Annual Collegiate Bermuda Trip Scheduled During Easter Recess

The annual college flight to Bermuda will be held this spring during Easter vacation. The flight will leave Providence on Monday, April 7th and will return the following Saturday, April 12th.

Louis C. FitzGerald, advertising instructor, who has conducted the annual college week expedition, will again be in charge of reservations. Students interested in making the round trip should see Mr. FitzGerald in the Business Administration building.

Total cost of the vacation, which includes round trip plane fare from Providence to Hamilton, Bermuda, and room and breakfasts at the Montgomerie Cottages, Elbow Beach, has been established at $45. The Montgomery Cottages, which are located in Paget Parish, are situated in one of the most attractive spots on the island and are most convenient to the scene of the week's activities.

According to Mr. FitzGerald, there have been intercollegiate tennis, golf, and soccer matches arranged for the week's tour. College dances at the numerous hotels on the island will feature a different college each evening.

A deposit of $10 will be required by March 1st in order to hold space on the plane. Only seven seats remain because of 'other plane accommodations arranged for the week's tour.

The Administration has given its approval for an exhibit of art work of Providence College students. The exact time and date will be announced in next week's CWIL. The club's chartering members have stated that they are interested in making the round meeting time and date will also be announced.

The invitation was received as part of the local theater's policy of allowing nearly all college to stage showings of the artistic talent of their students. Among the other schools who have exhibited or have been invited to exhibit work are Salve Regina College, Rhode Island School of Design, Rhode Island College of Education, Brown, and University of Rhode Island.

Staff Health Office Will Administer Polio Vaccine

Providence College Student Health will undertake to administer Salk innoculations to those who may choose to take them—this will include freshmen and those who did not participate in the 1958 program, which Providence College financed.

The student must meet the expenses of this program, the charge being $5.00 for the series.

The fee is payable at the Office of the Bursar where a card will be issued for presentation at Student Health. If the student is in support of a "living wage", and of labor's right to organise to obtain this, as long as the laws are ethical.

Impressions...

Although first impressions may not always be logical, we know they are lasting: it is with this in mind that we present to the editors of the year several speakers are invited to address an assembly of the entire student body of Providence College. These assemblies afford a special opportunity for the student to gain an insight of what student life is, here at P. C.

A week before the assembly a notice is placed on the bulletin board in Harricks Hall stating that Student Activity Books must be on each students' person the day of the assembly. These assemblies afford a special opportunity for the student to gain an insight of what student life is, here at P. C.

The last two speakers have not had a chance to finish their talks due to the lateness of the hour, and the last speaker has not had a chance to finish his talk due to the lateness of the hour. Here are a few suggestions which have been made to improve these situations at assemblies:

This "compulsory" attitude should not be expressed. It is the right of the student to have their say and the right of the Administration to hear what the student has to say. Remembe

Also there is to be a free outing for members at the end of the school year. It was announced that $120 will be given to the support of the school's new mascot, Friar Boy V.

Dean Comments About Cafeteria Regulations
There have been objections on the part of some students and College students concerning the Administration's regulation that the Cafeteria "is not meant to be a meeting place for F. C. gentlemen and their friends." The question, often posed by the students, is: "Why not?" Rev. A. A. Jurgens, O.P., Dean of Discipline, recently made the following comments concerning the regulation.

First of all, the Administration points out that the regulation is not a very demanding one, since "very definite exceptions" are made for sport events, special weekends, and student activities, such as the Pyramid Players rehearsals, in which those of the fair sex participate. Secondly, it is contended that the regulation is necessary to prevent the generation of our cafeteria into a public restaurant. The "caf" was meant to be an outlet for the student; it is wholly undesirable to become a degrading place for local characters. Most important of all, it has been noted that the cafeteria's restaurant license is valid for the serving of food only to Providence College students. The license would be revoked if books which are unsold textbooks will be returned to their publishers on March 10. A deposit will hold a book for thirty days. Postage will be charged on books which are returned after the thirty days. Unsold textbooks will be returned to the Providence College Bookstore. All charges are to be made deposits during class hours. Students are requested not to attempt to make deposits during class breaks and at other times when regular store business is heavy.

Respect, whose object is honor, stands as a living reproach to the aimless and the lazy. He who is superior to us, while he must pay or not pay according to the virtue which we pay to those who are superior to us.

Respect Studied Under Observeance Of Justice
By Roland Mergener

Were you standing up cheering when your school's small team last Saturday night? That was a tremendous ovation. The P. C. spectators have shown great respect for the ability of the team, the fair play of the players, as well as for the individual talents of the players. If you were en­gaged in the regulation of the team, you were performing a duty which you know it best as respect, but theologians who study St. Thomas know that justice, for which is studied under justice.

Respect, whose object is honor, calls for a recognition of excellence and superiority in others. Rich rewards are waiting for the respectful—they become his benevolent persons, and win the admiration and respect of others. The respect of others is certainly useful and helpful in a demo­cratic society. In the area of things of the mind, the intellectual life sometimes drives even the strong to the "greasy grind" than to yield to the aimless and the lazy. He who is superior to us, while he must pay or not pay according to the virtue which we pay to those who are superior to us.

The debt one owes his perfection superiors is not one which he can pay off according to the way he feels at a given moment. On the contrary, it is a lifelong debt willingly and accordingly the better he performs his duties, the time and circumstances demand.

Alembic Arrives...

(Continued from Page 3) tential due to mechanical shortcomings in the presentation of this season's edition. Both Kelleher and Williams showed a highly commendable maturity of style and a deft command of language. Approaching their material with two highly dissimilar techniques, they display few, if any, traces of the average collegian's occasionally clumsy and amateurish style.

Domestic Calabro furnished the collection with what can only be described as a thought-provoking and highly informative essay. In "The Twain Must Meet," Calabro has a good deal to say and says it coherently, concisely and convincingly. Among the selections listed as "Four Firsts," only John Ferriar's "The Old Man Of Two Rivers A.C." rang quite true.

Vagueness In Poetry
Raymond Shea and Richard Sullivan took up the burden of the poetical representation in the publication. Working with an extremely demanding medium, the two writers often seem to fall prey to a fault commonly noted in even the most gifted college poets, the tendency to achieve only vagueness when depth and ambiguity are sought. Of the two, Shea generally achieved the most satisfactory results as exemplified by his "Malgre Nous".

Several otherwise passable efforts, among them "What Kind of Day," "If at First You Don't" and the poem "What A Difference a Daily Makes" were marred in the triteness of their overworked and too-familiar subject matter. Among the selections listed as "Four Firsts," only John Ferriar's "The Old Man Of Two Rivers A.C." rang quite true.

Attractive Feature Touch
"The Alembic," a column by John Williams, Assistant Editor of the ALEMBIC, made an appropriate feature. Designed to function as a medium "for extracts taken from here and there," articles of this type, judiciously utilized, lend an attractive touch to a literary publication.

In summary this issue of the ALEMBIC had a few worthwhile moments and its unmistakable reflections of genuine creative potential. On the other hand, compared with past ALEMBICS and similar publications of other schools, it was not worthy of the College. The supply of material available for publication obviously left choice other than to include material that was more than mediocre but less than excellent. The selected efforts of 25 contributions cannot and do not match those of 125. And unless more support appears the next issue of the ALEMBIC will be like unto this.

Morton Goldberg
Program Guest

On Monday evening, March 3, Reverend James M. Murphy, O.P., of the Sociology Department conducted an interview on Providence radio station WAR.

Guest for the evening was Mr. Morton Goldberg, clinical psychologist for the Mental Hygiene Service of the Department of Social Welfare, State of Rhode Island.

Principal topics for the interview included the meaning of mental health and the symptoms of mental illness. How handicapped persons fail or succeed in their efforts to readjust was an important consideration.

Ample time was devoted to a discussion of the various types of treatment, such as therapy and intelligence tests, with Mr. Goldberg describing the various problems encountered pertaining to initial and subsequent treatment by workers in his field.

Irresponsibility...

By John Hurley

Irresponsibility is somewhat of a strange matter. It has degrees of intensity with the accompanying degrees of seriousness. The mere fact that an individual is not to be trusted or relied upon does not mean that he is guilty of a heinous offence. Certainly, the irresponsibility of a child playing with dynamite could not be compared with the neglect of his duties by an elected public official. Thus it should be interesting to discuss a few incidents which might come into this category and attempt to judge their seriousness.

One instance which probably would arise in most discussions would concern reckless driving under the influence. One might argue that drinking is certainly not an unusual phenomena, and unfortunately, perhaps, sometimes a few are apt to take on a few more than they can hold. Of course, they don't drink themselves "under the table," but the reflexes are not quite so quick. Chances are that these drinkers have little trouble in driving home, albeit the main trouble is yet to come.

Perhaps it does not happen for a few weeks, and the chances are that it will never happen, but comes the day...

Once again our drinker has gone over the limit, and he is returning to the dorms before "nightcheck." Normally he watches out for the typical Rhode Island driver, but the time is late and that last "screwdriver" makes things a little hazy. Then all of a sudden the car comes out from nowhere, with the following results: car is a total loss, three occupants in the hospital, driver in jail, and disciplinary probation. And for what? A few more drinks taken more to show off than for refreshment. Pretty irresponsible! Pretty serious!

One can go on and on, arguing over the responsibility which students have to study, a responsibility to their parents and to themselves. And how can one fail to criticize those who fix the price of such necessities as gas, college fines, textbooks, beer, etc.?

If you answered "No" to all questions, you obviously smoke Camels—a real cigarette. Only 6 or 7 "No's" answers mean you better get on to Camels fast. Fewer than 6 "No's" and it really doesn't matter what you smoke. Anything's good enough!

But if you want to enjoy smoking as never before, switch to Camels. Nothing else tastes so rich, smokes so mild. Today more people smoke Camels than any other cigarette. The best tobacco gives you the best smoke. Try Camels and you'll agree!
Search Unearths Surprising Treasures In Male’s Wallet

By Bob Grathwol

One often hears jokes, puns, and jibes about women’s purses and the quantity and variety of material contained therein. Well, in all fairness to that gentle sex, I think we men might do well to cast first the materials from our own wallets before ridiculing others for their habit of retaining miscellaneous unnecessary items.

I recently observed a young college man “clean out” his billfold. This poor pocket valise had obviously been the victim of overpacking: it was shabby and tattered from long usage, but the fellow refused to replace it because of its “sentimental value.” (Besides, he said he didn’t have the necessary funds to purchase a new one.)

Although the billfold was bulging, I never dreamed it held such multiform matter as:

- One corner torn from a fifty-dollar bill and placed prominently in the plastic window “to impress friends”;
- No less than ten cards of membership in various campus and national organizations, including the “Girl Watchers Club of America” and a Boy Scout certificate indicating his ability to handle an axe and a knife, obtained in 1951;
- Seven assorted slips of paper on which were written assorted telephone numbers, sometimes even names and addresses—girls;
- Two pictures of himself, taken in third or fourth grade—the only pictures in his wallet;
- Two small handwritten cards in feminine script, given him in ninth grade, with two separate “silly little presents” from his very first love;
- Two “Peanuts” comic strips, which, he claims, depict his entire life story;
- Four receipts for clothing, bought within the past six months, one receipt from the R.O.T.C. Department, and one more from his high school;
- The combination to his high school locker;
- Three cards from three different businessmen;
- A card listing “Three Reasons Why I Drink”;
- Two notes from other girls, both briefly amusing and “steeped in sentiment”;
- A chance on a mink stole at the Great Scott Supermarket;
- Such standard items as a draft card, social security, driver’s license, a 1958 calendar, and three dollar bills.

After taking this inventory of his possessions, the young fellow readily admitted that he had maintained more of a portable “scrapbook” than a billfold. He then proceeded to consider each item carefully, weighing its nostalgic significance against its practicality, and (with a tender smile) placed it back in the dilapidated billfold, discarding nothing.
