Keenan, 50, Prominent Director, no worthwhile effort can be made towards the realization of a production which will be a credit to the College and a source of great satisfaction to the student body respond.

Mr. Keenan urges those singers, dancers, and instrumentalists who have preferred to remain unknown and unseen for one reason or another to better themselves in order that the

Press Association Sponsor Conference At Brown Herald

The Rhode Island Intercollegiate Press Association of which the COWL is a charter member, held its first conference of the year Monday evening in the Herald Bureau, Brown University, Saturday.

Dr. Bruce Biglow, vice-president of Brown University, welcomed the conference and spoke from the subjects and colleges.

The conference, open both to college and to high school students, consisted of a general meeting and several panels dealing with the aspects and problems of journalism. The Rev. Charles H. McKenna, O.P., moderator of the COWL and Vertac, and members of both staffs were in attendance.

Douglas A. Brennan of the Curtis Publishing Company presented a sound and color film entitled "Magazine Magic" which dealt with the growth and production of Curtis publications.

Following the meeting, Mr. Brennan gave a short talk on the excellent career possibilities in the writing and creative fields. As evidence of the constant need for new talent in magazine work, he mentioned that 270 new contributors to the Curtis publications in 1945. Mr. Brennan then answered various questions from the audience on the art of magazine material desired and the method of sending it to the publishing company.

Concurrently with this session, Mr. Joseph Lonzelli of Brigham Junior High School, Pawtucket, gave a short talk and conducted a discussion period on "Minigographed Newspapers." Mr. Webster Youlden of the Providence Bulletin sports staff lectured on "Sports Reporting."

Jeanette Hopkins, feature writer of the Brown Daily, participated in the interest.

Fr. Slavin Stresses Religious Devotion In Special Address

The Very Rev. Robert J. O'Neill, O.P., Provincial of the Province of Saint Joseph, recently addressed the student body at a special assembly in the Student Union. He dealt with the subject of "Religious Devotion."

It is one thing, he said, to know the duty, but it is another to do it. The modern mind is suffering from intolerant people who have missed the real source of man's equality with man.

He declared: "One might think America is suffering from intolerance but what she is fundamentally suffering from is a lack of tolerance. America is suffering from the comparatively small amount of license, of justice, of chaos. There is no other subject today in which there is more confusion. In a sense, the tolerance is the drunk.

The modern mind has missed the real source of man's equality. It does not know what it is."

CRUSADE FOR CHILDREN'S LIVES

Two hundred thirty million children today are the innocent but suffering victims of a war that they did not start. This is emphasized by the fact that, in the files of our engraver, a terrifying number of helpless children are slowly but surely dying of starvation and its attendant diseases. The more fortunate ones, the ones a few years younger than ourselves, are already working like hogs for food while the children of Europe and Asia, who, along with us, are the children of God.

We, as Americans, benefited materially from those sacrifices on the part of our allies in Europe and Asia. If it made sense for the peoples of those countries to scorch their earth, does it not make sense for us to help them? Must we not now help assure their children a chance to survive and grow to normal adulthood?

The CRUSADE FOR CHILDREN, sponsored by American Overseas Aid—United Nations Appeal for Children, aims at raising $60,000,000 during the month of March. This appeal has the complete cooperation of twenty-six American welfare agencies, including the War Relief Services of the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

Lent is a time of sacrifices. What better way can we share in the Divine Life of Charity than by depriving ourselves of a few expenditures on pleasure and pudole and giving the proceeds to the children of Europe and Asia, who, along with us, are the children of God.

Let us perform our act of almsgiving by making your contribution to AOA-UNAC, New York City, right away. Remember TWO HUNDRED THIRTY MILLION CHILDREN ARE DYING OF STARVATION. You can help change the situation.
Vet Doesn't Worry About Loss of Legs

But Does 'Worry' About Exams, Etc.

Francis Crudele

Wounded In Italy

A chronic worrier is not a totally strange person in this world of ours. Some people just have to worry. They can't help it, even when they try to cease to lead a normal life according to their way of thinking. Such a person is Francis Crudele, a 23-year-old former Marine business student from North Providence.

Paradoxically, though, he doesn't worry about the one thing which, if he is a worrier by habit, would invoke his thoughts to abyssmal depths. Francis is an amputee. Both his legs are off five inches below the knee. He was wounded in Caserta, Italy, as the result of an impromptu bombing raid. But you would never know it from watching him walk around the corridors. Francis is a determined, independent fellow, who knows what he wants out of life.

He is a married man and the father of a 2-year-old boy. Moreover, this softspoken, ex-service-citizen could make a comfortably living solely on his singing ability, but right now he content to live a quiet life, worrying about everything from daily quizzes to meeting his wife for the Thursday evening shopping for groceries.

But did he worry about the loss of his legs while spending over a year at the Walter Reed General Hospital? No. Instead, he was program director of a radio show. He concentrated on singing and "worrying" about staging a good performance. The interview with this chronic worrier ended on a note that was reminiscent to the true story. He walked into the hospital when Frannie, who is a graduate of Hope College, rang the bell. His hobbies are photography and reading, and to some extent pipe smoking. He has several pipes which he said. He meant to say that he wanted. Francis came back to Providence to lead a quiet life and to have children.

The Rhode Island Confederate of Musicians offered him a four-year voice scholarship, but after one year of study he decided to enter Providence College with an eye towards entering a business career. Besides studying voice, he was on a daily radio program "Melodic Design" which was aired from one of the local stations. That still left him, he said, "with twenty three and a half hours with books, but then there was the worry about."

Francis was associated with many prominent people in the entertainment field. He met his wife while visiting patients at the hospital. At the same time he was in the employ of the F.B.I. in Washington, but she was just visiting patients at the hospital when Francis turned the tables on her and "got her woman."

Meaning, of course, Providence. Francis' parents were totally unaware of his son's condition. He had written and written that he had a broken ankle, even went so far to send them pictures that showed him standing and with other patients.

It wasn't until almost a year after the amputation that his parents knew the true story. He walked into the house at 5 o'clock in the evening with his crutches. He talked with his parents and two sisters until three in the morning. He told them all that he was hit and saw the extent of his injuries, thoughts of his mother and the fact that he would not be able to dance again moved his mind. They then thought about meeting his wife for the Thursday evening shopping for groceries. He wanted. Francis came back to Providence to lead a quiet life and to have children.

Three Freshmen were sworn into the Friars Club last week at a formal meeting which also marked the twentieth anniversary of the club's existence. Stephen E. Marcucci of New Haven, Joseph A. Bouchard of Nashua, New Hampshire, and William J. Kerr of New Britain, Connecticut, took the Friars' oath. Was increasing the organization's membership to thirty. The president of the Friars Club, Joseph R. Flynn, of Hamden, Connecticut, in reviewing the history of the club, told the members of the success now being enjoyed by the club's first officers in both the business and religious orders.

The Friars Club, whose activities extend to the solicitation of athletic names and assisting at the college's sporting and social events came to existence mainly through the efforts of John F. Farrell, former Graduate Manager of Athletics, and now executive secretary of the Providence College Alumni Association.

Mr. Farrell, who is also a former president of the Alumni Association, is responsible to a marked degree for the success that Providence College enjoyed in athletic competition during the late twenties.

Mr. Farrell, '28, the first president, is a Doctor of Medical Dentistry in New Haven and a prominent member of many civic organizations. Dr. Flynn is an uncle of the former president. Vice-President, William F. McDermott, '28, is a Marine Insurance executive, and past president of the Alumni Association.

For the second time this season Coach McClellan's clan, pushed along beautifully by some handy and opportune shooting by B.C.'s Danny Bricker, Carr, and Phil Kenny, put the damper on our hustling Friars to the tune of 51-41.

It developed, from the outset, into a contest of two teams battling under the stress of a terrific letdown after suffering heart-breaking setbacks from the themselves into tedious lead at the game on fouls. The Friars drove in continually in an affect picture of frustration as the any consistency as both ended up with were the only Friars who scored with points for B.C.
