Invitation To NIT Puts P C's Name In National Spotlight

Announcement of the acceptance of Providence College Athletic Department of the invitation of the National Invitation Basketball Tournament has been met with a mass of publicity in Rhode Island, New England, and New York.

Upon receiving and accepting the much-looked-for invitation, Providence College sent envoys in two directions, Boston and New York. J. Vincent Cuddy, director of publicity, journeyed to Boston to confer with the Sportswriters and Coaches Luncheon. At the same time, Coach Joe Mullany spoke at a similar gathering at Leone's in New York.

Mullany was quoted as describing his team as one capable of staying interested in a certain prospect, which one N. Y. sports writer termed the "whatsit defense." Mullany's puzzling defense, which has yet to cease in the first round, the Friars publicity has nevertheless provided live demonstration of the "stout defense" and was apologetic for the dismal showing to Boston and spoke at the Friars against St. John's in Providence earlier in the year.

His appearance provoked a good deal of press coverage which has yet to cease in the New York newspapers.

St. John's Game

Many of the press releases in New York constantly harp on the fact that St. John's defeated Providence but nevertheless present the PC team as one capable of staying with the best the East might present on a given night. As of late, the Friars publicity has been noticeable for its stress of Mullany's "whatsit defense," which one N. Y. sports writer termed the "whatsit defense."

Rev. Aloysius B. Begley, O.P., director of athletics, said that the "NIT lid has not only paved the way for the future of Providence basketball, but it has also given us valuable publicity throughout the United States. Before, if we were interested in a certain prospect, we had to try and sell him on the school."

Army Assignment at Harkins Hall

The U. S. Army's Strategic Army Corps Exhibit was viewed by an estimated 1000 people during its display in Harkins Hall auditorium on February 24-25.

The exhibit, prepared by the Army's Chief of Information, was designed to illustrate the Army's ability to cope with present and future military problems. Three series of diagrams were featured. One traced the chronological development of weapons; another compared today's weapons to those of the future. A third explained the concept behind Strategic Air Command, a little known as "STAC." A three-dimensional sequence theater and a color motion picture provided live demonstration of new weapons and equipment in actual field maneuvers.

Get Your COWL At The Garden!

Providence College's basketball players aren't the only ones waiting for the announcement of their first game in next week's National Invitation Tournament in New York.

The production date of next week's COWL also hinges on that tourney debut.

Should the Friar boopsters be scheduled to play on Thursday, March 19, the paper will appear just as it will and will be distributed in New York.

If the Friars don't open, until Saturday, the COWL, while still ten pages, will appear as usual on Wednesday, March 18.

Local Doctor Cites Birth Control Evils

The continued use of artificial means of contraception leads to sterility or the inability to have children, a Providence physician said last Sunday night, March 1.

Dr. James J. Scanlan spoke before a crowd of 800 young men and women at the third lecture of the thirteenth annual Providence College Marriage Forum. He hoped that Providence College could "carry the colors of Rhode Island with honor."

Physician's Role

The doctor's role in marriage is important to consider and must not be handled haphazardly. To consult the same physician before and after marriage is wise. Illness may then be treated best, Dr. Scanlan noted.

"If couples spent as much time choosing a confessor and a doctor as choosing a spouse, many marriages would be much happier."

Health Consideration

Prior to marriage, one's health is mainly a personal problem. However, when marriage is being contemplated the health of the intended spouse, children and even ancestors from the standpoint of heredity, must be considered by the local physician pointed out.

By recognizing the basic differences between the sexes and by allowing functions that are unique to a partner, happiness accrues. Trouble will only arise when one partner tries to invade the prerogatives of the other, or when one partner fails to show understanding for the emotional differences of the other, Dr. Scanlan emphasized.

This was the conclusion to which Very Rev. Robert J. Slavin, O.P., President of Providence College, built in his presentation of the implicit philosophy of education of St. Thomas Aquinas.

The speech was delivered before a special gathering of Aquinas Society members and associates commemorating the feast of Thomas Aquinas.

"Mere intellectual development carries with it the danger of intellectualism," observed Fr. Slavin.

The production date of next week's COWL also hinges on that tourney debut.

Should the Friar boopsters be scheduled to play on Thursday, March 19, the paper will appear just as it will and will be distributed in New York.

If the Friars don't open, until Saturday, the COWL, while still ten pages, will appear as usual on Wednesday, March 18.

Father Slavin Keynotes Aquinas Week Observance

Congress Lists Bus Transport For NIT Rooters

Students will be supplied with subsidized bus transportation to the NIT in New York next week, according to action taken by the Student Congress Monday night.

"Bus tickets to Madison Square Garden will go on sale this week, according to Congress plans. Announcement of explicit details will be made at that time on the Student Congress bulletin board."

Both one-way and round-trip tickets will be sold, according to plans discussed at Monday's Congress session. Price for the one-way trip to New York will be $3.50 while transportation both ways will sell for $4.75.

Bus Only

Student Congress will supply only transportation. The price of the bus ticket does not include admission to the Garden. Members of the student body must therefore seek NIT tickets from the Athletic Office.

The system of selling both types of tickets was adopted in order to cope with the problem encountered by many students who wished to go to New York the remainder of the weekend. Students were formerly forced to pay for the round trip even if they did not intend to exercise the return trip privilege.

Greyhound Bus Company will supply transportation for the New England-New York Greyhound's several terminals along the Providence-N. Y. route will insure of replacement service in the event of mechanical failure such as that which occasioned the return trip from the St. John's game.

Y. Accommodations

Hotel rates and other pertinent information will be posted on the Student Congress bulletin board. The three-man committee on reservations should be secured in advance due to the shortage of accommodations created by the massive influx of visitors for the tournament they were promised.

The student legislature originally considered employing an excursion bus through the New Haven Railroad. This plan was rejected in view of a $500 student guarantee which would be required by the railroad.

PC SELLS 200 BLAZERS

Two hundred Providence College blazers have been sold thus far, reported Kevin McIlhannon, chairman of the Student Congress sponsored blazer committee, in an interview with a Cowl reporter this week. Forty-five were sold out at the second fitting alone.

There will be no more fittings. The order has been discontinued. If any one wants a blazer, he should write to the company. The address will be posted on the Student Congress bulletin board," concluded the committee chairman.
Thelology, Drama, Topic Of Prominent Blackfriar

Rev. Dominic Rover, O.P., will address a student gathering on "Theological Themes in Contemporary Drama" next Monday evening, March 9, at 8:00 in Alumni Hall's Guild Room.

Prom Queen Rules Announced By Juniors

Regulations for the selection of the Junior Prom Queen have been announced by William Leary and Joseph Lunt, Queen committee co-chairmen.

Candidates' pictures will be accepted only if they are placed in the ballot box by 5:00 p.m. on Monday, March 9. The box will be there Monday through Friday from March 1 to April 6.

The only information to be submitted with the picture is the name of the girl. If any other information is submitted, such as her address or the name of her escort, the candidate will be disqualified.

The voting will be held on April 10, at the King Philip Theater. Those attending the event will have the opportunity to hear news of their alma mater. At first the sheet is sold for $2.50, but it has now been expanded to include other aspects of PC life.

This is a series of talks sponsored by the Theta Chapter of Delta Epsilon Sigma. The talks, designed to "further the aims of the honor society, one of which is to fuse scholarly activity," are scheduled to Rev. Royal J. Gardner, head of the organization on campus.

Father Rover, versed in drama and public speaking, was director of the American Theater Movement in New York for many years. He has written four plays, one of which, "The Bamboo Cross," appeared on television. He has dressed na-tionwide audiences on the Catholic stage and will come to the College from a previous speaking engagement at Western.
ADVENTURES IN SOCIAL SCIENCE: NO. 2

Julio, abandoned as an infant in a dark wood near Cleveland, was adopted by a pack of wild dogs and reared as one of their own. When Julio was found by a hunter at the age of twelve, the poor child was more canine than human. He ran on all fours, barked and growled, ate raw meat, lapped water with his tongue, and could neither speak nor understand human words.

In short, he was a complete product of his environment. Julio, incidentally, was more fortunate than most wild children. They never become truly humanized, but Julio was exceptional. Bit by bit, he began to talk and walk and eat and drink as people do. His long-dormant mental processes, when activated, barked and growled, ate raw meat, lapped water with his tongue, and could neither speak nor understand human words.

The fact is vividly borne out when you consider the case of the poor child who was more canine than human. Be ran on all fours—a tendency that began, as we all know, with the children. They never become truly humanized, but Julio was exceptional. Bit by bit, he began to talk and walk and eat and drink as people do. His long-dormant mental processes, when activated, barked and growled, ate raw meat, lapped water with his tongue, and could neither speak nor understand human words.

Who can say to what towering heights this incredible boy would have risen had he not been killed the day after commencement when chasing a car?
The precuts of September regarding the student prefect system have largely disappeared. The new system is working surprisingly well; in our opinion, it is the best yet.

Success in this venture can be credited to the student prefects, the present faculty, and the students themselves. Most of the students chosen by the faculty were capable and conscientious; they have proven themselves during the past six months. It is also due to the present prefects' cooperative effort in dealing with their representatives, and on the whole, the students themselves have responded in a most exemplary fashion.

The numerous advantages of the new prefect system are apparent to all. First, the priests are relieved of a time-consuming and often annoying chore. Secondly, the student prefects, aside from the helpful remuneration, are afforded a healthy lesson in the exercise of leadership and authority. And finally, the students are tested by a system wherein a violation of the rules can reflect upon a fellow student, the prefect.

We see the new prefect system as the answer to several problems, and another indication that PC men are mature enough to exercise and respect authority.

Scalping Scalpers...

PC's emergence into the arena of big-time basketball is accompanied by big-time problems, not the least of which is ticket scalping. While loyal supporters of PC hockey and football will deplore major athletic events, scalpers have unhesitatingly peddled tickets for three and four times their normal worth. Those who bought tickets from scalpers pay burdensome prices to the entrepreneurs; many others, unable to produce the outrageous stipends, have needlessly missed games. We say "needlessly" because we feel that a small change in policy of the Athletic Department could rectify the situation.

The Athletic Department told the OWL that there is no limit to the number of tickets an individual may buy at one time, except if "we find that the boys aren't getting them." In the latter case, some tickets would theoretically be held back. This policy, needless to say, has hardly been effective in curbing scalping. Tickets have been purchased in relatively large numbers and resold at positively high prices.

To terminate this unfair practice, we suggest two moves:

1. Sell two hundred more tickets as standing room, offering them at game time only, to one customer.
2. Limit the number of tickets to be sold to an individual to three or four.

This move would satisfy the average buyer, and at the same time make scalping unprofitable. Here the supply of scalpers tickets would be cut.

Nothing can completely eliminate scalping, but we feel that in addition to our two proposals, we could greatly curtail it. It is intolerable that a PC student pay five dollars to a disinterested party for a ticket which rightfully belongs to the student in the first place.

Echos Of The Past...

Six hundred thirty-six years ago, Pope John XXII canonized Tomaso d'Aquino a saint of the Catholic Church. Saturday we celebrate the feast day of this man who has earned for our church the title of "Doctor of the Church." A prolific writer, his works are-reflected in the feast of the "Eagle of the Divines," we might reflect upon a fellow student, the prefect. What has happened over the centuries, in the history of college administration, is reflected in the lives of our students.

Fr. Chenu portrays St. Thomas Aquinas as a real winner even in defeat. Could it be that philosophy is a game that should be played many times in order to win all of their games but the one which is most important? Perhaps the best team this year is the one that never gave up in the face of difficulties. The best team this year is the team that still has the players who have not quit, who are still the players who have not been forgotten or ignored, who still have faith in their ability to win.

In attacking the problem, Fr. Chenu emphasizes the fact that although history seems to be a continual source of endless problems of mankind, we have not given up on our ideals. We must not confuse incidents with the essence of doctrine, according to Fr. Chenu. The realism of the world today is rare, but somehow it is a part of this idealism. The stamp of a real gentleman is still the players who have not given up, who have never quit, who still have faith in their ability to win.

Campus Profiles with Bob Oppel

I entered room 2-D, breezed by a clearly initiated junior, and walked in to face an eager junior. He was a typewriter. Behind a partly cluttered desk, strewed mostly with correspondence, sat the man responsible for capturing the stories of the students who temporarily call Providence College home. He was Rev. James M. Murphy, O.P., Dean of Men.

I was enthusiastic about the beginnings of this "sermoncino," and he readily filled a large void in my mind concerning his pre-professional life.

On April 13, 1920, in Cambridge, Mass., the second of an enormous family of children, was born. James Michael was brought up not far from the great river, the Charles, an important part of mixed scholastic-sports life. His average boy during his grade school days, he engaged in the usual rough and tumble progressions of history, of which he says he received more than his share of scars and bruises. Even now, he recalls, his lot fell mostly to go in line to the line him a gap.

Perhaps a well-worded problem for the type of future activities, mused Father. Although raised in the shadows of the editorial offices of (Continued on Page 6)

he did in that dreadful hour. He placed himself at the Divine Altar, offering up all his services to his Divine Master. When he slept that night, two angels appeared to him with the assuring words that his prayer had been heard and that for the rest of his life he should be spared the struggles to which human flesh is prone. As a proof of this they put a cincture about him which they had brought down from heaven. From that day forward, Thomas was allowed to teach and study without any peril to his chastity. After his death in 1274, this secret was made public. Since then this cord has been a great object of devotion, at present residing in the convent of Chieri, just outside of Turin in northern Italy.

Cord Symbolism

On the cord are fifteen knots, a reminder of the fifteen mysteries of the Rosary. The three twists in each knot, then, represent the mystical Trinity and the theological virtues, which St. Thomas so well taught.

Devotion to the miraculous cord spread throughout the world after the announcement. At present the Confraternity of the Angelic Warfare has a representation here at the College. The latest approbation of the Angelic Warfare occurred in this encyclical letter Studiorum Ducem, written to the Catholic world on the occasion of the six hundredth anniversary of the canonization of St. Thomas. Well does Pius XI exhort the young, “Let them learn from so great a master, to fly with watchful care the fascinations of evil delight lest the eyes of their mind be dimmed to the perfect vision of truth.”

Drive Realizes 4 Hundred Dollars

While final returns are not complete, more than four hundred dollars has been collected in the PC fund drive for victims of the fire at Our Lady of the Angels School, Chicago, according to the co-chairmen, Paul Crane and Dennis Lovely. Final total of the drive will not be known for some time, according to Crane, because some of the campus clubs plan to appropriate money for it at their next meeting.

“Are we highly gratified at the response thus far,” Crane commented. “The tag day held on February 10 netted more than $150. This is remarkable. Lovely noted, in view of the small number of collectors. In addition, boxes left in the cafeteria and in the book store added to the total. The co-chairmen expressed particular thanks to all who contributed and all those who assisted in the drive.

into four main categories. They are Commentaries, Questions, Summas, and Opuscule and Discourses. The two Summas of St Thomas Aquinas represent a combined effort of twelve years. In his profound Summa contra Gentiles, St. Thomas offers not only a brilliant defense for the Church against the attacks of the Jews and the Moors, but also shows that no demonstrated truth, i.e., science, is opposed to any revealed truth, i.e., faith.

And, in his greatest work, the Summa Theologica, St. Thomas has given us a complete scientifically-arranged exposition of theology and, at the same time, a summary of Christian philosophy. The Summa Theologica is used for the teaching of all theology in the Roman Catholic Church. The text itself is used in class here at PC during the last two years. Certainly, no other theological work is as vital as is the Summa Theologica.

The Angelic Doctor covers the greatest variety of philosophical, theological, and liturgical writings in the history of the Roman Catholic Church. Those volumes that the Angelic Doctor wrote 700 years ago are still being used today.

Powers Column

Of the New York writers who have turned to New England’s powerful hoop array for their copy, the New York Daily News’ Jimmy Powers has been boasting the PC horn for quite a few weeks now. Powers was one of the first to jump on a Providence bandwagon and has been conspicuous for his laudatory remarks concerning the Friars.

The New England papers have also increased their providence coverage and the Providence Journal and Evening Bulletin gave excellent coverage to the NIT bid.

Father Murphy Profile...

From Cambridge, now a serious young man, became more and more accustomed to things Dominican.

By 1949, having earned his Licentiate and Lectorate in Sacred Theology, the newly ordained priest journeyed to Catholic Charities' Camp Hayes in Godefroy, N. Y. Here he served in the happy capacity of chaplain for 250 boys ranging in age from nine to fourteen.

Father Murphy, recalling the challenges of this assignment, jokingly referred to it as his "baptism of fire" into the everyday world of the Catholic priest.

In 1952 "assignment St. Mary's" became the next step in the career of the traveling Dominican. Father recalled his days at St. Mary of the Springs in Columbus with pleasant memories. Teaching sociology and theology to the young ladies, he spent his spare hours constructing a dock, and exploring Allen's creek.

Father set sail for Rome in 1956 to further his studies in sociology. After a year at the Angelicum, the International Dominican House of Studies, he received his Ph.D.

Confessing a block to the learning of a language, Father admitted that while in Italy he succeeded in confusing more Italians with his "Latin-Italian mostly Latin," much to the consternation of his confreres, Rev. Fabian Cunningham.

With the sudden and tragic death of Fr. Clark in 1957, Fr. Murphy was called to head the sociology department at Providence College. The following year he was appointed Dean of Men at his Alma Mater.

Suggesting that the "clock had turned full," Father said he has become acquainted in a non-ethereal manner with the problems of the collegian away from home. "Although the job is very time consuming, things are going very well," said Father.

The Irish face crinkled into a smile as he rolled a piece of paper into his typewriter and began to tap out a notice. I closed the door on the busy click-clack of a communiqué from the Dean of Men.

eighteen points in the first half. In the last four minutes of the opening half, PC outscored the Crusaders by a 13-2 count, with hoops by Egan, Holzheimer, Wilkens, Swarts and Guimares (2) being offset by only a single HC basket, that being scored by George Jmsville, who scored eleven points in all and sparked his team in the first half. Sparkling plays were turned in by Providence on the two Guimares baskets. One came on a beautiful pass from Egan when Denny was alone under the hoop. The second came as a result of another unbelievable defensive play by All-New England Len Wilkens.

In one short series of moves, Wilkens forced a Crusader toward the endline, slapped the ball away towards the sidelines and then leaped around the astonished HC man, making a brilliant save and passing to the frontcourt men before landing out of bounds. Guimares took the ball underneath and laid it in for an easy two-point basket, that being scored by Egan's average, but few will ever forget the magnificent feats of the Holy Cross backcourt men that were the focus of an away from home contest. The thrilling win in Philadelphia showed the basketball world the degree of resistance which the PC cagers have exhibited. This stubborn refusal to quit against all odds seems to the paramount quality with a feeling of self-confidence to the team as it wends its way toward the playhouse of stars, Madison Square Garden. The final aspect of the team, scoring, has thus far been successfully placed on the strong shoulders of Hartford's high scoring John Egan. John has led the press boards on a merry chase by his meager rise to the national scoring ranks.

Many Factors Lead '59 H.C. Downs Friars By Late Rally

Mid-way through March, Coach Joe Mullaney will once again travel down the pike to the old New York City and its famed Madison Square Garden. With him will be the scourge of Rhode Island and New England basketball, the Providence College Friars. This trip will be for the National Invitation Tournament before March 12 through 21.

The Friar campaign was choosen because of their fine inter-collegiate record, 15-3, at the time they learned that a tournament was being planned. The Friars, under the guidance of Villanova University at Philadelphia and the other a dumping of the previously unbeaten Indians of St. Benavenure, were one of the top, if not the top, teams in New England.

Five Factors

Much of the team's success can be accredited to five factors: teamwork, leadership, defense, rebounding, and determination.

Leadership has been exemplified Defense Keynote In P C-B U Fray Tomorrow Night Providence College's tournament bound basketball team (17-4) meets a strong Boston University squad (17-6) Thrusday, March 5, in 5-promises to be a battle of defenses.

Terrier coach Matt Zunic's "Chihuahuas" line-up will be geared to stop the Friars' driving and jump-shotting attack. For his part, coach Joe Mullaney's charges, which is ranked third nationally, will be in search of stopping B.U.'s height advantage.

Ed Washington, B.U.'s 6'7" center, is an important weapon in B.U.'s seventy point game against the Friars. He has been averaging better than fourteen rebounds a game and is one of four Terrirers whose scoring average is in double figures.

Another Terrier threat in the lineup is co-captain and playmaker Jack Leonan, shortest (6'1") and highest scoring (fourteen points per game) of the team. The Terrier coxen is "Tom's Stag."

Bob Cummings, 6'6" Terrier center, plays for his former position and Willy Gates (6'2") at the other. Are both are averaging twelve points a game and combine with Washington to have the tallest front line in the country.

Recently, B.U. has looked impressive in losing to Dartmouth 74-59 and U of R 74-55. The Terrirers' most impressive victory this season was a 74-53 win over Columbia and the West Point second.

B.U.'s Josee proves its ability to be "up" for an important game. A stroll at Boston's Stagny's Gargantuan 76-59 win over Maine earlier this week, B.U. showed that the Friars are walking. The PC eagles are expected to be a tough and powerful team for the Friars to knock.

Many Factors Lead '59 H.C. Downs Friars By Late Rally

Winning Column Saturday, February 25, the Friars found themselves behind Holy Cross at half time. Mainly because Hadnot Sensational Holy Cross was the deciding factor.
