Matthews New President of AFRO American Society

Lyne Griffen

The structure of the Afro-American Society of Providence College is changing, according to Lewis Matthews, this year's president. Meetings are directed by a board with the president presiding and chairmen are appointed for various committees to decide certain issues and plan activities. The officers formerly held most of the decision-making power within the club, which has been in existence for three or four years. In keeping with the new policy of delegating more power to the members of the club, a new constitution is presently being formed.

Approximately twenty-five of the black students on campus comprise the membership of the club, whose other officers are Charles Newton, Treasurer; and Carol Byrd, Secretary. Mrs. Wiles Hester has been appointed mediator between the administration and the black students. Meetings are held weekly in the old 21 Club, now the Afro-American Room, which the girls plan to decorate.

The goal of the club is clear: to promote unity within the Afro-American Society. Since there are few blacks attending P.C. now, it is felt that unity among them is necessary as a basis in providing the impetus for other black students to apply. Also, a strong core such as the Afro-American Society, is needed before people will want to reach out beyond its boundaries and work for total unity. As Lewis Matthews remarked, "At first, you must get a unity with the black people who will then be willing to work within the community." Strength from within is necessary for expansion.

When asked if he feels that Providence College is a racist school, Lewis replied that most of the white students are prejudiced, but don't realize or won't admit it. Many students, black and white, at this school have come here to hide from the outside world, he said. He protested against the fact that many people appear friendly in the classroom, but outside don't want to know them. This lack of real communication appeared clear last year when he wrote an article in The Cowl entitled "I Am Black and I Am Angry," the purpose of which was to jolt the students who pretend not to be prejudiced. Although he heard that many students were angered by what he said, only two attempted to discuss it with him. To many, the tension is evident and presents a challenge to the Afro-American Society: to unite the students, ease the tension, work for the P.C. community.

Class of '72 to Raffle Beetle

On Wednesday, October 20, at Albertus Magnus Hall, the Class of 1972 officially announced the raffle of a 1971 Super-beetle Volkswagen. Tom McCabe, Vice-president of the Senior Class and chairman of the Senior Commencement Committee, stated that the proceeds from the raffle would be used towards the class gift and commencement fund activities. McCabe optimistically stated that the raffle would help lessen the financial burden of the senior class with the approaching May exercises, and at the same time, establish the necessary funds for a worthwhile and appropriate class gift.

The Volkswagen is equipped with an AM-FM radio, reinforced bumper guards and an unusual surprise in the trunk. McCabe optimistically stated that the proceeds from the raffle would help lessen the financial burden of the senior class with the approaching May exercises, and at the same time, establish the necessary funds for a worthwhile and appropriate class gift.

The drawing will be held February 19th, Alumni Weekend, during the half-time of the Holy Cross - Providence basketball game. McCabe, in concluding, stated that Frank McDonough will chair the Providence College Community, Jerry D'Vita, the Alumni chairman, with Dave Mortinille and Bill Fitzgerald chairmen of the raffle for the city of Providence.

Youth in The President's Office

Father Frederick A. Milmore has recently accepted an appointed position from Thomas R. Peterson, President of Providence College. Father Milmore will act as President of the College.

This new position will be used purely to assist the President in his work. Father Milmore will handle the routine daily matters such as phone calls and mail which used to take up much of the president's time. Most important, he will advise the president on certain matters.

Father Milmore expressed surprise to his appointment. He has never served in an administrative position. He explained his appointment as an attempt by the college to bring youth to administrative offices.

As a new faculty member here at Providence, Father Milmore is very impressed with the students. He had previously attended Catholic University, which is predominantly graduate students, where there was a great amount of student apathy. He was pleasantly surprised when he came to Providence and found the students to be much more aware and concerned of what is going on today. He liked Providence College because of what it can offer a student. Being a small college there is greater harmony between students and faculty, also the professor-student relationships are of great benefit to the college. The college is not a factory turning out products. The student here at Providence College has more opportunity to succeed because he is a person.

Father Milmore's office will be located in the President's Complex on the first floor of Harkins Hall.

Speeech and Debate Society
Shows Promise

With the start of a new year, the Speech and Debate Society of Providence College has begun to prepare for upcoming intercollegiate competition. New members and a new attitude are keynotes to this year’s activities.

The membership this year has swollen to twelve students, considerably more than last year. The Society is looking for more students who are interested in and/or have experience in public speaking. Many of the members are new to public speaking, however, so the Society hopes that enthusiastic and fresh members will overcome this lack of experience.

In previous years, the Society has debated only the national topic. That is, the topic used by one college such as PC, and a small debating society such as your own, these requirements are hard to fulfill. Last year, the team experimented with competing in a wide range of serious, political tournaments. This is a modest effort to keep you informed of what the Association of Academic Tenure.

Tenure

The fall meeting of the Rhode Island Conference of the American Association of University Professors will be held at the University of Rhode Island on Saturday, October 23rd. Registration will begin at 9:30 a.m. in the Browsing Room at the Memorial Union Building. The topic this year, Tenure Revisited, will be of particular interest and relevance in light of recent decisions by the Ford Foundation to establish a national commission on the subject of Academic Tenure. The relationships of tenure to the law, to collective bargaining, and to the problems of financial exigency will be explored.

The students, faculty, and administrators of Rhode Island colleges are being urged to participate in this conference. Such distinguished speakers as William R. Ferrante, the acting Associate Secretary of the A.A.U.P., and Frederick Burke, Commissioner of Education in R.I., Dr. Paul van K. Thompsoon, and professors from various colleges throughout the state will lead the main discussions. Diane Taylor and Gary Bier, students at Salve Regina and Roger Williams College respectively, will also participate in these discussions.

Another avenue that the Society intends to take is that of informal meetings. This is called Improvise Speaking. A.T.

P.C.'s "White Elephant"

Two years ago, there was a great debate and discussion concerning the relative merits of the old academic calendar of Providence College. Suggestions for possible revisions of the calendar came from various sources.

Four proposals were presented to the academic community for review. The first option was the continuation of the old two semester calendar which was the cause of great anxiety due to its short semester break and limited available holidays. The second option was the Trimester. This proposal would divide the calendar into three equal segments with a lighter course load during each segment. The third option was the Four-One-Four calendar which retained the two semester division, but lowered the course load to four per semester while instituting a one month interim mini-course between the two semesters. The fourth option was a revision of the old calendar which would have classes commence in late August and the examination period for the first semester conducted before Christmas recess.

The above proposals were then sent to the Committee On Studies, Faculty Senate and Student Congress. The Two bodies conducted a poll within their respective constituencies in order to determine the sentiments and order of preference concerning the question of calendar revision.

When looking back at the procedures followed in the acceptance of the present calendar, one finds it difficult to understand how the college could have instituted the present academic calendar. It is not unfamiliar to hear faculty complain about the calendar. They argue that it is too short and that they can not cover material necessary to the course in so little time. Yet, why did they pass the proposal two years ago? Students complain daily about the brevity of the first semester and the seemingly unending length of the second. They complain that there is not enough time to develop ideas in the course during the first semester and that topics are overdrawn in the second. Yet, why did the student body poll show support of the proposal? Even the administration is bogged down with work, most specifically in the dean's department. Yet, the Committee on Studies approved the document and sent it to the president where it was approved.

Yes, it is quite evident that Providence College has been saddled by a "white elephant." It is manifested in a lopsided academic calendar for which everyone deplores but refuses to take the blame.

Should not the Faculty Senate, Administration or Student body have realized the repercussions of their acts two years ago when the calendar was under discussion? Were the administration and faculty members that anxious to rid the institution of the old calendar that they were willing to accept an obviously inferior document in its place? The results tend to substantiate that assumption and lends poor commentary to their efforts.

The Student Congress is most interested in reviewing our present calendar. At their meeting of 18, October, 1971, a second proposal was proposed and subsequently passed which called for the appointment of a committee to investigate various alternatives and engage in a poll of the student body. This is a step in the right direction.
The upcoming Voter Registration Rally at Providence College will give most students the opportunity to work with Robert Weiner who is National Young Democratic Youth Registration Co-ordinator. A press conference was held on Saturday which focused on voter registration on the local level as well as the national level. The conference was made possible by the Providence workshop which served to spear head the rally. The theme used by Mr. Weiner was the fact that the present Nixon administration has written "Vote or shall it be written "Woman's vote". This fact is exhibited in the two major areas in our government's realm of activity: domestic and foreign affairs.

The Voter Registration Workshop was a political discussion focusing on the means by which students can take an active part in the registering of potential voters. Members from the participating college communities all aired their views as to which procedures should be followed.

The youth vote has the potential power to reverse the unfortunate results of some of the past elections. In the recent presidential election (in several states) the Nixon margin was smaller than the number of potential eighteen to twenty one year old voters that could now vote. Considering that young people are registering only 2 of 26 one Democratic, even if only fifty percent of these eligible voters bothered the results the previous presidential election could have been reversed. The promises made by the present administration would have had to be kept. The youth vote carries too much weight to be neglected.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to the Letter to the Editor by Douglas B. Bourdon entitled, "Artica Rebutal", which appeared in the October 13th issue of THE COWL. Mr. Bourdon was critical of the position taken by fourteen faculty members in support of the actions taken by Governor Rockefeller in the recent Attica incident.

I was amazed at his support of the present state of affairs inside the prison, and I am in disagreement with many points raised by the author to rationalize such an action.

Whenever a large number of people are crowded into unventilated cellblocks and forced to live in an institutionalized environment, there is bound to be a frustration and resentment. Add to this the so-called Rehabilitation by "correctional officers", who are merely armed guards used to keep the prisoners under control — their usual anger and violence. It is an exaggeration to consider Attica a "correctional facility".

Long before this incident occurred, a New York State Commissioner of Corrective Services had warned authorities of trouble at Attica in the near future, unless conditions there were markedly improved.

With the possible exception of one or two, the demands made by the inmates were not all that unreasonable. What they amounted to were a basic Bill of Rights for prisoners. Included in these rights were the freedom of religion and political expression, the right to legal assistance, due process of law, and decent medical, recreational, and rehabilitation facilities.

Were these not the guaranteed requests that could Rockefeller have done? I say he could have met with the prisoners face to face to negotiate their demands instead of getting directly involved in the incident and possibly driving the state into the most serious results of the attack on himself.

His meeting with the inmates might have allowed him to see first hand the interest in the situation, and was willing to prevent a violent outcome. He could have given more time to the negotiators. Four days in a very long period of time when you consider it takes labor unions weeks or even months to settle on an agreement for a new contract. The group has not found a solution on Sunday, but might have had one, or even two days later. Rockefeller could have kept the negotiations alive by keeping the lines of communication open.

Certainly it would have been worth a try.

The Governor had the ultimate responsibility for making the decision at Attica. Waiting and continuing to negotiate would not in itself solve the problem, nor prevent the eventual slaughter; negotiation can hardly cause violence.

Attacking the prison could result in nothing else except the loss of lives by both prisoners and guards.

But the fact that an assault would probably take a high toll on lives did not seem to bother Commissioner Oswald or Governor Rockefeller.

I think there is a definite need to question a society where eighty-five per cent of the prisoners in a prison are either black or Puerto Rican, and all of the guards there are white. It does not take a "knowledgeable authority" to know the type of feelings that are built up between these two groups.

The author asks the question, "Who shall we "forgive"?"

For one, Governor Rockefeller and the New York State prison officials for launching an assault that caused the inevitable slaughter of human beings. Why was the decision made when almost all the demands had been met, the ones that weren't still being negotiated prior to the attack? Was it made for political reasons, so that Rockefeller would not appear soft on law and order?

Secondly, we must forgive American society, not only for creating these criminals (Yes, we are a product of our environment); but for the way we react to them.

One must also question the value of a decision that results in more than forty deaths, when other possible alternatives (such as an investigation into the facts of the attack on himself)

His meeting with the inmates might have allowed him to see first hand the interest in the situation, and was willing to prevent a violent outcome. He could have given more

The Committees On Voter Registration of P.C., R.I.C., and R.I.C.C. have combined under the name of the Rhode Island Young Vote, and are sponsoring a rally this Thursday, October 21. The Rally will run from 2:00 to 6:00 in the Grotto (or in the Auditorium at Harkins Hall if the weather is poor), and will feature two New England rock groups, Toast and Granite. There will be a series of speakers including Joe Duffey of Connecticut, Hubert Humphrey, Attorney General Richard Israel, Mayor Jim Taft of Cranston, and Gov ernor Frank Licht. There will be registrars on campus at the rally site so anyone attending can register to vote if they so wish.

Rally of the kind can be very effective, but to be effective you must go to the rally!

The Pinball Wizard

by Bob Charpentier

On September 27 and 28, the role of Tommy, a young boy who becomes a pinball wizard, was presented as a rock ballet by Les Grands Ballets Canadiens at the Place des Arts. The fine choreography by Richard Nault splendidly portrayed the tragic and heroic aspects of the central character, Tommy.

If you think pinball is a drag, this performance would have changed your mind. The viewer's attention was carefully focused on reading the dancers' body language to understand the expressiveness of this blind, deaf, and dumb boy, who is the subject of gross abuse by his Uncle Ernie and Cousin Kevin. Mannie Rowe's Tommy was convincingly performed with brilliant agility, but a good portion of his performance was spent in his lying, rolling, or straddling about to express his desire for sensory awareness. Erica Jayne's performance as the Acid Queen was delightful. She may have frightened Tommy, but she certainly enticed the audience. Credit must be given to John Stanwell's Uncle Ernie in "Fiddler on the Roof" for his comic renditions of the bluest of words.

The rip-off was the lack of live music. The company danced to a taped rock and roll version of the "London Calling" by The Clash. The conductor, who, if not intended to enhance the choreography, is one thing. Another effect, the lack of live music, makes this production one of the last few years. Because of its naïve, but charming renditions of the "London Calling" and various rock versions of "The Ballad of贯通" and "The Ballad of贯通," the audience was quite passive now, which is what the script intended. The conductor should play which I think is the performer who makes this happen. That conductor makes Steinberg look like Winnie the Pooh.

Steinberg Directs Boston Symphony

Gilles Dery

The first of three Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts was performed Thursday evening, December 1, in Symphony Hall at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst Auditorium. Conducting the orchestra for the first concert was the late Lorin Maazel, who died in a Paris hospital on December 1.

The program consisted of Beethoven's Symphony no. 2, Beethoven's Symphony no. 6, known as the "Pastoral," and Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler." Highlighting the concert was the Einem Violin concerto which featured Christian Edinger making his debut with the Boston Symphony. Miss Edinger, to put it simply, was sensational. Her mastery of the violin was quite captivating. Her tone was that of a virtuoso that was unique as well as intriguing. The concerto, written in 1966, is one of the most unique and extraordinary violin concertos ever written. It does not follow the traditional, conventional pattern of the other violin concertos, but rather is independent in its own style and structure. Most impressive was the third movement involving a duet between solo violin and the solo violin. "Pastoral" was the piece in the piece. It was the focus of attention being on the solo violin, which was a treat in itself.

The concert opened with Beethoven's "Pastoral" Symphony. I consider this to be Beethoven's most beautiful symphony and is a work which was well treated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The piece was well played, and the orchestra succeeded in bringing forth the lyricism and romantic qualities which are characteristic of the symphony, being a hummus or tribute to nature. The only weak points I was able to observe were that in the third movement, titled "Village Festival," the orchestra here sounded sluggish, resulting in a slower than usual tempo for this piece. Fortunately, this did not affect the atmosphere of the rest of the symphony.

Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler," which is a masterfully tender piece that depicted the lives of the birds of his daughter and son. The images of birth that he evoked were quite passive now, which is what the script intended. The conductor should play which I think is the performer who makes Steinberg look like Winnie the Pooh.

"Your A Big Boy Now"

Jim Greer

The difficulties of young men really came through in the top-billed end of the evening show's most popular subject for films in the last few years. Because of its nature, the problem is best dealt with humorously, as it was in "Your A Big Boy Now." When it is treated sentimentally, as it was in "Summer Of '42," it is usually garbage. In Jerry Skolimowski's "Deep End," it is viewed without much humor or sentiment, only poetically, and it is just plain boring.

The unworlthy and sexually inexperienced boy has become a stock character now, and a film that uses him as a main character is already dated. This is especially true with the tribulations we are forced to see through in "Your A Big Boy Now," for instance, the public bath in London, which gives you an idea of which profound things have happened to this group.

As usual, our hero has an undue attachment for his mother and father, and the father is not satisfied with Mama. The older woman who is destined to become the mother of the composer is simply too plain, cute and finally keels over. Being dead, she is quite passive now, which is what our friends want, and as blood flows from her dented skull, he makes love to her (if it can be called that) floating around in the pool. This perverse little scene is quite passive now, which is what the script intended. The conductor should play which I think is the performer who makes Steinberg look like Winnie the Pooh.

Good Things In Pawtucket

Pat Lynn Slosine
Harriers Edge In 3 Meets, State Meet Here Friday

Coach Bob Amato's runners have found the going a little rough the past few weeks as the harriers have dropped their last three meets to Harvard, Northeastern and Eastern.

Saturday's 26-31 loss to powerful Marauders was a tightly fought contest which saw the Friars lose their second straight race to a favored squad which is probably the fourth best team in the East. PC could not stop the harriers from starting gun and made the Jaspers work for their narrow victory.

Manchester's Mike Keogh, Paul Squires, and Tony Colon matched strides with PC's Willie Speck and Tom Aman for the first four miles of the Providence 5.0 mile course, and during that time, it was apparent that the Friars would be picked up along the Easton Street grass hill, and Aman was the first to drop from the front pack and remained in his fifth place position till the end of the race. Colonial's 5.0 mile school record in the country last year (4:06), backed off the quick pace of the race which surged up River Hill, leaving Speck and Squires to place second and third in the classical 5.0 mile event for All-American honors this fall, Keogh maintained most of his lead onto the down slope and dropped the meet in the course record time of 25:02.6, eclipsing three Friar marks and a two-week old mark of 25:23.2.

Squires held a four-yard lead over the Colonial fourth place runner to the finish line, but the Friar uncorked one of his blazing 57-second quarter mile pace to pass the Jasper and claim second place in 25:07, with Squires next in 25:11. Colon's fourth-place time of 25:40 through a consistent 25:18 time for tenth place. This Friday, PC is host to the Brown-URI-PC "State Meet." The Friars will be heavily favored over the host team, but the contest could be a thrilling one. Action gets underway with the 42nd Annual Harriers Edged in 3 Meets; State Meet Here Friday

Intramural Football Action Fast-Paced by Mark Ambrose

Intramural football action has begun once again at Providence College, and the action is fast and furious.

Last Tuesday a highly ranked Waterbury B team ripped the Soph Stars 13-12. Nelson and Bliss led the way for the Soph Stars. Pete Barcaus was outstanding for the always tough Rat Pack.

In another hard fought game, Met A defeated Doyle's Conspiracy by a 1-0 score. The freshman team defense looked very good and were aided by Jay Hildebrand. Billy O'Brien and Gibbs Freeman were the keys to the Conspiracy's attack.

The Marauders had a field day against the Moonlight Weeds by trouncing them 26-0. Fred Marino and Jerry Cain did the damage for the oiffensive chores for the Marauders.

Another close game saw the Waterbury B team best Second To None by a score of 25-20. It was the Friars second straight game for the highly talented freshman team of Second To None.

The only close game of the entire season might well occurred last Thursday. The tough Greater Boston Club, led by the Soph Stars by an 18-13 count. Kevin Carey raced over with the third TD and the Friars stood at 6-0-1. However, the Soph's were driving and were left stranded on their five-yard line as time run out.

A safety proved to be the major point of interest as the Purple Gang defeated Met A 15-13. Ted Cole and Jack Malik romped for the two Purple Gang scores.

On the College Scene

ALABAMA OVER HOUSTON "Bama rules Dixie once again, with a 15-14 victory over the Tide, bringing back pleasant memories for the Tide fans. Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant has beefed up his defense look good, maybe?

CHICAGO OVER DETROIT - Chicago defeated Detroit, 26-3, after successive wins over Washington and USC, the lads from Palo Alto appear to be the class of the Pacific Eight once again.

PHS STATE OVER TCU - The Nittany Lions have a solid football team in 1972. They are led by Franco Harris offering the offense, and the wizardry of Joe Paterno doing the rest. The Hoarded Toads will be hard-pressed to stop Penn State in this intra-sectional clash.

WASHINGTON OVER KANSAS CITY - The "Ramskins" are the class of Pro Football '71 as George Allen and the "defense security" coach continue to amaze the NFL. Hank Stram and his Chiefs are the best in the East. "Skins" are undefeated without their "Sonny." SOUTH DAKOTA OVER CINCINNATI - Ken Skates may have emerged as the number one quarterback for the Riders as Daryle Lamonica can't get untracked in '71. Warren Wells has signed with the squad and the Cleveland Jail Team powing the way for Rod Sherman and Fred Blankett to continue their AFC's top receiving pair. The Bengals have been rocked by injuries and need to rebuild.

N.Y. NEW YORK OVER PHILADELPHIA - The Eagles are even weaker than the Giants, who are without Fredrickson, Johnson, and Coffey in the backfield. The Eagles offense is solid, but his offense is unimpressive. The Trojans have had a tough season but they are explosive, Sorry Ara!

SANDFORD OVER WASHINGTON - Coach John McKay has a whammy over the Irish and seems to continually styling. Steve Young is being recognized as a defensive star is defense is solid, but his offense is unimpressive. The Trojans have had a tough season but they are explosive, Sorry Area!

TAMPA BAY OVER CLEVELAND - The Bucs have a good team, but they have been unimpressive. The Browns have the defense, but they are explosive, Sorry Area!

Providence College will play a 24 game schedule in the 1971-72 season, under the direction of David R. Gavitt, Director of Athletics.

Under the astute handling of Coach Lou Lamoriello, the Friars enjoyed their finest season last year since winning the 1966 NCAA eastern regional record and a bid to the E.C.A.C. By the end of the Eastern College Athletic Conference (ECAC) granted immediate eligibility to freshmen hockey players, despite negative votes from schools with hockey teams. Locally, Mike is expected to effect Providence College, but apparently will not have any effect on Brown which, as a member of the Ivy League, has a rule banning freshmen eligibility in varsity sports.

Providence College continued to make good in its bid for national club football supremacy by overwhelming previously undefeated Stonehill College 44-0, Friday night. After completing the first half of the 1971 schedule, with three wins and a tie, they have permanently affixed themselves as a team to be reckoned with.

The one facet of P.C.'s game that has emerged as most formidable is defense. An aggressive horde of ball hawks and game breakers which has allowed the opposition one touchdown in the fourth period. The Friars' defensive squad was revived by the arrival of the Providence College football club as a first class team. The team is a meld of opportunism. Brian Carey has emerged a full fledged leader.

The Providence College offense outscored Stonehill and its season's starter Paul Sciara. John Luciano, came as a surprise to the Friars in deadlocking the Providence defense for 19 passing performance for 173 yards; the only chink in an otherwise flawless performance.

The Friars lost only one fumble, but were penalized seven times for 55 yards, the only chink in an otherwise flawless performance.

With four games remaining in the half, it seems to be the arrival of the Providence College football club as a first class team, the team is a meld of opportunism. Brian Carey has emerged a full fledged leader.

The Friars' first goal. Jim March's return of senior co-captain Gerry Boisvert at his position at fullback.

The Friars offense produced 12 first downs to their counterparts' two; eight came via the run and four via the pass. The ground game amassed 146 of 173 yards. Vin Mcavey collected 74 yards on 13 carries. Carey's ten of those came via the run for 17 yards more than tripled the entire offensive output of Stonehill College. All-in-all Providence ran off 65 offensive plays for 321 yards; Stonehill could muster only 30 total yards on 35 plays.

The Friar's, while putting on an offensive showcase that rivals the most lavish fourths of July pyrotechnic display, played defense with an air of rapacity that produced five turnovers. Kevin Dorgan, Frank McMorrow, and Ted Fitzgerald each pillared enemy passes; Paul Charpentier and McMorrow recovered fumbles.

The Friars lost only one fumble, but were penalized seven times for 55 yards, the only chink in an otherwise flawless performance.

The Friars' last drive originated on Stonehill's 47 yardline and culminated 43 yards later in the latter's endzone. This time the key play of the march was turned in by diminutive John Tavalore. The meteoric pass catcher accounted for 39 of the 43 yards in the drive when he hauled in a pass from Carey. Jay Sinatro took Murray's hint and vaulted the Providence College defense with an air of rapacity that produced five turnovers. Brian Carey has permanently affixed himself on the Friar's ground routine performance. The defense is monolithic at this stage of the season. This seems to be the culmination of four previous years apprenticeship in the club football world. Coach Hanewich has forged a football team that is aggressive, efficient and buttressed by offensive opportunism. Brian Carey has permanently affixed himself as a three-quarterback and emerged a full fledged leader. Vin Mcavey and Jay Sinatro form a backfield tandem that can rank with any. Butch Murray has proven to be more than a competent end. The defense is anchored by the famous names of Dorgan, McMorrow, Delaney, et al. It is realistic to entertain thoughts of national club football supremacy for Providence this first year of Eastern Collegiate Club Football competition.

The most significant obstacle in the Friar's quest for the Championship Trophy is presented by Assumption College. Providence College has defeated Assumption two out of their last three meetings. The last two victories were shutouts for Providence. The collision takes place on October 24th at Westminster, Massachusetts. The Friars look as if they are not to be denied.
