Field house question
Help sought from congress

Student representatives to the field house committee, Cyndy Sullivan and Dan Calandra addressed Student Congress members during Sunday’s meeting. They requested the assistance and support of the Student Congress in gathering student opinion regarding the proposed field house. The concept of constructing such a complex was suggested by an accreditation team visiting the College last spring. A questionnaire is being formulated to determine what facilities student view as being important parts of the complex.

“It’s essential that we find out exactly what the students want and why they think this is important,” stated Sullivan. “These results will then be presented to the administration and staff.”

The questionnaire will be distributed via student mailboxes and can be turned in at the Information Desk or in lower Slavin and can be turned in at the Information Desk or in lower Slavin and can be turned in at the Information Desk or in lower Slavin and can be turned in at the Information Desk or in lower Slavin and can be turned in at the Information Desk or in lower Slavin.

Nader at PC
Together we will matter

America’s foremost social critic unassumingly passed by a steel door marked “private” at T.F. Green Airport Terminal last Saturday afternoon. Nader then stepped from the reporters and camera men who continued to press around him to his hotel room in preparation for his press conference.

Nader, responsible for at least six federal consumer laws, end less advances in pollution control and advertising credibility, and the recall of millions of defective vehicles, shuffled his way around television cameras and immediately began to hand out his newsletters on the 1977 Congressional pay raise, the Senate Finance Committee and nuclear power plants.

“Students lack,” said Nader, “a basic sensitivity because they are too remote from the agitators of the human condition.” In an effort to obtain a broader sense of what is happening outside the college community, Nader suggested that students tour industrial facilities, hospitals, cancer wards and slums.

Nader feels that students lead unfulfilling lives out of boredom with passive educational environments. “There is too much introversion in today’s campuses. Students must learn to dissolve their own problems and exchange ideas on various aspects of college life,” he said.

The Student Leadership Conference was a great success, commented president Ellen Barnes. The conference, held last weekend, was designed to allow students leaders to exchange ideas on various aspects of concern related to coeducational development. The group is concerned with the special needs of the entire student population. In the first four years of its existence the committee dealt with problems of women, who were relatively new to the College, and also increased athletic funding and infra mory improvements for both men and women.

The committee is composed of 10 members altogether — five faculty members and five student members. All female Jackie Kienan, the director of the Counseling Center, is currently serving as chairman. Other members include Dr. Josephine Ruggiro, of the sociology department, Dr. Judith Janis, of modern languages, Sister Leslie Straub, of psychology, and Ona Pieri, head nurse of the Grant Information.

By Tricia Bruno

Nader at PC
Together we will matter

America’s foremost social critic unassumingly passed by a steel door marked “private” at T.F. Green Airport Terminal last Saturday afternoon. Nader then stepped from the reporters and camera men who continued to press around him to his hotel room in preparation for his press conference.

Nader, responsible for at least six federal consumer laws, endless advances in pollution control and advertising credibility, and the recall of millions of defective vehicles, shuffled his way around television cameras and immediately began to hand out his newsletters on the 1977 Congressional pay raise, the Senate Finance Committee and nuclear power plants.

Considerably grayer since the 1965 publication of Unsafe at Any Speed, Ralph Nader is no less a warehouse of limitless facts and figures. Once seated, he proceeded to speak out against Congress, which he regards as an impartial force. Nader believes members of Congress maintain a double-standard attitude: Each year Americans are asked to tighten their belts, while “on February 20, 1977, a student (of Congress) received a whopping $29,000 salary increase, giving our senators and representatives a drastic upward adjustment from $44,600 to $73,900.”

Nader then warned of the possibility of catastrophe that could destroy the entire state of Rhode Island should a nuclear power plant be constructed. Leakage of radioactive materials could result in cancer, sabotage and many other unpredictable accidents which would endanger thousands of humans if nuclear power is implemented.

Nader proposed the utilization of solar energy collectors. Concentrated power in large gas and oil producers is inherently unpredictable, he said, and the use of solar energy will result in consumer, corporate, power in Congress.

Nader addressed these same issues on campus to Providence College students on Wednesday, November 8, 1978. He self-consciously approached the podium with his makeshift briefcase, a white shopping bag, dangling by his side. The bleacher-filling crowd applauded their number one political leader, and Nader then shed the low-profil image he had assumed throughout the day and slipped naturally into a sarcastic condemnation against the excessive power of giant corporations.

Students lack,” said Nader, “a basic sensitivity because they are too remote from the agitators of the human condition.” In an effort to obtain a broader sense of what is happening outside the college community, Nader suggested students tour industrial facilities, hospitals, cancer wards and slums.

Nader feels that students lead unfulfilling lives out of boredom with passive educational environments. “There is too much introversion in today’s campuses. Students must learn to dissolve their own problems and expose themselves instead to studies that challenge analytic skills and value systems. Social problems should become personal problems.”

Lack of self-confidence results from idle minds. Nader insisted,
The body shop
The doctor is in!!

Some people will tell you that the infirmary is "the place" whenever you need help, while others will tell you that it's "the place" to definitely avoid. To each his own. All we can say is, judge for yourself.

The infirmary treats anything from gliccus on the here to help you, the student, with administering medication or by bandaging a cut. There are things which cannot be treated by a band-aid

Personal problems, medical questions. We try to honestly answer and try to help. Remember, we like our job and we like being here with you. We enjoy giving that special tender loving care, because we know that everyone needs it now and then.

The following are common ailments that the infirmary sees weekly and is usually done to treat them:

1. Sprains ("Oh, those football injuries") - As a precaution, an x-ray is often suggested to rule out the possibility of a fracture. Ice is applied for the first 24 hours to help reduce the pain and swelling. The affected area should be elevated after 24 to 48 hours, warm compresses should be applied, and you should be able to move the area as much as possible without causing pain.

2. Cuts and scratches ("I fell down coming out of the Rat") - Practically all wounds bleed, some more than others, but don't panic - it's usually a small cut. Apply pressure to the wound, and if possible, elevate the GIMP. Cleanse with hydrogen peroxide, apply antiseptic ointment, and bandage.

3. Puncture wound ("I was stabbed!") - A puncture wound is usually caused by a nail or wire. Gently squeeze the wound to make it bleed in order to remove any rust. Cleanse with hydrogen peroxide, and apply antiseptic

See BODY, Page 2

News

Student Leadership Conference: A valuable weekend

By Maureen O'Kane

Providence College's first annual Student Leadership Exchange Conference was held this past weekend, November 13 to 15. Approximately 90 students from 29 institutions in the New England area attended the event, which consisted of sharing ideas regarding issues pertinent to college living. Rotating seminars were held all day Saturday and Sunday. Students from PC and other regional colleges listen to keynote addresses during Saturday's Student Leadership Exchange Conference.

The need to listen. We realize this fact and have incorporated student representation on all standing committees in the College. Father Peterson expressed that students have representation on all standing committees, with the exception of the Committee on Rails and Tenants.

Father Peterson expressed the view that students can teach each other and that the infirmary is "the place" to definitely involve students. The combined thinking of everyone results in the best solution to problems. We don't always agree with the student view-point, but we always make it a point to listen." The weekend proved to be a valuable experience for all involved.

The conference went over very well, stated Student Congress president Ellen Barnes. "A lot of exchanging of ideas took place and we picked up some worthwhile information. This is only a beginning, though. We'd like to hold this on a yearly basis, and we'd like to contact a few of the schools that attended." Following the seminars, a buffet was offered in Martel, and a complaints ledger attended the dinner and addressed the assembled regarding the role of students in the academic process.

The concept of the weekend itself was met with overwhelming positive response from visiting students. They were especially impressed with the friendly atmosphere with which they were received. As Dimitri commented, "I think this weekend was very beneficial." He added, "I wish I could tell you how many new ideas and thoughts I found. They were very cordial and welcoming.

Around the Campus

National Education Week

The Student National Education Association (SNEA) of PC is sponsoring a week of activities (November 13-17) as a part of National Education Week. The events begin on Monday, November 13, with a senior advising hour during which faculty members will discuss the various positions in education. For "Make-It, Take-It" workshops will be held. Throughout the week a membership drive for SNEA will take place, and room numbers of the week's events will be posted.

International Festival

The Providence College International Society is having an international festival this Monday. The event, which will be held in the College Library, is in celebration of the first anniversary of the college.

A reception and dance held in the Edward Naylor Memorial Hall on the evening. Sunday's agenda includes a buffet and a dance at the Whiskey Springs. The event is open to all students and is organized according to the theme of the weekend. The money raised will be donated to the political science department.

Money!

Campus celebrations have been completed. They were especially enjoyable for students such as Welch or Mary McIntyre in the Student Congress Office.

Registration for the second semester of the current academic year will begin on November 13 through November 15. Students will register each day. Place of registration and time will be posted in the College Office of Student Affairs. Student registration cards may be obtained from the Office of Student Affairs, chairman or program ad

Political hopefuls

By Celia Kettle

On Thursday, November 2, the Providence College Republicans sponsored an informal wine and cheese gathering featuring a few of Rhode Island's political candidates.

The concept of the weekend itself was met with overwhelming positive response from visiting students. They were especially impressed with the friendly atmosphere with which they were received. As Dimitri commented, "I think this weekend was very beneficial." He added, "I wish I could tell you how many new ideas and thoughts I found. They were very cordial and welcoming.

People in an upper middle-income strong and strong, they could raise even more by the tuition tax credits, explained Brown University President Allen Alford.

Line Alford, Republican candidate for governor, has served as a political consultant for several years. Alford acted as public administrator in the town of Lincoln for six years. He feels this experience has helped him to become familiar with townspeople, thus allowing him to be a good candidate for the office.

The first candidate present was Bill Dimitri, who introduced himself as being part of a new generation of political leaders. Dimitri expressed that he is a new generation of political leaders. Dimitri expressed that he is a

"The only reason for running for the office of attorney general is to restore peace and justice to Rhode Island. There is no justice now because the criminal justice system has failed," stated Dimitri. Dimitri has been working to clean up the state's criminal justice system to give people a sense of security. "Some people have lost their sense of security due to the crime rate, which has risen 33 per cent in recent years. Dimitri also supports tuition tax credits for education in addition to his campaign for Senator Pell's Basic Education Opportunity Grant (BEOG) Program. Reynolds states there would be increased government spending in expanding the Pell Grant in the area of student aid.

At the present time, there are approximately 60 positions available. For more information, contact Karen Lunnari, assistant director of financial aid.

Middle East Talk

Thursday, November 9

Assistant Secretary of State for Near Eastern and South Asian Affairs Harold B. Saunders will give a keynote address at the Cornerstone event in the Middle East Talk Series. The event will be held in the Cornerstone Center Pit on Canal Street in downtown Providence at 8 p.m. His talk will follow the upcoming presentations at International House on Thursday evening, with Hope and Angela Street.

A panel discussion will be held at the following Tuesday, November 14, at the Brown University's Alumnae Hall on photography and activism in Providence. Included in the panel will be Dr. Zygmun J. Friedman of the department of political science.

Reynolds, candidate for the office of attorney general, has served as a political consultant for several years. Alford acted as public administrator in the town of Lincoln for six years. He feels this experience has helped him to become familiar with townspeople, thus allowing him to be a good candidate for the office.
PROVIDENCE COLLEGE

STUDENT EVALUATION

600 Douglas Ave., Prov.

FREE DELIVERY TO PC

Delivery from 4:30 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Call 1-5-2251 - SPECIAL THIS WEEK - See Below For Details

6. Bee stings ("The killer bee is on the way") - Sit down and don't move. You may have to see a doctor. 7. Wood clot - Apply cold compression to the affected area under cold water. 8. Animal bites ("There are thousands of them") - Sit down and call the police. Someone will probably help you get medical care.

Chris Correia of INFACT advocates Nestle boycott

By Kathy DelSignore

Chris Correia, freshman biology major, said he was surprised to be asked why he hopes to get other members of the PC community involved in a boycott of all Nestle products.

Correia stated, "Whether the people in the third world countries are educated or not, what Nestle is doing is unethical because they're promoting a product to an area where it can't be used effectively. Also, the promotional campaigns are so intense and the mothers want to do things the modern way so they're even wanting to educate the mothers. Nestle can convince them the other way."

The answer, then, is to boycott all Nestle products and to keep sending them letters. Whenever Nestle receives a letter, said Correia, they usually send out public relations materials in return. The combination of the boycott and the postage they must pay Nestle results in a large volume of letters on the subject, according to Correia, which in turn forces Nestle to change their tactics.

Correia feels boycotting Nestle won't present a problem to anyone, because "there are other products like it."

Some Nestle products are Taster's Choice, Nescafe, Nescafe Mountain Spring Water, Libby vegetables, Soupmate, Decaf and Deer Park Mountain Spring Water.

Why boycott Nestle, you're probably asking. Well, because Nestle, the second largest corporation in the world, according to Correia, is the primary distributor of these formulas, which are being pushed with hard-sell techniques on unsuspecting mothers.

Why boycott Nestle? Why not just bring the powder formulas being sold in the third world countries? Well, the problem is that the Nestle formula is being diluted for use in feeding their babies. The nestle product is not suitable for young babies and by the time they reach bottle feeding age, the babies have already been exposed to it. It produces diseases. Third, there is no way to handle the bacteria but in babies it's contaminated. The adults are able to handle the bacteria but in babies it's contaminated. The adults are able to

continues from Page 2

and Leigh Hance '81, an english major from Meriden, Conn., '80, a health service administration major, both from Wethersfield, Conn. Cohen said that the Women's Liaison Committee is the key representative of women at PC and as a member she would do her best to represent the women on campus.

A few of the committee's accomplishments are increased security, support for Dave Hall's campaign and an increase in the population of women on campus. Cohen also said that the committee's main goal is to help the women feel more comfortable and to become more involved on campus.
Student Congress completes two successful ventures

Student Congress should be commended for two programs they implemented this week. The first, the faculty survey, is no stranger to Student Congress, but to a student interested in actual inaugural for the Students' apathy used correctly, can be a real aid to read. However, these hurdles make it somewhat unattractive faculty survey, is no they implemented this week. The credited for two programs instructors. It may look boring or must be overcome. The survey, if used correctly, can be a real aid to a student interested in researching and comparing instructors. It may look boring or inscrutable, but it really isn't, and the only way to get the most out of the survey is to pore over it. This will take time but it will be well worth it.

The exchange of ideas at the student leadership conference had to be beneficial for all schools involved. This is an event which should be repeated for years to come. From a purely public relations viewpoint, an event like this had to be a bit plus for Providence College. More importantly, it provided an excellent forum for comparison of various programs in the attending schools and allowed for problem-solving to take place on a large-scale basis. The people involved in both these projects should be commended.

Students' apathy robs College

This past Tuesday, the citizens of the State of Rhode Island went to the polls to decide what politicians and platforms they wanted. Unfortunately, Providence College students were not as much a part of that process as they could have been.

By choosing either to remain apathetic to the entire voting process or to stick to their own partisan politics, PC students in effect robbed the College from attaining a more active role in area politics. As The Cowl stated earlier, during the school year we are de facto residents of Rhode Island. As students, we spend nine months of the year in Providence, which translates over four years should make us cognizant of local and state politics.

October's voter registration drive was a dismal failure. Only 80-odd students bothered to register. A substantial voting block of 1600 votes is now unattainable. This means is that programs that are important to the development of the College like the Huxley Avenue question and other issues demanding immediate attention could remain unresolved.

Who's to blame for this situation? It falls squarely on the shoulders of each and every student at PC. The really scary part of this morality tale is that often an apathetic student develops into an apathetic citizen. College endeavors to teach in many things both in and out of the classroom. The fact remains that the student population at Providence College is ignorant of the basic citizenship skill of voting.

Halloween at Providence College this year was a well-attended and more importantly well-organized event. Both the Halloween party in Slavin, sponsored by the BOG and the tunnel tour run by the Knights of Columbus were successful.

This was the first time that the tunnels were officially opened for inspection by the student body, and from the frightened looks of the participants, it appeared that October 31 was the best possible time for the event. Considering that it takes a promise of free beer and pizza to get students to turn out for even a political rally, it was rather encouraging to note that the tunnel tours were so well attended. There was no beer available, just an honest-to-goodness scare session through ‘haunted passageways', with all proceeds from the event going to charity. The K of C's Dore-Fennell tunnel tour should be made an annual event.

Meanwhile, at Slavin Center, a good time was had by all at the spooky gathering. But what has been a problem at recent Slavin parties, destruction and vandalism, was largely avoided. Perhaps this is a harbinger of things to come. But whatever the outcome, both events were an obvious and worthwhile change from the usual fare.

Letters

S.L.E.C. successful

Dear Editor,

Last weekend, the Student Congress sponsored a Student Leadership Exchange Conference. There were over 80 students in attendance, representing 15 Northeastern colleges and universities. It was a great success and a valuable experience for all those participating. This conference facilitated the exchange of ideas, information and solutions to many of the problems that are faced by all universities and colleges today. The success of this conference is a result of the help of many people. I would like to take the opportunity to publicly thank all those who helped us: Father Peterson, Mr. Byron, Mrs. Greene, Student Affairs, Residence Office, Mr. Murphy and the Raymond Cabrierta Staff, BOG, seminar leaders and the Student Congress.

Again thank you for all your support in helping us to make this conference such a success.

Sincerely,
Ellen A. Barnes '79
President, Student Congress

The next COWL will be published November 29

Ring weekend regrets

Halloween hailed as good clean fun

Published each full week of school during the academic year by Providence College, River Avenue and Eaton Street, Providence, R.I. 02918. Second class postage paid at Providence, R.I., Slavin Center, P.O. Box 281, 865-2124.

Editor-in-Chief: John A. O'Hare '79
Managing Editor: Margaret A. Brodeur '79
News Editor: Kathleen M. Hansen '80
Features Editor: Maureen J. O'Hare '80
Sports Editor: Stephen F. Lalimer '79
Photography Editor: Daniel J. Lund '80
Advertising Manager: Teresa Cabral '81
Circulation Manager: John Kennally '80
College Advisor: John A. McMahon, O.P.

General Assignment Staff: Dave Amslar, Brad Brown, Tricia Bruno, Kathryn DeSipio, Cathy Smith, Louis DiPrete, Beth Vollano, Lori Evangelos, Celia Keitle, Kathleen O'Neill, Mark O'Bourke, Carol Persi, Bob Ratcliffe, Diane Ruane and Peter Walsh.

Sports Staff: Dave Ball, Mike David, John Mullaney, Don Siegel and Dee Terrinca

Photography Staff: Kevin Barrett, Susan Byrnes, Bob Derozin, Mark Donovan, Fred Lagomarsino, Steve Lichtfels, Steve Murphy, Maureen Pintoz, Norma-Jean Moglio and Bob Petton.

Art and Graphics Staff: Tom McMammon.

Circulation Staff: Tom Noble, John Deady and Steve Riley.

Subscription Rate: $4.00 a year

The opinions expressed herein are the opinions of the editorial board and do not necessarily represent the opinions of the administration or the student body of Providence College.
Thoughts while shaving:

Ring reflections

By Bradford Brown

We are fast approaching a time that is near and dear to the hearts of all juniors. That event is, of course, Ring Weekend. How many notices have you received in your mailbox since sophomore year? Quite a few, eh? Would you like to: be on a committee, help design a ring, work on bids and favors, arrange for the various bands, find a spot to hold the events, buy a bid, sell a bid, choose a ring, pay for a ring? The list is endless.

All of this points to the fact that organizing Ring Weekend is a very monumental task. There exists an endless sea of details with which to cope. Financing, bands, menus, rings, bids, partisan extenuates. You name it and the core committee has most likely dealt with it. It is with this in mind that the officers, representatives, and especially the core committee of the Class of 1980 should be commended. They put a lot of time and effort into this affair trying to insure a good time for all. On the other hand, the personal rewards for this time for all. On the other hand, the personal rewards for this effort, I'm sure, have been few.

For the part most the Street-like activity has ended. The street fighting over who will sit where, how and why, in vitally gone also, although there will most likely be a few small-scale skirmishes before the Ring Fling rush is over.

At any rate with the B.O.G. Holloween party now behind us we have rounded the clubhouse turn and we are all headed for the stretch. Whatever category you may fit you know that Ring Weekend promises to be a great time for all.

It only comes once in four years. So beginning November 16, the party begins. Drink up.

Class of 1980

Frosh chronicles:

Betrofied by an upperclassman

By Lori Evangelas

In this hectic, transient life of ours we must create time to contemplate "the beautiful", or as the saying goes, "to take time to smell the flowers", if we are to maintain any semblance of sanity. However, this is one of the more difficult things to do as we are so apt to complain and criticize than we are to replace and praise.

Keeping these thoughts foremost in my mind, I would like to recognize one of the more beautiful things in my life as a freshman, and it is the "big guy" on campus—the upperclassman, whether he be sophomore, junior or senior. In most respects, credit must be given where is due, and it seems overwhelmingly overdue at this particular point in time.

I hope I speak for the majority of the Class of '82 when I extend appreciation to those of you upperclassmen who have taken it to heart to supervise our assimilation into college life, a process which will be completed shortly because of your concern as mediators. In all my preconceived notions and expectations of college life, it never once occurred to me that I would find such unique friendships among upperclassmen.

Forgive me for formulating such an unjustifiable bias—I was wrong. Moreover, this newfound friendship is not nearly of the superficial sort; it does not exist in actual words or good intentions but in abundance of generous and most gracious acts.

If you are of the common belief that actions speak for themselves, then you shall find the voice of our peers most loud and clear as I did. I can recall one incident not too long ago when I had literally come to wit's end. Wit's end, one of many ailments occurring among college students, is characterized by a total weariness of mind and spirit. The sickness has its prime time in the desolate hours of late night—early morning.

I had been futilely struggling to organize an essay to no avail. I gave up and resigned myself to go to sleep until I found a sympathetic listener in an upperclassman. Like most freshmen, I remember very few last names and shall herein refer to this person only by her first name, Marie. Marie astounded me when she offered her assistance. Together we managed to develop a starting point of introduction.

Days later when I once again met Marie, I learned a most astonishing thing: that very, right, hours before she helped me, she had received news of her grandmother's sudden death.

Under the circumstances, I find it incredible that she found it within her heart to help me when her need was much greater than mine. All I can offer her is a mere "thanks", a word which does not seem to adequately express the depth of emotion it encompasses.

My experience, I know, seems extraordinary, and perhaps yours is not so dramatic, but have you ever considered that silent but most congenial upperclassman from your hometown who seems to share in your triumphs and sorrows? It seems bizarre that in all your years of high school together you never made an effort to become friends, whereas now, all of a sudden, it seems natural that you readily seek out each other's company.

There seems to be an unstarted alliance bonding your lives into a most unique friendship, more than likely it generates from a common background, i.e., high school and friends. Their life is somewhat of a parallel to yours. I can find their deeds as selfish and empty as they are sometimes portrayed.

Providence College must be partly responsible for this outstanding building of character. Methinks possibly something, somewhere, is being done right.

In essence, are we the self-serving generation that we are presumed to be? More and more I find this condemnation contradictory. Surely, as Aristotle once said, "Friendship is more important than justice, because when men are friends, justice is unnecessary, and a friend will give the other his due."

In conclusion, I find it most appropriate to quote the "Searching for Something Meaningful" poem written by Thomas Black. "I looked for my soul but my soul I could not see, I looked for my friend but my friend eluded me, I looked for my friend and then I found all three!"
When Nader speaks, does Providence listen?

By David Amaral

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader made an appearance on the Providence College campus recently to profess his safety and savings philosophy. After his talk, several Cowl reporters were able to chat with him and give him a quick tour of the PC campus.

Mr. Nader refused to follow any of our campus paths on the tour because, he said, "They are lined with trees. It is autumn, you know, and one runs the risk of being struck upon the head by a falling leaf."

Nader recommended that wear a safety belt.

"Sure," he told the man. "All the little pieces that are cut off will die."

Along the tour he asked us, as student consumers, what our main item of purchase was, "Food? Clothing? Books?"

"No," we corrected him, "beer!"

Mr. Nader was extremely interested in this because he had done some research on PC mixer beer, of which he termed "Waterus-downus."

He pulled out a little chart with numbers and lines all over it.

"Normally," he said, "the leaves will fall when it is autumn. You don't have to wear a costume to get in (it cost $1.00 with a costume and $2.00 without), most people decided to go all out this year as some crazy outfits were displayed." Jim Leonard, one of the people who helped run the night, said he was surprised by the originality of most costumes.

"This year a lot of people came in with different ideas, which is good because half the fun is seeing what everyone else is wearing. My favorite was the couple with the "car," reflected Leonard.

"It wasn't a hard event to put on; it took some planning, but I think it was worth it. If there are any problems with security and everyone seemed to enjoy themselves. The only thing that make it from going to the B.O.G. and keep for other things on campus like the fine arts series and the Nader talk," Leonard explained.

The two bands who played at the party were Molly McGregor in '64 Hall and Bill O'Donoghue in Alumni Caf. It seemed during the night that most people were upstairs in '64 Hall or in front of the information desk. McGregor was more popular as a band, andtry to find a place to dance was impossible at 10 p.m.

At 10 p.m. everyone gathered around the Pit for the judging of the costumes. Judges were Father Keegan, Father McPhail, Father Dabash. As the costumes filed by, many weird and scary sights were seen. There was a group of gavagies from the jungle, the bad witch from Oz, and the talking trees, who got annoyed if their leaves were touched.

A $25 prize was given out for the best costume in each of the three categories. The anonymous Tin Man, who was keeping an eye on the wicked witch, won the prize for the best single non-human. For the best couple, Luke Skywalker and his friend the gorilla won first prize. The hardest decision of the night for the judges was in the group prize. After much discussion and hearing for their lives, they awarded the check to the cave men from Stephen Hall, who seemed pretty fired up for the evening.

Others who were favorites and came up with unusual ideas were the cheerleaders from "State U," with Roy DePetro as captain, who did a cheer for the judges; the Roller Derby squad who broke their smiles by calling the "coach," who seemed very concerned, but didn't want to see the Wild Women from Wild Street, who seemed pretty quiet. The characters from movies Star Wars and The Wizard of Oz were there as well as many celebrities who happened to be in town for the night. Among them were Jimmy Carter and his impersonators and Iain Amin, who were seen checking out the Wild Women during the judging. Carter, obviously doing some campaigning for the local Democrats, kept smiling and throwing peanuts to everyone he saw.

Also in attendance were Uncle Sam, Bull Man (who said he flew in from St. Louis and still had tired arms) and Clark Kent, who was covering the party for the Daily Planet. I compared notes with Superman, I mean Clark, and he said he had never seen so many weird people outside of a comic book. He added, "I'm having a great time, and Slavin's a great place for a party. With all of the phone booths, I can change fast." He then hurried off, mumbling something about meeting Lois Lane in the rain.

Some other people who stood out in the crowd were Mr. Canada, the ladybug from Smith Street, the topolino girls and Raggedy Ann from Aquinas, and the fairy godmother, who looked like she could grant any wish of mine.

One other interesting costume was a tube of toothpaste, who must have remembered how his mother always made him brush his teeth after eating all the candy on Halloween. Even the disco duck was there with some of his disco queens, but he seemed a little uneasy with disco music to dance to.

Father McPhail, who helped the B.O.G. running the event, said no damage was done to the union. "It was a very good crowd and we had no trouble at all. It's one of the events I enjoy going to because I know there won't be much trouble; everyone comes to have a good time and not just to drink.

He added, "As the people come through the door, I look at all the costumes, and if I think it's good, I'll ask you to come to the Pit around 10 p.m. We'll award all of our events on Halloween night and use the whole union.

When asked if he thought a lot of students didn't attend the party because it was on a weeknight and they had to study, Father McPhail replied, "There was that problem, and some teachers asked me the same question. But it's hard to dress up three days before Halloween and say that if tonight it falls on a Thursday, we probably would move it to Friday night."

Father McPhail said that his favorite costumes were the "girls with the leaves and the guys who came in late dressed as Arabs."

One final note: As I was leaving Slavin, I saw a few of the Roller Derby girls from Pembroke Avenue sitting on the steps of Slavin with the "coach," and they still looked dejected, and a little cold.

By Ned Cumminskey

PC's annual Halloween party was held last Tuesday night in Slavin. The event was a success, and everyone who attended agreed that they had a great time. Although you didn't have to wear a costume to get in (it cost $1.00 with a costume and $2.00 without), most people decided to go all out this year as some crazy outfits were displayed. Jim Leonard, one of the people who helped run the night, said he was surprised by the originality of most costumes.

"This year a lot of people came in with different ideas, which is good because half the fun is seeing what everyone else is wearing. My favorite was the couple with the "car," reflected Leonard.

"It wasn't a hard event to put on; it took some planning, but I think it was worth it. If there are any problems with security and everyone seemed to enjoy themselves. The only thing that make it from going to the B.O.G. and keep for other things on campus like the fine arts series and the Nader talk," Leonard explained.

The two bands who played at the party were Molly McGregor in '64 Hall and Bill O'Donoghue in Alumni Caf. It seemed during the night that most people were upstairs in '64 Hall or in front of the information desk. McGregor was more popular as a band, and try to find a place to dance was impossible at 10 p.m.

At 10 p.m. everyone gathered around the Pit for the judging of the costumes. Judges were Father Keegan, Father McPhail, Father Dabash. As the costumes filed by, many weird and scary sights were seen. There was a group of gavagies from the jungle, the bad witch from Oz, and the talking trees, who got annoyed if their leaves were touched.

A $25 prize was given out for the best costume in each of the three categories. The anonymous Tin Man, who was keeping an eye on the wicked witch, won the prize for the best single non-human. For the best couple, Luke Skywalker and his friend the gorilla won first prize.

The hardest decision of the night for the judges was in the group prize. After much discussion and hearing for their lives, they awarded the check to the cave men from Stephen Hall, who seemed pretty fired up for the evening.

Others who were favorites and came up with unusual ideas were the cheerleaders from "State U," with Roy DePetro as captain, who did a cheer for the judges; the Roller Derby squad who broke their smiles by calling the "coach," who seemed very concerned, but didn't want to see the Wild Women from Wild Street, who seemed pretty quiet. The characters from movies Star Wars and The Wizard of Oz were there as well as many celebrities who happened to be in town for the night. Among them were Jimmy Carter and his impersonators and Iain Amin, who were seen checking out the Wild Women during the judging. Carter, obviously doing some campaigning for the local Democrats, kept smiling and throwing peanuts to everyone he saw.

Also in attendance were Uncle Sam, Bull Man (who said he flew in from St. Louis and still had tired arms) and Clark Kent, who was covering the party for the Daily Planet. I compared notes with Superman, I mean Clark, and he said he had never seen so many weird people outside of a comic book. He added, "I'm having a great time, and Slavin's a great place for a party. With all of the phone booths, I can change fast." He then hurried off, mumbling something about meeting Lois Lane in the rain.

Some other people who stood out in the crowd were Mr. Canada, the ladybug from Smith Street, the topolino girls and Raggedy Ann from Aquinas, and the fairy godmother, who looked like she could grant any wish of mine.

One other interesting costume was a tube of toothpaste, who must have remembered how his mother always made him brush his teeth after eating all the candy on Halloween. Even the disco duck was there with some of his disco queens, but he seemed a little uneasy with disco music to dance to.

Father McPhail, who helped the B.O.G. running the event, said no damage was done to the union. "It was a very good crowd and we had no trouble at all. It's one of the events I enjoy going to because I know there won't be much trouble; everyone comes to have a good time and not just to drink.

He added, "As the people come through the door, I look at all the costumes, and if I think it's good, I'll ask you to come to the Pit around 10 p.m. We'll award all of our events on Halloween night and use the whole union.

When asked if he thought a lot of students didn't attend the party because it was on a weeknight and they had to study, Father McPhail replied, "There was that problem, and some teachers asked me the same question. But it's hard to dress up three days before Halloween and say that if tonight it falls on a Thursday, we probably would move it to Friday night."

Father McPhail said that his favorite costumes were the "girls with the leaves and the guys who came in late dressed as Arabs."

One final note: As I was leaving Slavin, I saw a few of the Roller Derby girls from Pembroke Avenue sitting on the steps of Slavin with the "coach," and they still looked dejected, and a little cold.
Life in an old time mansion

By Jeff Esposito

Living off campus is not such an unusual thing quite a few upperclassmen do it for either economical or social reasons. Some freshmen this year are doing it out of necessity. Quite a few kids have been through it - and the majority enjoy it.

Five upperclassmen (Rich Bailey, John Patch, Pete Riccitelli, Jud Koss and "Matt Caulfield) are living in a bona fide, authentic, turn-of-the-century mansion.

Bailey related why he and his friends chose this type of lifestyle.

The major benefit of living off campus whether it be in a shack or a mansion, is an increase of personal responsibility, a sincere feeling of being on your own. For example, "You eat what you want, and we eat pretty well."

(Bailey worked as a cook at a country club this summer.)

What about the lack of campus life? "We're only seven miles away and we're all very comfortable with one another." It seems camaraderie affects it somewhat. And, of course, there are the parties. According to Bailey, they beat going to the Rat for a pitcher or two or three or four.

When you drive up to take a look at the place, you will be pretty surprised. It isn't the sort of mansion you'd put down South in the middle of a plantation, but the first thing that strikes you is a sense of decrepit grandeur, a sort of aged dignity.

In the front hall there is a grand mirror and off to the right is a small statue of a reeling cherub. This opens into a large sitting room complete with a stone mantelpiece. Upon this mantelpiece, in a room where all the woodwork was hand-crafted - from the banisters to the paneling to the library case in the adjoining room - sits a beer trophy.

Chandeliers abound and you can't help thinking about how beautiful it must have been in its prime. The upstairs is one room after another, with each of the five guys getting their own spacious bedroom.

The extras that come with this place (as if it needed any) range from an authentic upstairs wallsafe (unopenable, but still a great conversation piece), to a live-in caretaker who doubles as a maintenance man at no extra cost.

It still belongs to the original owners, who rather than sell, rent to college students. Providence College students have lived there for the past three years. That makes it somewhat of a tradition, and in that case, it needs a name. But what? "Animal House," Bailey suggested.

The men in front of their famous mansion.

The men in front of their famous mansion.

The Board of Governors presents

N.R.B.Q.

with guest magician

Peter Sosna

Friday, November 10

7 & 10 p.m.

in

'64 Hall

Tickets on sale at Slavin Information Desk

Listen for ticket and album giveaways on WDOM
We Scalabrinians have for the past 90 years.
We are a religious community of priests and brothers dedicated to the spiritual and social care of migrants and ethnics. Presently we are helping more than 2 million needy and neglected migrants in 18 countries around the world.

To continue helping these people, we need others
to join us.
If you would like to learn more about the Scalabrinians, and quite possibly more about yourself, simply fill out the coupon below and return it today.

The choir boys?

By Jeff Espolito

Where are the tenors, the bass? No music perfs! Just Saturday
To lift voice is good for body and
and soul.
To lift voice is good for body and
and soul.

Continued from Page 1

Nader

Continued from Page 1

and history of their instruments.
and history of their instruments.

The internationally renowned classic guitar and mandolin musicians performed Saturday night, November 4, in the Hall.

Selections from the concert
featured Beethoven’s “Sonatina for Mandolin”, Bach’s “Prelude and Gigue from the First Cello Suite”, the “Suite in C Minor” by de Visee, Ambrosius “Suite
Galante”, and the “Duo for Mandolin and Guitar” of Aperghis.

Sigfried Behrend’s “Zu Ma Gi-Ten H” was a strange assortment of disjunct notes and unconventional noises - sometimes frenzied, sometimes timid. The piece had no measures, no time signatures. Behrend has been called the wild man of the music
world. “Sonatina in D” of Filippo
Gragnani was a smooth,
romantic piece, simply lovely.
The duo has studied in Europe
under German guitar virtuoso Sigfried Behrend and the renowned mandolin authority Vincenzo Haddeke. Mark Davis is now a guitar instructor at Rhode Island College and Marilyn Mair teaches mandolin at Brown University. In addition to concert appearances, the duo offers workshops focusing on the music of disjointed notes and unconventional noises - sometimes frenzied, sometimes timid. The
piece had no measures, no time
signatures. Behrend has been called the wild man of the music
world. “Sonatina in D” of Filippo
Gragnani was a smooth,
romantic piece, simply lovely.
Babes capture crown

Flag Football

In the women's division a new champion was crowned this week as Billy's Babes captured the title with a convincing 14-6 victory over the Imperial Death Commandos. The victory completed an outstanding season for the Babes as they finished with a record of 12-2-1.

In advancing to the finals, the Babes registered playoff victories over the K. Cadets, 14-4, and the Rink Rats, 14-4. The Death Commandos, after dropping their opening playoff game to the Rink Rats, came back to defeat the K. Cadets and the Rink Rats to set up the showdown for the prestigious title.

In the championship game, the difference proved to be the outstanding defense played by the Babes. Their defensive unit recorded seven shutouts during the regular season and their defense constantly shut down the opposition throughout the first half as the T. Headzz fumble the kickoff and gave the Babes a 13-12 halftime lead. They increased the margin to 25-12 behind the strength of second half touchdowns by Jim Blake and Mike Faradza. The Commandos came right back in the third quarter to cut the gap to 25-18 on a Paul Vargus touchdown with two minutes left.

The following kickoff saw the T. Headzz fumble the kick and get trapped for a safety. This made it 26-18 on a Paul Vargus touchdown with two minutes left. The following kickoff saw the T. Headzz fumble the kick and get trapped for a safety. This made it 26-18 on a Paul Vargus touchdown with two minutes left.

The Commandos came back to defeat the Fried Friars in the loser bracket finals to get another chance at the T. Headzz in the finals. The score was 42-37 in a wild, high-scoring affair. Paul Vargus played well for the Commandos. For the Fried Friars it marked the end of a fine season. They ended up at 12-3 and exhibited some excellent razzle-dazzle football all year. Kevin Clare played exceptionally well in the season-ending loss to the Goodies.

+++

Starting on November 11, the facilities at Alumni Hall will be opened each Saturday at 10 a.m. These facilities will include the weight room, sauna, racquetball and squash courts and the gymnasium (when available).

+++

PC co-ed road race will be held at 11 a.m. starting from Raymond Field. Faculty, staff and students are all invited to participate. There is a $2.00 entry fee and sign-ups are at the Athletic Board, Room 216, Slavin Center. Refreshments and food are included in the entry fee. There are prizes for the top finishers in each class.

+++

For anyone interested in drawing, painting or any other medium.

SPONSORED BY "ABRAXAS" ART CLUB
Fr. Adrian Dabash OP, Instructor

A TERRIFYING LOVE STORY

JOSEPH E. LEVINE PRESENTS MAGIC
ANTHONY HOPKINS ANN-MARGRET
BURGESS MEREDITH ED LAUTER
EXECUTIVE PRODUCER C.O. ERIKSON
THE MAGIC BY JERRY GOLDSMITH
SCREENPLAY BY WILLIAM GOLDMAN,
BASED UPON HIS NOVEL
PRODUCED BY JOSEPH E. LEVINE AND RICHARD P. LEVINE
DIRECTED BY RICHARD ATTENBOROUGH
PRINTS BY DE LUXE TECHNOCOLOR

STARTS WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 8TH AT A THEATER NEAR YOU
CHECK LOCAL NEWSPAPERS FOR THEATER LISTINGS
Mountaineering is an oral tradition. Over the years, it has been passed down from teacher to pupil, from parent to child, package store owner to customer. As a result, a folklore—a mythology, if you will—has formed around the mountains of Busch. You, being a student of mountaineering, no doubt wish to acquaint yourself with these truths and half-truths, these stories both accurate and apocryphal. A wise decision. And, as luck would have it, this ad is just the ticket.

Mountaineering, the science and art of drinking Busch. The term originates due to the snowy, icy peaks sported by the term "your international bon vivant and Baxter-Bennington Adventurer, member of Newport ablaze, leaving the remaining 2100 entrants to fight it out for second.

Dottie Parks is Manager of our Providence College Office in Slavin Center. See her about any of your banking questions. You'll feel better.

Get your faculty survey in the Slavin Pit

HELP WANTED: Addressees

You feel better banking at Hospital Trust.

Write American Service, 8350 Park Lane, Suite 127, Dallas, TX 75231

You feel better banking at Hospital Trust.

Job OPPORTUNITY:

Aggressive, agreeable person as campus representative for educational center. Make your own hours!

Call Josie at 617-261-5150 for details.
Will this be pucks' year?

By Bob Wahl

The Friar hockey team, which has spent months in training, will get to see how well that training has paid off. Within two weeks the Providence College hockey season and the chase for the NCAA title will have begun.

Friar hockey fans will see many familiar faces on the 1978-79 squad as only four players were lost to graduation. Those who expect the Black and White to sweep through the schedule with their wealth of returning experience may be correct, but Coach Lou Lamoriello takes a more cautious standpoint. According to Lamoriello the Friars are improved, but he sees the team as just a good team, not as a powerhouse, says Lamoriello. "Petition from the perennial powerhouses, says Lamoriello."

The Friars have a wealth of returning talent which Lamoriello is happy to exploit this season. John Sullivan, who was on the starting club at the end of last season, is back as the Friars take on a similar psychological boost. He hopes that his charges will respond in a similar manner this season.

Lamoriello claims that he is not set on any lines, yet as he sees the Friars on the near-disastrous 2-9 start of last year, he believes he is happy with the power-play and penalty-killing units. The Friar power-play consisted of Steve O'Neill, John Sullivan, Jon Hogberg, Mike Toppanzini and Scott Kleinendorst. Anchored by captain Korn and other returning Bob Bonica, Bruce Garber, the Black and White should have a formidable defensive front.
Where was the team? John Treacy, world cross country champion, had graduated, as did Michael Byrne; Gerry Deegan, reigning National indoor champ, had not returned; Pete Croke was still recovering from the haemorrhage and the final stroke of bad luck fell on PC's cross country team this season when co-captain Ed Harrington fell ill with an intestinal virus.

So there was no doubt PC was hurting. But the nucleus of the team was strong and consistent. Dan Dillon was a solid, steady senior standing freshmen, Ray Treacy and Mike Welch had given much of themselves to the team this season; the fact that they finished 1-2 respectively in last Saturday's New England championships was athletic justice.

Dan Dillon in his moment of glory

Mike Welch lends some inspiration

By John Mullaney

Dillon bows to New England

("Barrington was an extremely physical team and although we dominated most of the contest, some parts of the game were uncertain," admitted Doyle. "Barrington had a few more opportunities late in the second half and they scored. But Dave O'Brien made some sparkling saves to preserve the victory.

The Friars then invaded Nickerson Field last Sunday and raised some eyebrows. On paper the Terriers looked impressive, boasting impressive wins over UMass and URI. The contest ended in a scoreless deadlock.

"We knew that it would take a supreme team to effectively stop Ray O'Brien," stated Doyle. "Even though the game ended in a draw, it has to be a moral victory for us. The squad played their heart’s out and nearly defeated a talented squad that is chiefly made up of foreign

For all intent purposes, the affair had to be taken as a set-back for us as it knocked the Terriers out of any consideration for an NCAA post-season berth.

"But for Dillon, victory was sweet. He has been in the shadow of people like Mick O’Shea, John Treacy and Gerry Deegan for too long now. It must be remembered that Dillon is one of the best cross country runners in the country for the last two years. He is extremely under-rated, and the Dillon, in his senior year, PC is it’s own best and well-deserved victory for a man who has dedicated himself to his running at PC.

Ray Treacy and Dillon, a tremendous battle was fought in that quintessential place. Quinn ran a steady pace throughout the race and maintained his fifth or sixth place for the first three miles of the five-mile course. He was pursued closely by David Ball for three miles, but at this point Quinn pulled away and moved into third place, where he eventually finished. Ball ran well on the day despite being slowed by a pulled muscle for a long time and did well to finish at 24:13, a full minute-half faster than he had ever run.

Larry Reed followed Ball home a second behind him. Co-captain Moe Bafferty put in a fine run putting one in from yards 24:38, also a personal best performance.

PC took the team title with extreme ease. A points total of 29 was the best any team has ever scored, and the Friars were a full 29 points ahead of second-place Northeastern. Keene State from New Hampshire was a surprising third place.

The confidence in this PC team is incredible. The runners knew they were unbeatable, yet they all ran harder than they had to in order to win. We prove anything to the rest of New England, but because they had to justify to themselves all the work they have done.

There were so many motivating forces at work on Saturday that it was just impossible not to run well. John Treacy was giving more assistance to several runners than most of their competitors, and his buggies was not only a psychological booster for PC but a marvelous display of the extreme confidence over the runners.

The people who came to show support and the team were all over the course giving much chances for everyone to do as they decide from which angle to approach it. In a justifiable summary, PC was awesome, capturing its fifth straight New England title.

By Mike David

Playing superbly disciplined and stylish soccer, the Providence College team defeated Trinity College, 7-4-2, last Wednesday, after nipping intrastate and stylish soccer, the mark to 7-4-2.

played regional power Boston Providence College booters before laying the ball to Parks at pass from Mike Lindgren and set up by Alan Doyle, who took a the first half on a Brian Parks Barrington early and finally took and made a courageous effort to complained Coach Bill Doyle.

last minute of the half to forge a 1-1 deadlock on a disputed goal.

It was full of running. I could have run another five miles at the same pace. I just didn’t push it hard enough," reflected Treacy. "I knew I could have gone faster middle of the field house is a very real possibility."

For all intents purposes, the affair had to be taken as a set-back for us as it knocked the Terriers out of any consideration for an NCAA post-season berth.

By Chet Hanewich

Western New England came right back with a touchdown to make it 28-20. Then the Friars out of any consideration for an NCAA post-season berth.

With less than a minute in the first half of action, Western New England cut their deficit in half with a pass play from 13 yards out. Still, PC led by 28-20. Then the second half began, and it was all New England. The home squad went to the air, and that spilled trouble for the Friars. Quarterback Art Vanderventer completed his best day of the season with two TD passes for two yards, 64, and 36 yards. Mike Welch was an incredible man who has dedicated himself to his running at PC.

"I don’t think we can’t explain," commented a disappointed Dan Calenda. "I thought we had another winning race.

Field house survey set

Recently, a committee was established to investigate the feasibility of building a field house. The Providence College campus. An accreditation team which visited Providence last spring recommended that the College build more indoor recreational facilities.

To gauge the College community’s reaction to the proposal, a survey is being circulated to both students and alumni. The survey will list an easy return of the surveys. The Friars now led, 28-20. In a good-sized lead, and PC thought they were going to get the winning trading wins one again. But that’s not the way things worked out.

Sullivan and Dan Calenda, who are the student representatives to the committee.

The field house would be for the benefit of all, faculty, students and alumni, and we really want everyone to voice their opinion on the matter.

Booths will be set up in the student union and in the Atrium for an easy return of the surveys. The appearance of Mike Welch was an incredible man who has dedicated himself to his running at PC.

"I don’t think we can’t explain," commented a disappointed Dan Calenda. "I thought we had another winning race.

Field house survey set

Recently, a committee was established to investigate the feasibility of building a field house. The Providence College campus. An accreditation team which visited Providence last spring recommended that the College build more indoor recreational facilities.

To gauge the College community’s reaction to the proposal, a survey is being circulated to both students and alumni. The survey will list an easy return of the surveys. The Friars now led, 28-20. In a good-sized lead, and PC thought they were going to get the winning trading wins one again. But that’s not the way things worked out.

Sullivan and Dan Calenda, who are the student representatives to the committee.

The field house would be for the benefit of all, faculty, students and alumni, and we really want everyone to voice their opinion on the matter.

Booths will be set up in the student union and in the Atrium for an easy return of the surveys. The appearance of Mike Welch was an incredible man who has dedicated himself to his running at PC.

"I don’t think we can’t explain," commented a disappointed Dan Calenda. "I thought we had another winning race.

Field house survey set

Recently, a committee was established to investigate the feasibility of building a field house. The Providence College campus. An accreditation team which visited Providence last spring recommended that the College build more indoor recreational facilities.

To gauge the College community’s reaction to the proposal, a survey is being circulated to both students and alumni. The survey will list an easy return of the surveys. The Friars now led, 28-20. In a good-sized lead, and PC thought they were going to get the winning trading wins one again. But that’s not the way things worked out.

Sullivan and Dan Calenda, who are the student representatives to the committee.

The field house would be for the benefit of all, faculty, students and alumni, and we really want everyone to voice their opinion on the matter.

Booths will be set up in the student union and in the Atrium for an easy return of the surveys. The appearance of Mike Welch was an incredible man who has dedicated himself to his running at PC.

"I don’t think we can’t explain," commented a disappointed Dan Calenda. "I thought we had another winning race.

Field house survey set

Recently, a committee was established to investigate the feasibility of building a field house. The Providence College campus. An accreditation team which visited Providence last spring recommended that the College build more indoor recreational facilities.

To gauge the College community’s reaction to the proposal, a survey is being circulated to both students and alumni. The survey will list an easy return of the surveys. The Friars now led, 28-20. In a good-sized lead, and PC thought they were going to get the winning trading wins one again. But that’s not the way things worked out.

Sullivan and Dan Calenda, who are the student representatives to the committee.

The field house would be for the benefit of all, faculty, students and alumni, and we really want everyone to voice their opinion on the matter.

Booths will be set up in the student union and in the Atrium for an easy return of the surveys. The appearance of Mike Welch was an incredible man who has dedicated himself to his running at PC.

"I don’t think we can’t explain," commented a disappointed Dan Calenda. "I thought we had another winning race.

Field house survey set

Recently, a committee was established to investigate the feasibility of building a field house. The Providence College campus. An accreditation team which visited Providence last spring recommended that the College build more indoor recreational facilities.

To gauge the College community’s reaction to the proposal, a survey is being circulated to both students and alumni. The survey will list an easy return of the surveys. The Friars now led, 28-20. In a good-sized lead, and PC thought they were going to get the winning trading wins one again. But that’s not the way things worked out.

Sullivan and Dan Calenda, who are the student representatives to the committee.

The field house would be for the benefit of all, faculty, students and alumni, and we really want everyone to voice their opinion on the matter.

Booths will be set up in the student union and in the Atrium for an easy return of the surveys. The appearance of Mike Welch was an incredible man who has dedicated himself to his running at PC.

"I don’t think we can’t explain," commented a disappointed Dan Calenda. "I thought we had another winning race.