Woman Refused Work In Raymond Cafe Pits

by Henry Golembeski

Since women first came to Providence College, their presence has been felt by the entire college community. Whereas before one would have normally found the males in the positions of decision making, one now finds females in control of the Cowl, the Athletic Board, and the Academic. And if one stretches his memory a bit, they will remember that it was the residents of Aquinas and McDermott (then a female dorm) that instigated the drive towards better parlour rights. Yet, the only sector of the college that has resisted change has been the Food Service, directed by Mr. Joseph Murphy. The only non-integrated portion of the campus are the proverbial “pits”, the area of Raymond Hall where the trays and plates are first cleaned before they are sent through the dishwashers.

On March 26th, the situation almost changed. Phyllis Troia, a Junior Biology major, was asked by a friend of hers if she would be willing to fill the position of doing the pits for him while he was in Pittsburgh attending a convention. He hesitated at first, but eventually, she showed up at Raymond Hall on the morning of the 26th to do the work to keep cleaning refuse off of trays. Instead, she was told to start filling the garbage bags and that if she did not make the rules and regulations, but only the rules, she would be allowed to do the work.

According to Mr. Murphy, there were no girls allowed in the pits, but added that “the College has a sufficient policy to be enacted.”

Dr. Murphy, Director of Food Services, “school policy states that there should be no girls in the pits due to insurance reasons. . . This ruling came from Father Fennel.”

Mr. Duffy sent Ms. Troia to Fr. Troia of the Providence College Student Affairs. Fr. Duffy confirmed Fr. Fennel’s directive to Mr. Murphy and Mrs. McDermott, vice-president of student affairs, that there has been a “pervasive attitude towards the girls.” Fr. Duffy also stated that he would take up the matter with Mr. Joseph Byron, Business Manager of the College.

Varian during the past year, and was interim General Manager from Larchmont, New York, he was a graduate in June of 1971, and was interim General Manager of the Providence College Cowl News Service. He has been produced.

Mr. Robert Foley, General Manager of WDOM, announced that the Jack Gallagher Show, a new program, has been cancelled for the remainder of the semester.

Foley’s announcement resulted from the fact that nearly all the guests for the March 28th program had been cancelled. By the time the cancellation had been accepted, it was no college restriction on the show. The problem of receiving little or no listeners to the show, one which the staff could never seem to resolve. Since the station is the property of the college and the listenership is so small, it was decided to allow the station to be cancelled without charge. It is sponsored by the Division of Anthropology of the Providence College in Washington, D.C. and his Ph.D. from St. Thomas College in Rome.

He joined the Philosophy Department at Providence College in 1958. He was one of the founders of the arts honors program at the college and served as its director for two years, and later served as chairman of the humanities program.

In 1963 he became chairman of a curriculum revision committee which formulated the course in the Development of Western Civilization, which became the core of a new curriculum in 1971 and which has proven highly successful.

He is well known as a lecturer and has published numerous articles in philosophical journals. He is a member of the American Catholic Philosophical Association.

He is the son of Mrs. Marie Cunningham of Providence and the late Hugh S. Cunningham.

In his official letter of resignation as Dean to the Very Rev. Thomas R. Peterson, O.F.M., President, Father Cunningham noted that he had served the college a variety of administrative positions, and that he would like now to return to teaching on a full-time basis and be able to devote himself to those intellectual pursuits he has had to neglect over the past few years. “It is my hope to be able to serve Providence College to the best of my ability in the years ahead,” he concluded.

Controversy Splits Congress

(Civil News Service) — The Student Congress split Sunday night when a partisal bill was introduced towards the end of the meeting. Submitted by Sophomore 1971, Mr. Granato’s bill called for the same basic idea. According to Roberts Rules of Parliamentary Procedure, a bill must be given a first reading, and then discussed at the following meeting, unless the rules are suspended. A resolution, while having no policy-making power, merely calls for a certain type of policy to be enacted.

Controversy ensued when Ray McGrath objected to the resolution on the grounds that it was not sufficiently changed enough from its bill form to qualify as a resolution on its own merits. Debate on the resolution and the objection followed and the voting result decided against allowing the resolution.

Mr. Granato’s bill, however, went to the Legislative Committee of the Congress. In a meeting on Monday, the committee accepted the bill as being sound and worthwhile.

During the debate on Sunday, it became apparent that a party was developing within the Congress. Comprised of those who might be members of the Providence College Junior Classes, the group, according to rumors, was planning to have a caucus meeting before the emergency meeting of Congress which President Leo Zullo called to discuss the partisal question. The emergency meeting was set for last night. It was held in order to move the bill, if passed, to the Committee on Administration on Wednesday.

The bill, which transpired at Sunday’s meeting included the ratification of the new BOG By-laws, the Faculty Evaluation of Aquinas Commemorative, and Health Center Committee Chairpersons’ reports were also interested.

Tapes Aid Development of Interview Techniques

by Rosemary McBride

Are you a P.C. upperclassman or woman anticipating job interviews in the near future? If so, Mr. Raymond E. Thibeault of the Counseling Center suggests that you make a trip to the Audio Learning Center in the basement of Memorial Hall to listen to a series of tapes dealing with job interviews. Mr. Thibeault says the tapes can "substantially improve a person's interviewing skills."

There are nine different tapes. Tapes one, two, and three are entitled "Improving Interview Skills." This is a self-teaching "mini-course" which will take about three hours to complete. You should employ the Training Manual in conjunction with these tapes. For maximum results plan to space out the three tapes over a week's time. In a systematic manner, you will learn not only what to do, but how to do it. These are oriented towards Alumnae—especially those who have gone into the business field. While not all may fail, but they are equally valuable to all serious candidates seeking career employment now.

Tape number four is "The Campus Interview," a thirty-minute presentation on this important element of a comprehensive job search, produced by the College Placement Council. You will be employed as a recruiter of over eight years of experience and will include illustrative excerpts taken from typical interviews and is oriented towards the college senior. "The Sledge and Hammer Story" is found on tapes five and six. This is a "hit of humor — a parody, in which you will hear Mr. Bragg, Mr. Quaker, and Mr. Soren sing swords with a personnel officer. Having heard these "bad guys" humide and drop the hail, you then meet Mr. Goldenserwer — Our Hero. Through exaggeration, you can both laugh and learn. The orientation of this tape is towards anyone who someday will be interviewed for employment and that's all of us.

A tape produced by Leedman Associates, a national placement firm, is "The First Hour of the Rest of Your Life." Tape number seven. On this recording "you will hear an appraisal of the job interview process by a corporate executive who has interviewed hundreds of applicants. Tape number seven is oriented towards the recent graduate."

Some new tapes to follow are "The Glendale College Law School Story" (tape number eight) and "How to Communicate" (tape number nine). The Glendale tape is "an innovative twist to the usual pedulum-like "how to do it" dialogue. It can be used in conjunction with an accompanying film strip ... if you wish. It is fairly descriptive of the various programs typically offered by less well-known schools such as Glendale. It is oriented especially toward the student who is doing work in grades and cash but high in motivation and drive to become a lawyer.

Lastly, "How to Communicate" is simply "oral communication as it applies to our working lives, as expressed by professionals." Two suggestions that Mr. Thibeault makes as a guide to the use of the tapes are:

1. Read the description of each tape and then decide on the one that can best meet your needs.

2. We suggest that you start with either "The Campus Interview" (tape number four) or "The First Hour of the Rest of Your Life" (tape number seven) followed by a breather "The Sledge and Hammer Story" (tape number five or six) and conclude with "Improving Job Interviewing Skills" (tape numbers one and three).

Mr. Thibeault related the fact that through the tapes students can be reached and helped. There is also an element of diversity among the tapes. Some tapes import their advice more forcefully and dogmatically while others seem more easy going. They say be yourself, but be willing to suffer the consequences if "yourself" is too unconventional. While still other tapes utilize the Socratic question-answer approach.

In conclusion, there is more competitiveness than ever in the job-hunting jungle, therefore, one can use all the help he can get. These various tapes were interesting, informative, and quite beneficial in the area of developing job interviews skills. Mr. Thibeault urges anyone who is dubious or hesitant about any prospective job interviews to take advantage of this service.

Students Sought For Summer Positions

Mr. Raymond E. Thibeault of the Counseling Center announced the search for two students to participate for the 1974 Placement Summer Intern Program. Although only in its second year of existence, the Providence College Chess Club has evolved into a powerful entity. So strong in fact, that the club is hosting a championship to be held April 20 and 21 in Slavin Center, sponsored and sanctioned by the Rhode Island Chess Association. The tournament is open to any faculty member of the R.I. area. Roger Williams, Rhode Island, Brown, and S.M.U. among the invited teams, a good fight for the two team trophies and awards for the top three players is assured.

The Providence College Chess Club is fortunate to have as an advisor an excellent player in the personage of Dr. Peter Nassif of the Chemistry Department. Unknown to most, Dr. Nassif is such a strong player that he has been ranked as an Expert by the United States Chess Federation. There is only one more rank for Dr. Nassif could move up to through competition for the title of Master Player. But Dr. Nassif has sat out of competition this year, in order to prevent the club from being forced into a higher division because of ability. What he is lacking in experience and knowledge of vanity, but was made to allow the remainder of the team to gain experience to the top three players.

Dr. Nassif urges anyone who is dubious or hesitant about the club's players at their Sunday night meetings in the Slavin Center.

The team has been competing in the R.I.A. tournament for the past year and currently the top team. The leading player on the team is Mr. Thomas Tattersall in the Math Department. He is currently leading the division having gone undefeated this year. Jim Hall, a solid player with much tenacity, Frank Bark, and Amir Kirshbaum round out the team, and all have gained much experience in the game.

Dr. Nassif feels confident that this tournament is not a "throw away" tournament. The psychological attitude of the players is a deterrent because they are not as likely to eat more than the ability of the player. When the tournament shows others that our PC club is confident and ready to play all out. So if there is a little Boyd Fischer in you, join the tournament and see PC's best.

Poet Levertov Expresses Life's Beauty in Her Works

by Ana M. Cabrera

Levertov is a name which often appears in poetry anthologies, and on Wednesday, March 27, Levertov was a poet bringing to life her work in Aquinas Lounge before a good crowd of people. Denise Levertov is not ostentatious. Small in stature, with slightly-grey hair and looking different than pictures often seen in those anthologies, Levertov nonetheless read her often familiar words with the emphasis which only a writer knows. She has clearly developed ideas about poetry and explained her poetry according to these principles.

Her English background, for example, not only affected her accent but English idioms occasionally appear throughout her poems; she expressed concern that her American readers might become slightly confused. However, she is explicit that her background was helpful to her, and calls any artist "lucky" to have the same. She also feels that if a reader applies his own life experience to her work, and is able to derive an insight different than her intentions, then this is "complementary to a poem—it comes out of one's roots" and therefore gives it more meaning.

Levertov also confessed that she will often re-read one of her published poems and find flaws in it that she now knows how to correct but does not, feeling that after a long period she is often too removed from the state of life which evokes that particular work, and to tamper with it is as impossible (or as her now as it would be for any other person. In the middle of her reading Levertov introduced a young poet-acquaintance of hers named Mark Pawlack, a member of a group of young poets which she has been nurturing for a few years. Pawlack was young, with the predictable goatee and Jenna. A source which he believed Pawlack's work to be is to be re-defined with a fact that might have been partially true. PC Intern Program Offers Summer Jobs

by Rosemary Lynch

Summer employment has become increasingly difficult to obtain. With the assistance of the Providence College Intern Program, thirty PC students found jobs last summer—jobs that most importantly offered a challenge to the students. The Intern Program has been in existence on this campus for six years now. Its goal has been to give Sophomores and Juniors an awareness of careers related to their field of academic concentration. This is accomplished by placing the student in part-time or summer positions in Connecticut, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island. Originally orientated towards business majors exclusively, it has grown to include most areas of student interest. The present co-directors, Steve Smith and Richard Fishpaw, attribute the expansion to an increase of participation on the part of students and outside firms. The Intern Program, Mr. Fishpaw feels, "establishes a more realistic relationship between the college and the outside community. It is beneficial to the community, businesses, and especially the students".

Tapes. Students are given a valuable working experience. They receive a first-hand account of their post-graduation career. Some participants have even continued with the same firm on a full-time basis after graduation. Now is the interviewing time for this year's program participants.

HAS THE WAR ENDED?

For many American students, the battle of Southeast Asia has ended, but the battle within the hearts of her people—the pain of sickness, hunger, fear and death rage on with horrendous force. Americans view the signs of Southeast Asia as symptomatic of the global condition. American missionaries labor through subhuman conditions around the globe. We perpetuate the battle—to liberate the suffering masses of the world.

PC Talents Combine Show is Successful

by Peggy Martin

Friday evening, March 29, the Junior Class presented Providence College's first annual talent show entitled "Let Us Entertain You". This three and one-half hour production was played before a capacity crowd in the 44 Hall of the Slavin Center. Termed a huge success by all who attended and participated, the show combined a variety of musical, comedic, and serious acts into one enjoyable evening.

The show opened with several PC coeds singing the theme song "Let Us Entertain You." Following this, Peter Thompson and Nick Walker gave a rendition of Maurice Chevalier's famous hit, "Thank Heaven For Little Girls". Then to tone down the mood a modern dance interpretation of the song "White Rabbit" was done by Vanessa Spinato.

Providence College's talent was further shown by Lenny Ashfield, Emilio Mazzola, Dana Janosovit, Steve Massed, and John Maziekien as they sang their own lyrics to "I Hate". Then it was quite obvious what the audience loved as several girls danced to their own choreography of "Charlie Chaplin". This act was a fine example of the time and energy that had to be devoted to this show. "Slam Unlimited" came next on the program, and it was well worth one's dollar to see Jerry Walls and Tom Reaumie imitate songs and stars of soul. Then a skit entitled "Charlie at the Cafe" was performed with the "Chaplinesque" charm.

Perhaps one of the most popular numbers of the whole evening was the skit "Our Disciplinary Board". Many well-known personalities on campus were imitated and cajoled much to the audience's delight. Here it was shown how important it is to be able to laugh at oneself. However, the laughter was soon replaced by strong amazement and awe by PC students when they gave a demonstration of their remarkable skills.

"Big Spender" came next, as a group of girls serenaded the impersonator of a well-known comic figure. A "Fashion Show" followed, and another act so well-known were his "PC's Finest" modeling the latest and perhaps worst known in women's clothing. John McGuinn sang "Turn Back O'My Love" and the audience was left breathless. Perhaps one of the most popular numbers of the whole evening was the skit "Our Disciplinary Board". True Confessions of Dr. Chip "Chuckle" Gravenewer

by Susie Treia

"Chuckle" Gravenewer and I sat at the edge of the dance floor, close to the wall. We were one of the many people who had come to the Palace Theatre to watch the midnight screening of "The 99c Movie." The Palace Theatre is a small, intimate cinema that seats a maximum of 250 people. It is known for its eclectic film repertoire, ranging from classic movies to independent films.

The atmosphere inside the Palace was buzzing with excitement. People were chatting, laughing, and enjoying the company of others. The Palace Theatre is located in the heart of Providence, Rhode Island, and is a popular destination for film lovers.

The Palace Theatre has a long history. It opened in 1922 and was originally referred to as the "99c Palace." It was named after the low admission price of 99 cents, which was a common price for movies at that time. The theatre has undergone several renovations over the years, but it still retains its original charm and character.

As we entered the theatre, we were greeted by a hostess who directed us to our seats. We found our seats and settled in for the screening. The lights dimmed, and the film began. The movie was a classic comedy, and the audience was clearly enjoying the show.

The Palace Theatre is more than just a cinema. It is a community center, a place where people can come together and share their love for film. It is a haven for those who appreciate the art of cinema and want to experience it in a unique and intimate setting.

As the movie ended, the audience erupted in applause. We were one of the last people to leave the theatre. As we walked out, the night air was cool and crisp. We could hear the sounds of traffic and people walking in the distance. It was a perfect ending to a perfect evening at the Palace Theatre.
Dear Editor,

I have completed my term as General Manager of WDOM. I think it is appropriate that I thank a few people who helped me this year as well as WDOM. First off I'd like to thank Greg Varian, Paul Courtney, Charlie McEntree, Matt Hovan, and Jonathan West. Also, I want to thank Jim McGumle, Pat Fanning, and Tom Novak for being the able members of the management staff I could ask for. Each one of these people did their jobs expertly and selflessly. I'd also like to thank the other WDOMers for being a part of WDOM for the same kind of zeal. I'd like to list all 60 names here but I don't have the space but thanks; you all did what I had hoped for. Special thanks also goes to the G长城, especially Dennis Kelly, Ann Frank, Steve Silvestri, Ed Cimini, Uncle Jack, Dan Coleman, and Jerry Sachs. WDOM will do Sports Rap over WDOM next year. These people were great in every way. The PC and I will always be indebted to them. I will never forget the fun that we had and the hard work that was put in. On Thursday, April 4, the Providence College Youth Programming Game, otherwise known as CYGP, will hold a general meeting to discuss the various events that will be held Monday, April 4. The purpose of this benefit drive is to seek membership in the Providence College community for the continuation of the Youth Programming Guide.

Dear Editor,

During the course of an academic term, numerous decisions are made by those individuals in administrative positions. Frequently, when a member of the college community is involved in one of these decisions, he voices his position and thus, the majority of these opinions are contrary to the decisions made. However, the nature of this letter would like an exception to be made.

In the past, I have been critical of some actions taken by the Athletic Department. This criticism was, in opinion, entirely justified, and was made with the betterment of the entire Providence College athletic department. However, I believe, the majority of these opinions are contrary to the decisions made. However, the nature of this letter would like an exception to be made.

The Providence College women's soccer team, under the leadership of coach Bob Foley, was 9-3-2 last season and thereby allowed the soccer program to reach a newly found level of success this year. On March 23, the tournament was held, and among the 16 teams that competed, some of the top ranked teams in the nation. The Friars competed very successfully, keeping in the tradition of P.C. athletics. The Friars did not offer its thanks to the athletic department for its generosity in helping them to compete in the tournament.

Big Brothers and Sisters from Providence College, and most other Providence College students, have intersections around the campus with an "identifying" tag that is used to help people can spare for this worthy cause. The money that we raise will go towards various club events and projects.

It is quite important that all Big Brothers and Sisters attend this general meeting as a schedule for these materials is easy to wash, etc., and the time saved by not ironing those clothes you advocate I can dedicate to other things such as cleaning the house or doing my studies.

By the way, newsmist is made of a natural fiber. Several months ago I heard about this but I was worried that the production of same fiber would be halted due to the costs of production. Also, there are gloomy predictions of a future without newspapers (i.e., wood is going to increase to the point where demand outlasts supply. Synthet newspapers, perhaps?)

Anna Margarita Cabrera, '75
Mrs. Donovan, whom everyone finds to be a likable and helpful person, has been working at this position for the last nine years. Mrs. Donovan really enjoys her work, "I never find it boring, there is something going on all the time."

When I asked her what duties she performed during the day, she said that "basically it is an information center." Whether it be by telephone or in person she is always ready to supply an answer. She stresses, "If I do not know something, I'll find it out".

Upon asking her how she felt about students in general and about the college's decision to turn the place into an emergency room when the police career without our knowing into an emergency room when the police career without our knowing is one of the best detective movies ever produced.

The technique of the film lends itself very well to the mounting of tension. The film begins with detective Frank Serpico lying in the back seat of a police cruiser with a bullet hole on his face. He is taken to a hospital, and brought into an emergency room when the movie reverts to a flashback of his police career without our knowing. Our knowledge of Serpico's shooting colors all of his actions in the huge flashback with an impending sense of doom. When you combine this with the frustration of Serpico's activities it leads to a totally captive audience. If any fault is to be found with the movie it is that it did not make us feel the frustration of Serpico's activities. The movie is enriched by the excellent performance of Al Pacino who is becoming recognized as one of the best actors around, in the title role of Frank Serpico. Pacino won an Academy Award nomination for his performance and rightfully so. His portrayal of an honest cop confronted with a department that is corrupt from the commissioner on down, with few exceptions, makes you squirm in your seat as his awesome task of trying to do something about it becomes a hopeless case. He makes you feel his frustration, a trait of a good actor.

The introduction of Detective Frank Serpico in "A Helpful Hello" is one of the best detective movies ever produced.

About the film, Levertov observed that it was a powerful film. Levertov succeeded in giving the audience some beautifully thought-out images in the first half of the afternoon. She proved again that she is a poet of the world, a person responsible for communicating beautiful and powerful images of life, death, and more war, any person runs into difficulties because the general public is super-saturated with these subjects and any reference to them usually causes negative reactions.

Pawlak's particular niche might be carved by his ability to clearly describe those familiar images because of the knowledge that working and living in "deprived areas" has given him; he truly understands these people. With more experience and creativity he may rise above the masses of the "relevants." Disappointingly, Serpico succumbed to the relevancy mystique. Yes, she went to Vietnam. Yes, she has two adopted Vietnamese daughters. Yes, she included the mandatory anti-war statement which all artists must make.

Shelley believed that the role of the poet was to be a legislator of the world, a person responsible for looking at his surroundings and pointing out the wrongs of humanity. The beauty or the misery of life. It seems as if poets as of late have been looking at too much of the misery and not enough of the beauty. Levertov offered the idea that contemporary poets either indulge in "a type of abstractness that doesn't seem to deal with daily life" or in "a narcissistic, confessional poetry that focuses only on one's own experience." However, the introduction of Pawlak, an obscure young poet from Buffalo, N.Y., was not necessary. The addition of the typical anti-war, anti-society themes left several members of the audience cold, as was apparent when a large group began to depart from the lounge.

A poet like Levertov is a powerful person. She has been gifted with the ability to portray the beauty of life and death. There are others, too many, who are basing expanding their views on what is evil and immoral about life today. If Levertov is to be truly successful, then she should continue stressing the beautiful and helpful put the ideas in the minds of man into some proper perspective.

The Providence College Friars, who gave the Pack a run for its money at the Regional in Raleigh, &: gave an excellent showing again this past season. They surprised many skeptics, finished their season 28-4, and added a national rating at 8th in the final AP Writers' Poll. (of the Friars were led, as everyone knows, by All-american Martin Barnes and Kevin Stacom. But it would be interesting to look at the All-opposition Team for the P.C. Friars. To be a member of this team, an opposing player must have a particularly talented and spirited effort against the Friars as a whole.

Heading the All-opposition Team is of course the Wolfpack's "Fabulous" David Thompson. The excellence and talent of this 20 year old basketball player was evident to all ardent basketball fans on the East Coast. More recently, as the Pack knocked off U.C.L.A. and Marquette for the National Championship against the Friars at Raleigh in the Regional, Bob "Smooth" Carrington of Providence College to those not familiar with the Friars' record that the Friars wouldn't have wanted to hear about the trip to their southern trip... Joe Marcusco was the leading hitter on the trip, .454 for 16 games, the home opener is Tuesday, we want to hear from Friars' Ready's Raiders, Senior All-Stars. A special feature is being planned to afford more par.... the Friars head to the Greenville Civic Center in December.

James "Fly" Williams, the freshman from Austin Peay, was selected to the All-opposition Team. He also scored 40 points against P.C. in the second game of the young season. The only similarity between these two men is their different selections for these various teams. This is expected, because P.C. faced many players in the same year. My selections are not gospel truths. But it does give the reader a picture of what opposing players and their caliber of play against the Friars this year.

voluntarv in many universities, however, and is not overvalued nor undervalued. I have been impressed with the product of Sports Information and have seen the times of their personnel to and from the media.

Now the question has constantly arisen as to the validity of the stats compiled by the Civic Center. Repeated cries of padding Barnes' rebounds or Stacom's assists for example, have been heard. In fact, some stalwart fans who have been around long enough to remember that there are differences of up to 20 points in the final scores when comparing their charts to the P.C. stats. Mr. Tranghese answers these cries by saying that "It is obvious, I may or may not be true, that some of these groups may not technically count as assists. Offensive taps and deflections give the most solid contributions to a national championship, for example. I do not believe that this is a pene-

In this writer's opinion, the most exciting moments of the season were considered to be the Doogans Memorial semi-final game on Wednesday. If there should be a big upset in the OT Bazzooka clash and the OT's winning the next game would be a wide open tournament.

On Thursday night in a totally crazy contest of comedy and featuring athletes in splendid condition, the Senior All-Stars edged the Faculty All-Stars, 49-48. The game was sponsored by the Dillon Club Commuter. The estimated crowd of 800 was feasibility a mark and luck battle of nerves.

The Senior All-Stars were led by Frank Biviano’s 12 points. The All-Stars, with Jerry Wells and John “Hoo” Trudell, led their battle on the boards with the very physical Faculty.

following day was much brighter for coach Alex Nahigian as the Friars belted out 14 hits, played much improved defense and received a good pitching performance from junior Bill Griffin on his birthday as the Friars beat Christian Brothers College, 5-3. Griffin earned a double and two R.B.I.’s. Tom Wholer had those three hits as the designated pinch hitter and Steve Allietta and co-captain Ken Sheehan chipped in with two hits apiece. In the seven innings he pitched, Griffin gave up only five hits and two runs, one of them unearned. Mike O’Connell picked up a save, giving up one run in the last two innings.

Schults’s later at Murray, Kentucky, Rich McGough’s two-hit pitching enabled the Friars to nip Murray State, 2-1, and earn a split of a doubleheader. North­western had scored six runs in the fourth inning to defeat the Friars 6-5 in the opener. In the six and two-thirds innings that McGough worked, he gave up only two hits, the first one not coming until the sixth, and one run as he struck out a startling fourteen batters. The Friars won the game with single runs in the first and third innings. Steve Allietta scored in the first on a throwing error on an infield hit by Ken Sheehan. In the third, Tim Boyle walked leading off and eventually scored on a double to center by Ted Barrette. In the first game. North­western jumped on freshman Mike Cuddy for single runs in the second and third innings before exploding in the fourth. A three-run homer by John McCarthy drove in two runners, giving the Friars an eight-run lead. P.C. had taken a 5-0 lead in the first and was ahead 6-2 when the roof fell in. Again a costly error in the field, unusual by last year’s standard, prolonged the inning. Don Joy was effective in his two and two-thirds innings pitched as he gave up only one hit and no runs. The game saw the Friars first homer of the year, a solo shot by D.H. Steve Hardy. The West will surprise you. The Kansas City Royals will win that division, The Royals, a bunch of brash kids with a rookie, but brilliant manager, will surprise everyone. By the end of the year they all have a year under their belts and heady McDaniel in the bullpen. Don’t be surprised, or, if Marty Pattison is there in the pitcher’s role of capability of being a little worse than scenery. A. T.’s would be strong once again, but Alvin Dark could be capable of destroying the other teams in the league. Even a healthy Dick Allen cannot help the White Sox. This is a team with three pitchers capable of winning 25 games apiece, and another 20... and another 15.

The National League East will once again go to the Mets. Last year the choice was sentimental, but this year it is legitimate. Barry injuries, their pitching staff has dropped a run, and a few players. They proved that during the few healthy periods they experienced last season. Veaver and Matlick is the best one-two punch in baseball. Add Jerry Koosman and George Stone to your rear in baseball. The fifth starter will come from either Ray Sadecki, Harry Walker, or Craig Swan. Tug McGraw is the best reliever in the game and possesses one of the finest arms. The outfield of Cleon Jones, Don Hahn and Rusty Staub. Defensively, the weaknesses for the Mets is their third baseman, though “Hoop” season is officially over, they still have three games left.参与。“Hoop” season is officially over, they still have three games left.
