Letters to the Editor — Supplement

Ed Cetera, Ed Cetera Hulton Responds.

Dear Ed,

I have, Ed, the desire to once again voice my personal thoughts and opinions this week. A friend of mine suggested that, perhaps, I should wait until I have received a direct reply before progressing with my idea. However, I believe this is the right time, with my mind at ease, to express my sentiments.

There are three apparent and prevailing attitudes that abound on this campus. The first of which is a seemingly growing feeling of the need to voice our sentiments. The second, a sentiment of the black community that is perhaps the most interesting. And the third, a sentiment that a friend of mine articulated the other night in the Rathskeller. We were discussing my last letter to you, Ed, and he, as expressed by Jerry, were the sentiments that only "cut down" P.C. He agreed, however, that such letters are of personal interest, and that the authors were entitled to the prerogative of expressing those opinions. And then I agreed that the sentiment was sometimes a bit too caustic and overly remedial to remedy a bad situation. But, I believe, that there is a definite flaw in their reasoning. The point I'm trying to make, Ed, is that such letters are nodding their heads in mutual agreement.

Along the lines of thinking as we both agreed, my sentiments that a friend of mine represented the other night in the Rathskeller. We were discussing my last letter to you, Ed, and he, as expressed by Jerry, were the sentiments that only "cut down" P.C. He agreed, however, that such letters are of personal interest, and that the authors were entitled to the prerogative of expressing those opinions. The point I'm trying to make, Ed, is that such letters are nodding their heads in mutual agreement.

As I stated much earlier, the basic truth was that any glance at the public's perception of the Student Mobilization Committee is a possible, agreeable means for expressing those sentiments that I agreed to that. And we agreed that we agreed. So, there we have it. I'm not proposing the change in our group at P.C. I'm simply proposing the notion of mutual agreement. To have agreed, or to agree. If you need me, I think you've been very apparent about the fact that I'm the one who is making the point. You know, Ed, I'm not a saint, but I do have my moments. And I think you've been very apparent about the fact that you agree, and that you agree.

So, American-African, we need you. We need your numbers and your sentiments. You are, undoubtedly, one of the most decisive factions of the student body, and there is no denying that your presence, from the Student Mobilization Committee would be an irreplaceable void. Here is one time that the whites need the blacks and the blacks need the whites. Everybody is aware that the whites have gripes they wish to be aired. And this, we hope, will be the medium to air all, black and white, the students' views. And look at it this way. If the Student Mobilization Committee accomplishes nothing, which I don't think will be the case, at the very, very least, black and white will, for once, be "brothers". And this, in itself, will be worth more than all our efforts. And you can be sure that I Thomas Aquinas, himself, will roll over in his grave to take note of this one!

Thanks, again, Ed, for your time, I remain...

A friend with tired fingers,

Michael Hulton '74

Coming Attractions
On Thursday, in Louisiana, two students died in an attempt to acquire more student voice in administrative matters. The SMC is attacking this objective very effectively, very methodically and very factually.

To whom it may concern... I have come to question a lot of what has been proclaimed as true, and I have found some truth of my own. In the first place, I have never seen Fr. Tetrasingh walking around the campus trying to get the general feeling of the students or the g.r. (gay rights) atmosphere of the school. At the same time, I don't feel that it is all our responsibility to go. Secondly, I am hoping to help the student handbook, I am in on rules meetings in which the number of faculty members involved seemed to increase, while the disregard of students’ ideas allowed to attend remained at three. In doing research, I came across this line on the back of a British television show. In the future we shall call upon your assistance in making rules ever more relevant, just as in the present we call upon your cooperation to assure that present ones exert their effectiveness.” (Thomas B. Peterson, O.P.) I originally suggested the revision of this year’s handbook because the previously quoted statement really wasn’t fulfilled.

Right now, the main truth is that most of the students of this college are frustrated beyond words and stifled beyond the ability to grow. Some student leaders have decided to stop bearing their heads against this cold, stone wall. Furthermore, the administration forces people to become hostile and, because the channels have been closed, the students of this school have been, nevertheless, ignored.

To whomever it may concern... I realize that I am at times overly idealistic, yet I don’t think it is in the purpose of Providence College to make me become hopeless and despairing about people and about the world. I truly believe in rules and order, yet now, you are beginning to force me, like so many others, to ignore your rules. I believe in peace and harmony, yet you force me to accept your peace and your harmony, and you make it all sound so nice!

With much concern,
I am Party Rain 76

Precedent has already passed us, but it is not yet too late to change courses. I point this out because a number of courses which are being offered for the first time have not been publicized. Apparently they were left off the schedule for the course list. They are now being published in the Addendum to the Addendum, and read as follows:

ARTS HONORS:

Lockjaw and the Ape.

An in-depth analysis of the relationship of the ape to lockjaw, and of that possible missing link between them — man.

BUSINESS 120:

Un-marketing.

Research into the principles of what is waste and price control, and the specific fiscal and monetary policies which enable a business to raise profits, and still be a non-profit organization.

CHEMISTRY 99:

Drivel.

A chemical analysis and autopsy on the state and composition of the 1972 pre-registration fee, and being.

Ring Committee '75 News

by Gene Gousie

The Ring Committee also wants to say that the results of recent fund-raising taffy. Walking away with the two basketball season passes, the first price, was Maura Hanahan. Winning second price, a beer and two show tickets, was Gerry Callahan. Marty Sarasin took home the '75 ring at Steak & Brew, the third and final give away.

In addition to Ring Committee business, the group decided at its last meeting that, in order to be the ring manufacturer for the class of '75, the group had to have the utmost in quality, but also reliability in service at their hands. As a result of these factors, Jostens was unanimously selected from other ring company choices.
