Recessions Definitely Not Over
According to P.C. Economist

"Complete recovery from the near-fatal recession suffered by the United States during the last eighteen months depends on several contingent possibilities. The recession is definitely not over," said Charles Quirk, O.P., opened his lecture at the annual Thomistic Institute of Industrial Relations held Sunday evening, Oct. 26, in Alumni Hall.

This hour-long lecture was entitled "The Economic

Dr. Clapp Tells Phi Chi Club Of Man's Potential

The feature of the monthly meeting of the Phi-Chi club on Monday, Oct. 27, was a talk entitled "Science and Human Wants," delivered by Dr. Leach Clapp, the executive officer of the Brown University Chemistry Department.

Dr. Clapp had previously given this talk at over a dozen of the leading universities in the United States, and has also had the speech accepted for publication in the Scientific American.

An optimistic attitude towards continued supply of resources for our needs was the theme of the speech. In spite of the fact that our needs continue to increase, it was pointed out that science and Mother Nature can combine to keep man happy in future years.

J. Pierce Winner, Richer By $500

Jack Pierce, Providence College sophomore, is $500 richer as a result of the purchase of one chance in a raffle sponsored by the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

Pierce purchased the single ticket two weeks ago with "no hope of winning a prize."

Last weekend Jack went home. Last Saturday he received a call from his roommate, Tom Hartigan, who had been given a message from the Elks stating that Jack held a winning ticket.

"I didn't believe Tom when he called because I never win anything," commented Pierce.

The prize was a new Nash Rambler, $1000, $500, $300, and $100. Pierce didn't know which prize he had won when he received Hartigan's call.

Hartigan was with Pierce when he purchased the duvet and was quoted as remarking, "I sure won't get a chance in a thousand."

This broadcast, planned to run approximately six hours, "will not only throw the eyes of surrounding localities on the college station, but will bring to WDOM monthly coverage of Westerly and Providence College as well, recognition from people all over the United States," states Buzz Barton, station manager.

Kecn interest in the college coverage of the elections has been displayed in and around the state. Station WEBS of Westerly has announced plans to tie in on the program, thus extending the area of coverage to much of South County and eastern Connecticut.

State newspapers have given coverage to the proposed program. Barton stated that the program may receive attention in national publications. Embossed signs, flyers, and radio facilities are being used to heighten promotion.

Interest is widespread among students and faculty members.

Dean Of Discipline Quizzed: Clarifies Rules On Absence

Rev. Anthony A. Jurgelaitis, O.P., Dean of Discipline, dispelled the commonly held belief that the present system of recording absences from class in a statement to the Cowl last Monday, October 27. No longer are there any excused Jurgelaitis.

"Every absence from class, except those incurred by the student while engaged in official business of the College, is recorded merely as an absence. If, before the end of the semester, a student has been absent from class a number of times equal to the number of weekly sessions of that class, my office will notify the student that further absence in that course will jeopardize his credit," said the Dean of Discipline.

After five absences, the Dean of Discipline will review the absence with the student, who will be obliged to present documented proof of the validity of each and every absence. Students are advised, therefore, to obtain written, dated proof of the necessity of missing class, such as medical slips, in the case of sickness. If the student is deemed guilty of flagrant absence, the professor of the course in question and the Dean of Discipline will confer to choose the most practical means of penalizing the student.

The result of the consultation may be a lowering of the grade received for the course, but is borderline or doubtful cases, other means more suitable for impressing upon the student the importance of regular attendance may be considered.

The Dean of Discipline has been given appropriate power of consideration in the case of consecutive, prolonged absences. Illness requiring hospital treatment and other prolonged absences of a similar, documented nature will neither be listed as excused absences of a similar nature will neither be listed as excused absences, nor as isolated absences from class. Absences of a similar nature will be listed as isolated absences from class. Absence will be listed as isolated absences from class.

Pope John XXIII

The Cardinals of the Holy Roman Church yesterday elected a new successor to the See of Peter. He is John XXIII, formerly Angelo Giuseppe Cardinal Roncalli, Patriarch of Venice.

His Holiness was born in a small Italian town of poor farm laborers. He graduated from a Roman college, and was im- mediately appointed as secretary to his own bishop. He served in the Italian Army in the medical corps, and later as a chaplain.

In 1923 he was entrusted with the task of reorganizing the Propaganda Fide. He was in turn appointed Papal Nuncio to Bavaria, bishop of his local diocese, and then Papal Nuncio to France. He was raised to the cardinalate and appointed immediately to his own bishop. He served in the Italian Army in the medical corps, and later as a chaplain.

Voting...

Half of the people in the world have never voted democratically and never will.

This striking fact should emphasize to all Americans the great privilege which they enjoy. Our Constitution guarantees every adult the right to vote, regardless of social position, race, creed, or political beliefs. Unfortunately, in some sections of the country, maneuvers by unscrupulous leaders continue to restrict the voting rights of Negroes and other groups. The greatest tragedy, however, is that some are denied the right to vote, but that many who can exercise their privilege do not so.

Legally, every American citizen past the age of twenty-one is granted the right to vote. But even in the presidency, student elections, or other referenda of the student body, whether half of the students is considered good? This means that almost half of the eligible voters annually forfeit their right to select their own government.

The right to vote cannot be divorced from the obligations which it entails. Each citizen is responsible for an active interest in government, cognizance of the issues, and a sober vote based not on personality or religion or tradition, but on the issues themselves.

The American democratic system demands active support by its populace. Abraham Lincoln contended that the nightiest army in the world "... with a Napoleon in the pulpit ... could never take a pink from the Mississippi, or gaze at the Blue Ridge." Lincoln believed that if America ever fell, it would be due to corruptions of the political character of the citizens. The beginnings of this corruption inevitably lie in a passive electorate.

Blazers...

After several years of discussion, the Student Congress has finally decided to establish the tradition of students who wear blazers will be aware of their responsibility with regard to the school.

The Dean Speaks

Gershwin's music has been the calming influence that seemed to turn his final day in the classroom to one of the most serene. Although his health was not at its best, he managed to play with the usual vitality and energy that marked his performances. The last work he completed, his String Quartet in D minor, was dedicated to his memory by the American Academy of Arts and Letters.

Straus PERFORMS STRAUSS; LEVANT PRESENTS GERSHWIN

Straus: DÉTH AND TRANSPLEIGHT

Richard Strauss is said to have written this work, called a "Déstination," during the war and the necessity which almost cost him his life. In the music, which he composed with great intensity, he attempted to render some of the emotions and experiences suffered during the illness. After the work was completed, Alexander Ritter wrote a poetic interpretation of the music, and this poem (one of the most meaningful things I have ever read) dealing with a sick man's struggle with death as he lies delirious in a garret, was approved by Strauss and later attached to the score.

The work opens softly with a darkly somber theme which stands against the lightness of life and death. It is succeeded by an impassioned second theme depicting his "desire to live." Visions of his entire life rush through his mind, visions of the sick man—visions of struggle, of obtaining, of joy and fleeting happiness, also of frustration and sorrow. And in the final movement, finally frees his soul from its earthly cares, the music rises and falls, the melody is apathetic of deliverance, of transformation.

The finest interpretation, in my opinion, is by the Symphony orchestra under the baton of Leonard Levent, who was the greatest conductor of German masters of his time. Recommended. The catalogue number is BCA LM 1137.

Gershwin: CONCERTO IN F MAJOR

Gershwin's music has the daring, excitement of the jazz age. Yet his compositions, like all other jazz that he put to tape, have a certain basic intelligence which almost cost him his life. Statewide Political Situation Vital To Rhode Island Voters

By Joseph Soulek

Democratic and Republican vote-seekers are out in force this week as the general election in Rhode Island is a highly competitive one-year battle which promises the public a fight to the finish. The importance of the last week of absentee and shut-in ballots. The political unrest since that date has opened the Democratic party ranks and given rise to long-suppressed Republican candidates.

While the issues are many, the final choice rests with the electorate this Tuesday. This election is important to everyone living, working, or residing in the state of Rhode Island.

John A. Notte, now Secretary of State, is seeking election to the office of Lawrence Del Sesto, majority-polling candidate of 1956. Gov. Roberts, since coming to Providence, has always been a favorite of Rhode Islanders. Mr. Del Sesto is opposed by the invalidation of last election's ballots and pins his hopes on campaigning for more jobs for people in the state.

Charles W. Furcolo—R

Charles W. Furcolo is opposing incumbent Raymond Hawkley in the State House of Representatives. Mr. Hawkley is a veteran of ten years in the House while not a vote-getter, is a Democrat from the old school, this campaign appears to be a desperate campaign.

U. S. Senator John O. Pastore of Rhode Island, has another Bayard Ewing for this all-important office. Mr. Pastore has always carried Rhode Island to a sizable majority, and his ex-act record is causing his opponent considerable concern in this campaign.

In the First Congressional district, incumbent Aime J. Fornd is pitted against Republican Francis Martin, a representative. Fornd is campaigning on the basis of his twenty-year record in Congress. Mr. Martin, who is a relative newcomer to politics, is counting on a strong Republican trend to overcome his foe in the normally heavily-Democratic district.

The First district is leaning Republican, but the local contests are likely to be decided by the turnout of eligible voters. Both parties are predicting victory, but the key to the election is the closing of the polls.

Every absentee ballot will be penalized, by monetary fines or other means, at the discretion of the judge.

An absence before a holiday is no longer treated as a default on the part of the student. However, if a student asks to move one of these books from the Library for the use of some other student, he is certain to gain office with the Ram debaters on the URU campus on Monday, November 3, mentioned Rev. Dear Sir:

It was just two years ago that the college students in Hungary sent an ultimatum to the Red regime to make their own freedom and better living conditions. This courageous act initiated the overthrow of the existing Red regime, the establishment of a new government under Premier Nagy, and the successful fulfillment of the students of Providence College, organized 20 years ago to defend the freedom of the students of their university, and the memory of Buda-Pest, shortly thereafter.

As long as this infamous Soviet laughter is never forgotten, these young men shall be able to build a future for themselves and for the memory of Buda-Pest, lost, still lost.

Captain Jim Swartz

By PETE COSTIGAN

In a little less than five weeks the Providence College varsity basketball squad will begin the 1958-60 basketball season under the captainship of Jim Swartz. Swartz, who was elected last spring, is the fourth consecutive New Yorker to hold the position on the Friar varsity.

A native of Hempstead, New York, Jim is a graduate of Cathedral Prep in New York, where he played two years of varsity basketball. Last year he was captain of the varsity baseball team. He was captain of the basketball squad in his senior year.

Last season, Swartz was third high scorer for the Friars. He gathered a total of 251 points for an average of 16.4 points per game. He performed at his best in the Christmas Tournament at Quattico, Virginia, as he paced the P. C. hoosiers to three consecutive victories and the tournament championship.

His best game was against Hartwick College when he poured in 38 points. In conclusion of the tournament, Jim was selected as the most valuable player in the tournament. Following their season opener against A. I. C. in Springfield, the Friars will make their debut in New York's Madison Square Garden on Nov. 30th against the Owls.

Swartz will be performing in this contest against a squad he is quite familiar with. After graduating from Cathedral, Jim went to St. John's for a year and a half and was captain of the freshman basketball team.

Since transferring to Providence, Jim has been a vital member of the Friars' basketball team and should be one of the most consistent performers on this year's team.

Top Terriers

Last Wednesday afternoon, over a new 44 mile course, which has been announced as the new Norchester track, the Providence College cross-country team continued their winning ways by trouncing B.U. to the tune of 25-0. The meet will be up for the meet next Wednesday on the Hendricken Field course. The meet will be scheduled for a mile and a half and is due to get underway at 2:45 p.m.

A trophy will be awarded to the winner of the affair and medals will be awarded for the next four highest finishers.

Deyette's Injury

Add To woes

The injury jinx continued to plague Coach Tom Eccleston, as he was forced to add another injury and take out a player. Deyette, who had previously held the position on the Friar basketball team, will be performing in this contest against a squad he is quite familiar with. After graduating from Cathedral, Jim went to St. John's for a year and a half and was captain of the freshman basketball team.

Since transferring to Providence, Jim has been a vital member of the Friars' basketball team and should be one of the most consistent performers on this year's team.

Fortunately the injury will not affect his skating, and he will continue to perform conditioning exercises with the rest of the team.

Meanwhile, after a layoff of 5 days due to an ice-making failure at the Rhode Island Auditorium, the team has continued the slow process of working itself into top-flight condition.

being non-material, non-extendible, escapes a dimensional yardstick. Indirectly, though, you can infer a few things about thought from the physiological phenomena which accompany it. That is what happens in a lie detector test. Moreover, the results of intelligence are quite discernible. If you can memorize six lines of a sonnet in six minutes and your classmate can ingest the same number in half the time, or if it takes you two hours to solve a tricky mathematical problem and he comes up with the answer in ten minutes, it is probably safe to conclude that he has a better memory and a keener mathematical mind than you have.

This is the manner in which intelligence tests arrive at a rough and round-about knowledge of basic ability. As you know, they actually test capacity of learning, but experience and environment determine whether the limits will ever be reached. Some men simply do not possess the equipment to climb very high into the rarified atmosphere of abstract thought; but given proper pedagogical prodding they can continue to expand within the orbit of their talents. This kind of development should never stop until death.

Without opportunity, "many a flower is born to blush unseen and waste its sweetness on the desert air." A large number of people will never get the chance to "show their stuff." Tennesseans and Kentuckians, for instance, seldom become savants or sculptors because they live in isolation far from the stimulation of the rest of the world. This also partly explains why the odds are greater, in favor of the son of a sociologist winning out over the son of an illiterate day laborer in the battle for college scholarships. A home with meager cultural advantages—devoid of literature, deficient in verbal skills, indifferent to education or anti-intellectual in attitude—has a depressing effect on the growth of intellectual interests. Nature may furnish high native intelligence and the special bent for art, music or mathematics, but training and environment are necessary for their cultivation and expression.

Therein lies the purpose of academia. She creates a stimulating setting for study, and by means of the curriculum presents the pupil with a series of progressively difficult educational experiences designed to promote mental maturity.

The ultimate success of this venture, however, rests with you, the student. The basic intelligence, the necessary preparation, the bracing atmosphere and the stimulus to concentration areas have been given to you. Now you must supply the motivation, something which often spells the difference between success or failure in college.

In every incoming class there will be, of course, a graduation of application. Hidden talents, long slumbering and unsuspected, first make their appearance after a long incubation of practice and study. Some men, like some flowers, bloom late. The greatest fruit of their labor appears in the evening of life. Corsets began Don Quixote at forty-seven and reached the second half of sixty-eight. Milton started Paradise Lost at fifty; Virgil his Aeneid at forty; Dante his Divina Commedia at forty-nine. Whatever way you turn or squirm, therefore, you cannot dodge the truth that what you are born with is not so important as what you will do with what you have.

Raymond J. Pettine

Assistant Attorney General Raymond J. Pettine of the State of Rhode Island addressed the St. Thomas More Club meeting, held Thursday, October 23, as guest speaker of the evening.

Mr. Pettine's topic, a general view of his life as a public prosecutor, included describing the Attorney General's Office and the various functions thereof, of the human side of his work in and out of court, and venturing opinions as to what his particular political position should be. He then invited questions from the law club members.

First, Pettine clarified positive "TV and fiction never the same" misconceptions of what the Attorney General's department actually does and is. Tagging the department as a "great big law office," he continued on Page 8.

Big Brother Movement Mobilized By Providence College Students

By John J. Hurley

The Youth Guidance Movement at Providence College was organized last year to aid the Patrick J. O'Rourke Children's Center in Providence. It follows along with similar college organizations throughout the rest of the state.

Officially, the purpose of the organization is to provide each boy at the Center with sort of an older brother, who will look after him. Each big brother devotes one or more hours a week to his little brother, giving him a longed-for feeling of companionship. Since many of these children are the products of broken homes or are actually unwanted by their parents, this gives them a shoulder to lean on. Another good feature of the program is that it is enjoyed immensely, and believe that it is an excellent training both for them and for the boys.

Enjoyment is the story with all of the members. A deeply valued attachment grows up between older and younger brothers, and the College has made a most excellent contribution to the betterment of the community.

Juniors

For the purpose of selecting an orchestra for the Junior Prom, a ballot box has been placed near the bulletin board. Each ballot sheet must be signed; Friday is the deadline for balloting. Among bands under consideration are: Lancer, Count Basie, Tommy Dorsey, Glen Miller, and Les Elgart.

The Toasted Olive
The Providence Club held its annual club dance in Stephan Hall, Saturday night for the resident students. Lenny Roche and Dick Papalia, junior class representatives, had charge of all arrangements.

For a Saturday night affair it was more successful than had been anticipated, thanks to the able guidance of Roche and Papalia, and the aid of their committee, stated Bill Clifford, Caroland Club president. Those who helped with arrangements were Joe More, Bob Santamaria, Jack Kennedy, Ray Hessel, John Hagan, Carl McCordan, George Nolan, Charley Walsh, Gerry Murphy, Bill Mosher, and Matt Barry.

The year's executive board of the club decided to have occasional dances because the resident students have been requesting more activities for those who remain on campus for the weekends. Clifford said that the club will sponsor another dance before Thanksgiving.

Many girls' colleges were represented, of which the predominating group was Emmanuel College from Boston. Resident students may look forward to a mixer at Emmanuel in the not too distant future.

"Five Spooks," the band under leadership of Eddie Le Beau, a Providence College student, consisted of a piano, drums, bass, trumpet, and vibes. They played from 8:00 to 12:00 o'clock.

The lounge was decorated in a Halloween atmosphere of black and orange streamers, corn stalks, dull lights, autumn scenery murals, and a white birch log fence around the band. Coke and cookies were served.

This year the executive board of the club decided to have occasional dances because the resident students have been requesting more activities for those who remain on campus for the weekends. Clifford said that the club will sponsor another dance before Thanksgiving.

Many girls' colleges were represented, of which the predominating group was Emmanuel College from Boston. Resident students may look forward to a mixer at Emmanuel in the not too distant future.

"Five Spooks," the band under leadership of Eddie Le Beau, a Providence College student, consisted of a piano, drums, bass, trumpet, and vibes. They played from 8:00 to 12:00 o'clock.

The lounge was decorated in a Halloween atmosphere of black and orange streamers, corn stalks, dull lights, autumn scenery murals, and a white birch log fence around the band. Coke and cookies were served.

English: endorsement of Lucky Strike cigarettes
THINKLISH: Other brands of cigarettes burn (with envy) over the matchless taste of a Lucky Strike. Lucky's taste is honest taste—the rich, full taste of fine tobacco. So any endorsement of Luckies is bound to be a Testimonial. Mmm!
