

P. C. TO GO CO-EDUCATIONAL

Women Will Enter P. C. Next Term

Female Students To Occupy Guzman, St. Thomas Halls

WOMENS' SPORTS PLANNED

Matrons Will Supervise Women Students Residing In Sienna and Molina

College authorities have made extensive plans to cope with the changes which will result when women enter Providence College at the beginning of the next trimester. The Cowl learned yesterday that plans have been made to convert Guzman and St. Thomas Halls into dormitories for the women. The students and faculty at Guzman will move to Aquinas, and Guzman will be named Catherine of Sienna Hall. The members of the religious faculty who now reside at St. Thomas Hall will also go to Aquinas Hall. It is believed that St. Thomas Hall will be named Molina Dormitory, in honor of a 16th century Spanish theologian.

There will be but one male student dormitory. That will be Aquinas Hall. Carpenters will begin work within a few weeks at Guzman Hall where there will be extensive alterations in order to accommodate P.C. women. Several members of the Veridames, the recently formed women's society, have been appointed to supervise the interior decorating at Guzman. The Veridames were an important factor in the securing of training for women at the college and it is because of their efforts that P.C. will become co-educational. It is believed that Guzman will be able to accommodate ten students and five matrons when alterations have been completed.

Another change which is sure to result from the new program is in the sports department at the college. Plans are in the initial stages to have female softball and basketball teams. Everything will depend, however, on whether or not the first group of Siennaites and Molinists are athletically minded.

Changes will also take place in other extra-curricula activities. The Cowl staff voted as soon as they heard the news yesterday to refuse to allow women a parity in numbers with the male students on the staff. The moderators of the various classes expressed the opinion that they "supposed the females would be eligible for class offices." It is believed that matrons will have charge of the women students in Catherine of Sienna and Molina dormitories.

Present plans call for one matron for every two female students.

Cowl Holds Student Poll

A survey conducted by the Cowl during the past week definitely proved that college students are gullible. A Cowl reporter was assigned to conduct the investigation of those things that college students would believe and those that they would not. For three days, according to the 88 page, 47,000 word document that he submitted at the conclusion of his investigation he wandered about the college asking different men whether they would or not. His statistics show that 93.6% of all undergraduates questioned definitely would not. Another 5.1% did not know whether they would or not. The remaining 4.7% said they would.

The report said further that the overwhelming majority were some-

ENTRANCE EXAMS TO BE GIVEN

Student Body Will Be Informed of Radical Change In Policy Wednesday Morning

By JAMES F. SHIEL

Providence College will become coeducational beginning with the summer trimester the Cowl learned yesterday. It has been ascertained from a reliable authority that the college administration, despite its previous statements, will make an official announcement of this radical change in the college program to the student body at an assembly on Wednesday morning.

"We are conscious that the entrance of women into Providence College will constitute a departure from previous aims and plans," said a prominent member of the college English and Latin department who refused to be quoted directly. "No financial necessity prompts our action. Women are taking a prominent part in the modern world. They will play a greater role in post-war reconstruction. We shall endeavor to prepare them to fulfill their respective roles as we are preparing and have prepared men in the past. We shall do this by providing them with the only salutary preparation, a Catholic education," he concluded.

It is believed that qualitative requirements for women will be the same as those now required for male students. For admission female college entrants will have to present fifteen units of high school credit from an accepted finishing school. Pembroke graduates will be accepted without an entrance exam. P.C. candidates from all other halls of learning will have to undergo entrance exams in all subjects in addition to the regular Freshman English examination.

While the expected announcement from college authorities concerning coeducation is something which even the Cowl never imagined, nevertheless it is not revolutionary in pedagogical circles. P.C., hitherto the only college in Rhode Island which was not coeducational, by its expected action will join Rhode Island State, Brown, and Rhode Island College of Education as a member of the coeducational group.

According to the coeducational system women take the same courses as the male students and enjoy all other college rights and prerogatives granted to the male students. It is said that coeducation gives a more rounded education to both the men and women students and that it fosters a feeling of understanding and a more pleasant "esprit de corps."

More definite information in regard to this innovation can be expected when the official announcement is made to the student body on Wednesday.

COWL TO CEASE PUBLICATION

Paper Shortage Seals Doom of Publication

The Cowl will cease publication with this issue because of the severe paper shortage, college authorities informed us yesterday. As we pounded our typewriters in the Cowl office, writing the biggest scoop in the Cowl's brief but distinguished existence, we received this disenheartening news. We were told that the shortage was acute and that the Cowl was not listed on the priority list as other school-papers. We were told to make this announcement in this week's Cowl.

We will be brief in singing our swan song. Modesty prevents us saying too much and grief stifles our journalistic pens. Since 1935 we have tried to give school news thoroughly and accurately. We did make several mistakes, but of course they were always typographical. We had written a news story in an editorial style, but this error can be forgiven. All in all we did a pretty good job.

We have been told that when the war is over the Cowl may resume publication. But we can not be consoled by this fact. We know the students will miss the Cowl, but alas the good of the majority must supercede the luxuries of a few. And the Cowl was a luxury. Little did we think a few months ago that this would be our fate.

But we can make no complaint. (Sob, sob again.) We must take our demise like men. (Sob, sob, sob, sob.) Alas, our tears are flowing down the typewriter keys. Adieu, auf wiedersehen.

WE PROTEST

It is the function of a school paper to mirror the sentiments of its student body. We feel compelled therefore to protest the decision of the school authorities to allow the female sex to enter this institution. For years we of Providence College have gloried in the fact that this was the only institution of higher learning in all Rhode Island into which women have not insinuated themselves. If men elsewhere have fallen before the endless onslaughts of women, we at Providence have dauntlessly maintained the rule—No Women Allowed. And we have prided ourselves in the accomplishment.

But we are about to fall. Our stout ramparts have been overrun by the enemy. They have deluded our faculty into believing that it is the patriotic thing to admit women into the last bastion of masculine self-determination in our state. We have been seduced by this pseudo-patriotism. We are lost, if we allow ourselves to be led like sheep to the slaughter.

And so we protest. We who have always sought this haven of refuge, much as the storm-tossed ship seeks the harbour, decry this surrender. It is not the depressing thought of the restraints that will be necessarily imposed on us men by the advent of the female that is so disconcerting. It is not the thought of inane giggling, powder-puffing, or perpetual hair-primping that irks us so. It is the principle of the thing.

Women are roaring to the fore in the world society. They are no longer content with equal footing with the male; they aim now at supremacy, complete and unchallenged. We are to be the next victim of their impetus; we are to be a small scale model for their world-wide plans. Men will be slaves. We protest. Vehemently.

Editor's Note

Since April Fool's Day is just around the corner, we let our imaginations run wild when we were writing the first page. We knew you were not so gullible, but we decided to have a trained psychiatrist in the Cowl office in case anyone should question us in regard to the Cowl's front page stories. We do solemnly swear and proclaim that every story on the front page is a deliberate fabrication.

P.C. will not go coed.
Mr. Landry will not teach Free French.

Guzman and St. Thomas Halls will retain their status quo.

There are no matron positions open either for women between the ages of 45-63 or for those of any other age.

There will be no protest to school authorities.

The Cowl does not fold up.

P.C. students are gullible to a certain degree.

Fibber McGee does lend a bit of color to the page.

P. C. TO DEBATE ST. JOHN'S TODAY

Second Meeting for Teams Tonight

St. John's College of Brooklyn and Providence College will meet tonight at Harkins Hall for the second time this year to debate the labor question. These teams met several weeks ago when the Providence team was on its annual road tour. Because of the excellent debate between the two teams a return encounter was immediately arranged.

Providence College will defend the affirmative side of the Phi Kappa Delta proposition "Resolved: That the Federal Government Should Regulate by Law All Labor Unions in the United States." This question has been very popular throughout the entire nation, and it has been used frequently by our team during the last two seasons.

Matthew Kelly, '43 and John Davitt, '44, will represent Providence. The Debate Union invites all students and their friends to attend. As yet the names of the judges have not been announced.

Veritas Copies To Be Limited

Joseph M. McLaughlin, '42, editor of the Veritas, said yesterday that only 500 copies of the yearbook would be available for distribution when the annual is released one week after Easter. Wartime priorities have severely limited the amounts of materials available for non-defense production. Material for the cover is supplied by the Du Pont Co., which is currently engaged in heavy wartime activity, and has consequently little time for the manufacture of book covers. As a result, almost 100 copies of the Veritas must be abandoned. Distribution of the limited number of books will be conducted according to the paid-up receipt numbers of the prospective buyers.

The present junior class, which will be graduated next January in accordance with the new academic program, has already begun to make plans for their edition of the Veritas. The next book will be smaller, with fewer pages, and with paper covers instead of leatherette—provided paper is still available.

Alembic To Run Contest

Short Story Contest Is Planned By Editors

John F. Sharkey, '43, editor of the Providence College Alembic, has announced that a short story contest will be conducted. First prize will be a ticket to the Junior Prom; second and third prizes will be tickets to the Pyramid Players' production, "Tars and Feathers."

All entries must be submitted by April 10th. The winners will be announced April 14.

All manuscripts must be typewritten, must be original, and must be at least 2500 words in length. All entries become the property of the Alembic. The winning stories will be published in the Spring issue of the Alembic.

The prizes were donated by the Junior Prom Committee and the Pyramid Players, respectively.

COOPERATION THE PANACEA

All this fighting about labor seems to us to be an indication of lame thinking. It looks as though some of us are looking through a telescope at something right under our noses; making a mountain out of a mole hill. The whole thing would dissolve if we'd get our mental glasses on and see things in their right proportion.

As far as viewing things in due proportion is concerned, we think that somebody has the cart pulling the horse. For months, now, we have been hearing the constant cry of production, production, and more production. All the best brains in the country have been brought into play to plan for this all-out production of the things we and our allies need to get this scrap over and end it the way we want it to end.

Now, if you have all the best brains at work planning and directing this vast effort, doesn't it sound logical that we should have at least as much concern for the men that are going to do the actual producing? We mean those men behind the men behind the guns. All the plans for production in the world will get nowhere if we don't have somebody to carry out those plans. And it stands to reason that the better those guys feel, why the better and greater our production is going to be.

When you consider this, all this effort to restrict the laborer seems to have a queer aspect. It comes close to hitting your own head against the wall because your chest doesn't like the way your hair is parted. For management to deal a psychological jolt to labor when everything depends on them is to deal a body blow to the whole set-up.

The whole idea behind this war effort should be cooperation. And cooperation always means sacrifice by both sides. We've heard a great deal (Continued on Page 4)

'Tars and Feathers' Title Chosen For Musical Comedy

Navy Atmosphere Dominates Annual Production

"Tars and Feathers" has been chosen as the title for the 1942 Musical Comedy it was announced yesterday by the Board of the Pyramid Players. The name was chosen from among many

V-7 Examinations

Last week the Cowl received a letter from a senior inquiring that if it is possible for students of other local colleges to be interviewed for V-7 in Providence, why cannot it be arranged to provide the same accommodations for P. C. students and thereby save them trips to the First Naval District Headquarters in Boston. The Cowl at that time stated that it knew of no such accommodations and furthermore went on to say that all R. I. college students have to go to Boston for their exams.

This week the Cowl investigated the matter further and found out that the Navy had offered to send a recruiting party to the college relative to the V-7 Class of Naval Reserves and that a notice to that effect had been posted on the bulletin board.

College authorities had no response to that notice and investigations revealed that there were not sufficient prospective applicants at the college at that time for the V-7 Class. Therefore the Navy judged it desirable to withhold its offer to send the recruiting party to the college.

submitted to the directors. Other titles offered were: "Nautical Marietta," "Miss the Deck," "Keep 'Em Fryin'," and "Gobs O' Fun."

The title was derived from the nautical theme of the script which portrays the rivalry of two women, Sandra and Chlorine. Both these characters battle to gain control of the Navy after having disposed of the Admiral. After having run the gamut of the admiralty, the girls are forced to bring their quarrel before the Supreme Court. This provides the setting for further rioting as the girls are forced to exert their influence on the Chief Justice.

Casting has already been started for the annual production. The full cast is expected to be announced within a few days. April 15 through 19 have been selected as the dates for the comedy.

The music for the 1942 musical comedy is being arranged by Ken Cayton, '42, musical director for the show, Richard Horlbogen, '45, and William "Tiny" Quinn, '43.

The script for this year's production has been written by Francis A. Stadnicki, '43, who also wrote last year's musical comedy, "Uncle Tom's Cabana", in collaboration with Thomas Farrell, United States Army. Stadnicki, who comes from Central Falls, is directing this year's show.

ALUMNUS EARNS HIS NAVY WINGS

George H. Morris, '41, Wins Coveted Rank

Providence College's long list of graduates in the service was increased today when George H. Morris, '41, of Taunton, received his wings and a commission as an Ensign in the United States Navy. He is the first of the past assistant editors of the Cowl to win a naval commission.

Morris left Providence College last year and was sent to Squantum Field, Mass., where he took his basic training for the Naval Air Corps. He was then sent to the Navy field at Jacksonville, Florida, and today has completed his training at Pensacola. Although it has been suggested that Morris will be appointed an instructor, he personally hopes to go into actual combat as soon as possible.

NEW MEN ADDED TO COWL STAFF

Three additions to the Cowl staff were announced this week. Arnold Williamson, '45, a former member, returned to the business staff. Daniel Donovan, '45, and Frank W. Cross, '44, were added to the reportorial staff. It was announced that there were still a few positions open to interested students. Particularly needed are men with a wide range of interests who can recognize a good story when they see it.

DORM DIARY

By JERRY COLLINS, '44

Dear Diary:

The phrase that strikes the keynote for this week's edition of the Dorm Diary seems to be some of the boys were whooping it up, in one of the Aquinas halls. The boys really have developed a penchant for manhandling each other in their spare time. Perhaps it's in the interest of National Defense that all of the boys pop out from behind doors to slug some passing buddy, or lie in wait during blackouts to conk their roommate as he enters, blissfully unaware that in one more second he will be sporting a concussion.

Item number one concerns Mike Hamman, the eminent fight manager, and his bodyguard, Horizontal Smith. They sallied out into the hall to make a social visit down to the Dean of Freshman, Ross Muenzen. However, the Board of Admissions, Jaw Grady, G. Burns, and others threw discretion to the winds, and proceeded to give the unhappy Frosh their civil service test for Sophomoreship. This consisted of first, beating them to a frazzle and then painting black moustachios upon their faces. But that wasn't the end; most of the crimes around here are carried out in two chapters. A few moons later the same two test-takers were sleeping away up in their trundle beds when two members of the Board came thru the door, but literally, and finished up the job.

SPORTS

SPORT SLANTS

By JOHN A. DILLON

While we are in this blind spot between the close of the basketball season and the opening of the baseball schedule, it would be an excellent idea to pause and meditate on the effect of sports in general upon the war effort.

Uppermost in the minds of most people is the physical development aspect, which, it is true, is very important. However, the psychological and moral value of sports has also left a telling mark on the fighting and lasting qualities of the American people.

The will to win and the realization that victory should not be despaired of until defeat is actually at hand has been imprinted upon the American mind through the extensive program of athletics that our people have always followed. Sad indeed is the plight of a nation void of a love, an understanding of competitive athletics.

France, possessor of the world's mightiest army, builder of the supposedly impenetrable fortification system, could not realize that the smallest half back will sometimes penetrate the most powerful line, or that continual shots at the basket are bound to find the mark eventually. The French government, ingenious and complete though its plans might have been, overlooked a weapon far more powerful than its concrete emplacements or its far flung mine fields. The realization that defeat was possible was, until too late, sadly lacking.

Then as the German tide swept through the Sedan breach, and swept ever onward toward the sea, the French people, misguided and betrayed, could not visualize a ninth inning rally or a goal line stand,—defeat, they believed, was inevitable.

How different the strategy of MacArthur! Perhaps he remembered an Army-Navy game as he calmly concentrated his forces, slowly gave ground, and finally on the brink of disaster, rose up and hurled death and defiance into the face of the foe.

It is the same mental reaction that results in a last second basket that also prompts a race to rise from the depths and cause the light of success to shine through the forest of death and despair.

It is this will to win, taught on the football field, the baseball diamond, or the basketball court, that makes America invincible, that reaps the fruits of victory and glory in the orchards of hatred and war.

FRIARS ARE VICTORS

In a benefit game for the Polish Relief Fund the Friar five trimmed the Berkshire All Stars 53-47 last Sunday at Adams, Mass.

In the absence of Ted McConnon, the Dominican ace sharpshooter, Bob Reilly and Captain Horace Marone took over the main scoring burden, racking up 17 and 14 points respectively.

The Stars, composed of Adams and Pittsfield hoopsters, battled gamely but were unable to combat the plays of the smooth-working Friars.

LOUTHIS WINS

Adding another title to his long list of honors, Pete Louthis, P. C. sophomore, captured the heavyweight championship of the New England amateur ranks in the A.A.U. boxing tournament at the Boston Garden last Monday night.

SLAVIC ALL-STARS CAPTURE INTRA-CLUB HOOP CROWN

Former P.C. Star Joins Armed Forces

Featured in Baseball and Football While at College

It was announced this week that Dan (Red) McKinnon, former P. C. football and baseball luminary, had joined the long list of Providence alumni in the armed forces of Uncle Sam.

Dan was one of approximately 200 leading athletic celebrities selected to start a month's indoctrination course at the Naval Academy to prepare for the installation of the rugged sports curriculum that will be initiated at the four new Navy Pre-Flight Training Schools.

The popular Dan, since his graduation from P. C., had served as a member of the freshman football coaching staff, developing several fine backs during his term. However, now that football has been discontinued at the college, Dan eagerly seized the opportunity to help toughen the country's fighting men.

Zulkiewicz and Gobin Lead High-Scoring Champions

By winning the Intra-Club hoop championship the Slavic All-Stars rung down the curtain on basketball at P.C. for the '41-'42 season in a blaze of glory.

Dominating the field throughout the entire tourney the Stars hit their peak yesterday by thoroughly trouncing a courageous but out-manned Rock-Wrecker five 39-13. This decisive win crowned the hard-fighting Slavs as champs.

In reaching the finals undefeated the Stars had to knock off four quintets, while their opponents in yesterday's clash had dropped but one contest, that in the first round.

The victorious club was composed of Ray Kowalski and Louie Sly at the forward posts; Big John Gobin at the center slot; and Nick Budnowski, Rudy Zulkiewicz and Paul Roshka alternated in the back court.

Zulkiewicz led the champs against the Rock-Wreckers with a 15-point total. Little Ray Kowalski, "The Mighty Mite", dropped in 9 markers.

DOROTHY LEWIS studied ballet from the age of 4, and her routines on the ice combine the artistry of the dancer with the speed of the skater. Her cigarette combines extra mildness and flavor. She smokes slower-burning Camels.

MISS LEWIS works out all her routines first in ballet slippers. Many's the Camel cigarette she smokes as she relaxes. "Yes, I smoke a good bit," Miss Lewis says. "I've found Camels milder by far. And with their full, rich flavor, Camels always taste so good."

"The more I smoke, the more I appreciate Camels," says Miss Lewis at a late supper with friends at the St. Regis. "Their cool, rich flavor is all the more enjoyable because Camels are so mild — with less nicotine in the smoke." You, yourself, try Camels. You'll like everything about this slower-burning cigarette of costlier tobaccos. You'll like that grand flavor — and you'll like knowing that there's less nicotine in the smoke (see below).

about the enslavement of the workers in Germany and have contrasted to it the position of the American laborer. If labor in this country can work along with management side by side with one objective in mind then that contrast becomes all the greater. But if you cause the laborer in this country to feel that he has been treated unjustly then no matter how patriotic he is, his heart won't be in his work half as much as it will be if he sees his position is secure.

What the president said about working together and what Donald Nelson has said about time being so short ought to make us all pull in our horns and buckle down to the giant task which confronts us. We have to remember that every day that goes by means one day less for us to get ready for the 'big push'. If we remember the fellows out there in Australia then both labor and management will not have time to consider details which only obstruct when we begin to discuss them as though they were all-important.

what confused and bewildered. Many answered in a dubious, uncertain tone which led to the belief that they were not at all convinced. Many admitted that the issue was obscure. There were some, however, who said that the thing was perfectly clear to them and that they could not understand the general feeling of vagueness. The report states that, when pressed for an explanation, most of these said that it was too silly to bother explaining.

There was little difference among the dorm students and the day hops, according to the poll. The dorm students showed more caution in committing themselves, but once assured that their names would not be used, they relaxed and spoke their opinions more freely. A surprisingly large percentage of the day hops said that they had a street car to catch and expressed sincere regret that they had to hurry. Those who paused in their haste said that, as far as they were concerned, it was a moot question.

Of the 4.7% who said that they did, the vast majority were Seniors. The general feeling among them was that it took four years of hard study to be able to give a sensible answer to the question. The report observes that, when asked for the reason behind his decision, the average Senior winked knowingly and said, "You'll find out when you're a senior!" or "You're too young to know." Most of the Juniors questioned confessed themselves horribly confused. The general sentiment among the Juniors was, "We'll worry about that when the time comes," while several were heard to remark, "It's more important to keep your health."

The Cowl's investigation revealed that most Sophomores thought the "whole thing was crazy" A few, however, showed clarity of thought believing their Sophomore rank, and stated earnestly that it was a matter of the utmost importance, especially at such a crucial time as this. These few were undecided as to whether they did or not. One explained that he was the youngest of fourteen children.

No Freshmen were interrogated. It was believed that the issue might strain their young minds to the cracking point, even before they became Sophomores.

The report concluded, "The student body showed remarkable potencies throughout the entire period of investigation. The co-operation of the individual students who were questioned and the profound thought they contributed to the consideration of the various elements were of inestimable value. It was only through their assistance that the project was so successful."

SLAVIC ALL-STARS TAKE HOOP CROWN

Lithe Joe Uzalinski led the losers' feeble attack.

That a good, clean brand of ball was played by both clubs is shown by the fact that only 8 rule infractions were committed. Far out in front at half-time with a 22-4 margin, the Stars coasted to an easy win in the third and fourth periods.

Undoubtedly the outstanding player of the tournament was Johnny Gobin of the Stars who intercepted pass after pass and tapped in a majority of rebounds. His 20 points in an early battle represent the tops in individual point production for the tournament.

The Athletic Department wishes to thank all who contributed to the success of this year's tournament.

The results of the final week's game were as follows:

La Salle Club 42, Sparrows 29; Newport Club 43, Independents 12; Rock Wreckers 21, Chemistry Club 17; Slavics 40, Twin City 35; Rock Wreckers 29, Newport 22; Philamusians 37, Twin City 32; Slavics 25, La Salle Club 18; Rock Wreckers 20, Philamusians 16.

LIONEL J. LANDRY TO GIVE COURSE IN FREE FRENCH

French tongue as it is spoken at the French consulate in England and in other territories now under the sovereignty of the De Gaulle group.

Mr. Landry will have as a special part of the new language study an intensive course in the De Gaulle patois and conversational Free French. It is believed that Providence College will be the only educational institution in the country to have Free French as a part of its curricula.

Andre Mandeville, '44, a former student at Assumption College, Worcester, and who has had twelve years of French will assume Mr. Landry's present course in French literature and conversation, Vichy French, in order that Mr. Landry may devote his full time to his English, Spanish, and Free French courses.

"Several recordings of the speeches of Charles De Gaulle have been secured," Mr. Landry said, "and these along with my personal experience in speaking Free French will supplement the Free French conversation course." Students who intend to register for the course will report at Mr. Landry's office before 5:30 p. m. Wednesday afternoon.

It is rumored that those who are studying Free French will be given a six-month deferment by the draft board in order that they may do intelligence service in Vichy circles in Rhode Island prior to receiving Army Intelligence posts.

should be able to see in the dark before playing games.

AND THEN THERE'S THE ONE . . .

About young Genaro. He had for years cultivated a flowing head of hair which he wore becomingly on his upper lip. This irritated the other Freshmen; naturally they were griped because they didn't have the same snappy effect when they walked in the breeze. Of course, occasionally Anthony tripped when he hurried to an eight-thirty class, but on the whole it was an object d'art much to be admired. Finally a group of rival tribesmen got together and decided to put an end to Tony's silken beard.

Armed with an electric razor, Ali Red Hardy, Ali Dan Murphy, Abu Ben Conti, Ali Charley Harrington and Sheik Dan Donovan rode up on their leather horses, shoes to you, and—Genaro now poses for Shick.

There are other stories of violence but if we told them it would only lead to bloodshed.

THE RETURN OF THE NATIVE

Those people who have read the Cowl thru the last year or so might remember the article devoted to the feline visitors who at one time or another spent some of their time in Aquinas Hall ('til they were discovered and removed.) This week another kitten was reported to be making the rounds. He? turned up in the third floor shower room; it showed up in a second floor closet; as no visitor feels his trip complete without a word to affable Jim Valley, the kitten made a trip to his room. The kitten completed his trip by hanging himself up-side-down in a rather public place; when he was found showing off in such a manner he was removed, as he no doubt knew he would be, because only a skunk would stay where he wasn't wanted.

QUESTION AND ANSWER DEPT.

Who put the red in Mr. Foley's handkerchief? Will Art McGill break the all-time endurance record? Will Bob Reilly ever replace Pat Kennedy? How long will it be before the writer of this column gets shot? Who cares?

P.S. Yours, JAKE.
