

AQUINAS HALL IS DEDICATED

Fr. Chandler Gives Address At Exercises

Dean Extols Benefactors For Assistance Given To New Dorm

Higher education consists in coordinating a life of virtue and godliness with that of science and wisdom and that only by this coordination can an unbalanced personality and contradiction in the individual be avoided, the Rev. Arthur H. Chandler, O.P., dean, told approximately 300 members of the clergy, state and city officials and guests at the dedicatory exercises held yesterday morning in Aquinas Hall. The speech was broadcast over Station WEAN.

Extolling the benefactors of the college, Father Chandler said "the very bestowal of anything upon Him out of pure love renders it supernatural, and as such, worthy and meritorious of life everlasting." He also added that all those that cooperate in the spiritual and corporal works of mercy undertaken by a religious order are remembered in prayers of gratitude as long as that order survives.

The reverend Dean illustrated that in following the ancient tradition of higher education by dedicating the building to God, the Dominican Order was following their own ancient tradition of taking a definite leadership in bringing the universities to the zenith of their power and in establishing in them "their eminent intellectual, spiritual tradition." "It was the friar movement," said Father Chandler, "which largely reared and made solid the towering edifice of education," the effect of which may be found in the writings of St. Albert the Great and St. Thomas Aquinas.

"With us, learning and sanctity go together," he continued. "Our saints are scholars; our scholars, saints. And the order flourishes only when both aspects of our life are intensely cultivated."

"Consequently we have two essential features in the ancient conception of higher education . . . One represents knowledge; the other, virtue."

Eulogizing St. Thomas, Father Chandler held him up as a "perfect exemplar" before the young men of the college. "He was beloved by God and men," he continued. "We call him the Angelic Doctor because of the stainless purity of his life and because of the clear penetration of his mind like that of an angel gazing upon mysteries. He learned much from books but more from the crucifix, for he saw more when looking upon it . . ."

"Does not, then, the life of Aquinas give a concrete idea of what is intended in higher education? Successful in scholarship, in practical affairs, and in the art of living, is he not a suitable person to hold before our students as patron and model and guide? . . . Therefore, under the title of his name, do we, his disciples and friends, offer this building to God so that through St. Thomas Aquinas and like St. Thomas Aquinas the young men who will live here for generations to come may learn to know and love and serve God, and finally reach God as he did by devoting their lives to God's honor and glory."

First Mass Is Celebrated In New Chapel

First Unit of P.C. Building Plan Finished

Guests Inspect New Dorm; Luncheon Is Served In Main Dining Hall

The dedication of Aquinas Hall, the new $500,000 Providence College dormitory, was made yesterday afternoon as clergymen, civic leaders, and guests gathered on the Dominican campus to witness the solemn ceremony. At 10 o'clock the ceremonies began with a procession of the Providence College faculty and visiting Dominican clergy through the lounge of the new building to the entrance of the student chapel, located in the right wing of the building.

There, at the entrance to the chapel, the Very Reverend Terrence S. McDermott, provincial of the Dominican Order, blessed the building while members of the procession chanted the Fiftieth Psalm of David, and an oratoria. Following the exercises at the chapel entrance, the Dominicans, secular clergy, and the guests entered the chapel where a solemn high Mass was celebrated, and a further blessing was given by Fr. McDermott.

The Very Reverend John J. Dillon, O.P., president of Providence College was the celebrant of the Mass. Fr. Dillon was assisted by the Rev. Daniel M. Galliher, O.P., registrar of the college, as deacon, and the Rev. Edwin I. Masterson, O.P., treasurer, as sub-deacon. During the Mass, music was sung by the Providence College student choir under the direction of the Rev. Leo S. Cannon, O.P., and the priests in attendance chanted the litany of the saints and four of the Psalms of David. Student servers at the Mass were John Vossler, '43, crucifix; John Keenan, '41, thurifer; Charles Farrell, '43, acolyte; and Robert G. Conway, '40, acolyte.

At 10:30, the Rev. Arthur H. Chandler, O.P., dean of the college, broadcast the dedicatory address over station WEAN.

Following the exercises of dedication in the chapel, the officers of the ceremonies, clergymen, and the guests inspected the recently completed dormitory and a guest luncheon was served at noon in the main dining hall.

Following the luncheon, United States District Attorney, J. Howard McGrath, '24, acted as toastmaster and introduced many of those present at the ceremonies.

The new dormitory is the first completed unit of Providence College's expansion program. Aquinas Hall is a complete housing unit, containing a dining hall, kitchen, student lounge, chapel, and accommodations for one hundred and eighty students. The dormitory is four stories in height, and is of the latest type of cement and steel construction. The building, one of the largest dormitories in the east, is completely fireproof. Aquinas Hall was designed by Oresto DiSaia, prominent Providence architect.

The celebrants of the Mass wore new gold vestments presented to the college by Mrs. Charles Carroll in memory of her late husband, Dr. Charles Carroll, who was Chief of the Division of Public Education at the time of his death in February, 1936.

The vestments were made by Mrs. Carroll to be worn by her son, Rev. (Continued on Page 4)

Five Seniors Make Final Appearance In Game At Marvel Gym

Having failed to subdue one of their intra-state rivals, the rejuvenated Friars will attempt to gain some measure of satisfaction out of the Rhode Island Collegiate hoop competition when they encountered the brilliant Brown five at Marvel gymnasium tomorrow night. The contest, last of the campaign for the Crottymen, will find them pitted against a Bear aggregation which has been victorious in 14 of 18 starts.

The final appearance of five seniors wearing the Friar colors will be made when Co-Captains Joe Kwasniewski and John Barnini, as well as Bill Murphy, Jim Leo, and Paul Sweeney bow out of collegiate court competition. For the Bruins, Captain Harry Platt, one of the greatest basketeers in Brown's history, will climax a brilliant collegiate career along with teammates Bill Kelly and "Moon" Mullen.

The Friars had completely dominated the twelve year series until last year when the Bruins registered their initial victory.

The Crottymen however, are not conceding Coach Eck Allen's boys a thing for they have turned in impressive performances in their recent encounters with Connecticut and State, and will be gunning for the Bears from the opening whistle. Add to this the rivalry between Providence and Brown and you have the makings of a real contest.

The natural rivalry existing between the two schools cannot be overlooked, for it has been shown in the past that both teams always go all out in endeavoring to register victory, and the performances under such competition have always bordered on the spectacular.

So previous records mean very little when the Friars and Bears get together. It will be a meeting of two orthodox systems, the Crottymen employing a slow breaking attack, while the Bruins, with Captain Platt as the

POPE PIUS CABLES APOSTOLIC BLESSING

Pope Pius XII cabled his Apostolic Blessing to the Very Reverend John J. Dillon, O.P., president of Providence College, on the dedication of Aquinas Hall, which was held yesterday morning.

The Pope's message was received through the Most Reverend Martin S. Gillet, O.P., master general of the Dominican Order at Rome, who also cabled his own "paternal blessing with greetings and hearty congratulations."

Juniors Name Prom Leader

Danahy and McDougald Awarded Places On Prom Committee

Russell Varnum of East Providence was elected chairman of the Junior Prom last Friday when the Junior class met in Room 17 to break the deadlock which existed for the office. The balloting on Thursday resulted in a three-way tie for chairman among Varnum, Edward Crouchley and Gerald O'Brien. On the second ballot Varnum received 39 votes, Crouchley 25 and O'Brien 21.

The class decided not to contest the tie for fifth place on the committee which existed between William Danahy and Edward McDougald. Both men were unanimously appointed to the committee.

The Junior Prom committee consists of: Russell Varnum, chairman, Edward Crouchley, Gerald O'Brien, John Reynolds, William Danahy, Edward McDougald and the class officers, Joseph Howe, James Pettine, Francis McCarthy, and John Keenan.

Following the election the committee met and appointed Crouchley and Danahy in charge of selecting an orchestra; Varnum and Howe, tickets and finance; O'Brien and McDougald, bids and programs; McCarthy and Reynolds, favors; Pettine and Keenan, ballroom arrangements.

While no orchestra has been chosen, the committee will make their selection before the Easter recess.

P.C. Debaters Defeat Maine

McGowan and Sweeney Uphold Affirmative of 'Isolation' Question

A Providence College debating team comprised of James R. McGowan, '41, and Charles E. Sweeney, '41, defeated a team from the University of Maine last Wednesday in a contest sponsored by the St. Anthony Council, Knights of Columbus, in the St. Ann's parish hall.

The Providence team upheld the affirmative of the Pi Kappa Delta question, Resolved: "That the United States Should Maintain a Policy of Strict Military and Economic Isolation Toward All Those Nations Outside the Western Hemisphere Engaged in Armed or Civil Conflict."

Brooks Brown, '41, and George Ellis, '41, represented the University of Maine.

Daniel E. Geary, Jr., '40, manager of debate, acted as chairman. Judges were Leonard Girouard, Leonard F. Clingham and Arthur McGinn.

Four members of the Debating Union will leave Monday afternoon on the annual road trip through Northern New England.

The group will include John O'Gara, '41, president of the debating union, and Daniel E. Geary, Jr., '40, manager of debate, as one team, and Charles E. Sweeney, '41, and James R. McGowan, '41, as another team. Both teams will debate both sides of the isolation question.

Debates will be held during the week with the Providence team meeting the University of Vermont on Tuesday, St. Michael's of Vermont on the following day, the University of Maine on Wednesday evening, Colby College on Thursday and the University of New Hampshire on Friday evening. The Rev. A. P. Regan, O.P., moderator of the Union, will accompany the team.

Geary announced last night that the regular schedule of intra-mural debates will probably be postponed until after the varsity team has returned from the road trip.

PROGRESS

With the dedication of Aquinas Hall, Providence College takes another step in the building of a great Christian institution. From the founding of the College in 1917 up to the present time a slow but steady progress has been made by the Dominican Fathers in their effort to impart to the youth of all nationalities and of all creeds a true Christian culture.

We say that the dedication is but a step in a great program of expansion because while the College has a firm footing it is merely beginning the work it has set out to accomplish. Guided by the glorious traditions of the Dominican Order and by the principles of a sound philosophy, the College will in future years be one of the greatest educational institutions in the east.

Each step in the progress of this institution is not only a College development of Providence but is also a step in the development of Christian education as a whole. Christian education which is real and not merely so called. Education based on the principles of a philosophy which through the course of ages has remained true while others have passed away with the time.

There are in this democracy of ours too many colleges and universities claiming to be Christian institutions while utterly disregarding philosophy or adhering to a philosophy which is materialistic. These so called Christian institutions overlook in their curricula the doctrines upon which civilization should be founded.

The colleges and universities of today are turning out the leaders of tomorrow. We in America have condemned those nations in Europe which have fashioned their governments on materialism. We have condemned those nations who have disregarded the teaching of Christianity. But how can we maintain Christianity if the leaders of tomorrow utterly disregard its fundamental principles or imbibe principles which are contradictory to Christianity.

In order to retain a Christian civilization, the principles on which Christianity is based must be taught to its leaders. Colleges and universities who refuse to recognize metaphysics do so because they realize that upon such recognition their false philosophies fall.

We who recognize the true philosophy realize that upon our system of education is the foundation of Christianity secure. We believe that Aquinas Hall, beautiful as it is, is not only a symbol of forward progress which is merely material but is also representative of the growth of an idea, an idea which has its source in the past but also has a complete application to the present and to the future.

We have noticed, of late that poetry is being used as a medium of expression by some of our fellow columnists and so, wishing to prove that poetic talent is not lacking at the dorm, we'll throw our hat into the circle and try to bring to you with a poetic swing news covering everything.

"Cinderella was a lucky babe,
 She had 'til twelve for her conclaves.
 But we, poor amateurs on the rock,
 Are slaves to the tone of the deadly clock."

"Confucius say—Be bright and cherry
 Be glad your home and not too beery.
 But we reply (Chinese)—Tat Tain't so
 'Tis better to be a little high than very low".

"Now of Confucius we have had enough,
 So let's get on to the newsy stuff.
 For, of sources, we have much to choose,
 So here we go with a little news".

"Back we go again to the rock,
 The next note comes with a noise that shocks.
 George Avery's singing is the item we mean,
 He calls it singing, we call it a scream".

"Now during the storm our power went dead,
 You would think we were all a bit "teched in the haid"
 For a clamor arose like a Joe Louis bout
 Which finally died down to a chorus of shouts."

"When on the morrow we looked at the sky,
 (All except one who had a black eye)
 We gave our thanks that we had been spared
 For the darkness made some of us plenty scared".

"But now, alas, our space is used,
 And, if we have perhaps abused,
 We ask the pardon of our reader fair
 We're the "little man who wasn't there!"

AMATEUR GOLF

By CHARLES EVANS, JR.

What is amateur golf? What is professional golf? What difference does it make to the college golfer?

The answer to these questions seems fairly simple. A man excels in the thing he does all the time. Just a few hours more given to an art or science may determine a man's success, or failure; therefore, the man who makes a living by playing golf will, other things being equal, play better than the man who does it for pleasure in his spare time. If the men who play winter and summer would enter a tournament of men who play in the intervals of business and college, there would be no sportsmanship to it. This is unfair to the real amateur. That is the only good reason for the exclusion of the professional. It is not a social distinction but one of skill, and if we accept this premise, the problem is comparatively simple. It is true that only in sport is professional ability spoken of disrespectfully; in all arts and sciences, the amateur is the inferior. He is an unfortunate being who has never been able to devote his full time to the object of his affections.

The British rule and custom is very simple, logical and reasonable.

The real object of the rule, as I understand it, in the two classes of players is to preserve a sporting chance for the amateur.

There are just a few amateur golfers in any country who can give the professionals a run for their money, and turning a few professional players loose in an amateur tournament would create havoc in the event.

Surely the great cost of amateur golf must mean summer and winter golf with no time for business. Is it the golf I knew twenty years ago? Then we made sacrifices for the game, saved up for the events.

Thank goodness, there is one sensible National Amateur Tournament these days, the Intercollegiate, for it costs a world of money to participate in the United States Amateur. America is a country of magnificent distances, and travel comes high even when paid for by your university. Many of the so-called championship courses are at very inaccessible points, hard and expensive to get to.

The remedy for a National Amateur lies in the National Inter-collegiate. There, a fine, wholesome game has made its championship the opposite of a money test, and promising young collegians will not be dropping out because they cannot pay the cost. The college golfer can accept his expense to the National Intercollegiate Championship. In addition he must know the rules of his university and of the N.C.A.A. In addition he must give the N.C.A.A. Golf Committee a certified notice that he can represent his school.

If the United States National Amateur is to get out a proper national representation, it will have to be re-organized from an expense standpoint. The U.S.G.A. must learn to overlook little things. Why fight over a gift of balls and close one's eyes to bigger gains and unfair privileges?

Amateur championship golf does not lend itself to two mistresses. Most golfers, if the amateur rule is strictly enforced, must give up one or the other. The college golfer does not get as much practice as a professional, and he suffers accordingly, and by a good amateur rule; I do not mean using a microscope on small offenses, such as invitations and little gifts, but long winters south and summers north, and a certain professional attitude to the game, known easily and without snooping. It is of great import that the college sports of golf be kept free of the taint of money and professional commercialism. At a time when amateur golf is being totally eclipsed by professionals, surely there is nothing of greater interest to the game. Better amateur golfers can be expected than would have been possible in many years without the N.C.A.S.

Nowadays, the line between amateur and professional golf does not seem to be drawn as sharply as formerly. As a matter of fact, in a democratic country, it is the time given to practice that gives the professional finish to one's game which is the deciding factor. It does not seem quite fair to the man who works hard for a living to find himself obliged to compete in an amateur tournament with a man who gives his whole time to golf. I do not mean young university men whose lack of experience equalizes the matter.

The whole amateur question boils down to the something that gives golf that professional quality that makes competition between the two classes of players so unfair to the amateurs.

A University of Texas mathematics class was recently dismissed in the middle of the class hour because a swarm of bats invaded the lecture hall.

First U.S. college course in quality statistics has been instituted by Massachusetts Institute of Technology. It will give special attention to quality control of industrial products.

Hot Off the Fryer

Francis X. McCarthy

Marvel Gym, the stamping ground of Coach Eck Allen's classy Bruin aggregation, will be the scene of a very interesting court battle as two quintets — one riding high on the crest of achievement, the other striving to atone for early season shortcomings—vie for the city and possibly the state college title. While the Brunonians will be decided favorites to repeat their triumph of last year, don't sell the Crottymen short in this final objective tussle because a Friar victory not only would cover a multitude of grievances but would undoubtedly dismiss the heavy pall which hangs over the P. C. campus at the present time.

Opponent's Pet Peeve

Loping Lefty Fallon, the lad with the unusual assortment of trick shots from outlandish angles, doesn't concentrate all his efforts on point scoring by any matter of means. His dancing antics and arm-waiving tactics have made him anything but popular with Friar opponents but have worked to the definite advantage of the locals' defense. Breaking up enemy attacks before they cross the centre line is pretty much of a regular occurrence with Lefty. He still maintains his scoring pace, however, as the recent records will show. Against Assumption he found the rim with uncanny consistency and set up numerous scores with his deft passing.

Paul Sweeney's role in the Assumption tilt was by no means of lesser importance. His entrance into the fray midway through the last half was timely as it nipped a spirited Greyhound rally before serious damage could result. The Friar offense was pretty ragged at the time but once in the lineup, Poul's cool temperament became contagious and the team began to make appreciable advances in the scoring column. He wasn't the only one, however, who carried a level head. In the midst of the Greyhound uprising in the second half Bill Murphy and Jim Leo were the victims of rough play but preferred to show better sportsmanship by withdrawing from the scene of flaring tempers. More power to them.

All-Rhode Island Team

With two of the three Rhode Island college fives boasting of records that have placed them in the running for sectional honors, a composite all-state five would undoubtedly approximate in talent the club which will eventually be crowned Eastern champions. The first team lines up as follows: Harry Platt, Brown, and Stutz Modzelewski, State, forwards; Bill Rutledge, State, centre; and Frank Wilson, Brown, and Warner Keaney, State, guards. Our own Lefty Fallon and Bud Conley, State, forwards; Jack Padden, Brown, centre; and P.C.'s Bill Murphy and "Slip" Barnini, guards, make up the second unit.

Spur Box Splinters

Word comes from the Brown campus that Coach Eck Allen has no false ideas as to the Friars' capabilities of upsetting the high-flying Bears tomorrow night. The Bruin coach knows well what a victory will mean to the Crottymen and for fear of a let-down from their recent torrid pace he is putting them through strenuous workouts... Big Elt Deuse will have little time to bask in the warm Florida sunshine during the next few weeks but it won't bother him much for he will be too busy trying to impress boss Joe Cronin at the Red Sox camp in Sarasota... Speaking of Deuse, whose absence has left the P.C. catching department in the lurch, we learned recently that Dan McKinnon would be among those seeking this year's first string receiving assignment. This columnist recalls many sterling performances turned in by the sorrel-topped Pawtucket lad while a student at St. Raphael's Academy. Red played freshman baseball but at that time Jack Egan had him on the other end of the battery.

At this point Coach Ed Crotty sent Paul Sweeney into the game and the husky Friar guard proceeded to steady the Providence attack and offered smart opposition to the fast-breaking Assumption forwards.

CHORUSES REHEARSE FOR FRIAR MUSICAL

The P. C. musical comedy, "Back to Bacchus," is beginning to make definite progress, according to Joseph A. Wade, '40, production manager. Rehearsals are being held thrice weekly for the main characters. The dance choruses are also rehearsing three times weekly and according to Larry Simonds, dance director, the dancers are rapidly mastering the new routines.

Tickets for the comedy will be placed on sale immediately after the Easter recess, according to John M. Reynolds, '40, business manager. Reynolds also announced that bumper strips will be issued after the close of the retreat.

This year's musical comedy will be held five successive nights.

Displaying the same form they had shown in their three previous games, the Friar basketeers handily defeated Assumption College by a 47-31 score Wednesday night at Worcester. The victory was the second the locals have registered over the Greyhounds this season, having outscored them by the same margin, 57-41, on their home floor early in January.

From the moment "Slip" Barnini converted his free throw from the foul line shortly after the opening whistle the Friars were in the lead. Indeed the locals had posted eight points on the scoreboard before the Greyhounds broke into the scoring column. With Lefty Fallon and Joe Kwasniewski making good on set-up shots and Bill Murphy piercing the hoop with a long tom, the Crottymen enjoyed a 14-4 advantage after 10 minutes of the opening half.

The Greyhounds picked up considerably during the next 10 minutes, working their fast break to advantage but lacked the shooting accuracy to affect the Friars lead and the locals were ahead, 25-8, at the intermission.

Providence encountered stiffer opposition as the second half got under way and Coach Ed Skelley's boys drew up 31-21 as the period reached main cog, display intricate offensive maneuvers in the form of clever ball-handling and accurate passing.

Defensively, the Bruins are more than capable for they have in Bob Person and "Tank" Wilson two great defensive stars, especially adept at controlling the rebounds. The Friars too, on occasion have shown to advantage defensively. Add to this the fact that Slip Barnini, a grand defensive performer, will be playing his last game of basketball for the Black and White, and the difference between the Friars and Bruins is barely noticeable.

A victory for the Friars would go a long way towards brightening a season that has been rather disheartening. Brown, on the other hand, must win to maintain its place near the top of the New England standing. A great game should be in prospect for those who travel to Marvel Gym Saturday night.

Blackstone Valley Club To Hold Spring Dance

Daniel F. Kinnon was elected chairman of the second annual spring dance of the Blackstone Valley Club to be held in Harkins Hall on March 29. The dance will be the first semi-formal affair sponsored by the Blackstone Valley Club. Bids are priced at one dollar.

The committee headed by McKinnon consists of: Charles T. Avedisian, '41, posters; Edward Kirkman, '43, tickets; John Sherlock, '40, orchestra; and Robert L. Smith, '41, publicity.

Ex-officio members include Joseph Keough, '40, president; John Sherlock, '40, vice-president; John F. Gibbons, '41, secretary; Matthew Gallagher, '41, treasurer, and James Coyle, '42, sergeant-at-arms.

Dr. Daniel J. O'Neill is moderator of the club.

Friar Quintet Loses to State

Chance for State Title Fades As Rams Win, 75 to 62

Hopes of clinching the intra-state championship went aglimmering as a dead-game Friar hoop squad went down to defeat after 40 minutes of spirited milling with the Rhode Island State College five, 75 to 62, at Kingston last Saturday night.

The contest was characterized by rugged play, mainly because of the type of maneuvering displayed by the Keaneymen. Their long passing game, which usually ended with the receiver taking the ball on the dead run and barging through to get close up, was conducive to rough play.

Only during the early part of the contest were the Friars leading the scoring, but they were the dominating factors throughout the tilt as far as the manifestation of real basketball is concerned. The Crottymen, employing a slow, deliberate and clever passing attack, which was made possible by steady ball handling, were superior to the Rams as floor workers.

As soon as play got under way, Providence got possession of the ball and held it until Forward Steve Fallon tallied on a layup shot. The Friars added several more markers before Stutz Modzelewski registered for the Rams on a heave from the free-throw line during the seventh minute of the first half.

At halftime the Rhode Island Staters were on the heavy end of a 31 to 24 count.

The spirited mauling took its toll as Co-Captain Slip Barnini, who performed very meritoriously in the Providence back court, was banished midway through the third period after he had filled his quota of personal fouls. Then, following Substitute Guard Joe Juges retirement from the contest due to an ankle injury, Capt. Ed Petro of State and Providence's Paul Sweeney engaged in a fistic brawl, which threatened to break out into major league proportions until teammates and spectators pried them apart.

Big Joe Kwasniewski, Co-Captain, was the shining light in the Friars' play. Kwasniewski took the spot light away from wide Warner Keaney in clearing the boards and displayed uncanny accuracy on tosses from long range as he tallied 13 markers.

Modzelewski moved nearer the national scoring mark established by the Rams' Chet Jaworski by gathering 27 points to increase his total to 470 for the year, a total which is seven short of the record.

Modzelewski's greatest helpers in the way of scoring were Bud Conley and Billy Rutledge, who scored 16 and 12 markers, respectively.

(This is the first in a series of articles dealing with the gridiron history of Providence College, from the time before its inception as a varsity sport to the present day.—Ed. Note.)

By HAROLD RICH

Aspirations to appear in the Rose Bowl or the various other New Year's Day colorful dishes are at present far-fetched, nevertheless, Providence College can proudly cherish the gridiron deeds or the 18 varsity teams which have carried the colors of the Black and White in its short, but spectacular career. From straight line plays to the most intricate system employed by teams in this era, the Friars have trod a rough path; they barred none from their schedule, battling against some of the greatest of all football names, which included Colgate, Fordham, Holy Cross, Syracuse, Boston College, Boston University and its Mickey Cochrane, and an Army aggregation led by All-American Chris Cagle.

There have been many outstanding performers in the Providence ranks, players who failed to receive the recognition due them because of the Friars' obscurity on the gridiron map. Joe McGee, "Chuck" Connors, Charlie Burdge, Charlie O'Keefe, Bill Kutneski, Hank Soar, and Tony Pariseau are but a few of the men who could have basked in the spotlight if the Black and White's stock had been high.

To make a name for Providence College was the desire of the pioneer athletic directors and towards this end they worked for participation on the gridiron, finally succeeding in fielding a team in 1921. When asked about their success in gathering enough playing material, the old timers revealed with pride the bruising tactics which marked the first great class rush.

The first Board of Directors, which had as its head the Rev. Ambrose Howley, O.P., comprised Andrew J. Crowley, James Tully, Joseph O'Gara, Raymond Dewdney, Leo Dunphy, Edmund J. Kelly, Spencer Kelly, Vincent Dore, Calvert Casey, Charles J. Ashworth, Dennis J. McCarthy, Frank McCabe, Daniel J. O'Neill, Robert Beagan, Francis Dwyer, Edward Doherty, James Kerns, Peter O'Brien, Paul Redmond, Albert Callaghan, and Donald Burke.

When the first Friar coach, Fred H. Higgins, former Brown and Tufts star, called for candidates for the squad, he found a team lacking in weight but not wanting in determination. Just to manifest their intestinal fortitude, the grim warriors took on a Boston College combine which outweighed them 30 pounds to the man. In that encounter, Art Tierney, the center, played the full game with a fractured hand, unknown to the coach; Frank McGee suffered a sprained ankle and, hardly able to walk, pleaded to remain in the game, and Charlie Eagan went through the entire contest with two bad wrists.

Ed Doherty, at present makeup editor on the staff of the Providence Evening Bulletin, was appointed as manager. Laboring diligently, Doherty managed to book games with East Greenwich Academy, Boston College, Rhode Island School of Design, and the Holy Cross 2nds. The record compiled by the Black and White against this array was nothing short of marvelous considering the conditions with which they were confronted. On the assets side of the ledger were listed 28 to 0 and 87 to 0 wins over East Greenwich and R.I. S.D., respectively. On the other side were recorded 25 to 0, 6 to 0, and 19 to 7 setbacks at the hands of Boston, M.I.T., and Holy Cross. The stars of the campaign were Frannie Dwyer, Bob Beagan, Frank and Joe McGee, Dan Nolan, and Mickey Graham.

In 1922, Providence's first year of varsity competition, 65 candidates answered Coach Huggins' call. Among those aspiring to berths was Arthur Brickley, brother of the famed Harvard drop-kicking ace, Charlie. Spirit and loyalty to the Smith Hill institution was not confined to the members of the football team alone, as 300 students travelled to Worcester to see Providence fall before a strong Holy Cross varsity after waging a game battle.

A large attendance, including many distinguished guests, turned out to witness the Friar-Boston University clash on Nov. 11, 1922, an important date in Providence College athletic chronicles as it marked the date of the dedication of Hendricken Field, named in honor of Bishop Hendricken of the Providence Diocese. The field had been formally opened on Oct. 21st, the day that the Black and White stacked up against a powerful New London Submarine Base eleven.

The Friars bowed to Boston U., 7 to 0. It was a great display of football power on the part of the locals as the Massachusetts aggregation was one of the strongest in New England at the time. Mickey Cochrane, who was later to write his name in the annals of major league baseball, was the individual star of the game. At the conclusion of the 1922 campaign, five victories and four defeats were entered into the record books.
