

THE PROSE POEM: AN INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL

Volume 6 | 1997

Practicum
Michael Chitwood

© Providence College

The author(s) permits users to copy, distribute, display, and perform this work under the following conditions: (1) the original author(s) must be given proper attribution; (2) this work may not be used for commercial purposes; (3) the users may not alter, transform, or build upon this work; (4) users must make the license terms of this work clearly known for any reuse or distribution of this work. Upon request, as holder of this work's copyright, the author(s) may waive any or all of these conditions.

The Prose Poem: An International Journal is produced by The Berkeley Electronic Press (bepress) for the Providence College Digital Commons.
<http://digitalcommons.providence.edu/prosepoems/>

Michael Chitwood

PRACTICUM

One-eyed Jack is discussing theory with the barber. The barber has nicked Jack's ear.

"In theory, that shouldn't have happened," says the barber, tapping his glass-covered diploma from barber's school.

"That's the trouble with theories," Jack says, "they don't take into account the blood."

Jack winks at the boy waiting to get his cut. Jack was a winker long before he got his eye put out in a fight over a card game.

"Just a friendly game," Jack had said to the others when they caught him cheating. "That's the trouble with some people," Jack says to the barber and the boy, "they don't know the difference between a game and real life—between theory and the hard facts."

The hard fact was the toe of a steel-toed boot. Each time Jack winks, the boy disappears.