New Resident Assistants Sought

by Tim Hassan

The College President and the Director of Residence are now accepting appliances for the position of Resident Assistant. An appointment for this position must be submitted to the Department of Residence Office no later than February 28.

The applicant must be a member of the class of 1973 or older and must posses-se a minimum accumulative academic average of 3.0 for the last three semesters. Applicants are expected to complete and submit their applications for the position of Resident Assistant by February 28.

All applicants must meet the following requirements:

1. Be a member of the class of 1973 or older.
2. Possess a minimum accumulative academic average of 3.0 for the last three semesters.
3. Be a member of the Providence College community.
4. Be familiar with the College community.
5. Be willing to abide by the rules and regulations of the College.

The College President and the Director of Residence reserve the right to screen the application of the Resident Assistant.

Sophomores Re-Elect Unopposed President

The Class of ’75, voting in the Student Congress election last Wednesday, 14 February, elected to its representation in Congress eight officers. The positions on the Executive Board of the Class were unopposed.

Lou Zullo Re-elected

Lou Zullo, incumbent candidate for the class President, was re-lected in an uncontested race. Along with Zullo, Joan Burrett, candidate for First Class Secretary, and Ray McGrath, seeking the position of Class Treasurer, ran unopposed.

The race for the Vice-President was on the other hand, a foot-race between four candidates. Cindy Warzoneck, Stan Kwialkowski, Candy Cummings, and Mary Trem were all voted for the position. With the total votes cast at 119, Candy Cummings was elected, having a count of 89. Her closest opponent, Stan Kwialkowski, received 38 votes.

Fifty-Four Vote Class Representative

The race for the Class Representative saw a larger turnout of voters. Six-hundred and forty-five voters cast their ballot. There were five candidates vying for the four positions. The lead vote getter was Kathy Caldwell.

Caldwell received 150 votes. Paul Warren, with a total of 147 votes. Peter Pinto received 124 votes for the position, and Rich Laiberti filled out the remaining position available receiving 119 votes. Bill Pinto, the fifth candidate, received 108 votes.

Freshman Incumbents Lose Opponents for ’74 Presidency

Frank Biriano Defeats Two Opponents for ’74 Presidency

With only one position unoccupied in the races for the Congress positions of the Class, the Junior Class saw the turnover in the Student Congress elections held last Wednesday, 14 February. 794, the largest amount of votes cast in the entire Congress elections, spread over two weeks, was realized.

Frank Rivivana Elected

The race for the president of this year’s Senior Class had a close race between three candidates. Winning the election was Frank Rivivana. The vote of the 179 votes were split between Kevin Deasy and Bill Pinto, both candidates received 85 votes, and the third candidate, the opposition, received 102 votes.

Leading the candidates in the three total votes received was Frank Rivivana. The second highest vote getter was Fritz Gorst. Gorst received 120 votes, just one more than Paul Sciarra’s count of 119 votes. The third candidate, the opposition, received 102 votes. Bill Ryan and Mary Jane Dresser tied for last, receiving 95 and 75 votes, respectively.

Dear Father Peterson:

In light of a recent decision reached by the Rank and Tenure Committtee, involving a denial of tenure to Dr. Stephen Misovitch of the Psychology Dept., I write to express our concern and our disapproval.

The decision was made with their approval and in consultation with the President and the Rank and Tenure Committee.

We feel that any decision made by a college administration to deny tenure to an esteemed faculty member is a breach of the trust that students, faculty, and staff place in the institution.

Thank you for your attention in this matter.

Respectfully,

Basketball as a Sexual Phenomenon

by Paul Selwyn

Last week I had the dubious honor of speaking with one of the distinguished members of our Psychology Department, Dr. Laulindas Jargello. Dr. Jargello came to America from Lithuania shortly after World War II. He received his doctorate at Bayonne City College, Bayonne, New Jersey, and has been guest lecturer and consultant for the psychological and architectural programs at Providence College for the past five years. Over the last few months he has been conducting a seclusion on the fourth floor of High School Hall, where he is located. It seems that he is concentrating on an investigation that he terms "Basketball as a Sexual Phenomenon." He has been observing and studying the behavior patterns of basketball players, particularly those who are involved in sexual frustration. He believes that this phenomenon is widespread and that it can be understood by analyzing the factors that contribute to it.

"You young reporters waste no time," he said, "and neither shall I. I will try to be brief. Basketball, I have found, is a game derived from sexual frustration. It is a sport similar to the adolescence of male high school girls, in which the basketball becomes an extension of the male organ and the hoop a symbol of the orifice. The young man conducts a running crusade of trying to unite the ball with the hoop. He is always accompanied by a nurse who is on the scene in case of any complications."

"Wait a minute, doctor," I interjected. "If that is all there is, how come so many people watch basketball games?"

"It is the Civic Center always packed!"

The reason so many people watch the game is that they are sexually frustrated. They receive, what I refer to as a "self-organizer." It is a feeling similar to what one could experience watching a pornographic movie or a live soap opera.

"We talked for a few minutes and then I told him I had to be on my way. I thanked him and left the priest who arranged the meeting. He asked me if I would like to stay and have a cup of candy. I told him I had to get back to my office and left."

Basketball sex frustration: a sight not to be missed, indeed. With love and admiration,

It is limiting and reductive of one's capacity as a human being to your role as a campus and campus and make an identity for yourself when there is so much insidious capacity to be a human being and the fullness of that existence, has to be achieved and will be achieved if we go on limiting ourselves in such confusing ways.

When you are being a white middle class college student, and please don't make me be this thing, because you are a human being I need other human beings to give myself a sense of who I am. So sing this thing. Be you are someone. Some group whom I can deal with. If there is you in your general skin color of your hair or your custom shirts, then alright I am wrong. But if you really want to be a human being, then rise above all of that and be who you are. Don't allow yourself the comfort of a crowd that says that I am not the only you but you yourself as a total human being. And so this is why I say for myself you are going to be something. I hate you. Regardless of the situation of Race, Creed, Sex or Color, if you are going to limit yourself, then we can never be anything more than objects that are trained to avoid one another, and you force me to hate you which is a little bit different than getting along.

Dear Ed,

After reading last week's issue of the Cowl, I came away totally confused. I have never heard of a paper when I came upon a section called the "Barnes-Ketvirtis Act" and seem to be entitled Black Supplement for the simple fact that you, the black student, is entitled to separate or separate and separate yourselves from the majority. This is obviously not a way to solve any problems there may be, I am just not that the Supplement be eliminated but that it be joned with the rest of the paper under one single nature. The Cowl.

Letter to the Editor...
On or about four to five years ago, a group of enterprising students at Providence College started the Wooden Naval Coffee House in the boiler room of Raymond Hall. At the time, it was simply a dingy hole in the wall that also operated as the College Bookstore. However, it soon became the Wooden Naval through the efforts of diligent students, and soon gained a reputation for good music, a friendly atmosphere, good coffee, and standing room only. It was an ideal place for the audiences were respectful, and entertainers. because the good coffee, and standing room music, a friendly atmosphere, soon gained a reputation for good

The past weekend, the Wooden Naval opened up under a new guise. It still provided entertainment, but this time it opened with a further attraction—beer and wine. While continuing with the free Sunday night format, the Wooden Naval will be opening on weekends with a liquor license and a fifty cent cover charge. The new endeavor, operated by both members of the folk club and old members of the Wooden Naval, charges minimal prices for beer and wine. While the comparisons that can be drawn between the Wooden Naval and its parent, the Rathskeller, are innumerable, it is safer to say that the Wooden Naval is slightly better than the Rat. There is a closer intimacy, and the presence of waiters gives one the feeling that there won't be any dancing on the tables to Eddie Zacc or fights. It's a very secure feeling to be sitting here, quietly drinking a beer and listening to Keenan and Powell, two folk-musicians in the James Taylor, Neil Young, and Seals and Crafts genre. Working over twelve and six string guitars in addition to mandolins, they performed standard coffee house material which also included original works. The only faults were a poor stage presence and harmonizing that indicated that someone on stage might have the beginnings of tone deafness. The fact that they were playing together for the first time might be the explanation.

It's eleven thirty now. Keenan and Powell have just finished an off-key version of an Everly Bros song and over in the corner, a drunk wandered in from the Rat had just vomited over in the corner. 'There is a sing-a-long that keeps the Wooden Naval in existence but it wasn't the following that kept the Wooden Naval in existence but it wasn't the standing room only crowds that once characterized the coffee house. W. times the crowds numbered only 40, all of them quietly sitting and listening, drinking coffee tea, and illicit bottles of wine. While the quality of music didn't diminish, the crowd did and it became evident that the Wooden Naval was slowly dying. But bad times befell the Wooden Naval Interest in coffee houses dropped as the interest in the folk-rock phenomena disappeared in the early seventies and late sixties. The past weekend, the Wooden Naval was going to survive.

For in existing in such a vacuum as the negative culture or culture minus, then possibly we should ask ourselves if we haven't achieved this rather than a "Commissarism III." For in existing in such a vacuum as exists here with so many opportunities for license rather than freedom and a high disregard for creativity, then we do run the risk of becoming culturally Neanderthal.
Special Cowl Feature:
Report on Area Schoolboy Hoop Talent

by Paul Pusterelli

Continuing its survey of local high school basketball talent, this week the Cowl takes a look at one week the Cowl takes a look at one 72 and a standout in several and rebounder for his team in 1971-
Rhode Island basketball schools contacting him.

But Conboy can do more than score and rebound. He possesses excellent mobility for a 6-foot-6 player and has above average speed. This allows the Cumberland team to experiment with many defenses and utilize the press a great deal. Since the Clippers are a team that looks for the fast break, Conboy has been instrumental in getting the ball out and starting the running game.

According to Coach Hughes, Conboy's biggest plus is not his speed or mobility, but his impressive strength. Many of Tom's points and rebounds come as a result of his simply out-muscling opponents. Another aspect of Tom's basketball career that deserves mentioning is the fact that he is very coachable and works extra hard at developing his hoop potential. As a result, the Cumberland coaches have noticed a steady improvement in Tom's performance since the beginning of the season.

On the academic side, Tom is an excellent student, ranking in the top five of his class. As Coach Hughes puts it: "Tom has the physical equipment, the scholastic ability and the right attitude to ensure himself of success in his college career." As already mentioned, Tom has a variety of skills to pick from. Although he is not interested in PC, he will undoubtedly be an asset to his team and both on the basketball court and in the classroom.

Intramural Hoop Report

by Gary Tharber

Last week Tuba's A came out on top in a special playoff of the top 6 intramural teams to determine P.C.'s representative in the Schaefer Tournament.

In the opening round of the tournament, the Tuba's engaged RIC and with just 23 seconds remaining, Kevin Bittman stole the ball and took it for the layup to clinch a 72-71 verdict. The ballgame was a thrilling affair as the lead changed hands several times.

Tuba's A led by as many as ten points in the first half before falling behind 34-31 at halftime. Jerry Walls popped in 14 points in that half. After trailing by 10, the Tuba's fought back to tie with eight minutes remaining.

The lead see-sawed thereafter until Bittman's heroics. Kevin Haverty banged in 18 second-half points and wound up with 24. Jerry Walls led the scoring with 26 points.

Tuba's gained a berth in the tournament by virtue of victories over the Warriors and Afram A. Monday night Tuba's defeated Worriers, 47-42, the Wufflers bombed Emanouel I, 19-41, and Afram A stunned previously unbeaten Jersey A, 48-39.

Tuesday evening Afram A apareled the Tuba's, engaged RIC, and earned the right to play in the finals against Tuba's.

Played Wednesday and witnessed by more than 100 fans, Afram jumped out to a 17-19 halftime lead. On both teams, playing tight defense Tuba's rallied to take a 33-26 verdict, setting the stage for the contest against RIC.

Next opponent for Tuba's A will be Bridgeport.

Members of the victorious Tuba's include Walls, Haverty, Bittman, Paul Vagnani, Bob Carcich, John Sans, Paul Carlucci, Larry Tironi, Frank Valeri and Bob Landry.

Cheerleaders Add Color and Spirit to Friars' Successful Hoop Season

by Cindy Kranich

When PC became co-ed two years ago, faculty and alumni alike did not realize that women would infiltrate as many phases of PC life as they did. One of those aspects that is most noticeable is the cheerleading for Friar basketball. With the amount of publicity received from basketball at Providence College, this squad in particular has had to work extremely hard. Friar cheerleaders have been on local television and have appeared frequently in the local newspapers. With such an active cheering career they always must be prepared to represent Providence.

Three male members, combined with the girls, the PC band and the student support help to carry enthusiasm and spirit throughout each Friar home game. Some of the girls and the male members too, have traveled as far as New York this year to cheer the team on.

Can you throw away that pack right now?

It's not easy, is it?
In 20 years, after 146,000 more cigarettes, you think it's going to be easier?
Don't kid yourself.
Quit now. You'll never get a chance like this again.
