

STAN MOORE WILL PLAY AT FRIAR FORMAL DECEMBER 10

Lorraine Will Be Featured Vocalist At Only All College Formal Held On Campus This Year

Stan Moore and his ten-piece band, featuring Lorraine as vocalist, has been selected to play at the Friar Formal on Friday evening, December 10, in Harkins Hall.

After considering several bands, the committee decided in favor of Moore's aggregation because of its popularity with P. C. students. Stan played at the Friar Dance last year and at the Monogram Club and Commencement Dances of the previous school year.

The Friars Club, the campus hospitality group composed of students elected from the various classes, is the only organization that sponsors an all college formal dance on the campus. Bids available to the entire student body are three dollars per couple. In order to reduce the cost of the dance to the students, the com-

A discussion was held as to whether or not Salve Regina's paper should be admitted to the group. Miss Byrne

P.C. Flyers Search For Missing Priest

Two members of the Providence College flying club, Dr. Vincent Oddo and Charles S. Perry, in an Army L-4 liaison plane joined with special searching forces of the state last Thursday, November 18, in an attempt to locate the body of the Rev. John J. Casey, a curate at St. Charles' Church, Woonsocket, who was washed overboard from a boat and drowned in heavy surf while on a fishing expedition off Point Judith last Wednesday.

Father Casey, who was born in Providence, attended Providence College before going to St. Anselm's College, Manchester, N. H. He studied for the priesthood at St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore, Md., and was ordained in June, 1936.

Up to the time of this issue Father Casey's body has not been found.

Phi-Chi Club Party Tonight In Harkins

The Phi-Chi Club will stage an informal party tonight in the student lounge of Harkins Hall.

The entertainment committee plans to show a comedy movie and a sports short. The party committee, under the direction of William Carroll of Hartford, anticipating the hunger and thirst of the partygoers have prepared "a mountain of sandwiches and a river of refreshments."

The club, composed of students majoring in physics or chemistry, is moderated by the Rev. James B. Hackett, O.P., of the chemistry department.

Junior Class Selects Prom Co-chairmen

William D. Ealahan from New London, Conn., and Philip E. Cunningham from Providence are co-chairmen of the Junior Prom Committee. They were selected by the Junior Class officers and an advisory board from the class consisting of Frank de Palo, Arthur Hoey and James Coughlin.

Ealahan, a Navy veteran, was President of his Sophomore class and was instrumental in making the Sophomore Hop of that year a success. An honor student and a Carolan club member, Ealahan has been active in sport's activities, playing with the Freshman basketball team and promoting the Sophomore Smoker of last year.

Cunningham, a day student, graduated from La Salle Academy. He spent three years in the Army Air Force before enrolling at the College. Cunningham was a committee-man for the Sophomore Hop and has taken part actively in the Intramural Football and Basketball programs.

Over One Hundred Couples At Seniors' Forty-Niners Dance

Over one hundred couples attended the "Forty-Niners" dance held by the Senior Class last Friday night in Harkins Hall. Singing Bandleader Tommy McMann and his orchestra provided the music for the first completely informal dance in the history of the college.

Decorations were executed so as to effect the atmosphere of the gold rush days. Hanging from the rotunda was a mannequin with a large placard bearing the indictment "Horse Thief". The centerpiece in the auditorium was a pup tent surrounded by picks, gold-plated shovels and bricks. Reward posters were spotted around the hall.

A typical mining town saloon was set up in the lounge to dispense "coke", cider and doughnuts. In one corner of the lounge Friar Foto was busy taking pictures of the dancers utilizing such props as gold bricks, picks and a western saddle.

One of the committee quizzed at the dance summed up the affair by saying, "The evening was as colorful as the bright outfits worn and everyone was as informal as his dress."

PRAYER OF THANKSGIVING

There is a natural welling of gratitude in our hearts this year, as we survey again the bounty with which God's favor has blessed our land. Not only do we possess in abundance the cheer with which our tables are heaped on Thanksgiving Day, but in comparison with other lands we are rich in opportunities, in freedom, in security, in education. There is a natural welling of gratitude in our hearts this year, as we survey again the bounty with which You have blessed our land. We at Providence College are particularly grateful for the opportunity of learning of the basic relationships which condition the life of the student—relationship with God, relationship with the Church, relationship with human beings, and relationship with the natural environment. O God, of Whose mercies there is no number, and of Whose goodness the treasure is infinite, we render thanks to Your most gracious Majesty for the gifts you have bestowed upon us.

THE NEW MARKING SYSTEM

Our new Letter System of marking here at the college has immersed the campus in a tidal wave of controversy. It is not solely a question of the relative performance versus grading by letters. The misapprehension and confusion concerning the method and function of the new system apparently extends beyond the limits of the student body.

However, it may be that we are exaggerating the matter out of all due proportion to its influence upon our individual scholastic standing. We are manufacturing a chimera out of a chipmunk, by presuming that the system will effect a radical change in our marks. According to those responsible for introducing the transition from numbers to letters, the system is actually a more equitable way of grading the individual and placing him in a group.

For some strange reason men are usually opposed to change, especially when there is no apparent personal advantage entailed. In the case of the new marking system the change is not one of principle but rather one of method. This method is designed to give an advantage to the individual pursuing a particular course of study by evaluating scholastic ability and initiative rather than condemn a certain percentage of the student body to a guillotine of cold mathematical formulae.

Like all changes the program will take time to become fully operative. Certain adjustments and refinements must be made by the administration. But there is no reason to assume that the student's standing will suffer during the transition. In a majority of colleges and universities throughout the country the letter system is the universal means of gauging qualifications for graduate work. Let's not assume that Providence College has fallen off the scholastic gold standard. We may ultimately discover that by adopting the universal coin of the academic realm the college has selected a better bargaining agent for her citizens in the academic world.

It is only fair that the student receive grades indicative of his comprehension and ability to handle a subject. But in our little intellectual conceits perhaps we are placing too much emphasis on marks and are merely using the change as a foil for a good general "gripe" on the arbitrary standards of grades in general. We do feel, however, that the student body should receive a comprehensive explanation of the purpose and function of the new marking system. Individual faculty members have endeavored to enlighten some of us; if the Administration would give us a similar interpretation of the change in the grading policy at our class assemblies, it would resolve many of our misgivings and clarify both the faculty and the student position. This we respectfully request.

Ten Minute Break

By J. V. S.

Just thinking: While riding back on the H. M. Special Sunday night I tried to think of a couple of ideas for this column. As a matter of fact, I did get many mental images but couldn't put them in words. My thoughts and eyes were gawking all over the car. Particularly disconcerting, but pleasantly so, were several lassies sitting around me who were bound for New London and the Connecticut College for Women.

Their fur coats draped nonchalantly across their shoulders and their smartly tailored ankle-length skirts spelled money with a capital M. For after three years of Sunday night traveling, you get to know your fellow passengers, especially the attractive ones. However, my knowledge of the Ivy League Weekenders has been gleaned mostly from "over the shoulder and in the left ear" conversations. Regardless of how tired the girls might be from the hectic goings on at football parties, they manage to squeeze in a few words about their dates and "mommies" and "daddies."

The girls never just go to dinner. It usually consists of a short drive in the country, a "divinely" prepared dinner in the "quaintest" inn, a late movie, and then a midnight supper. After the weekend news has been hashed over, the talk centers around the family. "Mommy bought a smooth mink jacket the other day. Daddy told her to get it because he was successful in selling Mr. Sinus 700 shares of Jones' Brothers White Nose Drops.

Well, getting back to an idea for this column, I got to thinking that maybe a few words on the Effect of Money would be in order. But I vetoed that inspiration. For I was afraid that I would be too biased in my opinions, seeing as how it is that I live from month to month on what my Uncle sends me.

Again I thought that Providence College was a nice place to be coming back to. And that going to College sounded (and felt) much better than going to work. But pretty soon the "honeymoon" would be over and then what? Of course graduate school might be a way out, but it would merely be a short sojourn because my Uncle, though a generous soul, will carry me on the payroll just so long. However, I could get married and have my wife provide me with the necessities of life. But surely there must be an easier and less involved way of gaining security, though a good many fellows have told me that's the very reason why they got married.

As the train neared Providence my thoughts rambled on. So I gave up the idea of thinking and just concentrated on the Thanksgiving holidays.

Club News: The Woonsocket club is sponsoring a Thanksgiving dance to be held at the Sacred Heart Hall in Woonsocket, Friday, November 26. Fern Mandeville will provide the musical background. TIME OUT!

Veterans' Corner

By Anthony Jarzombek

Approximately 16,000,000 G.I. policy holders will share in a luscious service insurance melon. The juicy fruit is a surplus that has been estimated at between $1,500,000,000 and $2,000,000,000, and is a result of overcharges on premiums, due to faulty actuarial tables.

The surplus will be paid out, tentatively in about a year, in the form of service insurance dividends. However, the VA said, about 500,000 veterans will share de bonis non. This group will have either all or part of their checks withheld, either because of being overpaid for education or training subsistence, or for having defaulted on G.I. loans, without making proper refund. Which just goes to show that you might beat the government once in awhile, but you won't get away with it for long.

SPORTS PANORAMA

BASKETBALL BACK . . .

Before another issue of this newspaper has gone to press the Providence College basketball quintet will have played their opening basketball game of the 1948-49 campaign. This game is against Assumption College at Worcester, a week from Saturday night.

The opener will mark the beginning of a long trail for Larry Drew, Hal Martin and their boys. Before the Ides of March the Friars will have completed perhaps the toughest schedule in Providence College basketball history. It has been many years since such names as Holy Cross, Rhode Island State, Yale, St. Francis, Brown, Seton Hall, Boston College and Brooklyn College appeared on one and the same schedule.

For Drew and the Friar players, this is a big year. He feels that he has a good ball club, a club that will win a lot of games. They feel that they will back up the feeling of their coach. But many things can upset the best laid plans. A turned ankle here and a swollen finger there and everything is thrown out of line.

In the practice sessions to date, the Friars have not looked like world beaters, but there is a reason for that. Hardly ever has the same combination played together two days in a row. This because Drew wants to make sure that when he does select his first five, they are the best five possible from the material on hand.

The club seems to have more depth than the last two Friar editions. They are on a whole a bit bigger. Both things will work to their advantage.

At the moment the biggest danger threatening the players is that they might be looking forward to the third game on the schedule, the Holy Cross encounter Dec. 11th at the Auditorium. In looking forward to that joust with the Crusaders, they could look right past Assumption and Fairfield and be caught napping. It has happened to ball clubs before, but I doubt that Drew will let the players cast Assumption and Fairfield from their minds, especially after the scare the Friars received in their opener against Assumption a year ago.

This year the Friars will play their home games at the Mount Pleasant Gym. This gymnasium is considered one of the best, if not the best, in the city. The seating capacity is about the same as the City Gym where the Friars played for the last two years. However, the playing surface is much bigger and that should benefit the P. C. players, as their game emphasizes passing, cutting and a lot of circling maneuvers before the actual charge for the basket.

With the increased enrollment at the College and the location of the Mount Pleasant Gym, it is hard to see how the Friars will play before anything but a full house in their home contests this season. The new home court of the Friars is just a short walk from the College and not too far from the center of town. The Rhode Island State and Holy Cross games at the Auditorium will in all probability be sell-outs. It looks like a banner year in P. C. basketball. I think the team will give the students and followers something to cheer about. There is a growing suspicion that they are pretty good. We shall see.

Under the Hoop

(This is the second in a series of articles introducing the members of the Providence College basketball squad of 1948-49.)

Having established himself as one of the most outstanding basketball players to appear on the Providence College campus in a number of years, Walter Lozoski is starting his third year on a P. C. quintet. The Hazelton, Pennsylvania lad, one of the most popular men on the campus, has played outstanding basketball for the past two years, and last year he was honored by being selected as a guard on the All-Lithuanian Basketball Team of America.

It is around Lozoski that most of Larry Drew's intricate offensive basketball maneuvers begin. He is the man that sets them in motion. His poise and ability on the basketball court are things of beauty.

When speaking of some of the great shots in basketball history, those who were present at the Rhode Island Auditorium last winter, when the Friars played Rhode Island State, will have a just claim in asserting that they saw one of the best. In that contest with one second remaining in the first half, Lozoski, from 5 feet in back of the center line, let go a tremendous arching shot that whistled cleanly through the nets without ever touching the rim. That shot tied the score and the roar that greeted it was deafening.

Last season Lozoski scored 188 points to finish second in the individual scoring among the Friars players. One of his great thrills was winning the Jack Dempsey Award, a beautiful trophy, as the outstanding athlete in Providence College two years ago.

The Hazelton boy played baseball, football, and basketball at West Hazelton High in his home state and he is a veteran of National A.A.U. baseball competition. He was a member of one of the great service basketball teams, the Williams Field Flyers, during the war years, a team that had another pretty good basketball player by the name of Larry Drew.

Lozoski is a member of the Junior Class and plans to enter the coaching field after graduation.

Coates Looks Ahead To Indoor Contests This Winter Season

By BOB FLANAGAN

Now that the cross-country season has been completed and the indoor track time is approaching, the spirit of track is rapidly moving at Providence College. It won't be too long now before the construction of the wooden track is completed and the tracksters will be circling the boards in preparation for the winter indoor meets.

Coach Harry Coates announced that not only would the Friar tracksters partake in the national indoor and outdoor meets throughout the winter and spring months, but dual meets will be scheduled for the freshmen and varsity squads. The Frosh will entertain such opponents as the neighboring high schools and other college freshmen clubs.

The varsity team will engage other collegiate squads in the New England vicinity. Coates declared that Brown University would definitely be one of the Friar opponents this spring track season. With the scheduling of dual meets by the track department, a big step is being taken in that field of endeavor. With the meets on the campus, there should definitely be an attraction for the sports-minded of the student body. A good dual meet on the campus will add luster to the already intriguing sport of track and field at the College.

Also, it was announced by Harry Coates, that the plans for the Providence College Indoor Track and

P.C. Hoopmen Battle For Starting Berths

The Providence College Friars' basketball forces are entering the final phases of their pre-season training program this week. With only about a week of practice sessions remaining before the opener with Assumption College, the makeup of the first five will be decided during the remaining workouts.

In the practice sessions, Larry Drew has not given any definite indications of his final selection for the opener. He has been using different teams every day trying to find the best combination possible.

Last week the Friars received a tough blow when Ray Garcia and Tom Orr were both injured. Orr came up with a sprained ankle during one of the scrimmage sessions

WINNER TO PLAY STATE OR BROWN DePALMA LEADS NEW HAVENITES

By DICK BOULET

As a result of last week's action, New Haven and Guzman Hall earned the right to play for the intramural football championship of P.C. In the first playoff game, the team from New Haven romped over the Dalmatians, 38-18, and thus moved into the finals Haven offense, D'Ambrosia, also performed creditably. Pelligrino performed ably at the end as he caught several passes, one catch being especially good.

In one of the most heated arguments of the season, the Dalmatians protested a pass which was ruled complete by the student referees. DePalma threw to Dempsey who momentarily held onto the ball, but dropped it without having gained full control. He dropped the ball while standing in the end zone, yet the pass was ruled complete on the two yard line.

Details of the playoff game between New Haven and the Dalmatians are as follows:

New Haven 38, Dalmatians 18
On Thursday afternoon New Haven scored a convincing victory over the Dalmatians, 38-18. The game, bringing together the two highest scoring squads in the leagues, decided which team was to meet the Freshman victor for the championship. Both teams displayed a crisp attack, as they concentrated on offense. The two team total of 56 points set a season scoring record.

Led by the brilliant passing of De Palma, the New Haveners rolled up six touchdowns. Picone paced the scorers as he registered 12 points. Four players, Pelligrino, Daneky, Heavron and Dempsey scored a TD apiece for New Haven. Beatrice and Dempsey scored the extra points.

The Dalmatians scoring was divided among three players, Girouard, Lonergan and Malsano, each of whom scored a six-pointer. Lonergan played an exceptionally good all-around game, standing out in a losing cause. Hoey and Girouard also turned in spirited performances in vain.

The high spot of the game, however, was the brilliant passing of DePalma. The other passer in the New gave a talk on Ebb Tide since its inception in December of last year. At present it combines the office of newspaper and literary magazine but by next year Salve Regina expects to have a separate literary magazine and to edit Ebb Tide as a newspaper. Because some of the members of the Association were not familiar with this paper it was decided to postpone voting on its admittance to the group to the next meeting, which will be held January 15, at a school to be designated by the officers of the Intercollegiate Association.

The Collegiate Press Exhibition, held at Brown University last year, was discussed and Art Rogers offered the facilities of Providence College for this year's exhibit, which will be held sometime in March or April. Father Slavin, O.P., President of Providence College, has signified his willingness to allow the Intercollegiate Press Association to use Albertus Magnus Hall for the exhibition. Miss Di Saro and Mr. Cooper were appointed to see Mr. Frank Greene at R. I. C. E. about interesting the high schools of the State in the exhibition.

The members of the group decided that Pembroke College and The Rhode Island School of Design should be invited to send representatives to the next meeting so that all Rhode Island colleges may benefit from the work of the Association, the prime purpose of which is to sponsor good relations among the schools of the State.

While the Press Association meeting was on, a committee for the revue of college yearbooks, held a meeting in another room. The members of the yearbook committee are: Ruth Mandeville and Barbara Williams from R. I. C. E.; Bob Sweet and Manuel E. Nunes from Bryant; Dick Soderberg from Rhode Island State; Herculano Vicente from Y. M. C. A.; Paul Francis and Jack Feeley from Providence College.

Bureau Head Talks On Business World

Mr. W. C. Willman, manager of the Providence Better Business Bureau, spoke to the members of the Ship and Scales club last Thursday night on the "Malpractices in Business." Mr. Willman stressed, in effect, "that the old axiom of 'locking the barn door after the horse has been stolen' is the common error committed by individuals and businessmen even today."

The speaker emphasized that where doubt exists in a business venture as to the reliability of either party, the Better Business Bureau should be contacted. They will in turn consider the parties impartially and render their opinion on the particular venture.

Preceding the speaker, a short business meeting was held. Mr. H. Sherman, president, appointed Mr. R. W. Reuter, '49, to the Board of Governors as representative of the Senior business classes.

A social hour with refreshments concluded the program.

FLYING CLUB MEETS

The Providence College Flying Club held its first night meeting last Thursday evening at seven-thirty in the Old Auditorium in Harkins Hall.

Dr. Vincent Oddo, president of the club, outlined the progress made so far in establishing the club. The club's plane, an Aeronca Chief, is now being overhauled at the State Airport at Hillsgrove.

The Decoration Committee, headed by Robert Finn, '49, of Norwich, Conn., will utilize the holiday theme in the decorations for the dance. and Garcia sprained a finger. How long both will be out is problematic. The loss of either for any considerable time would dampen the hopes of the Friars considerably.

The Friars will travel to Worcester for the opener and Drew is expecting a rough contest remembering full well how last year an underdog Assumption club came to Providence and played the Friars to a standstill for most of the game. Physically, with the exception of the two injured members of their cast, the Friars appear to be in excellent shape. Drew has the men running for long stretches and none seem the worse for wear.
