Cowl Staff Will Attend R. I. P. A. Dance and Banquet

The Rhode Island Intercollegiate Press Association will terminate its first year as an active organization with a banquet next Saturday evening at the Howard Johnson Restaurant in Providence. Mr. Bevan Brown of the Providence Journal-Bulletin will be the guest speaker.

The association was promulgated by Frank Greene of the Providence Journal-Bulletin, Rhode Island State, the Greater Y. M. C. A. Institute, the University of Rhode Island, and Providence College.

The purpose of the association is the exchange of information among the participating colleges and the fostering of good will; also, the development of cooperation among the members through whatever joint ventures they may care to undertake.

Present officers of the organization are: President, Warren Carleen; Vice-President, Thomas Hugher; Secretary, Raymond C. Keenan; Treasurer, John Alexander of R. I. C. E.

It was also decided last week that the Cowl banquet will be held in conjunction with the association meeting.

PYRAMID PLAYERS ELECT HEADS; SELECTION BOARD ESTABLISHED

Moore's, Menders and Cunningham have been selected to speak at the Commencement Exercises held Saturday night. Menders and Cunningham will address their talk of appreciation to the parents and Mr. Cunningham will deliver the Class Oration.

Edward Giry, 50, who played one of the leading roles in both productions of the Pyramid Players: "the Amazing Dr. Clutterhouse" and "Sing Mr. Citizen," was elected president of the dramatic organization at their annual May meeting last Wednesday.

The office of vice-president was won by Win Cinquegrana, 49, Cowl sports' writer and a member of the stage crew in both productions of the Pyramid Players.

Frank Conway, Sophomore pre-med, was elected to the office of secretary. Frank is also president of the Glee Club and a member of the Cardinal Club of Aquinas Hall.

The new position of business manager was gained by George Harrison, who alternated in the role of understudy, in the musical offering of the Players. Under the direction of the business manager are two positions which will be awarded at the Fall meeting namely publicity and ticket management.

A five man board of judges was also appointed. Their function will be to choose the play or musical, bearing in mind its adaptability to the Harvard stage and also the cost.

The board is headed by Jack Feeley, 49, a majority of the Pyramid Players for the past year. The other members are: Sedgwick, Paul Matteson, and Henry Keenan.

FATHER CAVAUGHAN WILL SPEAK AT COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES

The Very Reverend John J. Cavanaugh, C.S.C., Ph.D., president of Notre Dame College will be the principal speaker at the Commencement Day exercises Thursday, June 12th, in the Harkins Hall auditorium. It was also announced from the office of the Dean that His Excellency Our Most Reverend Bishop will confect the degrees on the one hundred and forty third graduating class.

The Commencement week exercises will start Monday morning. June sixth, with a Solemn High Mass being celebrated by the Officers of the Colleges in the Aquinas Hall Chapel. The Baccalaureate sermon will be delivered by the Very Reverend Daniel Reilly, O. P., professor of history and former Navy Chaplain.

Following the Baccalaureate exercises, Commence ment week will start with a banquet Saturday night with a Senior-Junior reception Monday night in Harkins Hall.

Cowl Reporter Gives Farewell Message

We of the Cowl staff join with the rest of the school in extending our congratulations to the graduating senior class. From now on, graduates, you will have to pay a dime for the issue instead of picking it up gratis in front of the office. It is possible that all students will pick them up gratis until next year! A shake registration card is all that is needed in order to secure a copy.

The first fact that comes to light is that college graduates age with the years. This is unfortunate in that a man under forty, considered a youth until he holds a position, and a man over forty considered too old to hold a job and evidently a candidate for the firing squad.

Secondly, juniors, or shall we say seniors, always have been honest; we have never held an intellectual axe over your heads as did professors and their ilk; we always strive to get you all on our side, even if you probably don't deserve us and we printed your names tens of times to satisfy your collective ego.

In the next few days you will be told how old and heady: that all sin the crust, cruel world. Then you will be told how well all of you accomplish that and the inevitable happens: the old's abandonment of not remembering names of boon buddies and finding that five minutes is sufficient time to review college escapades.

Several years after graduation, loyal alumni turn back to P. C. Everybody gives anybody who'll listen a big Scoop on how well they are getting along. Nobody is making under five thousand Per—yet most of them are wearing G. I. shoes and spurt coats made from Eisenhower jackets.

To a strange gathering.

Well, this is the last report of the Cowl reporter for the year. It has been a strange collection of ideas that occupied this spot on the page, but regardless of what's in the book, change the name of the head to the "Scowl" reporter in honor of some people I know.

At graduation time, seniors are filled with the soap of companionship and comaraderie. They drool over old pals never to be forgotten. All the world is a wonderful place filled with wonderful people—even groves. Five years pass and the inevitable happens: It's the old abandonment of not remembering names of boon buddies and finding that five minutes is sufficient time to review college escapades.

Our gratitude to the Printing Company for giving us their fullest cooperation during the past year.

To many others too numerous to mention who have helped to make our efforts lighter, we extend our appreciation and gratitude. So long for now; see you in September.

... COMMENT ...

The year is coming to a close and I am afraid there will be no other opportunities for me to write to you. A whole year has passed since our last column, and I must say that during this time I have been working hard to improve my writing skills.

First of all, the Cowl wishes to thank the very Rev. Fredrick C. Foley, O.P., for the encouragement he has shown to our endeavors. We wish also to express our gratitude to the Rev. William J. Duggan, O.F.M., for the hospitality and interest which he has shown to us every benefit and assistance. The staff is also deeply grateful for the photographic work of the Rev. Richard C. Clark, O.P.

For their assistance in giving us important news releases, we thank also the Rev. Vincent, O.F.M., O.P.; the Rev. Charles H. McKenna, O.P., Dr. Daniel J. O'Neill, the Rev. Aloysius P. Begle, John J. Duggan, John F.F. Famighetti, Mr. Anthony Trinolii, and Training Officer Baker.

Where Credit Is Due

This is the final issue of the Cowl for the semester. We of the Cowl staff have enjoyed presenting the Cowl once again after a four year lapse in publication.

Before putting away our pens and head charts, and locking up the typewriters for the summer, we would like to express our gratitude for all those who have helped to make the return of the Cowl possible.

V. A. Forecasts Vets' Law School Record By Pre-Legal Marks

A veteran-student's chance for success in law school can be forecast fairly accurately by analyzing his pre-legal college grades: subjects studied during his pre-college years, his aptitudes and his choices of law school.

These conclusions derived from a study by Robert Mitchell and Donald Dreyer were compiled by Veterans Administration for its vocational advisors, as an aid in counseling veterans desiring to study law under the Serviceman's Readjustment Act. G. I. Bill, and the Vocational Rehabilitation Act. Public Law 93-77, for disabled ex-servicemen.

Studies conducted at Columbia University, the University of Chicago and the University of Michigan disclosed that pre-legal college averages were more valuable in forecasting passing work in law school than in predicting degrees of success in law college.

The VA report noted a marked relationship between undergraduate training in social sciences and law school achievement, pointing out that "the social science record of an individual has its greatest predictive value when it is used to forecast the student's law school performance at the same institution where the college degree was taken."

The research which formed the basis of the VA report has been reported in a number of legal and educational journals, among them the Southern California Law Review, Illinois Law Review, American Law School Review, the Bar Examiner, Yale Law Journal, Psychological Bulletin, School and Society, Columbia University Bulletin of Information.

was preparing to enter college when Germany and Japan helped to change his mind. The army beckoned late in 1941, and Lozoski soon found himself on the athletic uniform of a collegiate team. The Army Air Corps Technical Training School at Chanute, Illinois, was the first stop for the Pennsylvania lad. From there he went to Williams Field, Arizona. While stationed there he really came into his own as an athlete, playing baseball and basketball with the best in the Southwest. In the fall of 1943, the Phoenix Thunderbirds borrowed Lozoski, and he took him to the National A. A. U. baseball tournament at Wichita, Kansas. Walt played center field. He returned to the tournament again in 1945, but on this occasion, as a member of the Williams Field nine. Lou Stringer of the Chicago Cubs was Lozoski's running mate around the keystone sack for two years at Williams Field. The Birms: Adams, and Clay Lampion, to mention only a few were among the many major league players in that Southwest Service League.

During the winter months, the Denny Trophy winner played on the basketball team representing Williams Field, and made the A. A. U. Tourney and was defeated by Denver University in the quarter-finals.

Discharged from the service late in 1945, Lozoski decided to enter college as the first step towards realizing his boyhood ambitions. And that is the way it turned out: to be a teacher and athletic coach. If his achievements here at P. C. in the winter months of 1945, are any indication of fulfilling that ambition, Walt is well on the way to success.

The outing was attended by fifty club members. A short dinner and varied sports events rounded out the day's activity.

The clam-beau was prepared by a committee consisting of Norman Le Coz, Louis Shae, Robert Mitchell, and Joseph Foley. The sports program was arranged by George Bulger and James Hart.
