1100 attend Parents' Weekend amid congestion, crowds

Approximately 1100 parents and students attended the Fourth Annual Parents' Weekend held this year on January 27 through January 29.

On Friday, a large crowd attended the Casino Night at Slavin Center. Various types of gambling tables were set up in the upper level and prizes were auctioned off at the end of the evening.

Cocktails were served while students and their parents danced to music provided by two bands. "Beg, Borrow and Steal" played in Alumni Cafeteria while "Something Katchy" entertained in 94 Hall. Both bands feature several PC students.

On Saturday afternoon, the Friars hockey team defeated Northeastern by a score of 5 to 3 in Schneider Arena. The game was followed by a President's Reception.

Cocktails and a buffet dinner began Saturday evening's entertainment in Slavin Center. After the buffet, parents and students attended a dance in Raymond Cafeteria.

On Sunday morning, Rev. Thomas R. Peterson, O.P., president of the College and Rev. Aloysius Bagley, O.P., prior of the PC Dominican Community, celebrated Mass at St. Pius Church. In his homily, he explained that they have reason to be proud of the two was extremely close with Welch winning by a slim margin.

Michael Welch received 604 votes in the election, winning over Kerry Raffanelli for Student Congress Treasurer. The race between the two was extremely close with Welch winning by a slim margin.

Raffanelli, who was a representative his freshman year, said, "I just want to continue with the Ring weekend committee. Welch, who was a representative his freshman year, said, "I'm going to run for class representative. I only lost by five votes, a very close margin, so I will run again before Student Congress means a great deal to me. I'm sure Mike will do a good job and I wish him the best."

Congress considers calendar revision

Nomination period for elections of class officers began on Monday, January 29. Election day, which was slated for Thursday, February 5 has been moved up to Wednesday, February 1 in order to allow students ample opportunity to vote before going home for Winter Weekend.

Leveridge announced that there have been several mix-ups concerning the implementation of class officers. One student, who overpaid would receive a check for the amount that is due, therefore paid the bill in full and the free "birthday pitchers" have been curtailed. They will not return if students do not continue to be taken, a deposit of $1.50 for each pitcher used may be withheld. In addition, students have reason to be proud of the way their sons and daughters responded in the aftermath of the fire. The Mass was followed by a brunch which was held in Slavin Center.

Barnes wins top Congress post

Ellen Barnes was recently elected Student Congress president in a contest which drew a 35.4 percent turnout. Barnes defeated Dan Collins to become the first woman in the history of Providence College to hold that post. Barnes received a total of 722 votes. When asked about her new job she said, "Specifically I want to keep up with everything, especially the law school, the Raymond food, and keeping the pressures, policies moving. Communications must be kept open between the students and the administration in order to maintain the closeness that all have been feeling."

Barnes wanted to thank the students for their support and said she will do her best she can. She feels that the student input must be used because the interest and initiative are there. In closing she said she was very excited and can't wait to start the job.

Cullen plans to continue working with Congress and said, "I will continue to work with Congress, but not for a class position. Rather I would like to be a member of one of the committees. More students are appointed rather than elected to the committees."

Mary Ellen Mackenzie ran unopposed for the position of Student Congress vice-president. When asked if she had any specific plans she said, "I would just like to continue the good job that the past members have done."

Rose Hernandez also ran unopposed and is the new Student Congress secretary. She was the vice-president of her class from the end of freshman year to the beginning of sophomore year. Hernandez said, "I made the amount of work that must be done for this job and I feel that I'm ready to pick up and work again."

All cars do in my best to help the residents of PC."

North Carolina game tickets available on February 6

By Steve Maurano and John O'Hare

Due to the great demand for tickets to the North Carolina basketball game, remaining standing room tickets will go on sale at 10 a.m., Saturday, February 4. Ticket price will be $2.00. After 12 noon, anyone will be allowed to purchase tickets.

In an effort to handle the overflow, Gaylatt has recently announced that on Friday, February 10, ticket requests will be accepted by alumni or season ticket holders after 10 a.m. on the third floor of Alumni. Tickets allotted to North Carolina and returned will also be on sale for the benefit of the 150 and 200 additional seats that will be available.

Don't sell your ticket for the PC athletic department, explained Shearer. "We feel that the students who have been fortunate enough to secure seats were treated very unfairly by Almacs. The Friars only had limited outlets and used the student center, which Almacs would make available for the benefit of students.

This was the first time in recent history that the demand for a season home game so exceeded the supply." Says Gaylatt, "We really got caught off guard. After selling 1000 season tickets to students, we didn't expect such a large turnout. And when we heard it was going to go beyond our capacity, we took it very seriously. "

At one point, the tremendous demand for tickets to the North Carolina game brought to light the fact that Almacs did have tickets to sell while both the Providence Civic Center and the College ticket office did not. Bello explained, "We just did not get Almacs to return the North Carolina game tickets but his efforts were no substitute for ticket sales.

The standard ticket policy for students is usually to put three sets of game tickets on sale for a week before the first game. Until last September, the only date of the game there are still a reasonable number of tickets left for students to purchase.

Bello also mentioned that he implemented the policy of checking tickets at the gate because there were too many people who had been allowed into the school by students who were obviously not PC students.

"The student tickets were designed so that students could enjoy the games at a reduced price, he explained, "Students have taken advantage of, hence, the necessity of checking ID's." Says Bello.

Bello urged all students wishing to see the Friars against the URI Rams to head for Kingston to seek tickets at the ticket office. He explained that PC has "banned" the Friars in athletic business, and both schools felt it best that they distribute the tickets for their respective home games.

"we didn't expect such a large turnout," Gaylatt.

Crafts explains problems faced by biology major

By Frank O'Donnell

Dr. Carol B. Crafts, health professions advisor of PC's biology department, explained recently that the problems biology students have been facing are not accepted by medical and graduate schools are not unique to Providence College. "We can see a competitive situation nationwide," Crafts maintained.

"The problem started about a month ago," Crafts observed, "when the number one misconception facing the biology department is that is a pre-med degree.

"This is a misconception designed to provide our students with a special advantage for graduate school. Physical and natural sciences will be well-rounded person who any post-graduate work they desire, "stated Crafts.

Becoming a physician is not the only road open to biology majors. There are other "viable alternatives to biology majors in the biology department," Crafts says. These alternatives include work in physical therapy, research work and nursing, for both biology and pre-med students.

Another problem, according to Crafts, is that there is a misconception about medical school acceptance. Medical schools look for students who have taken courses in a wide variety of areas: high grades, good MCAT scores, good letters of recommendation, and a student does not have these experiences from the courses the student where the student comes from "The problem is the same in all three points, the medical schools will look for students who have had extracurricular activities. There are many intangibles involved in choosing what student will be accepted into medical school," said Crafts. Basically, medical schools are looking for students who have had these experiences, "and they are not listed on their resume."

"We are just trying to point these things out to the students, the problems that we have," Crafts said. "The problems are the same for all of our students, but they are not unique, for they are faced by almost every biology department in the nation.

"The basic difference, and biggest problem, for PC is that the lack of a state-supported medical school in Rhode Island. There is a University of Rhode Island, which is a private institution which is a state-supported medical school in South Dakota, and six into foreign medical schools. But the biology department is trying to do the best for the students, 42 final candidates were accepted into graduate school. In 1977, 41 PC biology graduates—35 from the class of 1977 and six from other Rhode Island schools. Fifty-nine students were graduated as biology majors in the class of 1978."

"Crafts is optimistic about the future of the biology department," Crafts said. "We have a solid and significant historical analysis of the Roman Catholic Church in Rhode Island. Albert Klyberg, director of the Rhode Island Historical Society, called the book "a model work in all respects."

Crafts, in her new position as health professions advisor, is trying to overcome through such things as Brown's Early Identification Program and the agreement with the University of Vermont.

PC's objective in her new position as health professions advisor is to try to provide some of the students who want to leave the PC's biology major and go to medical school. "She wants to inform the students in the biology department that PC is not out to scare anyone away from biology. All she wants to do is to give the students a realistic picture."
A brief reception was held Sunday night to bid farewell to PC's Europe-bound students, shown here with Dr. Laurent Gousie, director of the Providence-in-Europe program, and Father Peterson.

37 students depart for study in Europe

By Jane E. Hickey

On Sunday, January 29, 37 PC juniors flew out of Logan Airport to begin the second semester of study in Europe. Thirty-five of the students will study in Fribourg, Switzerland, while two others will be in Madrid, Spain. A brief reception was held in '64 Hall on Sunday and the group left for Boston at 7:30 p.m. Their 9:45 p.m. flight landed in Zurich, Switzerland, at 10:50 a.m. Monday morning. During the mid-afternoon the group left for Nice, France, where the temperature is approximately 79 degrees at present. They left Nice today for a one-day stopover in Aosta, Italy, and are due to arrive in Fribourg at 2:30 p.m. on Thursday, February 2.

Paul Gallagher, resident director of the Providence-in-Europe program, will place the students in their homes and provide them with an orientation to the city itself and various aspects of European life, such as the school system, banking system and how to relate to their host families.

Several students will attend a language orientation program at the Audiovisuelles Sprachinstitut in Zurich from February 6 to March 3. American College Program courses also begin February 6 and have a spring break of approximately four and one-half weeks, which coincides with the semester break for the University of Fribourg. All classes end July 7 and are followed by a week of exams after which students are free to travel for the rest of the summer. Several students have opted to join the Pietrasanta Program.

Those participating in the second semester abroad are Ann Eller and Karen White (Spain), Lisa Callahan, Tina Celebi, Claire Cox, Michael DeGilio, Paul DeNicola, Alicia Dekson, Holly Green, Maureen Gilbride, Joseph Gilmartin, Alice Haynes, Charles Jolicoeur, and Marianne Jones.

Also, Nancy Klobukowski, Christine Lynch, Patricia Manchester, Annamarie Martinello, Joan Marrullo, Kathleen Massone, Michael Stonea, David Moniz, Thomas O'Brien, Denise O'Donoghue, Lisa Paradis, David Paul, Paul Pretiends, Maryanne Putz, Cynthia Rae, Marry Santry, Patricia Shields, Nancy Simon, Jeanne Smith, Debra Spagnoli, Theresa Suffoletta, Mary Sullivan, and Adele Tiberi.

A course entitled "Broadcast Journalism," which is being offered this semester, may represent a first step toward a possible communications program at PC, according to a recent WDOM newsletter.

The course will be taught by Chris Blake, news director of WJAR, every Wednesday evening as a course in the School of Continuing Education.

What is significant about this offering is that it is the direct result of an ongoing news internship program between stations WDOM and WJAR. For several semesters, student interns in this program have been spending a period of four weeks in the newsrooms of stations WDOM and WJAR.

The course was recently taught by Jane E. Hickey, aPC senior who recently graduated from the School of Communications. She was able to apply what she learned by actual experience and feedback from the newsrooms.

The men we seek to join us in this work are Catholics who would like to work closely with young people in an educational apostolate. They are high school graduates with the physical and mental capacity necessary for the work and with the psychological capacity to live the close community life characteristic of the Christian Brothers.

During Parents' weekend:

Crowded conditions hamper enjoyment

The Student Affairs Office did a commendable job organizing and running Parents' Weekend. The food and bands were good and most parents took the opportunity of seeing a little college life at their home away from home. But the event suffered from overcrowding. Lines for dinner were absolutely intolerable. At the quasi-military in Raymond Hall it was as if a game of musical chairs was in progress: as soon as the music stopped everyone bounded for a seat. But as in every game of musical chairs, not everyone succeeded in obtaining a chair.

Another problem was the lack of fresh air and the stifling temperatures in Raymond Hall. According to Father McMahon, director of Raymond, the student union building, 1100 tickets were sold. To those in attendance it seemed as if there were far more than 1000 people squeezed into Raymond Hall.

The Cowl Editorial Board feels that there are a few possible solutions to alleviate the overcrowding. First, since the freshmen have a parents' weekend during first semester and seniors have a Parents' Weekend during Commencement Week, therefore the ticket sales could be limited to the sophomore and junior classes.

Another solution would be to allow members of all classes to attend. The problem lies in distributing the tickets. The solution would be to give a first come, first served basis. Also, anyone not attending the dinner in Slavin Center should be forbidden from attending the dance in Raymond Hall and tickets should be collected.

One other possible cure for the overcrowding malady is not to allow anyone but students and parents to attend the dinner-dance-no brothers, sisters or boyfriends.

It is too bad it has become apparent that ticket sales must be limited. All parents should be able to attend but because of space constraints, it is impossible. Therefore, to ensure that all the parents attending the Parents' Weekend dinner dance have a reasonable amount of space in which to move around and converse with other parents and students, some type of ticket limitation policy is not only advisable but absolutely necessary.

Student Congress deserves praise at term's end

The Cowl Editorial Board feels that Student Congress has done an outstanding job this past year. Under the leadership of President Bruce Lavoie, the Congress have established its goals and was for the most part, able to effectively carry out those goals.

The fruits of Congress' labor have been seen in the amount of student interest at PC. Nevertheless, Congress has not, therefore, turned ambivalent toward Student Congress. A large percentage of students do not even take the time to vote. The usual excuses given for not voting are lame at best and unintelligible at worst. They range from "I didn't know anyone who was running," to "I don't care who gets elected." We wish that everyone would vote. It is far easier to complain about something than to work for improvements.

There is a new president who is very capable of carrying on the work of last year's Congress. We hope the student body will accept her and work with her. She may make mistakes; who hasn't? She will have to get accustomed to the job. If the student body shows half the enthusiasm the outgoing Congress members have, Providence College cannot but be improved.

The opinions expressed herein are the opinions of the editorial board and do not necessarily represent the opinions of the administration or the student body of Providence College.
"The reason why people get into this business is they have so much energy to expand, and doing a great job in a tough field is one way to direct that energy.

This was said about another field, but it may well have been said about politics. Campus politics, such as it is, has rarely failed to interest and amaze me. Total immersion in a college campus, student politics totally submerging itself into the events on campus... totally.

Speaking with Congress member Hubert Kennedy, one finds a great urge to do something, and see their work accomplish something quite tangible, preferably where learning, gentleness and love are so often spoken of, no notice was taken of the passing of one’s years in Providence, who was not only learned (I know; I was briefly his student), but was an essentially gentle and loving man.

Strangely, Leveridge says he can think of no great disappointments in his year in office. "There were some instances, and I can remember some bad days; but as I look back—nothing."

Couch Gavitt expresses thanks for help given for game

To Members of the PC Community:

On behalf of the Providence College athletic department, I would like to extend our appreciation to everyone who helped out during the relocation of the basketball game with the Russian National Team. It would have been totally impossible to have staged the game under these difficult circumstances without your cooperation.

I have personally expressed our thanks to the Friars Club, band members and others who so willingly gave assistance. However, so many other students, faculty, administrators and alumni helped, many whose contributions were vital.

Once again, the unique family spirit of Providence College came to the rescue and we are deeply appreciative to all.

Sincerely,
David R. Gavitt

Parents’ Weekend brings surprises

Ma and Pa Trout pay an unexpected visit

By David Amaral

Harold Trout came rushing frantically into his dorm room Friday. He had just discovered that it was Parents’ Weekend, and the folks would be there any minute.

He quickly launched into Plan A: ditch everything. Down with the Farrah posters. Out with the empty J.D bottles. Out with the guys. Down with the clothing and excess rubbish, and rolled him under the bed.

Mr. and Mrs. Trout greeted their son and then began surveying the room. Mr. Trout ran his finger along the desk top. "Squeaky springs," said Harold's roommate under the bed. He uncovered his roommate's bed. "That's to keep their throats moist," said Harold. "The rat," repeated Mrs. Trout.

Mr. Trout looked sadly at his son's room. "Harold," he said, "you should read more."

The Trouts agreed and headed out of the room. Mr. Trout, how­ever, slammed the door too hard, causing the closet to open and all the junk inside to come crashing out.

"Noisy neighbors," Harold said and lead them out. They first stopped in the Stavon Center. "Remember this place, folks? This is the seat of our social activity."

"What's that room in there with all the people?" Mr. Trout asked.

"We call it the Rat."

"The rat?" repeated Mrs. Trout.

"Yes," said Harold, "That's the place where the students get together and, uh, discuss college affairs."

"You mean like the debating team?" asked Mr. Trout.

"Sort of."

"It looks like they're drinking to me," said Mrs. Trout.

"That's to keep their throats moist."

"I see," said Mr. Trout. "Are those the mailboxes out there?"

"Yes," said Harold. "Oh good, let's go see yours."

"I don't know, Melvin," said Mrs. Trout. "I don't know."

"Now dear," said Mrs. Trout, "we should be having fun; drinking and partying like normal college kids. Oh Martha, where did we go wrong?"

"I don't know, Melvin," she said as they walked away.

Poet Whitman reads

By David Amaral

The English department held its first poetry reading of the semester with the appearance of Elizabeth Whitman, last Thursday in Aquinas Lounge. The English department invited Whitman to be the guest poet of the evening to give the students an idea of what poetry books published, read from them along with some unpublished works.

She opened the reading with a poem called "A Questionnaire," which she said was a result of the many questionnaires that we all always seem to be filling out. As she poetically answered the questions, which were "true but not factual answers," she inform­ed the audience about herself and her poetry.

One of her most powerful poems, "The Passion of Lizzie Borden," is also the title of one of her books. The poem explores the internal drama of Lizzie, what must have gone inside her head before she took an axe to her parents.

The poem begins with the actual newspaper clipping from 1892 of the account. The imagery of the poem is taken from the language of the testimony.

Whitman has done a great deal of research on the Lizzie Borden case, and has visited her house in Fall River. She said that the television drama presented recently was inaccurate in its bright, flowery setting.

The house, rather, was grey and lonely, where a woman in her 30s was raised by her parents that she had to steal a little scene picture to secretly look at her parents. Whitman then read from a similar work about a woman under pressure. The woman, Thomas Donner, went along on a traveling expedition in 1866-1867. In crossing the great salt desert, they got caught in a severe snowstorm on the bottom of a mountain, and she, along with many of the others, perished. She kept a journal of which several pages survived. Whitman took the writings of this journal and transformed them into a book of poems describing the journey from beginning to end. She took an insightful look inside the mind of what it must have been like for this woman traveling across the country under primitive condi­tions.

After writing these poems in a Victorian-like style, which was typical of the time, Whitman sprung forth with a series of ocean poems which are to be her next book, Rooms of the Ocean. These poems were inspired at her home in Middletown, Rhode Is­land, which overlooks the water.

She closed the reading with the poem, "The Act of Bread." The poem, which is a humorous nar­rative of making bread, has a double-entendre of sexual desire.

This brief reading showed the poet Ruth Whitman and the new freedom of women writers. She is direct, assertive, aware of her self and in total control. She says things directly while coming right at you.
Latest discs spin
-Boz Scaggs, EW&F simply good

By Carol Lancot

Down Two Then Left: Boz Scaggs

To most elitist rock critics, Boz Scaggs' latest release, Down Two Then Left probably seems somewhat empty and musically shallow. Lyrically, no obvious or obscure messages are presented. The music is relatively simple, lacking the enormous complexity of symphonic rockers by Yes or Emerson, Lake and Palmer, for example. Yet Scaggs has once again struck gold in Down Two Then Left, an album which, like its predecessor Silk Degrees, features first-rate dance music with a disco flair.

Rhythm clearly dominates the album as a result of excellent backup percussion. Scaggs maintains an energetic beat in most of his songs to produce a continuous musical flow. His best cuts are "Hollywood" and "Gimme the Goods," both of which display this heavy rhythm reminiscent of "Love Me Tomorrow."

The album's major weakness lies in the absence of a strong slow tune. Neither "We're Waiting" nor "Tomorrow Never Came" can quite measure up to the beautiful "Harbor Lights" or "We're All Alone" of Silk Degrees. But if you like "party" music and if you can endure frequent lyrical muddle, then Boz Scaggs' Down Two Then Left should satisfy your appetite for first class boogie.

All n All: Earth, Wind, & Fire

"In deep appreciation to our many universal brothers and sisters, we dedicate our music to you, thanking you for bringing us into your homes and hoping our songs will enlighten and bring you much joy. May God bless you."

The above statement is printed on a poster in the latest album by: a) Shirley Temple, b) Debby Boone, c) Earth, Winds & Fire. The answer is, of course, Earth, Winds, & Fire, and coming from them the dedication seems refreshingly genuine. EW&F, headed by Maurice White, has always promoted love and harmony on previous albums, and All 'n All is no exception.

Despite the contrived lyrics ("Our voices will ring together, until the twelfth of never"), a mysterious note of sincerity rings out loud and clear. In cuts like "Fantasy" and "Be Ever Wonderful," the group radiates spiritual as well as musical warmth without resorting to sugar-coated cliches. Simply, EW&F loves music and humanity and expresses these sentiments without corn or artificiality. Musically, EW&F confirms its status as one of the top bands in the country. By using a wide variety of instruments (which include French horns, cellos, and trombones), the group produces a highly polished rhythm & blues rock sound featured in an instrumental cut like "Runnin'."

The AM single, "Serpentine Fire" also succeeds with this sound though the lyrics miss the mark. On the whole the album alternates between fast and slow versions of classy funk while constantly spouting inspirational vocals.

EW&F exhibits both complexity and simplicity revealed obliquely in the beautiful album cover art work. and through All 'n All once again derives popular support of its brand of musical dedication.

Hockey Friars down Northeastern

4-1 lead after two periods of play.

The Friars didn't get their first man advantage until after Northeastern had taken a 1-0 lead on Doug Harvey's goal at 3:02.

With Dave Williams in the tactic box for interferance, Dornseif tied matters at 9:15 of the opening period on a blast from just inside
the blue line.

Dennis Martin
Power play goal number two was registered by Colin Ahearn at 11:13. Ahearn picked up the puck a center ice, skated in, and beat NU netminder Jim Bowman with a well-placed backhander.

At 12:19 of the second stanza, Dornseif scored his second and the team's third power play goal.
The goal, assisted by Ahearn, came on another Dornseif blast from the point.

"I think we have the best power play in college hockey," commented Ahearn, who centers the man-advantage unit. Colin has continued his scoring binge, and in his last 11 games he has collected 13 goals while assisting on 15 others.

John Sullivan scored what proved to be the game winner at 13:53 of the middle session. Sullivan, a freshman from Bloomington, Minnesota, knocked in the rebound of a Steve O'Neill shot.

The tempo of the game
changed following the fistcuffs early in the third period. Skating four players apiece, the Huskies cut the Friars lead to 4-2 when Mark Coates stole the puck from Randy Wilson and beat Milner.

NU pulled to within one with a power play goal of their own at 10:35. Harvey retrieved a loose puck and scored on Milner's glove side.

After a Northeastern goal was disallowed because the Huskies had a man in the crease. Tom Bauer clinched the victory by slipping a rebound shot past Bowman in the game's final minute.

A team that was lost in the cave of defeat has apparently found the light that leads to victory.

You've got a good head on your shoulders.
A nice place to live. You've got a decent job, or at least it's going to be someday. Maybe you've even got a couple bucks in the bank. And plans, you've got plenty of them. Life is just a bowl of cherries, right? Except it's not. Something's missing. And you're beginning to come up empty. Getting out of bed used to be easy, now it's not anymore. And you've begun to look at yourself, right to the inside, and you're asking, is that all there is? Well, it's not, you know. Not even close. There's the Peace Corps.

Maybe it'll be teaching nutrition. Or building a schoolhouse. Or clearing a field so the people in the village you serve can adopt a new habit: eating everyday. You came to the Peace Corps to give and you've gotten. You've learned a language. Discovered a new culture. Found out about life: theirs. Yours. Morning has become an adventure again. Sure, the hours are long and hard and the bread is lousy. But sometimes, putting bread in someone's mouth can be more rewarding to you than all the bread in your pocket.

The Peace Corps is alive and well.

Silver Skates favored

By Phil Raspano

The women's squads in intramurals are bulled in hockey and basketball with only one undefeated team in each sport. In hockey the Silver Skates look like early favorites in the basis of a big win over the Bad News Bears. Yet, Richard's pub is too strong to be left out contention.

In basketball the Bears seem to be the class of "A" League with wins over the Pub (2-1) and Mighty Meagher (3-1). In the "B" League, Little McGurk's team has a good record with wins over all other conference teams and seems to be the class of the league. In the men's intramurals there is little change in hockey with the Blades in "A" winning a big win over TBA II and playing SMA this week. The Dolis, Joe's and AID are looking forward to a busy schedule in the coming week. Backdoor "B" is coming off a tough loss to Bucky's Benders and plays both AID and Joe's this week.

There are only three unbeaten teams in "A" League basketball. They are Hungo's boys, Falstaff and Chuck Knutley's. A big game in college level basketball will be played between the two teams this Saturday.

The Lady Friars lost, 144 to UNH but later topped Colby, 44. The record this season stands at 4-3-1. PC's newly announced tri-captain for the "86 season are Cathy Connell, Dawn Acri and Cindy Sullivan. The Friars next host Boston on February 6.

PC crushed visiting Boston College, 76-36, Monday night. Captain Ross led the Lady Friars with 14 points. Strong defense and an aggressive offense, which consistently penetrated inside, accounted for the limited victory.

With eight minutes to go in the second half, Coach Gilfride sent in his freshman members. Sue Huston did a good job rebounding and scoring inside, and Linda Wagle led four fast breaks to retain PC's gigantic lead.

Trecy, Deegan place 3rd and 5th in Millrose Games

By Dave Ball

Gerry Deegan's crusade into the traveling new world of indoor running has been rewarded by his inexperience. His debut performance, just one week ago provided him with a splendid victory in the 3,600 meters of the Dartmouth Relays in 8:02. With this victory the confidence flowed last Friday night in New York at the famed Millrose Games, but the speed didn't.

A strenuous program of mileage apparently (two miles a week) aided him in his efforts, but the lack of speed work showed as he finished fifth in fifth in the star-studded two mile race.

On returning to PC it was obvious Deegan has given race much consideration, and he concludes, "I don't think I can go any faster but I couldn't get my legs to move any faster on the last four or five laps. I'm a little disappointed, but I've learned a lot. I know I need more speed work.

John Trecy's great natural strength is an asset to him in any situation, under any circumstances. John can convert to competing from a six man crosscountry race to a two mile indoor race with greatly contrasting in this and this he did. John's lack of speed work did not impede his performance, and the fact that he needed a fine third place in 8:32, just three seconds behind Deegan.

John said afterwards, "I ran the last half-mile of this race in 2:1, which is quite fast, and with more work I can run a lot faster." Along with Deegan, they can seriously rival the great English runner Nick Rune, who was victorious in their two mile race in 8:33.

Other highlights of the Millrose Games was a victory for Dick Burek in the famous Wannamaker Mile, a splendid victory in the 3,000 meters of the Dartmouth Relays in 8.02.

Recruitment at PC: Adams Talks

By John Mullane

It is a part of the business that has led a number of coaches to envy Washington and Lee. We are not a part of a coach's job, but it is necessary, in fact, essential to the success of a college basketball team.

Recruiting is what it is called, and it entails countless road trips by coaches and scouts, thousands of letters, telephone calls and personal appearances. It is the pursuit of attracting talented high schoolers to enroll at your school.

Over the years PC has had great success with recruiting efforts. This year, though, will be an important year. The Friars are losing six seniors, four of whom are starters.

In a recent interview assistant coach Jim Adams talked about PC's present recruiting efforts and college recruiting in general.

Cowl: Coach Adams, it seems like you have started your recruiting effort even earlier this year than in the past.

Adams: Yes, this year we probably got a later start than last year because the people usually are contacted back in May and June. Nick Macarthur normally handled this, but he left before that time of course.

So this year I was still heavily involved in finishing up last year's recruiting and getting the players we got, a lot of the early recruiting was done in May or early June were not done. So all of this was done during September when Vic Collucci and I started it. But we have been in contact with some personal contact with a number of kids in areas that we probably have not gone before.

We've had two kids visit us, which is early. That never happens. Both of these kids were contacted last year because we were recruiting their team-mates. So they knew us and we know them.

Cowl: The way college basketball is today, there is any year that you can sit back and say we don't have to go out and recruit a large number of people on the squad. Some years you have to go out and recruit harder this year particular because we're losing six people and out of that total six players, we have to get immediate replacements, especially up front.

Adams: Yes, we've involved with about a half a dozen kids with 6'4 or better, there aren't that many around, though. We've talked with about 10 kids 6'4 or 6'7 who are primarily forwards. We're starting to get a handle on numbers here. All of them have talked with them, visited them and given them the relationship about Providence College. As far as seeing them, we haven't seen all of them play as of yet. The kids of course, are going through their seasons. Once we see them in action, then we'll zero in on the players we want and think can help us.

Cowl: Coach, you mention selling. How do you sell PC?

Adams: Well, it's easy to sell our basketball program because we've had great success. A lot of the kids we go after, the big, glamorous schools are after also. So we have to try to convince them that PC will treat them as individuals, that they won't be numbers and that more personal attention will be given to them.

This is the type of kid we normally get. We are competing against a North Carolina or Maryland and their recruitments of 50,000 plus and beautiful dorms, if they look bad at PC, we want to go and find it. Therefore, the only thing we can do is sell ourselves and our image.

Cowl: Do you try to get recruits here during the basketball season?

Adams: Yes, we would like to get them here during the week to see the classroom situation. We would also like to have them see our play, but this is often difficult because of their playing. A lot of high school coaches, once their season starts, don't want their kids to visit colleges.

Where a lot of big schools get their visitations during the football season with a fall football stadium and social parties going that we adhere to. One rule is that you are not supposed to talk to a person more than three times, and I know that in many areas that is ignored.

And they have what is called "the bump," which is supposed to be a 12, how are you? How's school? game. But many times it goes into a 12 min- or half-hour selling job. And then the extra things you just surmise, I know it's going on and everybody knows it's going on, but there's no bona fide proof, because there are ways to get around it.

Cowl: How do you find out about recruiting violations?

Adams: Well, there are two ways, really. You can find out about many of them just as a result of seeing so many high school games. When we go to look at a senior, we're observing both teams playing and take note of the underclassmen. Also, there are recruiting forms. We belong to just one and get a list of names from them every year, but there are a number of them. There are also summer camps where you can find out about kids.

An incredible leap of 7'2½ inches was recorded by Franklin Jacobs in the high jump to set a new world record. For those of you who have no concept of this height, it is like attempting to jump the soccer posts in Gay Field. What is even more phenomenal is Jacobs' height. An average high jumper is 6'4, Jacobs is only 5'4.

The remainder of the track team will next be in action at the Princeton Relay. But the flu seems destined to prevent the two mile relay and four mile relay teams from competing. The still healthy Larry Reed is slated for the two mile. This sophomore from Manchester, N.H., in good condition, a time of 4:07 or better will not surprise anyone. He will be partnered by Eddie Hartstein, who did not compete in Dartmouth.

Well, it's that else). Peter Cooke and Moe Rafferty, along with Elke Byrne will run in the one mile.

It should be noted that Dan Dillon, who took this semester for personal reasons, won the International Trials in Georgia on Saturday. Dillon will now compete in the World Cross-Country Championships in Scotland in March. Treacy and Deegan will be competing also, but for Ireland. For a change, Dillon, Deegan and Treacy will not be on the same team, but they will return to PC next September. He'll be a welcome addition.

Mark McAndrew, on after. This is our disadvantage.

Cowl: What areas of the country are you presently recruiting in? Do you pretty much stay within the East?

Adams: Right, we stay pretty much here in the Northeast. We're involved with four or five kids from the Pittsburg area, three or four from the Albany area, and some kids from Connecticut and Massachusetts. We are also involved with some kids from the Washington and Virginia areas. We have a couple of contacts in Ohio and Michigan because of recommendations. Although we have talked to people in that area, it is primarily the East Coast.

Cowl: What about recruiting violations? Do you find many or is it mostly suspicion?

Adams: Most of it is just suspicion. There are certain rules that we adhere to. One rule is that you are not supposed to talk to a person more than three times, and I know that in many areas that is ignored.

PC hits road; road hits back

By John O'Hare

Providence College took its hoop show on the road this past week and while it wasn't as disastrous as, say, Baatan death march, it was Hannibal's march across the Alps, either. In short, PC's excursion into unfriendly territory ended up with a 50-49 white knuckle special over UMass and a dropped 78-68 decision to a tough DePaul team.

The Friars' record is now 16-2, and after eight straight wins, PC almost didn't make it to the site of their first loss. The current foul weather capital of the world, Chicago, was under about 13 inches of snow and up until Friday afternoon the possibilities of actually playing the game looked shaky. When the Black and White's afternoon flight from Green Airport was cancelled, PC got a bus to Logan Airport in Boston and caught the first flight out.

As for the game, PC was behind by seven at the half (39-32) but actually managed to trail in the second session with 1:22 left. They had been down by as many as 16. It wasn't to be, though, PC cut the lead to three, 18 points.

A crucial point of the DePaul strategy was keeping a tight hold on Williams, PC's offensive wheelhorse. Williams only got off 12 shots, scored just four points in the second half and finished with 12 for the night.

Soup Campbell was leading scorer for both clubs with 26. Bob Misevicius did a good defensive job on DP's behemoth, Dave Corrione. Both big men finished with 18 points.

The Friars' eight-game winning streak came to an end in the unfriendly wilds of Chicago. A very quick DePaul squad defeated Providence, 78-68, behind the 18-point performance of all-tourney center Dwight Williams. The Minutemen ran off leads of 10-2 and 14-6, but thanks to some more artistry by Williams before the intermission, PC only trailed 30-27 at the half. Afterwards, the game stayed low scoring, and though he had 14 points in the game, the winning basket was his only one of the second half.

ECAC playoffs in sight for hockey Friars

By Al Palladino

Yes, hockey fans, there is a light at the end of the tunnel. After a bleak 3-9 start, the ECAC playoffs are within the Friars' sights. Owing to their third consecutive win ahardt-fought 5-3 win over Northeastern University, Providence finds themselves in eighth place with a 7-7-1 conference record (10-11-1 overall).

Led by Dave Dorsett's two power-play goals and the splendid goaltending of Bill Milner, PC was able to withstand a third period fluke rally for the victory. The game, played before 2,306 partisans at Schneider Arena, was marred by a third period brawl between NU's Bob France and the Friars' Tom Ryers. Each received game disqualifications. Play was delayed 15 minutes so that the referees could decide who did and who did not belong in the penalty box.

It was a Providence power play which told the difference. Scoring all three times they had the man advantage, PC jumped out to a
