Mammoth Parade Of Stars To Take Place At Narr. Park

Narragansett Park will be the scene of a mammoth Penny Parade this Friday night at 8 o'clock for the benefit of the new St. Dominic Savio Boys' Vacation Retreat Center in Peace Dale, R. I. Twenty-five thousand dollars in prizes including four new automobiles will be awarded to the lucky ticket holders. Many famous personalities will be present to provide the entertainment.

Plans call for the immediate and extensive renovation of the enormous barn of the newly acquired Gammino estate in Peace Dale. Single and double room accommodations for up to one hundred boys, a chapel, a dining room and kitchen, lounge and recreation areas will be provided. Baseball and football fields and basketball and handball courts will be constructed. Extensive woodland will provide splendid opportunities for camping and hiking and nearby beaches will be available for swimming.

There is a need for 250 volunteer workers from P.C. Anyone wishing to volunteer to work Friday night is asked to contact Fr. Casey in Aquinas Hall or any member of the Student Congress. Tickets for the prizes are $50 cents with a book of 12 costing $5.00.

College Glee Club Accepts Twenty-Six New Members

Twenty-six new members from the Freshman Class were recently received into the college Glee Club according to Arthur Payne, '56, president.

This group along with the upper-classmen members will sing at the Rotary exercises to be held Sunday evening, October 2 at the War Memorial Grotto and on Monday at the Mass of the Holy Ghost held also at the Grotto.

The club, which annually highlights its season with a Spring tour, has long been popular throughout New England and has appeared with such women's college glee clubs as St. Joseph's of Hartford, Conn.; St. Francis Hospital School of Nursing, Hartford; Albertus Magnus College of New Haven, Conn.; Salve Regina College of Newport, R. I.; Marymount College of New York City; New Rochelle College of New York; and Trinity College of Washington, D. C. Individual appearances have been in New London, Conn.; Waterbury, Conn.; New York City and on several occasions here at the college.

The Dominos, popular octet composed of members of the club, will again appear both individually and with the entire club.

Officers for this year include Payne, Ed D'Andrea, '56, Vice-president; Tony DeBerardino, '57, Secretary and Bob Cowley, '57, Treasurer. Rev. Leo S. Cannon, O.P., M. Mus., is Director.

New members include: Frank Bassett, John Brennan, John Cachchioti,

NFCCS Meets In Pittsburgh

The twelfth national congress of the National Federation of Catholic College Students was held in Pittsburgh, Pa., from August 29 to September 3. At the first plenary session Chairman B. C. White delivered the welcoming address. The invocation was made by the national chaplain, the Rev. Mark J. Mullin, C.M. Attending dignitaries included: The Most Reverend James A. McNulty, D.D., Episcopal Moderator; the Rt. Rev. J. E. Shieder, and the Mayor of Pittsburgh.

In the keynote address Bishop McNulty stressed the necessity of personal attention to one's interior life in the face of a material world which tends to corrupt youth.

Although no student delegates were present, Providence College was represented by the Rev. Anthony Jurgelaitis, O.P., faculty moderator of the P.C. chapter. During the Congress Father Jurgelaitis was selected as one of the Student Cruise Chaplains for next summer. These cruises come under the jurisdiction and sponsorship of the Student Travel Plan.

The Family Life Program was of special interest to the New England representatives. This program concerns various problematic points pertaining to Catholic family life from the student's point of view. Further discussion on this topic will be held throughout the school year on many of the New England Region's campuses.

The National Officers elected for this year were: Thomas Reinlander, St. Vincent's College, President; Gerald Kappas, Manhattan, Vice President of Religious Affairs; Joseph Germain, Loyola University, Vice President of Social Action; Joanne McCann, Seton Hill, Vice President of International Affairs; Diarmuid O'Scannlain, St. John's University, Secretary; and Robert Snook, Detroit University, Treasurer.

SENIORS!!

All Seniors are reminded to sign the papers on the bulletin board in Harkins Hall stating the time that they will be available for yearbook photos. A $2.00 deposit must be made at the time that the sitting takes place.

Nominations Open For Class Officers

Nominations for candidates for officers of the senior, junior, and sophomore classes are now open. It was announced on Monday by Rep. Martin J. Butler, '56, Chairman of the Student Congress Ways and Means Committee.

Nomination papers may be taken out at the Congress office and are to be returned with the signatures of 50 of the prospective candidate's classmates. The deadline for filing papers is Friday, September 30.

Those desiring to run must meet the requirements of a scholastic average of at least "C," with no failures and have an approved personal record.

Assemblies at which the candidates will present their platforms to the electorate will be held in Harkins Auditorium on Tuesday, October 4. Balloting will take place on October 10, 11, and 13 for sophomores, juniors, and seniors, respectively.

Rep. Butler expressed the hope of the Congress that many qualified men would seek the positions of responsibility.

Congress Names Beany Officers

The Student Congress announced today that President Walsh has appointed Joseph Buckley, '56, as Chief Justice of the Student Court and Richard McCarthy, '57, and Joseph O'Neil, '56, as associate justices. They are serving interim appointments until formally confirmed by the Congress.

The Court has already started hearing cases of alleged violations of the beany laws, which have been presented to it by the Enforcement Committee. Mr. Howard Lipsey, '57, has been named as Chief Enforcement Officer.

The President is expected to send the nominations to the Congress for confirmation sometime this week.

NOTICE!!

There will be an important meeting of all the COWL staff tomorrow at 10:28.

Freshman Class Faculty Advisor Is Father Putz

Reverend Edward H. Putz, O.P., professor of Theology and German here at Providence College, has been appointed Freshman Class Faculty Advisor.

Father Putz became a member of the Providence College Faculty two years ago. He has been a prefect in Aquinas Hall for the past two years and is this year a prefect at Stephen Hall. Prior to his coming to the College, he taught Greek and Philosophy, at St. Rose Priory, Springfield, Ky.

Father Putz was overjoyed at the spirit and enthusiasm shown by the class of 1959. He expressed his satisfaction at the attendance of the class at the Freshman Dance and Picnic. He hopes that the Freshmen will carry this enthusiasm over into their studies now that the picnic is over.

The Freshmen have shown great interest not only in the social activities of the College, but also in the class in the College itself. His aim is to keep this interest throughout the four years and together to make it the best class to graduate from the College.

Prov. Club Dance Sparks Social Year

The first informal dance of the social year will be held this Friday night in Harkins Hall. The Providence Club will play host at this affair.

Music will be supplied by A. Sarazen and his orchestra. Refreshments will be available at the cafeteria in Alumni Hall at the intermission and also during the dance.

Invitations have been sent to neighboring schools, nurses' homes, and colleges. "A large turnout is expected both from the girls' schools and our own," said Jim Santameli, secretary of the Providence Club.

Blessing Of The Roses Scheduled For Sunday

"Sing His glory without measure, For the merit of your treasure Never shall your praises fill."

—St. Thomas Aquinas

The beautiful month of October has been dedicated by the Catholic Church to the honor of Our Blessed Lady. In a very special and very unique way, the first Sunday of the month honors Mary as Queen of the Most Holy Rosary. This Sunday is called Rosary Sunday. Since the devotion of the Rosary was given to Saint Dominic by Our Lady herself, it has grown in meaning and popularity among the faithful. Many marvelous favors and splendid accomplishments have been brought about through Mary's intercession as requested in the Rosary.

The Dominican Order, in particular, has taken a great interest in spreading the Rosary to all corners of the

A.A.C.P. Invites Original Verse From Students

The editors of the Annual Anthology of College Poetry have invited all college students to submit original verse for possible publication in the Thirtieth Annual College Competition.

The rules for submission of manuscripts are simple. Any student of the college may enter the verse competition. Manuscripts must be typed or written in ink on one side of a sheet of paper. Student's home address, name, and address of college must appear on each manuscript. Also, the student may submit as many manuscripts as he desires. Theme and form may be in accordance with the wish of the student. Because space is limited and in order to give as many students as possible recognition, shorter efforts are preferred. Closing date for submission of manuscripts is November 5, and the manuscripts are to be sent to:

National Poetry Association
3201 Selby Avenue
Los Angeles 34, Calif.

Within the past ten years, over a hundred thousand manuscripts have been submitted to the association. Of these, 14,800 have been accepted for publication.

Frosh Exhibit Strength In Spirit And Number

A total of 580 freshmen registered on September 14, marking the largest entering class at Providence College in several years. Registration day marked the beginning of an active week of orientation for the new members of the student body.

On the first day they were officially welcomed by Very Rev. Robert J. Slavin, O.P., President of the College, and Rev. Edward B. Halton, O.P., Dean of Freshmen. Also speaking at the assembly to acquaint the freshmen with their various administrative functions were Rev. Francis Prout, O.P., Dean of Discipline, Rev. Thomas H. McBrien, O.P., College Chaplain, Rev. Daniel M. Galligher, O.P., Registrar, Rev. James T. Carney, O.P., Bursar, and Rev. Edward H. Putz, O.P., who will act as moderator of the Class of 1959.

The afternoon program was devoted to acquainting the freshmen globe. Because of the unceasing real and untrusting devotion of the Friars, the Rosary is one of the most universal of all prayers in the Church. Along with this, the blessing and distribution of roses on the first Sunday of October has become a beautiful occurrence in Dominican houses and churches.

These roses are prized as important sacramentals throughout the year and are treasured for their spiritual value by the faithful. In accordance with this tradition, a solemn ceremony commemorating Rosary Sunday will take place at the Providence College Grotto at 8:00 p.m. on Sunday, October 2nd. The Reverend John P. Kenny, O.P., head of the Department of Philosophy, will be the preacher. Solemn benediction of the Blessed Sacrament will follow. All students of the College are urged to be present and to obtain the sacramental blessed roses and to extend an invitation to their parents.

The rose is used as a symbol of love. Truly, then, it is very fitting that such a symbol be used in connection with the Blessed Mother, Mary is called the "Mystical Rose," which brings to mind the great part which she played in the redemption of mankind. The very word Rosary means a garland of roses. The green leaves of a rose symbolize the joyful mysteries—the hope engendered by the coming of the Savior and the joy of the world at being restored to the friendship of God. The thorns bring to mind the great suffering of Our Lord in His passion and death. The beautiful fragrance and the blossom are likened to the glorious mysteries, the triumph of those who conquer the enemies of salvation and win eternal happiness.

When blessed roses are devoutly kept, they are always an assurance of Divine Protection. The Annals of the Rosary inform us of a great number of favors obtained for both soul and body. Many, many sick persons have been cured by the blessed roses. The beautiful formula for the blessing of the roses is as follows:

"O God, the Creator and Preserver of the human race, Author of grace and the Bounteous Lord of Eternal Salvation, bless with thy holy favor these roses we offer unto with the various clubs and extra-curricular activities on campus. Daniel C. Walsh, President of the Student Congress greeted the class on behalf of the student body and introduced Ronald Lovett, Vice President of the Congress, and who will act as President of the Class, until it holds elections in January. James McLay, Joseph Buckley, Richard McCarthy, and Ronald Sullivan explained the functions of several major campus organizations and urged the new P.C. men to join them and to become active participants in extra-curricular life.

Rev. Anthony Jurgelaitis, O.P., spoke to the group about the NFCCS and told of its aims and functions. In welcoming them as new members, Fr. Jurgelaitis expressed the hope that they would become active in the P.C. unit.

The rest of the week was occupied

An Opportunity To Meet All These Sport Heroes

The Tumult and The Shouting by Grantland Rice. A. S. Barnes and Co., N. Y.

By Louis J. Verchot

Shortly after the completion of Mr. Rice's "My Life in Sport" (the book's subtitle) was published, the dean of Sportswriters passed away. It is a little sad that he could not have lived to see the success of his book, but no one could have written as fine an eulogy for the Dean as he did for himself.

Grantland or "Granny" as he was better known to his friends, tries to give us an idea of his philosophy of life, which though complex was partially built on the Biblical quotation, "Judge not that ye be not judged"; and "Know thyself" from the Koran. The true knowledge of "Granny" can be more clearly seen through though his relationship to other people, especially with the "color" personalities or great artists in sports. He was a man who knew and loved many of the greats and the near-greats as well as many athletes who never would rise to any heights.

The true interest of the book lies, I believe, in the ability of "Granny" to make a dead "Babe" or "Bill Tilden" run, hit, and win all over again. He even makes the old well-worn story about George Gipp and "his game" tug a bit at one's heart.

People are not the entire subject of the book as the true spirit of "Man O' War, Whirlaway, and many other thoroughbreds occupy a well deserved place in the book.

Of special interest is Mr. Rice's selection of some "all" teams, i.e. all-time football teams, all-time baseball teams. Like most old timers, the making of comparisons between athletes of the early 1900's and the present crop is inevitable. To my mind, his are the best and most honest comparisons. One reason no doubt is due to "Granny's" listing of his reasons for his selection. Another one is because of his familiarity with so many greats, that personalities do not over-shadow ability. For the best all-time, all around athletes he selects Jim Thorpe and Babe Deidrickson Zaharias.

Besides an intimate glance at the people who made sports history, he tells us many interesting and inside stories, such as, why Dempsey did not speak to him for a month after the first Dempsey-Tunney fight.

To the average sports fan, Grantland Rice was just another or possibly a better than average sports writer. After completing the book, the young sports fan can see "Granny's" ability in one concise unit.

Grantland graduated from Vanderbilt College where he majored in Greek and Latin, played football and baseball. He certainly was not a stranger to sports when he started his career in 1901 with the Nashville News as a general reporter, but he soon turned to sports reporting.

The man Rice and his friends are shown us by a man who knew them best. Such individuals as Ring Lardner, Damon Runyon, Rex Beach, and George Ade are men well known to the public in legend; now they are described by a man who was one of them. The wonderful times these men had together and their distinct personalities are recreated for the interest and delight of the public who knew them only from their writings or by reputation.

This autobiography is well written and makes interesting reading. For the sports enthusiast or the casual fan, here is an opportunity to meet all these heroes, through the eyes of a man who knew and in some ways understood them.

Our faults no tenderness should ask,

The chastening stripes must cleanse them all;

But for our blunders—oh, in shame

Before the eyes of heaven we fall.

Welcome !!

To you who are beginning College Life, the Cowl extends the greetings of all the upperclassmen. Your Freshman year is a year of orientation, and the upperclassmen are eager to pass on to you their wisdom of years to guide you. But you are the only one who can do the adjusting. "You are here. What are you going to do?" The decision must be your own.

May you have a full share in the academic and social life of the College. As Freshmen, you may combine studies and extra-curricular activities so that each will balance the other for a successful opening year.

The Way!

Practically every Catholic tries to inculcate in himself the habit of daily recitation of the Rosary. But because of our imperfect nature, we often fail at this noble goal. Perhaps now, with the coming of October, the month of The Holy Rosary, we can make another attempt.

There will be sufficient opportunities for every student on this campus to say the Rosary at least once a day. We are sure that all will take advantage of them, for in that way you will enjoy one of the religious benefits that you had hoped to gain when seeking admission to this Catholic school.

The Rosary has become for Catholics their finest devotion next to the Mass, since its origin by St. Dominic in the thirteenth century. It is the only bulwark capable of arresting the major ills of our time, and we should make sufficient use of it.

A Dream Fulfilled

When we left our beloved campus last Spring we were all talking, living, and breathing Gymnasium. That fabled, long-awaited structure was at the time shrouded in mystery. Hordes of trucks and hundreds of scurrying laborers surrounded the huge brick and limestone structure in the center of what had once been the R.O.T.C. Drill Field. Yes, we had heard many wondrous things of the Gym, and the summer dragged while the long days ticked by as we awaited our return to the campus and a completed gymnasium.

Nobody expected to be disappointed, and nobody was. When we returned we found the underclassmen already firmly at home in a gleaming lounge and cafeteria which reminds us more of the Waldorf Astoria than a student Union. And there was more! A Basketball court big enough for a baseball game, handball courts, showers, locker rooms, a rifle range, long gleaming marble corridors, offices, classrooms, even accommodations for visiting teams.

To those of us who will be graduating this June, the completion of the Gymnasium marks another milestone in the history of a great and growing College. We can only remain sincerely grateful to our loyal and industrious Alumni and our most worthy President for this wondrous building, and pledge that when we have taken our places in society there will be many more buildings and improvements on the Campus of Providence College.

Earth bears no balsam for mistakes;

Men crown the knave, and scourge the fool
 That did his will; but Thou, O Lord

Be merciful to me, a fool!

Man Or Mouse ?

Since the start of the school year the eyes of the hardened upperclassman have noted a marked decline in the number of covered freshmen skulls. It would seem that the class of 1959 has either found a lucrative market (deep in the labyrinths of Smith Hill) for second-hand beanies, or certain "rocky" elements of the group have the foolish idea of making a test case before the high court of the Student Congress. To the untrained observer, the campus appears well-ordered, peaceful, and entirely serene. There is, however, a sneaky undercurrent of tension prevalent in the halls and on the lawns of P.C. There haven't been any open clashes yet, no one has been shot at, the Student Congress President hasn't been spirited away to a dark and mysterious day-hop lair, and a blood-stained beanie has yet to be pinned to the wall of the cafeteria.

Nobody likes to brow-beat a Freshman because his cranium fails to be swathed in black and white. Nobody likes to tell that hypothetical freshman to cover his fair-haired locks in front of his buddies or his girl friend. These above cases of upperclass apathy are especially pertinent if our hypothetical frosh happens to be a two hundred pound ex-Marine with biceps bulging even in his eyebrows.

But, my freshmen friends, simply because there's not a howling bunch of sophomores with clubs and axes ripping about the campus handing out tickets for blatant disregard of the tradition, does not mean that you should be smart guys and keep your heads bared. In the long run, the burial or immolation of that little bit of the black and white hurts no one but yourselves. You carry the name of a great school on your shoulders, your actions reflect back upon P.C. Your beanie is not a thing of shame, it is a badge of honor, showing pride in your college and esprit de corps. If the classes before you wore them, and if our Ivy League rivals on the opposite hill can wear them, then there is no reason why you cannot wear them. The bared headed freshman denotes not the man on this campus, but the spoiled brat.

OUT OF PROPORTION

By JIM SANTANIELLO

Sitting in our new spacious lounge one day last week, I became engrossed in watching a couple of fellows attempt to "give a hot-foot" to a senior nestled in the arms of Morpheus. This humorous act set my mind wandering and as all about me went out of focus, and I again relapsed into the Bostonian paths of my dangling imagination, I began to recall a story I had heard when only a freshman. It was told to me by a senior who, when only a freshman, had heard it from a senior who, when only a freshman, had heard it from a sophomore. So take it with a grain of salt!

It seems that back in the days of Lou Bean, when P.C. was just a lonely building in a wooded section of Smith Street, there was enrolled at this college a somewhat notorious son of mischief called "Hot-foot Cameron Day". One day, Day, as the story goes, was up to a bit of his usual chicanery when his interests suddenly became diverted by the appearance into the caf (the old drink-your-coffee-out-of-paper-cups-standing-up caf) of one of his favorite lab instructors.

D. O. Moon taught a course in Indian Lore and was particularly famous for his corner-of-the-mouth references to certain figures prominent in the history of the American red-skin . . . especially one who had emigrated from the West Indies. Every day, Mr. Moon would go down to the caf for a cup of tea and every day, Cameron would join him.

Now this particular day in mention, Day did not hop, skip, and jump over to where D. O. was standing, but rather circled around to the rear of the great man. (Fortunately there were no mirrors in that caf to give him away.) Thinking that he and the instructor were close enough buddies, he thought he'd give the old boy a jolly "hot-foot". And he did. And Moon jumped the height of the table—which was pretty high.

Eyes blazing, foot on fire, hot tea spilled over him—and what's worse, over his Lore book—the famed man turned upon the roaring student. But to the amusement of those standing by, the fire in his heart became smothered by the sight of the lad. The reason, as it was related, was that Camel boy just was old Moonie's number one boy.

The drone of some long-haired Swiss movement sifting through the draping on the P.A. system brought me back to our new lounge and I couldn't quite figure out what was happening. Here was culture in musical attire filling the room while out in the caf "Twelve O'Clock Rock" was moving the juke-box from the soda bar to the Rotc Department.

"It's like bringing a bathtub into the jungle," I thought. But then again, one man's Arthur Godfrey is another man's Ed Sullivan.

The Yankees Again . . .

By Jim Westwater

For the first time in their long reign as baseball champions, the New York Yankees will find themselves entering their 21st World Series as underdogs. (Source: Daily Record—not Dave Egan, though.) The main reason for the sudden change in odds is that the Yankees may be deprived of most of the services of their star centerfielder Mickey Mantle.

Undoubtedly, the Yankees will feel the loss of the switch-hitting Mantle, but they will still end up the victors. Precedent and a late season driving finish that carried them to victory in one of the tightest American League flag clashes in years are the major factors in making the Stenglemens the Series' choice in this book. Another reason is the unfortunate Flatbush Floek is to be the Yankee foe. Since 1941, ('47, '49, '52, '53) the Dodgers have won five pennants, each time encountering the Yankees in the World Series. All five times they've gone down to defeat.

Point established?

The Dodgers of '55 resemble the Dodgers of '53 very closely. In '53, they set numerous slugging records while clubbing their way to any easy pennant victory; continued their powerful hitting in the Series with a team average of .300, highest for any losing team in the annals of the classic. But their defense cracked, with seven errors and their pitching faltered.

If this year is to follow the same pattern as the other inter-city Series, the Bombers should emerge victorious. Pitching was a dominating factor in the past, and it will be this year.

Don Newcombe, their ace, is a tremendous pitcher, but he throws the gopher ball in tight games, especially during the late innings. Carl Erskine, a very game hurler, will probably give the Yankees the most trouble. Once past Newcombe and Erskine though, the rest of the staff is an "if." Johnny Pades and Billy Lowes have shown nothing in the way of Major League caliber in the past two months. As for the rest of the starters on the club, they're not even worth mentioning.

Stengel can afford to throw any one of five starting hurlers against the Brooks. Ford, Byrne, Turley, Larsen, and Grim.

Other advantages in favor of the Yankees are their bench plus the experience and ability to win when the chips are down. These have been vital assets in all of Casey's teams. The Dodgers always seem to choke in the clutch. They lack the ability to play heads-up ball, while the Yankees thrive on pressure situations.

The baseball know-how of Casey Stengel and the dynamic effectiveness of Yankee power in clutch situations will prevail in the 1955 World Series. (Source . . . Me.)

Joe Madden Named Captain Of Track Team

Joe Madden from Brighton, Mass., has been named the captain of the P. C. varsity track team. Madden is a senior and is majoring in Economics.

Since coming to the P. C. campus in 1952 Madden has been an outstanding performer on the Friar track team. Madden's specialties are in the mile and the two mile runs. Not a big fellow, Madden has great stamina for the long grinds.

As a freshman he set a frosh record for the P. C. cross country course.

Last year he teamed with Rod Boucher as a double threat for the Friars in both the mile runs.

Kent County Club Meets Tomorrow

The Kent County Club of Providence College will hold its first meeting of the new college year this Thursday evening at the Club 400 in West Warwick. All Freshmen and Upper-classmen residing in the Kent County area are urged to attend.

The meeting will be presided over by Leroy Barber, President. Newly elected officers for his year are: Brian Wynne, Vice-President; Daniel Burrs, Secretary; and Guy Archambault, Treasurer. Bill Sweeney and Larry Mailloux were voted Social Committee Chairmen with Jim Gillen as Publicity Director.

FACILITIES READY

Father Begley has announced that the athletic facilities of the new Alumni Hall will be open to all students who have obtained their athletic association card. The hours will be as follows:
Monday through Friday from 12 to 8 p.m.
Saturdays, Sundays and holidays from 1 to 4:30.

Intramurals

Because of the opening of the new gym and its vast number of facilities a much expanded schedule of intramural sports is planned under the direction of Mr. Peter Louthis.

The basketball and handball courts will be open daily from 1:30 p.m. Anyone wishing to use these facilities must first have his athletic association card which can be obtained in the athletic office. Sneakers must be worn while on the courts. The tennis courts will be ready shortly as will badminton, volleyball, and the physical exercise rooms.

Intramural football will get underway at Hendricks Field on Oct. 9. Teams will be organized on a class and concentration basis such as frosh science, political science, biology, etc. Sophomore, junior and senior class teams must be organized accordingly. More than one team may be entered from one concentration.

This will be seven man touch football. Each roster will be limited to twelve players. When entering a team note the best time for scheduling games.

Also an intramural cross-country meet will be held on Oct. 24. This meet is open to all students of Providence College except members of the varsity and freshman cross-country squads.

Each contestant must be in good physical health and must plan on working out at least three days a week during the training period. The distance of the race will be approximately one and one-half miles long. Medals will be awarded to the first five finishers.

Entries for both cross-country and football will be accepted either at the coaches' office or athletic director's office in Alumni Hall. Deadline for the football entries is Oct. 6, and for cross-country applicants Oct. 7.

Baseball Coach Resigns, Post Not Yet Filled

Hal Martin, for nine years the varsity baseball coach here at Providence College, resigned on August 1 to enter private business. Besides holding the job as coach, Mr. Martin was a professor in the Economics Department.

Since Martin's first year, 1947, his teams compiled a record of 69 wins as against 78 defeats. The best year the Friars had under Martin was 1953, in which they compiled a 9-5 record.

During his reign here Martin coached many fine ballplayers. Probably the one to gain the most attention was Bill Mullins, a pitcher, who was signed by the Washington Senators.

Other outstanding players under Martin's wing were Carl Buniva, Howie McGuinness, Beaver Power, Eddie Ryder and Jerry Romberg.

The Brooks In Seven . . .

By BILL FLANAGAN

"Wait till next year", the familiar echo from Flatbush will be changed to "We told you so", in about a week or so. This is providing that you are a Dodger fan talking to a Yankee fan. For just as 1952 produced a big political switch, 1955 will produce an athletic switch, with the Brooklyn Dodgers defeating the New York Yankees in seven games for the World Series title of 1955.

This reporter is well aware that the beloved Bums have never conquered the mighty Bronx Bombers in their previous series encounters, but this year the story will be different. The reason why this corner feels more confident than at any other time can be traced to a new found spirit now presiding in the Brooks camp. An observer close to the scene, one Harold "PeeWee" Reese by name, mentioned it in a recent issue of the BASEBALL DIGEST. The Little Colonel, who performed so gracefully at shortstop for the past fifteen years, and who has endured the different reigns during that period, called them "The Mad Dodgers". Pee Wee points out that Jackie Robinson feuded with his manager because he wanted to play regularly, Roy Campanella did likewise because he wanted to drive in more runs and couldn't from such a low spot in the batting order. Don Newcombe refused to pitch batting practice because he wants to start regularly. Now don't get me wrong, these men respect their skipper Walt Alston, who did a magnificent job in bringing home his entry, this year. Not all great teams have harmony, but the sign of greatness exists in teams which show the old competitive spirit. This spirit resulted in two great comebacks this year, one by twenty game winner and home run record holder for pitchers, Newcombe, and the other by .300 hitting Campanella.

Led by this recharged battery, along with the hustle twins, Dons Zimmer and Hoak, in addition to their fabulous wrecking crew which set a record pace in clinching the Senior Loop's pennant, the Dodgers will arrive on the threshold of greatness and will prevail. Relax friends, Flatbush will be like heaven, when the Brooks win in seven, when?, why, in 1955, of course.

Cross Country To Meet West Pointers On Friday

With captain Joe Madden leading the way, the P. C. cross country forces invade West Point on Friday for their first meet of the season.

Back again for another season will be the junior dash Rod Boucher, who really made a name for himself last season while wearing the black and white of P.C.

Another returnee to the Friars' running camp after a year's absence will be Bill Allen.

Up from last season's "surprise" freshman rank are Ed Hanlon, Bob Ruggieri and Bill Nelson.

If Boucher can continue where he left off last season and Madden and Allen come through in fine fashion, the Friars' opposition will find them a very tough unit. Hanlon, a sophomore, was one of the most outstanding performers for the frosh. If Hanlon can fit in with the trio already mentioned, the Friars will have four men who can easily finish out front for the Friars.

To join this group, coach Harry Coates will send Al O'Brien, Mike McDonough, of hockey fame, and Gerry Farley.

A seven man freshman squad will accompany the varsity on their trip to the Point.

The most promising of the frosh group is Tom Cummins, who was an outstanding runner in high school. Other frosh of note are Hugh Sullivan, Dennis Carey, Jim Baker and Bill O'Loane.

W.D.O.M. To Begin Broadcasting Soon

John Gagnon, '56, chief engineer for the college radio station, WDOM, has been attempting to increase the power of the transmitter in order to improve reception in the dormitories.

All broadcasting will originate from Albertus Magnus Hall, but will be somewhat curtailed by lack of space. Station Manager Gerald Trespennig, '56, has announced that this year will be a great step forward in programming. Classical music and pop will be presented and as large a variety of other programs as possible.

The station will begin broadcasting shortly. All interested in joining the staff are urged to watch the bulletin boards for further information.

Alumnus Joins GE Advertising Staff

Donald L. Gibeault, a Providence College graduate in 1954, has joined the General Electric Advertising and Sales Promotion Program at Schenectady, New York.

Gibeault has recently been assigned as a special representative of the General Electric "House of Magic," and will spend the next ten months presenting this science show to various high schools and colleges throughout the south and midwest.

Gibeault was an A.B. major in Political Science while at the college. During his senior year, he was editor of the Cowl.

Successful Tips To Job Hunters

(For those who may be seeking part-time employment, we suggest you read these rules. It would also be wise to keep them in mind when you seek work after college. Ed.)

Wise men learn from other men's mistakes. How true this statement is in the task of job hunting. Let's take a look at some tips taken from the personal experience of job applicants. These are the things that job applicants most often do wrong, the mistakes that most commonly cost people the jobs they have been looking for.

One of the biggest blunders a job seeker can make is in not mentioning a particular type of work that he excels in. An aspirant might mention that he just wants a job or a general category like office work instead of saying that he would prefer accounting or something specific. Employers get the impression that a man who is not specific, is a drifter or that he doesn't care much about what he does. You can't expect an employer to take a chance on someone who doesn't know what he wants.

Joe Salvatore States Plans

Michael Fitzgerald, a Junior, majoring in English, will take control of the Liturgy Group, a division of N.F.C.C.S., at the first meeting of the year.

Former President Joseph Salvatore, '56, will assume the position of Regional Liturgy Commission Chairman. His duties in this position are to aid other colleges in establishing Liturgy Groups on campuses without them, and to re-activate existing groups. As Chairman, Mr. Salvatore hopes to establish an essay contest in an effort to further the development of liturgical literature. Awards will be given to the best manuscripts submitted.

At the Regional Congress, to be held in April, a Liturgical Workshop may be devoted to liturgical art. During the course of the year workshops will be held at Salve Regina, Newton College of the Sacred Heart, and Regis College. The regional topic is Liturgical Piety through Sacred Scripture.

Fitzgerald expressed the hope that the students would evidence an increasing interest in the organization.

The date of the first meeting will be announced later in the month.

Frosh Exhibit . . .

with the routine, but necessary, medical exams, ROTC orientation, and the purchasing of books.

The social highlight of Freshman Week came on Friday evening at the Get-Acquainted Dance sponsored for the Freshman Class by the Student Congress. The dance was declared the most successful informal dance held on the campus in recent years. Congress spokesmen said that they were gratified by the large turnout and by the excellent spirit and enthusiasm displayed by the class. It is estimated that nearly 400 beany-clad frosh and their guests danced to the music of Arnold Sarazan and his orchestra.

In brief ceremonies before intermission the members of the Congress led the group in singing the P. C. Alma Mater.

Special thanks for the spectacular success of the evening go to the girls of Salve Regina College and Newton College of the Sacred Heart for their excellent turnout. The entire Freshman Class of Newton—nearly 100 strong—was on hand.

The week's activities came to an end on Saturday with an outing and picnic held at Lincoln Woods. Here the Freshmen had an opportunity for softball, horseback riding, boating, swimming, or just relaxation before classes began on Monday.

Everyone knows how important it is to present a neat appearance. A man might appear for an interview dressed in the proper attire, but may distract a prospective boss in other distinctive ways; such as slouching in the chair, as if he were relaxing in his back yard. Then there is the fidget who is constantly moving his hands or playing with pencils or with things on the interviewers desk.

A surprising number of job applicants don't bother to arm themselves with the most elementary information about the job they apply for or the company they apply to. An applicant should strive to find out as much as he can about the company he is attempting to enter.

Some have missed jobs, because they never really grasped the fact that they must pitch into an interview and prove that they have something the potential employer needs. Instead they sit back and wait to be offered something.

Another case is the "big shot." He tries to give the impression that he doesn't really need the job, is not sure at all he wants it, but would be glad to consider any reasonable proposition the employer might care to make. Sometimes this same "big shot" can't be bothered with channels and established routine. The employer might think that a man like this, so openly impatient with hiring procedures would be openly impatient with operating procedures too.

Before the interview, study yourself and the job. List your strong points. Make another list of special qualifications, ones that others are not likely to be able to offer. Make a third list of those points in which your qualifications match outstandingly with the job you're applying for. Get your lists down pat. And see to it that you get everything on them over to the interviewer, whether you are offered an occasion to do so or whether you have to make one.

Seniors, keep these points in mind and your chances of success should be greatly improved. Good hunting.

G.A.W. Selected As Debate Topic

A Guaranteed Annual Wage, the highly controversial subject of recent months involving both parties of labor and management, has been selected as the National Intercollegiate debating topic, it was learned today from Joseph A. Buckley, '56, President of the college society.

Students from all classes are welcome to enroll in the club which will hold its first meeting early next week. Notices to that effect will be published on all bulletin boards.

Blessing Of Roses . . .

Thee this day and crave to be blessed, as a token of thanksgiving to Thee and of love and veneration for the ever Blessed Virgin Mary of the Rosary. Do thou, Who hast granted them a sweet odor for our use and the easing of our ills, deign now to bless them through the merits of Thy Holy Cross may they receive so great a benediction, that whoever shall use them in their sickness, or whoever shall keep them in their homes, may be healed. May the devil and his evil spirits depart and flee in fear and trembling from their homes and no more dare to disturb those serving Thee. Through Christ Our Lord, Amen."

Frosh Mothers At Sunday Tea

Sunday afternoon at three o'clock the mothers of the Freshmen met in Harkins Hall for Tea. The event was sponsored by the Veridames of Providence College. The purpose of the affair was to acquaint the mothers with the school and each other.

The Veridames is an organization made up of the mothers of the students and alumni, and also women interested in the school. Their purpose is to further the interests of Providence College religiously, social-

Mass Of Holy Ghost To Be Held Mon.; All Must Attend

Monday morning, October 3, the school year will be officially opened with the celebration of the Mass of The Holy Ghost. All Catholic students are to attend. The Mass will be celebrated at 9 a.m. at the War Memorial Grotto. All students who have 8:30 classes must attend them, but they will be dismissed in sufficient time to attend the services. Classes will resume at 10:40 and the day will take its natural course.

GOLF NEWS

There will be a very important meeting of the Golf Club on Monday, October 3, 1955, at 7 p.m. in the Business Building. All members are urged to attend, and others interested in joining are invited to be present at the meeting presided over by Mr. Joseph Prisco, the faculty moderator.

ly and culturally. The record of this organization's past deeds is evidence of the good that they have done, are doing, and will continue to do.

The Veridames is moderated by Rev. Edward A. McDermott, O.P. Father remarked, about the afternoon, "... the success of the Tea was overwhelming and its purpose was accomplished; and I hope that all the future events, sponsored by the Veridames, will be equally received."
