Jim Egan Gets
Vice-President Of Senior Class

Joe McNally and John Piro
Elected to Office

James J. Egan of Providence, Joe McNally and John Piro of Providence, are the victors in the closely contested election for the Senior class offices of vice-president, secretary, and treasurer.

When the ballots were counted last Friday afternoon in Donnelly Hall, the names of the winners were announced to be four, four, and twelve votes over their respective opponents, Dan Dilhag, New Haven, Vincent Congaposa of Seekonk, and William J. Jutras of Cranston. The final vote for the vice-presidency was fifty-nine to fifty-five. For secretary, forty to thirty-eight, and for the treasurership, fifty-three to forty-eight.

Joe McNally, president, B. R. Clark, O.P., moderator of the senior class, supervised the counting of the ballots.

Egan, a graduate of La Salle Academy, is a member of the Sophomore class. His education interrupted by military service, he returned to the College in his Sophomore year. He is a member of the Veritas staff. Joe is in the pre-Medical course.

McNally, a member of Students for Peace, senior of the Kent Continent, has also been prominent in extra-curricular activities. Joe is a member of the Albertus Magnus Society and of the Friars Club. Last year he worked on publicity for the Junior Prom. At present he is a member of the Veterans staff. Joe is in the pre-medical course.

Puro, a business student like Egan, is a graduate of the Assumption Academy. A veteran of World II, he returned to the College in his Junior year and served on that year's Sophomore Board. He is a member of the Business Committee for last year's Junior Promenade.

Berrymaw, a three-act comedy, will be presented by the Pyramidal Players of Providence College on the Hartkis Hall stage during the evenings of December 11th, 12th and 13th.

Already successfully staged in New York City, the play will enjoy its first performance in Rhode Island with student actors from the College dramatic group playing the characters. New York critics, reacting favorably, described the play as: "sparkling dialogue, fast drama and amusing incidents." The play is staged from a bar in a small town in Ireland.

The Pyramidal Players, under the direction of their five-man governing boarad are now busyly engaged in selecting a principal and an alternate cast for the play. John Feeley, Junior and Edward L. Gwys, Sophomore, as co-directors for the season's first presentation, will have full responsibility and authority over all phases of the production of Berrymaw.

Five departments were created for the forthcoming comedy: Paul Matteson, Junior, will handle the staging.
Harold Keenan, Junior and William Gregory, Sophomore, will be in charge of promotion. Costumes and makeup will be supervised by Vincent Hughes, Senior. George Markham, Junior, is budget director for the play.

Any student who feels he can assist the Pyramidal Players in any way is urged to contact a member of the governing board. Board meetings are scheduled for every Friday evening at 2:30 in the Pyramidal Players office in Donnelly Hall. Present members of the board are Feeley, Hughes, Keenan, Matteson and Donald Shea.

A five-room, Cape Cod, steel-framed house, valued at $9,000 complete with furnishings, and $500 toward a lot is the prize offered by the Chaplain in his drive to raise funds to defray the cost of the Providence College War Memorial which is nearing completion on the Campus.

Drawing for the house, a gift of the Dayville Manufacturing Company, and the money towards the lot, a gift of an alumni, will be held at the Midwinter festival, January sixteenth.

The house will be erected anywhere, within 400 miles of the city of Providence, in a site approved by the zoning laws.

The house also has the approval of the Federal Housing Administration.

The War Memorial in honor of the 65 Providence College alumni, who lost their lives in the second World War, will be located in its picturesque form of a Grotto and outdoor altar, when completed.

JUNIOR ELECTIONS

College spirit reached an all time low last week judging by the number of ballots cast in the preliminary Junior Class elections. Out of approximately 300 juniors who received ballots, only eighty-nine took the time to vote. It is indeed a sad commentary on the students of this Class, the largest in Providence College history.

Everything was done to give the upperclassmen opportunity to select a candidate. Class meetings were held two weeks in advance of balloting. The procedure for election was outlined. Members of the class voted and approved wholeheartedly the method presented. Notices were also run in the COWL. The juniors had every opportunity to express an opinion, however, after the ballots were distributed. To make matters even more easier, the Religion professor handed out the ballots personally. Yet, with all this, only eighty-nine out of approximately 300, voted.

From today until Friday, final balloting will take place to determine the winner among the three candidates. All seniors are requested to vote and to re-deem yourselves in this balloting. It is from such things as this that true college spirit stems.

COMPREHENSIVE EXAMINATIONS

During the past three years the members of the COWL staff have been soliciting a cross-section of student opinion on the question: "Would you be in favor of comprehensive examinations at the end of the Junior year to determine the award of honors?" The results of this survey seem to indicate that the majority of students are for such a plan.

This idea is not new. A system of comprehensive examinations has been in use at Harvard University and Holy Cross College, to mention but two colleges familiar to New England students. The faculty of our College has been considering the adoption of this plan for some time now. We feel that student impetus for or against it may prove encouraging. We would like to state the case for comprehensive examinations for the awarding of honors to graduates of Providence College.

One of the first realizations of a student, especially when he is at college, striving for good grades as the chief criterion of his scholastic knowledge, is that he is being examined by the professors. However, one of the great weaknesses of professorial examinations is the worrisome discrepancy between the ability or the ambition, would be unable to slander the merits of the student tipped to honor. Professors, like students, being only human, have varied attitudes toward their subject matter. How would one, for instance, grade a student in the same course. But, when Seniors are out of college, would eliminate this discrepancy, at least as far as the determination of who the honor graduates would be.

Under such a system, sibbies and excuses on the part of professors, that professors did not give them the breaks toward honor marks would be at a minimum. Likewise envious students, either lacking the necessary ability, or being bored by the course, would be unable to hinder honor graduates as being mere "brute memory boys."

You cannot cram the subject matter of a comprehensive examination. The ability to present the public with a dead end. Dunnigan first met her when he was in his hey-day and she was going continuously for a week. When he first met her, that is, because she appeared so innocent and helpless and went on thinking, looking for her through several pages and different cities respectively.

"Blackfriars’ Guild Commences Talks For Dorm Students"

150 At Opening Lecture
In Aquinas Lounge

"Love and Friendship," an exposition of certain books of Aristotle’s ethics with a commentary of St. Thomas Aquinas, was the theme of the Blackfriar lecture as stated by the Rev. Pier C. Canova, O.P., in the Aquinas lounge. Thursday evening, before an audience of over one hundred and twenty-five resident students.

The study of happiness, Father Canova said, must include a study of friendship, since "no one wants to be a man happy without friends." The importance of friendship even in international affairs was shown from the fact that "men are friends, they have no more of justice.

"Friendship, based on the attraction of like to like, consists in a mutual liking and doings of good to another for his own sake. Friendship for utility or for pleasure resembles true friendship in that it comprises a mutual liking and doing of good, but fundamentally for one's own sake, not for the sake of another. Love between a man and woman, if it does not go beyond sensible attraction, is a type of friendship for pleasure.

"Much disillusionment," he continued, "may be avoided by observing sincerely what sort of friendship one is engaged in."

The next Blackfriar lecture is scheduled for the second week in November.

Alumni, Faculty Honor Fr. Slavin At Special Dinner

(Continued from Page 1) we can hearty say to the community: "We have worked, struggled, and given our best for you."

The following is an excerpt from the inaugural Dinner address.

Our guest of honor, Father Slavin, was born March 19, 1907, a son of Ambrose A. and the late Mary (McLaughlin) Slavin of 70 Roseneal Street, Dorchester, Massachusetts. He matriculated at Providence College with the Class of 1929.

Following the usual Dominion course of preparation for the order, Father Slavin studied at St. Norbert, Springfield, O., the Dominican House of Studies, River Forest, Ill., and Sacred Theology, Oeursonnet, O., and at the Dehonian House of Studies in Washington, D.C.

Father Slavin received a Master of Arts degree at Catholic University in 1945 and a Master of Philosophy degree in that year. The next year he took the degree of Doctor of Philosophy at the Catholic University of America and a year later received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. The 1946-1947 term was spent at the Graduate School of the University of Illinois where he taught for one semester and was married in Catholic University as Assistant Professor of Philosophy.

Father Slavin is a member of the Catholic University of America and is well known nationally as a speaker at the Catholic Cathedral and the House of Peace and the Maryland Catholic University, Maryland.

He brings to Providence College, a well-rounded knowledge of the field of a devoted Catholic priest and professor. He is the Fellow alumnae whom he finds at the School of Providence College and his own alumnae chaplain.

Father Conway cited Professor Northrup of Yale University as stating it has been a matter of intense investigation whether there is a secular humanity, or whether law involves not only a rational process but is also a normative social theory of what is in fact the case in society at a given time, but also a rational process of the good, since law is not a simple acceptance of fact, but rather an endeavor to change and alter existing fact in the direction of a more improved and ideal state.

Commenting on this excerpt, he pointed out that such a normative function in law requires the use of reason in the process of determining what is to be attained. Immanuel Kant, however, father of modern and modern, has a theory of Pure Reason which to the words: 'I must destroy reason.' Because of his supposed excess, he would have been unable to know the existence of God and to deduce the necessary consequences therefrom, therefore: "Saint Thomas Aquinas, on the other hand, was the first systematizer able to proceed from the fact of the existence of God, whose divine reason ordering all things in the ultimate end, is the source and framework of all law. In a concept of law which is both scientifically and factually realistic which is understood and the ideal stated by Dr. Pound of Harvard University, both static and dynamic." Father Conway then went on to demonstrate how the Thomistic viewpoint is a logical means of reasoning between that of Immanuel Kant and that of Professor Northrup...

By M. R. Knickerbocker, Jr.

The most paradoxical aspect of the high cost of living today is that, though which takes the largest part of the average pay, has actually the least justification for rising prices. The farmer's production costs have risen proportionately much less than costs in industry. His labor costs have risen only slightly since pre-war times, because of the pressure the farm bloc exercises upon congress, this new cost has been reflected in a rise in prices.

At the end of his lecture, he proceeded to answer questions directed at him by the members.

The Very Rev. Robert J. Slavin, O.P., President of the College, gave a brief welcoming speech to the members of the Lawyer Guild. He expressed a desire to conduct a meeting of that group himself in the near future.

Among the members of the Lawyer Guild present at the first meeting of the current academic year at Providence College were: Mr. John D. Jones, Director of the Journal; Mr. Dennis J. Roberts, Lieutenant Governor; John S. McKearn, Judges Louis W. and Francis Cappelli, President of the Providence College Law Association; Mr. John D. Jones, Jr., Di Capua, and Judge P. Cappelli, O.P., Professor of Law, moderator of the Lawyer Guild.
Who's Who Nationally

What's happening now is that half-way mark of the football season reached but not safely passed by many of the leading college elevenths in the country. Upsets which are so predominant in football are usually the hallmark of the leading teams in the country. Army's great string of 32 games without a defeat went by on Saturday, October 26. The reason why the team is back intact, a year older and wiser, is the darnedest puzzle in their school paper.

Murphy's Hot Shots. The game was hard fought throughout, and it appeared for some time as if it would end in a scoreless tie. However, in the last period, McGlinchey grabbed a pass in the end zone as it tipped off the fingers of a Hot Shot defender for the only score of the game. The loss eliminated the Hot Shots from the league.

Jokers 7, Club 214 6

In what was perhaps the most thrilling game of the week, the Jokers edged Club 214-7-6 on Thursday afternoon. Cathers' punting was the outstanding feature in the Jokers' attack. In the first half Cathers faked and faked a pass to Fontaine for a score. Blaine took an end zone pass from Cathers for the extra point.

McGlinchey following that score became the most sensational man on the league. In the last period, McGlinchey took out the Jaker safety man with a beautiful block, to clear the way for Gentille. In what turned out to be the vital play of the game, a pass for the extra point failed to click.

Pre-Maters 13, Nautical Club 6

The Pre-Maters brought down the curtain on the week's activities with a 13 to 0 win over the Nautical Club. Hensy passed and Cathers handled the extra point. Gentille took the kick for Club 214 near his own goal, and with the aid of some beautiful blocking, weaved in and out until he reached midfield, suddenly broke for the sidelines at that point, and scrambled the remaining distance for a touchdown.
