing presence in the Coffee House's audiences of groups of extremely rowdy, drunken individuals. The actions of these individuals are described in a letter to the Cowl by the Wooden Naval staff (cf. Page 9).

Last Saturday night was a particularly rough one for the workers of the Wooden Naval. From students in the post game dorm parties adding to the already "ramous" normally present at the Coffee House. Consequently, a measure suggesting a suspension of Coffee House activities on the nights of weekend home games was discussed, though no definitive statement on the measure was issued.

Brian Hart, after being unanimously elected to succeed Dimondes and Miller as chairman of the board; William Miller, former co-chairman, and Frank Toher, former chairman of the sound and lighting committee, all gave personal reasons for their resignations.

Despite Lottery, Little Chance for ROTC Change

By WILLIAM M. BUCKLEY

Since that fatal night when the draft lottery was held, the ROTC Department has been receiving inquiries regarding how to get out and also how to get in. Several juniors and seniors who are presently in the advanced corps of ROTC drew high numbers in the draft lottery, which means that there is little likelihood that they would be drafted. Some of those who are in this situation have been entertaining thoughts of getting out of ROTC and thereby not serving in the military at all, but there is little chance that they will be able to accomplish this.

Those ROTC cadets who are in the advanced corps have signed a contract in which they agreed to accept a commission in the Army and also to serve 2 years active duty. In other words, instead of taking the chance of being drafted and serving as an enlisted man, those in the advanced corps committed themselves to serve as commissioned officers.

Col. Gideon Hevenor, ROTC Department head, said that "as long as students keep in mind that they are under contract, they should realize that a change in the draft procedures really doesn't affect their status in ROTC. They are under contract and I don't propose to release anyone from his contract solely because his draft position has been clarified." Hevenor also mentioned that he is willing to talk to anyone who is in this situation and will treat each one on an individual basis. He also said that he will be more than willing to keep students in the department informed as to what changes the Army makes and also changes in Army thinking on this subject.

The existing situation for freshmen and sophomores in ROTC is different, however, for they can drop military science at the end of a semester, and it is a possibility that many of those who know that there is little chance of their being drafted will do this.

The draft has affected others differently, however, because some who have a low draft number and are not now in ROTC are wondering how to get into the program.

This is where the ROTC 2-year program comes in. Although it was originally designed for those students who do not have a 4-year program at their school, it is possible for PC students to enter it.

Those who have taken ROTC courses in college or high school probably have a better chance of getting into this program, although the ROTC Department will handle each case individually, with reference to a student’s experience and his record.

It is also possible for juniors and seniors who plan to go to graduate school to participate in this program, but, again, each instance must be judged by the ROTC Department.

Hevenor has stated his willingness to give any assistance or information that he can and urges anyone who is interested in entering this type of program to contact him.

Lose 10 Lbs. In 10 Days On New Grapefruit Diet

This is the revolutionary new grapefruit diet that everyone is suddenly talking about. Literally thousands upon thousands of copies have been passed from hand to hand in factories, plants and offices throughout the U. S. There will be no weight loss in the first four days. But you will suddenly drop 5 pounds on the 5th day. Then after you will lose one pound a day until the 16th day. Then you will "if wanted" every two days until you get down to your proper weight. Best of all there should be no hunger pangs. Now revised and enlarged, this new diet plan lets you stuff yourself with foods that were formerly "forbidden" such as big steaks, trimmed with fat, Southern fried chicken, rich gravies, mayonnaise, lobsters, swimming in butter, bacon, fats, sausages and scrambled eggs. You can eat until you are full, until you cannot possibly eat any more and still you should lose 10 pounds in the first ten days, plus 1½ pounds every two days thereafter until your weight is down to normal. The secret of this new "quick weight loss" is not generally known. Stuff yourself on the permitted foods listed in the diet plan, and you will lose weight safely and without danger to your system. When the fat and bloom are gone you will cease to lose weight and your weight will remain controlled. A copy of this new and startlingly successful diet plan can be obtained by sending 50c to

After January 1 your family’s Blue Cross and Blue Shield contract no longer covers you. Instead, you’ll be eligible for your own Blue Cross and Blue Shield contract. (Exception: the Federal Employee Plan and a few others cover young adults to age 21.) There are three types of membership available to 19 year olds: Student membership, group membership (if you’re working), or Direct Pay membership. With the cost of health care today, you ought to be covered by one of them.

What to do:

1. If you work, sign up through the group there (nine of every 10 companies in Rhode Island offer Blue Cross and Blue Shield plans). Otherwise, call or write us for more details. Incidentally, there are others who are eligible to join Blue Cross and Blue Shield even if their families were not covered. So call us today.

At 19, you’re too young to start worrying about health care bills.

New Frosh Officers Show Concern, Need for Change

BY GARRY KIERNAN

At the door of room 428 in Aquinas Hall, I was pleasantly greeted by the stately manner of one Edwin Kelly. As president of the class of 1973, he expressed his delight in the election results by stating, "I’m just overjoyed."

Kelly is not one to rest on the mere fruits of his victory, for he seems to possess the utmost in spirit and determination for the amelioration of the freshman class’ situation. Indeed exemplary of this was last Friday’s “Guys and Dolls Party,” an overwhelmingly well organized affair which, he states, is only a beginning.

It appears that freshman officers have begun to take a substantial hold upon P.C.’s political affairs. The major objectives for this year’s administration are: the initiation of dorm councils by January, curfew changes, on no comment were made, and social improvement, including better mingling of freshmen, sophomores, and juniors, both on and off campus. Action has already been taken with the formation of the Providence College Club, headed by Vice President Jim Hughes, which will care for social functions off campus. Social chairmen Jim Hughes and Charles Hawkins are looking for “greater level and dimension than the mixer.” Creativity for weekend enjoyment seems to be their goal.

The freshmen administration will have clear in other areas as well. Both Father Haas and Father Cunningham have been consulted, with regard to chancellors, and any student who are considered semester privileges and any student who wishes to retain this category for second semester should note this at the time of scheduling.

Any schedule adjustment which has to be made by any freshman or sophomore will be facilitated in Harkins Auditorium on Dec. 16. Because of the few students in these classes who will find this necessary, any randomization of times has been set up for them. These students can report during the announced hours.

Seniors and juniors will be excused from classes with hours in conflict with their scheduling times. Freshmen and sophomores will not.

All students, even those not required to complete the Data Sheet and to submit it to Student Affairs no later than Dec. 19, have been formed. Ralph Irenarella heads a Communications and Relations Committee which will include a frequent newsletter to the class. In conjunction with Father John Cunningham, Director of Residence, Secretary Steve Foster, is working for the institution of the dorm councils. Foster feels that it would be to the students’ advantage for the priests, presently situated on every floor, to take their residence on a single floor. He stated that “We must give students the rights which they feel deprived of.” Foster is exploring further possibilities for the betterment of dorm life. Heading the crucial Curriculum and Studies Committee is Treasurer Jack Kearney whose determination was indeed made evident by his overpowering campaign.

The class of 1973 has indeed shown a responsible choice in its officers. Evidently of exceptional dedication and commitment, they realize that what confronts them will be no easy affair.

Carolan Club Sponsors Christmas Activities

By MICHAEL DONAHUE

Holiday fun and games are in store for PC Big Brothers and Little Brothers. The Carolan Club plans to sponsor a Christmas party for the Big Brothers organization on Wednesday, December 17.

The Dillon Club, the Coffee House and Fr. Paul Walsh, the school chaplain, are working in conjunction with the Carolan Club on this affair under the charge of Junior Bill Lennox. Little brothers will be given gifts and refreshments will be served. Caroling will also be included in the plans for the night. According to Skip Lenzcyki, Carolin Club president, "The Coffee House will try to put it all together, and while the time is not definite yet, it will be posted on the Carolan Club bulletin board.

Following this party, the Carolan Club will hold a party exclusively for its members. It is an annual event with satirical skits presented by the students on subjects such as faculty members, student administration and other varied topics of the day. Lenzcyki adds, "As many students as possible should show up and participate so that all can have a good time. There can be skits on all kinds of things. Lots of contribution is necessary and it can be a good time." Students interested in performing a skit should get together, write up their skit and contact Tom Holt in Stephen Hall and they will be free to put it on. Refreshments will be available at the party, and an emcee will conduct the whole affair.

In another addition to the bright holiday spirit on the PC campus, two Christmas trees have been purchased by the Carolan Club in conjunction with the Dillon Club. They will be placed in Harkins Hall and Raymond Hall. A fifteen foot tree will arise in Harkins and a ten footer will find its way into Raymond Hall. Wreaths will adorn different doors in Harkins and other buildings.
Coed Hours are Beneficial

Monday night the Student Congress passed a strongly worded proposal in which it called for the institution of evening coed hours and privileges for women in the dorms. It is true that in the past similar measures have not been received well by the Administration, but it can be stated that the present bill will be more carefully considered.

The Administration knows that the student body is very strongly in favor of evening coed hours and it also knows that a great number of students are still dissatisfied with the present barricade-like conditions on campus. If the rebellion which erupted last February is to be avoided, the dormitory situation must be improved and the institution of evening coed hours will help to bring this about.

On the practical level, there is little to be said against evening coed hours. Responses to a Congress conducted survey on this matter show that dormitories assume a much more natural atmosphere when this type of arrangement is in operation and this factor contributes to a student's educational and emotional growth. Overall, better living by dormitory students is greatly improved and maintenance problems are decreased.

It seems absurd for the Administration to think so little of its students as to deny them the opportunity to have women in their rooms after the sun goes down. At present, its attitude is that a PC student plus a woman plus a dormitory room plus nighttime equals sin, when in actuality these same elements will add up to an opportunity for educational and emotional growth for the student through the building of relationships and the exchange of ideas.

Financial Considerations

The Student Congress has come to find itself in an embarrassing financial situation. It is presently unable to allocate the perennial appropriations to the various clubs on campus. Its inability to distribute these funds is due to the fact that its bank balance totals only $150.

Congress officials had requested a $1000 advance on next semester's portion of the budget for the school administration, but this request was denied. The Administration's rationale was that if the advance was given, it would have to be borrowed from the bank and this would be prohibitive because of the present high interest rates.

Our concern at this time is not with the Administration, which makes the ludicrous claim that it cannot advance the Congress $1000 without borrowing it, but rather with the present budget ($8500), which is not sufficient to allow the Student Congress to function effectively.

The budget is expected to cover class appropriations, totalling $2000 ($500 per class), allocations to the numerous clubs on campus, and numerous other financial responsibilities.

We wonder how much longer the Congress can be expected to carry out its financial responsibilities while operating from the present budget of $8500. The present situation, already mentioned, would seem to be evidence that time is indeed running out, unless some solution is found.

We, therefore, urge the Congress to begin seriously considering a student activity fee or tax which would deliver all its revenue to the Congress and thus enable that body to effectively fulfill its financial responsibilities.

A Stand to Be Taken

The advent of the Urban Council at Providence College is welcome in that it will hopefully promote and coordinate interest in social action projects among students at this educational institution. In the past, projects of this type have been undertaken only on a small scale and have often suffered because of it.

One of the goals of the Urban Council is to serve as a coordinating point for those interested in working with social action groups, but the Council will need both human and monetary assistance in order to achieve the desired end. The council, if it is to be effective, will need a full time director, space to conduct their activities, and funds to cover the costs which will be entailed in a project such as this.

Providence College is not known for its prominence in the area in which the Urban Council will deal, but it has an excellent opportunity through the Council to practice the Christian principles which it espouses. A very serious commitment is required here, but it is a commitment which must be made.

To this point, Fr. Haas has avoided making any kind of firm commitment as far as any funds or space for the Urban Council. This does not mean that he has not provided these necessities, just that he has not taken a stand on them. We feel that the Urban Coalition is worth taking a stand on and we would ask the President of Providence College not to leave the fate of this organization in an indefinite state much longer. Hopefully, the school will be able to provide for a director and for some space, but if not, then those involved in the Council should know where they stand.

MORALITY IS HOW YOU LOOK AT IT

By Michael Trainor

With the disclosure in recent weeks of the alleged American atrocities in the Vietnam conflict, the American hamlet of My Lai, the nation has been rocked with guilt, shame, and a sense of Army brutality. The current wave of public outcry, marked as it is with expressions of shame and moral indignation, is pathetic in light of a more fundamental perspective. The fact that a whole is in a "spin of emotion" is understandable, demonstrating a masochistic way of looking at a bury itself in all the shame and disgrace of the My Lai atrocities. The blood of the My Lai victims, we are told, stains not only Lt. Calley, or the military establishment; no, it stains the whole fabric of the American society. Such a reaction is peculiar to America; we see ourselves as sensitive and humane people, and we stand back, incredulous, and confronted with culpability in an incident as distasteful as My Lai.

Thus far, the American reaction has been in the form of a tripe morality play. We are left with the sense of self-righteousness about punishing those who are responsible, and about the tragedy that has occurred in the future. Some opportunistic politicians, who call themselves politicians who have descended upon the My Lai incident to exploit their shame and outrage. Thus, Senator Thomas Eagleton, the Senate's week proposed monetary reparation for the survivors of My Lai victims and now seeks to establish a scholarship fund for all the little children who lost their mon­eny or daddy at My Lai. For­mer Vice-President Hubert Humphrey has been quoted as saying that an impartial civilian board established to investigate the allegations in order to determine what im­lications the case might have for the whole structure of our society.

Such a sudden outbreak of public morality is certainly not in perspective with the Viet­nam situation as a whole. How­ever, I, for one, cannot un­derstand why such an uproar has arisen over the lives of 109 civilians when, according to the Senate's sub-committee on 300,000 civil­ians killed in the Vietnam War, to­gether with countless more mili­tary casualties on both sides. The deed of Lt. Calley is one in a related instance of civilian suffer­ ing. What is the American people respond to the night­marish spectacle of an entire na­tion, freedom, death? What kind of people are we, who can ig­nore this, who can reconcile in favor of a more visible vig­nette, Lt. Calley are more guilty than the 152 bombardier who directs lots of explosives into populated areas? Indeed, is Lt. Cal­ley any more guilty than a na­tion which is war-weary and patriotically affirm the use of torture to extract na­tional goals and prestige? The answer can only be no. If the 152 bombardier applies to apply moral principles to the My Lai incident, then the American brand of morality is blind, discriminatory, and highly selective; a slave to the stimuli of intense publicity.

This sort of morality is no me­mory at all.

In a few months, My Lai will be forgotten, we will want to have more remote pages of American history. The trial will end, the pub­lic conscience will have been assuaged. American prestige and the moral image of the United States will be, in Vietnam, the bruit­ality, the general, the human­ity, man will go on. May God help us all.

To Those Who Were Lucky

By Thomas Coakley

On Tuesday night, December 1, I was extremely lucky; for on that night my birthdate was 1, I was extremely lucky; for my only valid rationalization is that unless my country en­ters military emergency I would not be drafted.

Strangely enough my initial reaction to this obvious bit of good fortune was not un­controllable joy, but rather a per­cisely cautious optimism. Vis­ions of Mastriani's gluttonous and inequality are being waged by a corpo­rate with my Honor the President, asked if there would be a meeting this ev­ening, the key word of those attaining the college will have to be "look for­ward to."''

Whatever the means, how­ever, the key word of those who are free should be commitment, for now is not the time for us to rejoice and be­lieve at our new found freedom but one for us to work together to make society a better one for all our fellows to return to.

Jack Reed: Temporarily

Last week the young men of America gathered around their television sets to watch their fate be decided by a chance drawing. Whether this is a good system or not is a debatable point. One third of the young men think it is good, another third isn't sure, and the final third thinks it ter­rible. Criticism notwithstanding, the President (the Nixon's the one) has set a great opportunity to break into show business. Rather than have the lottery only once a year they could pick names once a week. Then, if television likes it, the new­est game show would go some­thing like this:

"Hi there, Impudent analou­ses, it's time once again to play the Draft Game. Today we're going to give away over 1200 all­expense paid vacations in that world famous hot-spot, South Vietnam. And now, here's the man who holds the fate of all you Fascists, do­main dill-ent dioblings in his and his little hands—Heera's Dick!'' in the Congress and many ques­tions that have surrounded Richie Mas­sa, sophomore Congress repre­sentative, asked about the possi­bility of a compromise or solu­tion to the bill, and Zarelli an­swered that this and will be firm on it. This matter needs very delicate handling, and this preference to stand on it."

Joseph Meney, sophomore class president, said: "We would have a time limit on the adminis­trative amendment. So, bill and Zarelli replied: "If there is any inten­tional stall on it, we should have the Senate have no tim­eline." He also added that if a "more normalized attitude of the college will have to go or student rights will be forever lost." Ralph Innarella, freshman vice-president, asked what the Congress would do if the pro­posal were amended. He also asked that there were many new and beneficial alternatives in this event.

The possibility of a poll of the student body was brought up and Zarelli answered that the student body is unani­mously in support of this proposal.

"We have to face the fact that the ultimate decision is up to the corpora­tion. Zarelli added that "if it does go to the corporation we will need to convince them." A question was also asked about what would apply to freshmen and Zarelli answered that it would.

President Ralph Paglieri said there would be a meeting this week to discuss this plan and the administration board on this proposal.
Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

Rarely—after reading, before all else, its sports section—do I find myself in accord with the editorial section of the last issue which came to me. I did discover a measure of common ground, however: you write, your personal concern that "the future of The Cowl seems precarious; in fact, there is a possibility that the Voice — and perhaps even more — will cease to be heard in the land. From now on, I shall make no attempt to smooth the way, fulfill those ideals in which you felt I was lacking. I know that I, along with the other officers of The Cowl, a publication of a Catholic and Dominican College, is so in need of financial assistance as to publish an advertisement for a neat bundle of garbage, called a movie and titled "More." Perhaps you could arrange a benefit showing, on campus (in the Wooden Needle, which is said to be totally non-profit), and its detailed exhibition of beauty, drugs, and sex. I may only be bringing to the tottering Cowl more revenue than it needs.

Thank You

To the Editor,

This is a letter expressing our deepest thanks to the Coffee House for letting the Secretaries use the facilities for their Secretaries Night. It is very satisfying to see such an idea as the Coffee House grow in to such a success as it is.

We would also like to thank the entertainers for a job well done. Without their assistance, the evening would not have been a success.

Our thanks again for a lovely time.

Our main objectives for the coming year will be: first, to meet the challenge of the Class of '73; I am writing this letter so that I can be able to think for all of your tremendous concern for our College, shown in the recent class election. I thank all of you who worked and supported me, especially. For those of you who thought that I, perhaps, was not the best candidate, I hope that I can, in some way, fulfill those ideals in which you feel I was lacking. I know that I, along with the other officers, will do my best to represent you to the school and attain those goals which you feel are so important.

Draft Center Busy: Post-Lottery Rush

By ROBERT A. KELLY

Apparently the Providence College Draft Counseling Center opened just in time. The day after the national draft lottery was the first day of operation for the center and the counselors were literally be­ swept away by anxious students, mostly with little lottery numbbers.

Frank Scuito, Chairman of the Counseling Center estimates that about 70 students have already utilized the facilities at the center. And it is quick to point out that the con­ center has been open for only a week.

"The response has been very encourag­ing." Mr. Scuito says.

There is definite evidence that this type of service was needed and we have been able to handle the volume of counselees.

He further notes that most of the students coming into the center seek information about the operation of the lottery and the jealousy that they might be in because of their lottery numbers.

"We don't know yet exactly how the lottery will be implemented on the local level," Mr. Scuito commented, "since not even the local boards have received directives on how to proceed with their call-ups under the lottery system. We expect to find out as soon as they do. We know that there will be a meeting of the regional directors of the Selective Service System to discuss call-up procedure and as soon as that decides we will know.

Mr. Scuito expects increased activity at the center once the lottery system is in actual operation. "That is the time people will know where they stand and the fellows with the low numbers will be coming in to ask about the chances of being inducted or possible alternate.

We of course are here only to provide answers to their questions and we do not counsel anyone to resist. But students should note that any dealings that they might have with their draft boards over the possibility of a deferrant takes time. Therefore I urge anyone, especially seniors who wish to see another deferment after their student deferments run out, to plan early to use the counseling center.

Senior Richard Snell was the winner of a $15 dollar gift because of his fourth place finish in the recent national draft lottery. Snell, born of Feb­

uary 14 was the highest selected student from among 58 individuals who contributed to the pool. The fund was established at a cost of 50 cents per individual in order to ease the prospec­tive "winner" over the initial shock. By coincidence, Snell's brother, Bill, placed second in the lottery. Bill Snell, however, had joined the National Guard a week and a half prior to the lottery drawing.

Glee Club Revived: Plans First Concert

The Glee Club of Providence College will stage its first concert in nearly a year on Tuesday evening, December 16, at 8:30.

The concert, to be held in the lounge of Aquinas Hall, is one of five concerts, which the Glee Club expects to hold on campus throughout the remainder of the year. The perfor­ ance is open to the public, and admission is free.

The concert will feature a wide spectrum of the music scene ranging from folk songs to songs of "foreign origin" and will culminate with songs of the coming season. Assisting the Glee Club will be members of the flute, harp and organ sections of the Rhode Island Philharmonic.

The Glee Club was inactive during the entire second semester of last year and this year was under the direction of Jon Carew, organist and choirmaster of St. Pius V Church. Newly elected student officers of the club include Mark Grimes, president; Robert Gaudrea, vice president; Kevin Robb, secretary, and Denis Den­ lauriers, treasurer.

Calendar Proposal

Gains More Support

Both the Committee on Studies and the Student Congress have acted favorably upon the proposed change in the academic calendar which would provide for a 21-day recess over the Christmas holidays.

The proposal was one of five options for changing the academic calendar offered to students and faculty members in separate polls taken during the week of November 4. Both student and faculty members voiced firm support for the 21-day recess proposal in the polls.

The results of the polls have been studied by a coordinating committee composed of the Rev. Thomas Peterson, O.P., chairman of the Committee on Studies, Dr. René Fortin, chairman of the Academic Affairs Committee, and student member Steven Kowalczyk '70.

The 21-day recess proposal was in turn handed down to the Committee on Studies, the Faculty Senate, and the Committee on Studies for consideration. The Congress and Committee on Studies returned their approval of the proposal during the latter part of last month; the Faculty Senate has not yet reached a decision on the matter.

Each of these bodies, the Faculty Senate, the Student Congress, and the Committee on Studies, have been asked to submit their recommendations on the calendar change to the Very Rev. William P. Haas, O.P., for his final decision.

The main objective of the 21-day break proposal, according to Kowalczyk, is "to eliminate the lame duck week of classes which currently exists between Christmas recess and the beginning of semester exams in mid-January. It would also help to alleviate the unnecessary pressure arising from exams being held after the vacation; exams under the new calendar exams would be disposed of before the holiday break."

Kowalczyk also stated that both the students and faculty could enjoy a significant break between semesters during which time they could relax without undue concern over exams. It is hoped that a few long weekends will be inserted throughout the school year, since the long second semester under the present proposal would have ten breaks. An example of this was the spring weekend celebrations, in which the Friday before and the Monday after would hopefully be declared holidays.

Somewhere within the realm of existence there is a wall separating two lovers. At some point of time it was the wall between Thibod and Pymnus. Defining an exact location would hinder the imagination so it becomes sufficient to identify the place as "a simple platform stage" and the time as "then." The two lovers need not be named but are simply referred to as "The Girl" and "The Boy." A particular creation is The Fantasticks being presented by the scene players in the Friar's Cell.

The play captures the characters of this peculiar dream. Not too far into the play one discovers that the wall has been constructed by the two fathers to draw their children together. With their use of negative psychology, the fathers hope to further their children's love for each other. They engage a bandit to stage a rape. Here one of the most entertaining musical numbers is sung, "It Depends on What You Pay." The first act ends with the marriage. The romantic notions collapse during the second act when the Boy leaves his wife to seek adventure. The audience is transported around the world to see him being tortured. Eventually, they are again united.

Perhaps the most imaginative and sensitive performance is given by James Haag who plays the Mute. His hands glide through the air with the precision of a diamond cutter's. Since he is on stage most of the time to distribute props from a huge red chest, his presence may be thought of as purely functional. However, the Mute unifies the sequences as an impersonal force. While the two fathers desire the wall, it is the Mute who builds it. At the end of the play, the Mute adds a touch of humor to the proceedings in phrasing that the play is conscious fantasy. Haag, in his portrayal of the Mute, has created time and circumstance.

Some of the other actors sparkle in their roles. The fathers, Edwin Kelly and Maurice Plourde, radiate the eccentricities of their roles. Because of their convincing portrayals, they can easily introduce silly arguments about gardening without draining the lines of their natural humor. Trotting around the stage in tattered costumes, the two wandering Shakespearean actors, Leo Do-tolo and Joseph Handly, can only be imagined in a ridiculous dream. Dotolo and Handly perform so skillfully that the extraordinary appearance of their characters in the play is not underdrew by rational interpretation. Rather the eccentricities are given strength and depth. Although the narrator, Mark Needham, is given the most important lines, he slides through some of them too quickly and too lightly.

The Coffee House charges fifty cents per person. It offers excellent entertainment, free coffee all night, cheese and crackers and a professional atmosphere that anyone can appreciate. Fifty-cents! In return for this, one student was knocked out by a drunk, water was thrown on patrons trying to come in, objects were thrown at entertainers, and obsequies were shouted out from the crowd. These were all drunks. They have that one excuse; if they weren't drunk and were in full control of their actions, we'd transfer to another college. There are countless other incidents. Last Saturday night paper was set on fire at three locations. Tables, candles, were destroyed, and at least ten cups of coffee were deliberately poured on patrons trying to get this. It is the client's element we've been catering to. Why? We've ceased to see it as an element on the campus...

THE WOODEN NAVAL
International Students Plan Festive Holiday

The International Association, formed to create an international atmosphere on campus, is attempting to help integrate foreign students in the student community. Under the sponsorship of Fr. Shanley, an assistant professor of economics, the group is enriching foreign students with the exchange of ideas which will help them work for further peace when they do become active in the outside world.

Francis Jacob, president of the association and himself a product of a Dominican high school in Pakistan, outlined some of the plans of the organization. An international panel concerning itself with the subject of birth is presently scheduled for December 16 in the Guild Room of Alumni Hall. The speakers will include Dr. Baina from India, Maqbul Ahmad Sheikh of Pakistan, Rabbi Eli A. Boren of the Temple Emanu-El in Providence, the Rev. Stanley Keach of Attleboro, and Fr. Bernardin of Providence College.

After Christmas, there will be a New Year's party which Jacob believes will provide an opportunity for foreign and American students and faculty members to meet and exchange ideas in festive holiday atmosphere. Final plans for the party will be announced in the near future.

to the Senate, but it has not as yet been made public.

In other recent Faculty Senate action, a proposal to have the Faculty Senate have a role in the appointment of administrative officers was defeated by a vote of 14-10 with one abstention.

This bill was related to a measure previously passed by the Senate to allow that body a role in the selection of the president of the college.

In discussing this measure, a major argument against the bill, as expressed by Dr. Joseph Robertshaw of the Physics Dept., was that the Senate already had asked for a voice in the selection of the president and it should not go beyond this.

Gustave Cote, of the Business Dept., said that he is opposed to this proposal because the president should be free to bring his own men into the administration. Also speaking in opposition to the bill, Economics Dept. chairman Fr. Charles Quirk, O.P., said that he felt that if after a due period of time the Senate considered the appointments to be bad ones, then the Senate could let the president know its feelings.

Speaking in favor of the bill, DiNunzio said that although the Senate would be expressing an opinion on initial appointments to the administration, it did not mean that the faculty would be deciding who was to be hired. He also noted that the faculty had a voice in the selection of departmental chairmen and in the admission of students, and so he felt that it would not be inappropriate for the faculty to have a voice in this area also.

At its most recent meeting, the Senate tabled a motion introduced by Fr. John Cunningham, O.P. which would have allowed individual teachers to set up their own guidelines on dress.

Fr. Cunningham noted that this did not mean a jacket and tie requirement, but he felt it should be the faculty member's right to decide what mode of dress would be acceptable in his classroom.

After several objections to the proposal, it was tabled in a show of hands vote.
Visitation Proposal Hits At Restrictions

The Student Congress proposal for evening coed hours lists three specific areas in which it feels the students should have the freedom to exercise their own judgment. The proposal states that (1) 1 p.m. to 2 a.m. are reasonable hours for the purpose of evening visitation privileges; (2) the option to hold coed hours seven days a week should be open to the students, and (3) students have the right to close their doors while entertaining female guests.

In explanation of these propositions, the proposal is following the premise that college students have both a right and a need for occasions of private encounter with members of the opposite sex. "If one assumes that the objectives of a college education include, in addition to the student's academic development, the growth of personality, it becomes evident that a significant role of the college community is to provide the opportunity for the various modes of social encounter which advance the student along the path to adult maturity." The proposal continues by emphasizing that "A major form of social encounter is undesirably the occasion of entertaining female guests and, at times, the opportunity to do so in privacy should be available. For the resident student, this opportunity is precluded because he is denied the use of his dormitory room for this purpose on weekend evenings."

The proposal points up the apparent inconsistency arising from the fact that the College permits coed hours during weekend afternoons, and yet adamantly opposed to granting evening coed hours. "A major paradox of the present situation is the inscrutable position of the administration in allowing coed hours on weekend evenings. "A major concern of the administration in prohibiting evening coed hours is that evening coed hours do not corrupt a student who is accustomed to viewing the sex act either in the sacred context of Christian morality or in a purely humanistic context as a sublime act expressive of a profound state of development in the relationship between a man and a woman. The point is that the students' value judgments which are what the school ought to be concerned about, not formed one way or the other by the fact of evening coed hours."

Unfortunately, The Boy and The Girl, Austin Galvin and Nancy Ziegler, lapse into cliches. The playwrights, Tom Jones and Harvey Schmidt, seen partly responsible because of their dull and hackneyed lines. This is especially evident in the first ten minutes of the play before the magic of fantasy has been firmly established. At times, Mr. Galvin and Miss Ziegler set in an annoyingly childish way. Their young love seems like giddy enthusiasm instead of nervous innocence. Nevertheless, their staging is enjoyable because it reflects their serious intentions.

For their first presentation of the year, the Genesians have wisely chosen a play in complete harmony with the facilities of their small theatre, The Friar's Cell. Imagery, such as the unfurled canvas wall, has been used in place of elaborate and static sets. Written description denies The Fantasticks its deserved praise. For the originality most of the actors, the script and the music cannot be reproduced in the linear medium of written language.

In a gentle way, you can shake the world.
Religious Studies Offer New Courses

Sunday night the Providence College Film Society presented the film Nights of Cabiria. This film, directed by Federico Fellini, is not one more of the real masterpieces which the foreign directors have produced and which seem so much to establish the film as a true art form. Although, Cabiria is not Fellini's most famous film (he also did La Dolce Vita, 8½, and Juliet of the Spirits), it is one of his most enjoyable.

Fellini in this film creates the perfect combination of theme and technique which results in art. The viewer never consciously worries about symbolism, or message in this film. He doesn't have to. It is not because Fellini is any less the philosopher in this film, it is just that he is more the poet. Nights of Cabiria definitely asks some questions about man's condition, but it does so in a way which is so simple, yet so subtle. His messages never get in the way of the beauty of the film as a whole.

Briefly, the film relates the story of Cabiria, a preposterous, passionate, and lonely prostituting woman. After praying to God for a change in her life, she does so much to establish the film as a true art form. The interest on campus these days is basketball... to say the very least. The top Friar athlete for the month of November was Captain Walt Smietana.

Smietana played defense for the Friars this year and it was this activity that landed him on the All-Trap Team. He had two assists and was shut out by Wall 150, but the hustling, aggressive defense led by Walt Smietana was the key to every game but one, the 5-1 loss to the Rams.

The Friars and Smietana turned in two commendable performances in their final two outings, a 1-0 loss to Harvard B, the blowout unit to the East's ranking soccer team, and a 2-0 victory over the U of N, a team who has not scored a goal this season.

The roses, like the hoopsters, will put a lot of pressure on him this year; he knows he must be in the thick of the action. But the lack of a first move against the Friar nets, will enlarge their opponents into a resemblance of the Minnesota Vikings' Purple Horde.

Both squads have the arrows on offense. They can score from anywhere on the floor or ice, and do it at an uncharacteristically high frequency. But the lack of a tall, dominant rebounding forward, or a bruising defenseman, is the major problem. The runty-size pucksters will enlarge their opponents into a resemblance of the Minnesota Vikings' Purple Horde.

The hoopers opened the season at UMass, and the story of the entire year may have been etched in this very early 40 minutes of basketball. Minute 20, Larranaga and Vie Colucci, and their sophomore running mates, Gary Wilkins and Don Lewis amazed the partisan Curry Hicks cage fans with a professional display of shooting.

The weak point was rebounding first, and defense second. The Friars pressed the length of the court, but these tactics proved successful only for few possessions. The Redmehs' Ellerbrook and Bettencourt coolly breezed away with a 60-28 third quarter. Lewis and Ray Johnson picked up two fouls each within the first five minutes and the thought of fouling out didn't enter their minds. Ray Johnson fell to Mount with a big performance against the Rams.

Showing their inexperience at rebounding, the Friars were forced to hold on shoulder their opponents and the fouls began to mount. Ray Johnson picked up two fouls each within the first five minutes and the thought of fouling out early may have been on his mind. Ray has a lot of pressure on him this year; he must be in the game for the team to win. He also must not get into early foul trouble so as to limit his rebounding effectiveness.

The hoopers have played well in the three games subsequent to the UMass game. Their outstanding team shooting will keep them in any game, but the rebounding picture for the Friars, like the hoopsters, will be the key to innumerable rebounds.

Scappy Skaters Reach Maturity

By JOHN O'REILLY

It was the game to top all games! In a stirring come from behind effort in every period, the Friar hockey team finally succumbed to favored Boston College, 6-5, in an overtime thriller at R. I. Auditorium last Wednesday. The team defeated Merrimack, 8-7, and the University of Pennsylvania, 5-1, in a thrilling overtime.

The first victory of the year was against Merrimack at their home rink, and in the first period alone, eight goals were scored by the contestents. Gaffney scored the puck away over five goals in each of their first three games.

The first victory of the year was against Merrimack at their home rink, and in the first period alone, eight goals were scored by the contestents. Gaffney scored the puck away over five goals in each of their first three games.

The offense on the other hand is well-balanced, led by junior Pumple and Captain Sampson. The immediate fans turned back. Throughout the first period, although the Friars trailed 1-0, the black-clad pucksters had many scoring chances but could not capitalize.

The second period opened, Captain Skip Sampson tied it at 5:02 on assists from Mike Gaffney and Rick Pumple. But BC came right back with two goals from Ahrens and Collau to lead 3-1 at the end of two stanzas.

At the 7:03 mark of the third period Sampson struck again from Pumple and Gaffney. Malloy scored for the Eagles from Sullivan to put the visitors ahead 4-2 but with 8 minutes left on the clock, Boston didn't give up. Fighting off three defenders, Pumple passed one handed to Gaffney who stuffed it past Barden. Then at 17:41 Mike Leonard spotted Gerry Leschyshyn in the right crease. He rifled the puck to the top wing who converted for the tying goal. But hold on.

It seemed evident that overtime was inevitable but BC's left, the Friars didn't give up. With Jake Jones, a talented 6'3" forward, Bob Boylan, and wound. The exuberant coronation was inevitable but BC's left, the Friars didn't give up. With Jake Jones, a talented 6'3" forward, Bob Boylan, and wound. The Friars then righted themselves in the third period, and the defense, which had been shaky the first two periods, kept Merrimack away from their net. The visitors were in control for the remainder of the game. Merrimack managed to get the puck off the boards, 6'3" forward, Bob Boylan, and wound. The exuberant coronation was inevitable but BC's left, the Friars didn't give up.

The Friars, nonetheless, continued to root the Friars on, and miraculously, Sampson knocked in the final equalizer with just 17 seconds showing on the clock. Ahrens finally put the game on ice by sailing in unassisted and scoring the puck past San­ford at 3:45 of sudden death. Last season the Friars displayed overall ineptitude and lacked bench strength. This year the defense looked like a strong point, but injuries have depleted the resources. Jean Beisaid, in pre-season drills reinjured his shoulder which gave him problems even before he came to Providence. He is playing now and gradually working himself into shape. Brian Smiley injured his should­er and will require surgery. It is unknown as to whether he will return at all during the remainder of the year.

The offense on the other hand is well-balanced, led by junior Pumple and Captain Sampson. The immediate fans turned back. Throughout the first period, although the Friars trailed 1-0, the black-clad pucksters had many scoring chances but could not capitalize.

No scoring occurred in the third period as the Friars attempted 22 shots on goal from close range. Penn goalie John Marks was sensational here and throughout the game. He compiled 56 saves as compared to Sanford's relatively low 21.

PC continued to press over the defense minded Quakers and Leschyshyn scored the winning goal at 1:02 of sudden death on an assist by Leonard.

Friar Marksmen Rally Team After Upset Loss to UMass

With high hopes of avenging last year's 13 point defeat to the Redmen of Jack Leamann, the Friars saw a nine point sec­ond half lead disappear due to a one-man gang performance by 6'5" sophomore, Julius Erving. The home team pulled out a narrow 90-85 victory.

Erving, with a 27 point performance led the team to victory while setting a new UMass single game rebound record of 29 bounds against the diminutive charges of Providence.

Both teams, somewhat tight with first game jitters, made minimal charges of the boards in sea­son opening games. But the personnel on both sides played quite cohesively the majority of the time. The Friars' Ray Johnson, with a record of 28 bounds against the visitors was in an inauspicious start by pick­ing up two fouls in the first five minutes of play. Johnson is the team's main rebounding threat.

The Friars, nonetheless, looked like they might bust the game open with a nine point lead at the 15 minute mark of the opening half behind the brilliance of Jim­my Larranaga. But Johnson picked up his fourth foul one minute later to spell trouble for PC. With Erving controlling the boards, 6'7" Captain Ray Ellerbrook firing in 20 foot bombs, and Dennis Chap­man hitting up close, the Red­men closed the gap to 42-40 at intermission.

Hot shooting by Don Lewis, Vinnie Pumple and Mike Gaffney kept the Friars in front by nine with the aid of some poor foul shooting by Massachusetts. The Redmen were getting foul shots by the dozens. Within a span of two minutes, just under the midway mark of the final half, Johnson, Larranaga and Craig Callen departed on fouls. The rattled visitors saw the lead slowly disappear as Erving and the Redman took the lead with four minutes left. Thanks to a pressured 1-3-1 half-court zone press, they forced three key turnovers to change the tide of the game their way despite the efforts of Collucci and Violand.
