FRIARS AWAIT STATE CLASH

Larry Drew Made Senior President

Sam Franco Is New Vice-President

CORKERY SECRETARY

Sormanti Gets Treasurer's Post

Lawrence J. Drew, high ranking philosophy student and outstanding varsity athlete, was elected president of the Senior Class yesterday at the class meeting in Harkins Hall.

Drew is guard on the basketball team, and was end on the football team. During his freshman year at La Salle, he played end on the football team, guard on the basketball team, and pitched on the baseball team. He is a member of the Monogram Club. A member of the Army Reserve, he is awaiting call to active duty.

The vice-presidency of the Senior Class was won by Sam P. Franco of Brockton, Mass. Franco, a philosophy student majoring in education, was one of New England's outstanding halfbacks in his sophomore year. During his junior year, he served as an assistant instructor in physical education. He is a member of the Monogram Club. As a member of the Naval

Chet Zabek Night' Set For Tomorrow

Chet Zabek will hold the attention of the spotlight tomorrow night when friends, alumni, and students of the college will join in paying tribute to the Dominican basketball co-captain who is soon to enter the armed forces.

Chet, who is majoring in education, has featured in baseball, basketball, and football since he came to the college about three and a half years ago. During his freshman year, he was an assistant manager on the football team.

He has played baseball during his freshman, sophomore, junior, and senior years. This year he is enjoying his best year in basketball, for which team he is playing the position of center.

Chet has been active in other activities while at the college. He has belonged to the Monogram Club, the Pyramid Players, and the Carolan Club.

Senior Picture Studio Selected

The Photo-reflex Studio at the Shepards Store will be the class photographer it was announced yesterday at the Senior class meeting. All seniors will be assigned dates for sittings according to school and concentration. A student may go earlier than his assigned date if it is more convenient.

All students must make a down payment of two dollars which will be credited to the final cost of the senior pictures.

FRIARS CLUB ELECTS MEMBERS

All Classes Represented As Seven Are Honored

Seven undergraduates including one senior, one junior, two sophomores, and three freshmen were elected members of the Friar's Club, college hospitality group, at a regular meeting held Wednesday evening in Harkins Hall.

Thomas P. Condon, of New London, Conn., was the senior who was selected. A philosophy student, majoring in education, Tom came to the college from Bulkely High School. He is a member of the Carolan Club.

William F. Ryan, a general science student from Lowell, Mass., was the junior elected. John D. Young of Norwich, Conn., and James J. Eagan, of Providence, were made members, representing the sophomore class.

Young was a candidate for president in his freshman year and was a member of the Frosh Hop Committee. Eagan, a graduate of La Salle Academy, placed third in the one hundred yard dash in the Physical Education Jamboree. He is active in inter-mural and C.Y.O. sports.

Edward T. Sullivan of Providence, Francis J. Murphy, Jr., of East Providence, and Harry Sherman, were the freshmen elected. Sullivan is a general science student and is assistant editor of the Cowl. Murphy played the trumpet in the La Salle Academy Band while at that institution.

COACH AND CO-CAPTS. WILL BROADCAST

Arrangements were completed yesterday for the appearance on the air of Coach Ed Crotty and the Friar co-captains, Bob Reilly and Chet Zabek. Reilly and Zabek will be guests of Warren Walden, popular sports commentator, during his program on WEAN tonight at 5:20.

The Friar mentor will be interviewed by Walden next Monday night at the same time.

RIVALS MEET TUESDAY AT R. I. AUDITORIUM

OFFICIALS ARE CHOSEN FOR P. C.—R. I. STATE GAME

The Athletic Office announced this week that Pat Kennedy and Ed Boyle had been selected to officiate at the R. I. State game Tuesday night.

Neither official needs any introduction to Rhode Island hoop fans. Kennedy is undoubtedly the outstanding basketball official in the country today. Boyle is well known in New England basketball circles.

The two colorful arbiters worked last year's P.C.—State clash and their actions while calling rule infractions were worth the price of admission.

RAMS STRONG

Crottymen Go Into Game With Unblemished Record

In what is expected to be one of the greatest court clashes in the history of Eastern basketball the super-charged Friar varsity five will meet the point-a-minute Rams of R. I. State next Tuesday night.

The meeting of two of the East's top teams will take place at the Rhode Island Auditorium. Officials of both colleges, judging from advance sales, are confident that a capacity crowd will fill the Arena for the long-awaited duel. The Friar-Ram clash last year set a new attendance record for New England basketball and this season's rival clubs are adjudged even stronger than their predecessors.

The forces of Coach Frank Keaney's high scoring Rams have bowed only to a stronger Fordham five.

The Rams, probably the most offensive minded five in the country, have an average of 87 points per game which in itself tells more about State than mere words.

Co-Capt. Earl Shannon, a deadly marksman, sets the scoring pace for the Keaneymen while operating at his centre slot. Shannon, who has collected 136 points this season, was recently selected by Clair Bee as a member of his All-American five.

Science Club Names Officers

The members of the Albertus Magnus Club of Providence College initiated their current series of meetings this week with the election of club officers.

James J. Scanlon of Providence was made president; George A. Riley of West Warwick, vice-president; Sabino J. Sinesi of Providence, secretary; and Raymond N. MacAndrews, treasurer.

A standing committee for social affairs has been set up to handle the details for the year's activities. The members of this committee are John D. Lopez, William F. Ryan, and Gregory P. Carter.

Getting under way with its usual progress, the society has already arranged to hold meetings in the evening two or three times a month for the purpose of viewing pictures on scientific and medical problems.

Bowling League To Be Organized

A bowling club is being organized among the students of the college. Tentative plans call for the formation of a league, with matches being played one night each week. Special rates are being sought from the local bowling establishments. Any student is welcome to join; lack of previous bowling experience is no barrier. It is thought that teams may be formed from among the dorm students to compete with day hop teams. A complete schedule can be easily arranged if enough are interested. Any five men may organize their own team.

Those who have already shown themselves interested include Ben Pagliaroli, Wilfred Michaud, John Davitt, Andre Mandeville, Harry Roark, Jerry La Force, John Geoghegan, John Kenney, Vin Valilauskus, Marius Guatieri, Fran Handy, Anthony Orabone, James Shiel, Frank Errico, Albert Palmieri, George La Porte, John Harrington, Joseph Sullivan, George Donnelly, J. Palmieri, Joseph Russo, I. Noebbor, R. A. Walsh, John Sormanti and W. Kelaghan.

Others who may be interested can obtain further particulars from John Gerhard. A meeting will be held sometime next week to determine the most favorable time for the matches. An announcement of this meeting will be posted on the bulletin board.

"FOR WHAT DO WE FIGHT"

Much has been written recently about war aims and methods of post-war reconstruction. The subject is a highly controversial one; but nevertheless one which must be decided soon. A definition of our war aims has long been sought by thinking political students. To date their demands have been answered only by vague, general, and confusing descriptions of our goal.

The first announcement to come from the United Nations was the so-called Atlantic Charter, which in eight general, oratorical sentences, attempted to set the basis for post-war reconstruction. As many interpretations may be placed upon it as the student wishes. It was perhaps so intentionally created; thus any future acts of the United Nations may be excused on the basis of its equivocal language. Held to strict interpretation the Charter cannot be harmonized with previous actions of governments who shall still remain in power after this war is over. Nor can it square with statements that have since been released by those governments.

The peoples of the world, looking to the British Empire controlling one-fourth of the world's surface ask, for example what it intends to do about point three of the charter—"the right of all peoples to choose the form of government under which they live."

They ask Wilhelmina of the Netherlands does the principle of religious toleration apply to all the Dutch peoples or just the few?

They ask if the tyrannical governments of Greece and Poland are to be returned to power. They ask Russia if the worker has any rights other than those of a cog in the collective machine.

They ask these and many more questions. They have been answered.

They were answered by Mr. Churchill with "we will get to that after the war"; still later, "we do not intend to break up the British Empire."

They were answered by Mr. Cripps following the failure of the Indian negotiations with the remark that because of their refusal to cooperate, they (the Indians) had lost their chances of dominion status after the war.

They were answered by the meaningless gesture of the United States and Great Britain in giving up certain judicial rights in China.

Following the Atlantic Charter the famous Four Freedoms were announced by our President. Clothed in the same ambiguous language of the Charter, they too have been confused, contradicted, or just forgotten.

Our enemies have fared little better. To them we have offered complete destruction. In the words of Mr. Anthony Eden:

"We shall break Germany so that she will never rise again. . . . We shall divide Germany up into small states comparable to the position she held before 1870."

Heaping more coal onto the fires of revenge, Hanford McNider, Commander-in-Chief of the American Legion more recently declared:

"The peace will be dictated amidst the smoldering ruins of Berlin, and not before the German people have been made to pay for the death and destruction which they have visited upon the other peoples of the world."

The torch was picked up again this week by William L. Shirer, former Berlin correspondent, writing in Look magazine, who called for complete destruction of the German nation.

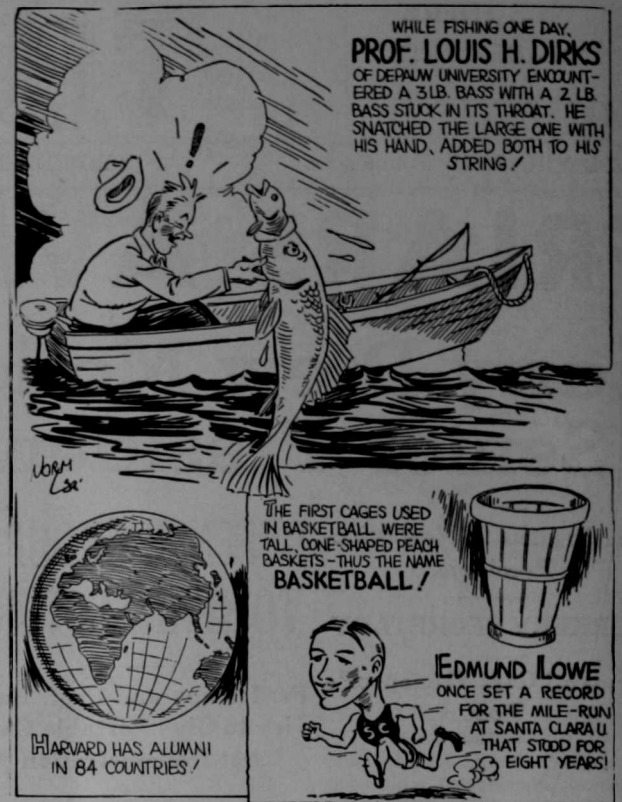

What a consolation this must be to mothers and fathers who have felt the unforgettable shock of war in their own homes; to the peoples who have experienced the never-ending rain of bombs, death, and destruction; to businessmen who have been forced to give up their enterprises because of labor and material shortages; to us who soon shall face the enemy in the grim reality of battle—to all who have sacrificed in any small measure that this war might be won. For, by such statements the soldier is told: "Keep your gun ready, for you shall use it again soon." The weary peoples of Europe and Asia are warned: "Don't dismantle your air raid shelters for enemy planes shall again fill the skies." History has demonstrated time and time again that such is inevitable, if we impose a harsh peace.

Ours is a personal interest. In a very short period of time we shall see active service. Give us a gun and equipment, yes; but more than that give us something to fight for! Life is precious; but life is relative. It is all important only until we find something higher to fight for. Give us an ideal and we will willingly give our lives.

Our war aims must be positive. If we intend to use the Atlantic Charter as the base of post-war construction we must define clearly to whom it applies. Is it only for the Western World as the peoples of the East seem to believe? Does "enjoyment by all—of access—to the trade and to the raw materials of the world" mean all states of the western world; of our own choosing; or does it mean the whole world? Does "no aggrandizement, territorial or other" rule out the possibility of the U. S. and Great Britain bringing "education" to the "uncivilized"; or "protecting them from unseen forces" that only we in our "omniscient" position can see? Does the "right of all peoples to choose the form of government under which they live" mean what it says, only providing that we have made no previous political commitments? Does this most specifically mean to apply to the members of the British Empire without free dominion status?

We are not today United Nations. We are not united when one nation suspects the other; when enmities continue to flare up even amongst the fighting men of allied nations; when the profit motive still remains supreme among both capital and labor; when men distrust every action of their governments. We are not united because we have not a common goal; because the transcendental term "freedom" means one thing to one person, something else to another, and nothing at all to a third; because men look with cynicism upon an "ideal" goal. Only a definite, concrete set of war aims can bring that unity. It can do more than that. It can cut the time to victory in half. Armed with the realization of what they are fighting for, the free peoples of the world will stumble no more in the darkness before reaching the switch that will once more put the lights on all over the world.

Under the direction of Nero Wolfe, the fictional detective who is a culinary expert, horsemeat could be cooked to pass for lamb. We can imagine the big detective's skill could so change a substitute. But substitutes do not fare that well at the hands of Nero Wolfe's creator, Rex Stout. This author may try to alter a thing, but it remains what it was originally. It still looks the same, and has the same value. It is still a substitute.

Stout's article in last Sunday's "New York Times" was completely trimmed with incidents, quotations, descriptions, flowing prose, and vindictive phrases. These did not change or even mask the content. Readers easily realized what was offered, and they knew it was a substitute.

In place of a democratic principle, he offered a totalitarian fundamental.

It has always been a democratic principle to follow the Christian ideal of loving your enemies. Hatred is the metaphysical basis of totalitarianism. Yet, according to Stout, the latter must be substituted for the former. He believes it is the only way we can win the war.

It would be impossible to frame his argument in the form of a syllogism that could be refuted. In Sunday's article there is none of the logic found in the Nero Wolfe detective stories. Rather, there is highly acceptable sweeping writing leading to a highly unacceptable sweeping conclusion.

The two page article supports the idea that the Germans must be hated. It does this, not by presenting an argument, but by presenting details. By using the same technique, we can support the idea that we can love our enemies and still fight efficiently. In fact these particulars prove hatred to be a detriment to efficient fighting.

The average navy man fights an enemy that is far below the horizon. He works at a machine often less ferocious than the one he worked on in his civilian job. It has numerous devices requiring the concentration of a cool poised mind. Most navy tasks call for such severe attention and skill in handling a piece of machinery, the fighting sailor has no time to think of the enemy. These wanderings would only result in inaccuracies, blunders, and failure.

The same is true with the Army's signalman, the tank driver the artillery man and the pilot.

It would seem the infantryman must hate to be able to charge the enemy.

Congratulations to Larry Drew, Sam Franco, Bill Corkery, and John Sormanti upon their being elected Senior Class Officers.

The Junior Class will have its election soon, and already the various factions are organizing. It is rumored a certain Junior Politician is ready to start his campaign for President (Oh Politics).

Sometime in February the Nurses' Guild will hold its annual convention. According to present plans the Student Nurses of the various local hospitals will be invited to attend a convocation.

This is good news to those who attended last year's dance and reception. As a result many of the fellows are still frequenting the hospitals.

Earl Epstein was a recent prom trotter at Rhode Island School of Design Junior Prom. Earl must like walking. (Or dodging the O. P. A.)

Low Grossi was given a farewell party last week. Lou, a popular Senior Philosophy student, has entered the Army. The party was given by the Marieville Light Rescue Squad of which Grossi was a member. It was attended by fifty of his friends. Joe Bagaglia was Master of Ceremonies. Among those present were Al Picozzi (high scorer in the State C. Y. O.), Larry Galto, George Cesana, and Pete Louthis. Freshmen Cosmo Franchetti and Lou Brurio of last year's Senior Class were also present.

Joe Bagaglia presented Grossi with a purse from his friends at P. C. Chief Dominick Ceasare of the Marieville Fire Department also presented him with a gift.

Instead of Grossi kissing all the girls good-bye, Al Picozzi took his place, and kissed them for him.

Grossi thanked all his friends at the college for the gifts presented to him.

Frank Cross is staying at the dorm instead of commuting.

Speaking of Physical Ed, that tumbling act is causing a lot of sore necks. Al Handler is reported to be the best tumbler in the school (with Mr. Crotty's help of course).

Unbeaten Friars Will Tackle Norwich Here

Quintet Seeks 8th Straight Victory; Jayvees Meet C.Y.O. Club

With a season's record of seven straight victories the high flying Friar quintet will attempt to make it eight in a row when it plays host to the Norwich University five tomorrow night at Harkins Hall.

The Norwich club is an unknown quantity in these parts, a fact which has prompted Coach Crotty to drill his men constantly to keep them at peak form. The Dominicans are now riding high and all opponents are out to end the P. C. win streak.

Of added interest at tomorrow night's game will be the honoring of Chet Zabek, dependable centre of the Friars for the past three years, who has been notified to report to Notre Dame University on Feb. 1, where he will begin training in the Navy V-7 program.

In the preliminary contest the P. C. Junior Varsity will meet a powerful Dean Academy five.

The Dean club is always one of the strongest prep teams in the East and this year is no exception. The visitors are led by Grimshaw, a clever forward, who caused the Friar Frosh no end of trouble last season.

STUDENT TICKET SALE

The Athletic Office announces that sale of student tickets for the R. I. State game will close at 2:00 p. m. next Tuesday.

No student tickets will be sold at the Auditorium on Tuesday night. Students desiring to purchase these reduced rate tickets must bring their pass books to the Athletic Office to avoid disappointment.

Because of the very large advance sale of all priced tickets it is advised that students purchase theirs as soon as possible.

Two Rams Banned From Further Play

Co-Capt. Bob Applebee and Howie French, members of the R. I. State Rams, have been banned from further hoop play because of participation in a professional game.

Coach Frank Keaney announced the ruling yesterday after a meeting of the athletic council. He said the players had been warned that this action would follow any such participation.

Next Tuesday's game at the Auditorium was to have been the last college contest for both Applebee and French.

VARSITY DOWNS SEABEE QUINTET

Crottymen Emerge Victors In Rugged High Scoring Encounter

Forging ahead 5-4 at the end of the first five minutes of play the P. C. five was never thereafter headed as it registered a 64-42 win over a rugged Davisville Seabee quintet.

The towering sailors made a game of it most of the way but the Friars drew away as the final minutes ticked off.

The Seabees, several of them former pro hoopsters, like to play their game in a rugged manner and the officials reciprocated by calling a total of 40 fouls for the evening.

Ted McConnon, the game's leading scorer with 19 points, compiled this total in approximately 24 minutes. Ted has now scored a total of 123 markers in seven contests or an average of 17.5 per game.

Fred Sowa played one of his best games of the year as he tapped in 17 points for runner-up honors.

In the first game of the evening the Friar Junior Varsity, losing, 20-6, at one point and, 28-26, at halftime, poured on the heat as the second half opened and gained a 55-46 win over a stubborn Quonset Navy five.

Burke and Barchi paced the Jayvees with 14 and 12 points respectively. However, it was not the work of one or two stars that spelled victory but rather it was the well concerted team play that turned the tide.

Outstanding for the losers were Santo and Joyce who tallied 15 and 10 points respectively.

AS WE SEE THEM

By JOHN GERHARD

Saturday night is "Chet Zabek Night." In a way, nothing more need be said. To those of us who know Chet Zabek as a quiet, decent, young fellow, to those of us who know him only as that unheralded bulwark of the last three years' basketball teams, the fact that he is to be saluted Saturday night at his last appearance in Harkins Hall can arouse but one response. True, his last game will be against State in the austerity of the Auditorium. But Saturday night he is all ours right here.

We have the chance of a lifetime. How often has it been echoed that "that Zabek certainly has tough luck"? How many times has Chet Zabek done everything but climb the wall only to have the ball roll all around the rim and drop—out! His coach has said in despairing sympathy that, considering the work and patience he has expended, Chet Zabek has been handled rather unkindly by the basketball gremlins.

So Chet Zabek has set no fantastic scoring marks. He has left that to others. But we all recognize what his going will mean, both to his friends and his team.

We like him. We respect him. We're sorry to see him leave.
 And let's show him that.

RE: BOWLING

The most recent brainstorm emanating from this column has to do with the formation among the students of a bowling organization. We see no good reason why bowling, inexpensive and demanding of no particular equipment or skill, should not prove a popular recreation for a group of college fellows.

A trial balloon released earlier this week, and elaborated upon elsewhere on this page, won proof that there is latent a surprising interest in bowling among the student body. We furthermore see no good reason why teams, composed of dorm fellows and day hops alike, could not knit together a highly competitive league. Perhaps a few of the good Fathers would be courageous enough to pick up a team. The thing has limitless possibilities and we would like to see it click. Not only would the plan liven up the atmosphere around here, but, we think, it would afford us all a merry evening once or twice a week.

We'll scout about for special rates in the local bowling alleys; if you're interested, see me in the Cowl office or watch the bulletin board, and we'll see what develops.

THIS CHANTING BUSINESS

Perhaps the less said about the See Bee game the better. It was a mistake to have scheduled the game. The two rival scouts, Engel of Brown and Cleurzo of Rhode Island State, were agreed that their teams would not card the Davisville bunch. We would, however, like to comment favorably on the improvement in the foul shooting of the Friars. The inability of Zabek and Co. to sink the free ones has been irking to many. Bob Reilly, especially, after missing six out of six in the Lovell game, showed a vigorous rejuvenation in connecting on all seven of his penalty shots to establish a new high in this department for this year, at least.

We are going to hit out, however, against an annoying practice which has been increasing in popularity at recent games in Harkins Hall. We refer to the rhythmical chanting of the name of a man whose immediate entry into the game is demanded by certain loud-mouthed supporters. This is a case of the empty barrel.

We fully realize that both second-team guards are popular men. Nevertheless, in view of the fact that he has manoeuvred his squad through seven consecutive victories, we submit that Coach Crotty should be allowed to play his men as he thinks best. He's running the team, so far as we know. This business of shouting out, in unison, for a change of personnel amounts to an indictment of the way the team is being run. There is no individual man with the courage or the grounds to say this; it is mob action, pure and sweet. And we condemn it.

We fancy that this manifestation of support for either of these men is rather embarrassing to them. The immediate reaction among the more mature spectator is: "Well! What do they do, bring their own cheering section along?" The two men concerned would be the first to deny that this is the case. Obviously, they cannot be blamed for the poor taste of their admirers.

We hope it stops. The whole affair leaves a bad taste in the mouth. Let's wait until the boys go into the game and THEN—then we can approve vocally.

CONGRATULATIONS, J.V.'s

The Junior Varsity team, we feel, deserves every bit of praise that is coming its way. That game against Quonset the other night was a revelation. All season this team has been operating in the shade. Most of us came to see the crack Varsity, and the sooner the J.V. game was over, the sooner came the dessert. Tuesday night, however, the J.V. game was better than the Varsity contest. Perhaps not as smooth, but a lot more exciting.

In the first half, when the score stood at a lopsided 20-6 count in favor of Quonset, most of us thought: "Oh, brother! Another walloping." And that is where we were wrong. We're glad to admit it. It took guts to rally from that deficit. Why not give credit where credit is due?

Vinny Vasilauskus, for our money, did a pretty job on defense. We liked, too, the aggressive play of Eddie Lee, and the happy-go-lucky sharp-shooting of young Burke.

Still, it was a team win. We say, Nice going, gang. . . .

And incidentally, have you got your ticket for Tuesday night yet? If not—GO GET IT!

are veteran George Mearns and Ernie Calverly, sharpshooting freshman. Mearns, probably the best defensive performer on the Kingston club, is expected to be given the task of covering Ted McConnon, the Friars' ace sniper.

Operating in the back court for the boys in blue will be Armand Cure, a veteran of many Friar-State battles and either Hank Sperling, Harry Donabedian, or Henry Zabierek.

Coach Ed Crotty will start his whirlwind first team of Ted McConnon, the highest scorer in the history of Friar basketball, and Fred Sowa, dependable sophomore, at the forward spots; Chet Zabek, paying his last and greatest year, at centre; and Larry Drew and Bob Reilly, admittedly two of the East's finest guards.

Henri Ethier, Bill Martin, Al Palmieri, Ben Pagliaroli, and Wilf Michaud comprise the reserve club which is stronger than many colleges' starting quintets.

Tuesday night's game is the first in the series for the State basketball crown. The Friars and State meet twice, the second game being held at Kingston, and each club faces Brown in single encounters.

In the first game of the evening, the Providence Jayvees will meet the strong St. Teresa's CYO five. The Friarlets' opponents are at present leading the Senior Division of the CYO League and are the highest scoring team in CYO ball. They are paced by Walt Stanelum who recently set a high scoring single game CYO record when he threw in 17 field goals and two foul shots for a total of 36 points.

The J. V.'s struck the victory trail when they came from behind to defeat the Quonset Navy five, 55-46, after trailing at one time, 20-6. Coach Crotty will select his starting lineup from Burke, Barchi, Rabbit, Carberry, Sullivan, Lee, and Vasilauskus.

Probable starting lineups:

Reserves, Class V-7, he will go on active duty shortly after graduation.

William F. Corkery, a member of last year's Junior Prom Committee and the Pyramid Players Board of Production, was elected Secretary. He has had leading parts in "He and Sheba," "Tars and Feathers," "Three Men On a Horse," "The Fall Guy," and many one act plays. He is a philosophy student majoring in education, and has been a member of the Army Reserves for several months.

John W. Sormanti, Veritas business manager and Chairman of last year's Junior Prom, was elected Treasurer. He is business manager of the Pyramid Players, an active member of the Aquino Club, and served as the chairman of the Soph Hop ticket committee. Sormanti is a philosophy student majoring in philosophy, and is a member of the Army Reserves.

Other candidates for Senior president were Arthur McGill of Pittsfield, John H. Davitt, Burlington, Vt., and Carroll P. Gettings, Fall River, Mass.

Defeated candidates for vice-president were Thomas Condon of New London, Conn., and James Scanlon and James F. Shiel, both of Providence.

John Brady of Pawtucket, was the other candidate for secretary.

But hatred is a mere negation, the bayonet charger needs more than that. When he encourages himself by singing "This Is Worth Fighting For" or "We're the Battling B----- of Ba-taan," there is affirmation and his courage grows. It is heartening to know the boys will be singing these and not reading Stout's article.

For hatred, such as Stout would instill, is as lasting and impelling as a mosquito bite. Like the insect's bite it is injected from the outside, it does not go very deeply, and the person is aware of it only for a short time. Mosquito bite never influenced a man in his actions.

Hatred is still a substitute, and a totalitarian substitute. There is a shortage of meat. In this case democratic citizens will accept anything they can get. But there is no shortage of democratic ideals and for these democratic citizens will accept no substitute.
