The Month Of May. . .

Recently, during Holy Week, we heard the Passion of Saint John read. In it Our Lord gave Mary to all men as their mother. Mary, therefore, has a special love for us—the love of a mother for her children. We cannot possibly estimate the favors she obtains for us from the Hand of God.

If Mary so loves us, do we not have an obligation to love her in return? If she is our mother, then we are her sons. It is a poor son indeed who ignores his mother. Since she obtains so many favors for us, we should son mocea who ignores his mother. Since she obtains so many favors for us, we should show our love and appreciation. Through her many appearances, Our Lady has told us that the best way to honor her is to pray the Rosary. She has promised to give peace to the world, if enough people say the Rosary deliv.

During this month of May which is dedicated to Mary, we should make a special effort to honor her. One of the best means is to say her Rosary daily. Undoubtedly we can all fit fifteen minutes a day into our schedules. Daily Mass is, of course, the most pleasing way. The mid-morning Mass is being continued, so all have an ample opportunity.

Courageous Knight. . .

With the passing this week of Edmund W. Flynn, chief justice of the Rhode Island Supreme Court for the last twenty-two years, the state and the nation have lost a man whose life was dedicated to his fellow man, his country, and his Maker. Edmund Flynn, in the highest judicial office in the state, never forgot his duties to the people of his state or his responsibilities as a Christian gentleman. In the field of law, which today is both competitive and in many cases, a masterpiece of mediocrity and compromise, he served commendably—diligently and honestly rising above his competition — never satisfied with mediocrity, never unjustifiably compromising. He conducted his professional life as he lived his private one—hardworking understanding, loyal to the principles he held —and he met the many important problems presented him with perceptive responsibility and wholly honest decisions—most of them the results of long, added hours of arbitration and deep thought. His brilliant mind never functioned without his basic philosophy of life, and the manner in which he unwaveringly clung to his ideals made him an outstanding example to which all professional men might well aspire.

The fact that Mr. Flynn was a Catholic is unimportant; the fact that he lived a sincere and devoted Catholic life-both professionally and privately-is important, for it demonstrates how a successful professional life may be attained with Catholic tenets serving as guide posts and as examples for others to observe and perhaps to follow. The papal honor of Knight Commander with Star of the Order of St. Gregory the Great, was awarded him in 1950 for the zeal and devotion shown by him to his Church, the Church for which he was never too busy-or too successful-to support in every possible way. Yes, Edmund W. Flynn was an outstanding lawyer, an esteemed justice, and a good Christian. Above all, though, his main characteristic was probably courage. A man is courageous who can meet a materially-minded world squarely and enter a competitive field so often devoid of Christian principles bringing luster to both by observing the laws intended by God and taught by his Church.

Look To The Future. .

On April 16th at 1:40 p.m. an important meeting was held for all active COWL members. The purpose of this meeting was to distinguish the active members from the passive, to separate the men from the boys. However, only forty percent of those listed in the COWL's masthead under the title "staff" attended. This representation magnified the purpose of the meeting, and was typical of previous meetings. But, this will not continue to be so! to be so!

Several topics of importance to all were discussed. Included were assignments, dead-lines, meeting attendance, membership, and copy presentation.

- Assignments the assignment sheet will be posted on the COWL bulletin boards on will be posted on the COWL bulletin boards on Wednesday afternoon (second floor Harkins Hall and opposite the COWL office). Voting Vexation. . .

For the last two years Student Congress elections at Providence College have been, for the most part, failures. This, some say, is due to the lack of school spirit exemplified by the students. Others will tell you that there is not enough publicity given to the elections. Whatever the answer may be, there is definitely a serious situation existing and it would seem that the Student Congress, which represents the entire student body, should investigate and alleviate the problem.

The meat secont exemple of this was the gate and alleviate the problem.

The most recent example of this was the sophomore class Student Congress elections. On Tuesday at the assembly, scheduled for the purpose of letting the class listen to the candidates for office present their platforms, only 15 members, including the prospective representatives, were present and the assembly was cancelled. Wednesday the polls were open from 8:30 to 2:30 and as in past elections the turnout was extremely poor, a mere 42% exercised their voting privilege. This, however, was due in part to Wednesday being the last day before the Easter vacation and by 12:30 the majority of students had already left the campus. Another reason was the change in location of the polls. Instead of being held in Harkins Auditorium, they were located in the Student Lounge because the auditorium was being used as a chapel.

The example of the Sophomore Class is not

The example of the Sophomore Class is a The example of the Sophomore Class is not necessarily indicative of that class alone, but rather of the entire four classes. For this reason, definite steps should be taken by the Student Congress in bringing this situation to the attention of the Administration. Some suggestions in this respect might be a change in the hour which assemblies are held (perhaps back to the same time they were formerly held), a permanent location for the polls, and more stringent rules concerning the qualifications and campaigns of the candidates for office. dates for office.

If these conditions are taken into consider ation and prompt action is taken, not only congress elections, but all elections' at Providence College will be conducted with a maximum amount of efficiency on the part of the Congress running the elections, and a maximum amount of cooperation from the candismum amount of cooperation from the candismum.

Sir—If you can find space in THE
COWL for a letter from the father

or a P.C. student, I would like to say a word about the recent appearance of Dr. Bella Dodd on your campus. I have heard Dr. Dood speak on two or three occasions—one of these was about three years ago when she talked informally in a private home in Rutherford, N.J., the town in which we live. There was about 20 pers present, mature men and women of present, mature men and women of a fairly broad political, business and educational background. They all listened intently to her not for 30 minutes, but for several hours—and with profit, I am sure.

I was quite pleased when our son told us that Dr. Dodd was to speak before the entire student body at Providence. She is especially well qualified and her topic was one with which every college student should have at least a rudimentary acquaintare at least a rudimentary acquaint events from Yalta to Korea.

A careful rereading of it failed to make clear to me a number of references which the writer apparent-ly sought to convey. He did indicate in one paragraph, however, that the students' "intellectual retention" of what they had heard was approximate-ly zero, and that as college students they did not need to have everything spelled out for them. A person can-not retain something which he does not comprehend, but if it is spelled out for him, what excuse have?

The implication I received from the editorial is that Dr. Dodd was responsible in some way for the lack of intellectual retention on the part of the audience, and that what she said was old hat to them. This reaction, and the even more

Perhaps the failure of the speaker to make herself better understood, if that is what occurred, resulted directly from the 30-minute time limitation.

It can be remedied, however. Dodd has reduced a great deal of her experiences with Communism to writing in a book, "School of Dark-ness." Douglas Hyde, one-time editor of the Communist daily newspaper of England, has written a short but tre-mendously forceful book called "An-swer to Communism." I don't know about anyone else, but for myself, I'm just a little tired I don't know about anyone else, but for myself, I'm just a little tured of the South, reconstructed or otherwise. What brought about this sudden decision on my part was a play presented on the 21st of April by Studio One (CBS, 10 P.M.). The producers of this program usually know better, but on this particular Monday night they presented a little piece of nothing called, "Traveling Lady," by Horton Foote. Those who are familiar with Kraft Theater are also familiar with Horton Foote.

Kim Stanley appeared as the traveling lady, a role she had played in the Broadway production. The story was simple enough. Beautiful young lady with small inquisitive daughter goes in search of recently paroled husband whom the child has never seen. Complications arise, and recently paroled husband is hauled off to the hoosegow again after seeing his daughter in what amounts to the flattest farewell in the dreary history of television dearer.

All the stock characters were there. Miss Stanley performed in the usual manner, the scatter-brained heroine with the dreamy voice, and a drawl that should have been forgotten after the first battle of Bull Run. Miss Stanley, in the leading role, had quite a portion of dialogue to handle, and though I neglected to count the exact number, she used very few one syllable words. "There" came out "thay-uh," "You" usually came out "yoo-oo" with sundry "oo's" added as the tension progressed. After a half hour one gets tired of translating.

I wasn't the least bit surprised when another stock character turned up. Actually there were two actresses, but as far as the technical end goes, these two made up one character. This of course was the elderly Southern woman with the wandering mind and her equally wandering daughter. From time to time this character wandered across the set, talking in the same dreamy (Continued on Page 8)

Round and About

By Paul F. Crane

Elsewhere in the COWL this week, there is a letter from a Mr. Dunphy. In this letter he made direct refer ence to a previous column of mine. I would like to say that I was very pleased to receive this letter. It shows that the parents are interested in school matters outside the scholastic field. I do not expect every-body to agree with me, and am al-ways happy to hear the comments of those who don't.

First of all, I would like to clear up a misconception that Mr. Dunphy and others, received from this arti-cle. I do not think that Mrs. Dodd is still a communist. I do not think is still a communist. I do not think that I over-emphasized that idea. I merely introduced the thought as an interesting sidelight. I prefaced it with, "Most likely Mrs. Dodd is sin-cere," and ended the paragraph by stating, "I admit that this is unlike-ly, but not out of the realm of pos-sibility." It seems that Mr. Dunphy took this as the conclusion of my article. I think he either mis-read my words, or read something into them that wasn't there.

I would like to point out to Mr.
Dunphy that while an effective college training would awaken us to such a vital problem, it would not force us all to hold the same opinions concerning it, or the most ef-fective methods to combat it. I realize fully that this matter of Comrealize fully that this matter of Com-munism is one of the greatest evils which faces our civilization. How-ever, the point, or at least what was meant to be the point, of my article was that we should not use exactly the same methods as the Commu-nists. The fight will be a hard one, I admit, but we can never afford to forget that we are Christians. Once we abandon our Christian principles, we are as guilty as they are. Mili-lary tactics should be our last rewe are as guilty as they a tary tactics should be our source, and not our starting point.
As I stated, I think the idea of each individual, in his daily life, giving a Christian example is a powerful counterbalance to any philosophies opposed to our way of life.

opposed to our way of life.

Mr. Dunphy further suggests that writings on Communism should be required reading for Catholic college students. Here at Providence College, there is no lack of emphasis on this subject. In many courses, on this subject. In many courses, there are definite reading requirements and assignments on it. In our philosophy courses, Communism is studied as being opposed to Christian philosophy. I do not think that there is any lack of interest in this subject among college students, as it subject among college students, as it is we who are going to have to solve the problem ultimately.

Murraymen Face BU Friars Open Listed Tomorrow; URI Sat.

By Paul Coleman

If the sun shines bright on Friday afternoon in Beantown the Friar baseball squad is in for a game that will be hotter than anything old Sol could provide all by himself. The reason? It's the Boston University Terriers. B.U. has a great baseball tradition (remember Harry Agannis and Tommy Gastall) and the Scarlet has come through again this year.

Len Dempsey, hard hitting out-fielder, is a returning letterman and one of the best men on Harry Cleverly's guad. At short is Joe O'Hara; this 20 year old sophomore is already being paged by the major leagues as is third baseman Ed Asaley. Perhaps a little thin on pitching, the Terriers more than Nicholas S O'Hara pitching, the Terriers more than make up for it with their good hit-ters. Don MacLeod leads the mound-LaFontaine staff and is backed by Jim Palavras and Bill Possiel. However, if the Friars Bud Slattery can latch on to last year's form there'll be many dissappointed B.U. men.

B.U. has victories over North-eastern (54), MIT (7-6) and Boston College (15-8) to name only three. In the B.C. game, the Terriers took a 14-2 lead, but Cleverly took out MacLeod when the Eagles rallied and inserted Palayras who finished, pitching shutout ball.

Adequate Rhode Is-land pitching this year, mostly by nerp themserves get a grip on the intra-state title. Adequate Rhode Is-land pitching this year, mostly by senior right handed Ray Peltier, has been obscured by sloppy fielding. In fact, this tendency to botch things up on defense has cost the Rams more than one ball game already this spring. Against Maine the Rams com-mitted 4 errors and allowed 4 unearned runs to go down to a 6-5 de-feat: they gave 5 undeserved tallies to Springfield and lost 8-7 but they outdid themselves when they kicked in 10 miscues in their 9-4 loss to New Hampshire.

Most likely, Joe Guglielmo will get Mr. Murray's nomination as the man most likely to succeed on the mound for the Friars. Joe relieved Larry Cummings in the Yale game, and after overcoming some early wildness gave up only 4 hits in 7 2/3

By Bob Ruggeri

The Coatesmen journeyed down to Philadelphia last week to kick off the 1957 outdoor season. The 63rd annual Penn Relays was the meet, which drew 3000 athletes from all over the East Coast and Texas. Fri-day, the mile relay team of Jim Baker, Don Fahey, Tom Cummings, and Gerry Farley ran a creditable race, but the best they could do was fourth. This was due to many things: the track, competition, and the Easter vacation. It was mainly due to the lack of competition, as this was the first meet the Friars have appeared in since February.

On Saturday the sprint medley was the event, with the team of Baker, Fahey, Cummings, and Farley again running 440, 220, 220, and 880 respectively. The team ran a good race but the forces of the bigger schools like St. John's, Ohio, and the University of Maryland proved too much for them and the best they could do was sixth. All in all this ultimate in competition proved good experience for the team

In spite of Ed Aron's good showings in the discus and shot put he was just edged out of the placings, taking sixth in both events.

The New Haven Club of Providence College recently awarded trophies to the outstanding members of this past season's basketball and hockey squads. Recipients of the trophies were Seniors Mike McDonough of the hockey team and basketball captain John Ritch. A board selecting the winners was comprised of Robert Tiernan, New Haven Club president; Mr. Gustave Cote, of the Business Department; Rev. Father Jordan, Philosphy Department; Thomas Cahill, baseball captain; and James Westwater, Sports Editor of the COWL.

Ritacco Hurls Friars To Initial Victory

Backed by a strong eight hit attack, and an effective five hit chore by Bobby Ritacco, Providence College's baseball squad recorded a 74 decision over American International College in the Friars' home opener at Hendricken Field Monday afternoon.

The win snapped a six game losing streak for the locals and was the first of the year for the Black and White.

• Mike McDonough, who by the time he graduates will have completed three years of varsity play in three different sports: hockey, baseball and track. He came to P.C. from Malden Catholie High School, where he had attained New England fame mainly because of his versatility. His best hockey season was in his sophomore year, in which he averaged an amazing 53 minutes per game. It was at this time that the Boston Bruins expressed an interest in him. Iron Mike, as he is known, has also had his share of rough breaks, including the loss of many teeth, and a badly fractured ankle in last year's attempt to steal home in a baseball game with Bridgeport. After college, Mike plans to enter the accounting field, if he doesn't have an opportunity to play sports for a living.

John Ritch, the star center and aptain of this past season's basketball team, is a product of Archbishop Stepinac High School in White Plains, New York. In addition to baskethall there, he was also a tackle on their football team. His best performances on this year's team were against Brandeis (20), Brown (17), St. Francis of Loretto (28), and Loyola (24). Beside his scoring, John proved to be a fine defensive player on the court During the past three years, Ritch has been P.C's. top rebounder, and often the only one. Despite Defeats, Varsity Baseball Team Flashes Good Form In South

Like several other New England baseball teams, Providence College's diamond squad fell prey to one of the well drilled units of the South in the Friars' Southern saving last week.

Earlier this Spring, Amherst, Brown, Harvard, and Yale came home on the short end of their stays in Dixie.

The Providence excursion to foreign lands proved disastrous as far as wins go, but all action appears to have more readied the Friars for coming local play. The Murraymen jelled well in the trip and suffered only from the Performing well enough to win most any other time, the Providence College baseball team made its 1957 debut on a losing side. In their first College baseball team made its 1957 debut on a losing side. In their first trip down South in recent years the Luckless Friars fell prey to a strong quantico Marine club three times. The starters had a lough time lasting five innings, and the relievers pitched fine ball, but did not receive from their teammates the necessary run producing hits. When the relievers started they had the same early inning fitters and had to be taken out. Injuries to key players also proved to be an important factor in PC/S disfavor.

Three runs were already home in the ninth, but the Friars fell short in the Virginia opener, 65, with the ticing run left stranded on third base. The Murraymen bunched three hits for three runs in the second game, but lost the curtailed contest, 63, in five innings. The writings of such people and many others which are available could be and in my opinion should be incorporated into a required reading program for all college students. Spread over four years, it could turn out graduates who are soundly equipped to take their places in an intelligent defense of their country and their Church against the diabolical conspiracy which thus far has subjugated 16 nations and murdered and enslaved millions of people in the course of a few years voice, mumbling about cemeteries, "daid pussons," et cetera, ad nauseam. One of the brightest parts of the production was the seene in which Henry, the paroled husband, came reeling out of the woods, obviously drunk, and fell into the hands of the waiting constable, or policeman, or sheriff, or whatever he was. I imagine the script read like this Enter Henry, out of a hog wallow, dripping mud and very drunk "I gotta do right by 'em! I gotta do right by 'em."

Henry thrashes around and falls into the arms of the lawman, shouting: "I gotta, etc.

Miss Stanley as something Rose, or Rose something.

Now Haynree, Now Haynree, You-oo go 'long with him; yays, you gotta go 'long with him."

Henry: "I gotta, etc."

Lawman: "Henry, you-oo come 'long with me."

Henry: "I gotta, etc."

Repeat the above four times, then change the scene. Someday I'll write a Do-it-yourself book on Southern mood plays.

The whole thing resolved itself as well as could be expected. The little daughter was granted a first and final look at her father before he was taken away to jail. Henry was briefed by Miss Stanley that the first thing has daughter would do, without doubt, would be to ask her father to sing "New San Antonio Rose." The child entered and very perfunctorily requested that her father sing the song, it wasn't that the child had acted badly, that's what the script called for, and that's what was done.

what the script called for, and that's what was done.
When all the commotion was over, the lawman, verbally blushing a brilliant vermillion, offered the traveling lady and her daughter a ride to the town in the valley. Thus it ends, with beautiful young lady and small inquisitive daughter ostensibly making a new home for themselves while Henry languishes in quod. It's enough to gag a buzzard.
Seriously, it seems that writers of drama should explore some new fields for subject matter. Either the decadent, unreconstructed South has fields for subject matter. Either the decadent, unreconstructed South has been completely explored from every point of view, or the new crop of dramatists, and this includes legitimate stage as well as television, is incapable of dealing with the subject matter in a masterly fashion. There has been a steady stream of written material, plays, novels, short stories and the like, with its setting and characters drawn from the bayous and backwoods of the South. Some have been good, even excellent. Carson McCullers has painted a portion of the South very well in "The Ballad of the Sad Cafe."

Perhaps this is the key to the situation. Many writers are trying to embrace too wide an area when they begin to speak of the South, and in attempting to so so they miss the subject completely and we forced to grower award. to do so, they miss the subject completely and are forced to grope around looking for what they have missed. That they seldom, if ever, find what they are looking for is a foregone conclusion.

Above I mentioned that I would someday write a Do-it-yourself book on Southern mood plays. I find I've been beaten to the punch by James Thurber, whose "Bateman Come Home" is the best guide for writers of Southern mood plays, novels, or short stories.
