Hot War Not Imminent, Says Speaker

In his talk, "The Fifteen Years Preceding the Russian Revolution," Dr. Timasheff told more than one hundred delegates from the New England Catholic Colleges that, although the government of the U.S. has technically an hereditary monarch, it actually is a government for the people, by the people, and for the people.

In explanation he said, "There was a two-chamber house similar to ours; it was a two-chamber house, and in this case, it was a two-chamber house, in which one was governed by the people. It is a two-chamber house, and in this case, it was a two-chamber house.

into the future until the Red tide swept over the country.

The following resolutions were adopted at the end of the meeting: (1) The U. S. foreign policy towards Russia in the Cold War should be continued; (2) Appropriations should be extended in order to continue the Voice of America; (3) The U. S. should adopt the strategy and total participation of the majority. The resolutions were passed by co-chairmen of the forensic, Bill McMahon and John D'Oonnell, to familiarize member colleges, through meetings held in the office of the national federation and through participating in inaugurations Speakers' Bureau. Also, aid it in choosing and developing popular speech topics.

The only other candidate for the vice-presidency was Robert A. Johnson, 31, and Robert Hughes, 32.

Although the printed ballots listed three opponents, Falkner was unopposed as he did not wish to have withdrawing his ballot in favor of any other candidate for the vice-presidency. His election completes the field of candidates for the vice-presidency. The only candidate for president is Dr. Nicholas T. Timasheff, who was elected at the end of the meeting. The resolutions were passed by co-chairmen of the forensic, Bill McMahon and John D'Oonnell, to familiarize member colleges, through meetings held in the office of the national federation and through participating in inaugurations Speakers' Bureau. Johnson, has given us an excellent biography of that eccentric man in the Bloodless Atone, and in the English translation of which they thought of as an image of years to stock the St. Rose of Lima Library by soliciting donations from authors, publishers and individuals. It has had rather a surprising success, but so many, many more books will be very much appreciated. He possessed an unerring wisdom that covers the entire world for the first time, since they may already have been in it and have seen a good part of it. But that was not the same thing. Was subjected to many temptations—and there was always, under fire, the business of keeping alive—but those were external attacks. Going into the world now they must face the greater problem of being in the world but not of it; the problem of maintaining their integrity whatever the odds. It won't be easy. They must be forever on guard, for danger, while not always evident, is always there. What they have learned at Providence College, over and above dates and figures, should be a safeguard helping them to carry their chalices unshielded through the crowd.

METAMORPHOSIS

What is there about caps and gowns that changes carefree youths into dignified men? Only yesterday we sat next to these seniors and they seemed ordinary fellows, mere flesh and blood like the rest of us. But look at them now. Stately and subdued they walk with measured tread as to the sound of solemn music. Their robes flow around them and they bear their honors on resolute shoulders. Perhaps it is only the check which makes them seem pale and the pallor which heightens the luminescence of their eyes, but they have a dedicated look which is almost frightening. One hesitates to address them in the corridors and wouldn't dare do so in a classroom. It would be impertinent. For they are thinking great thoughts.

Many of these men are veterans of the recent war. They cannot be said to be going out into the world for the first time, since they may have been in it and have seen a good part of it. But that was not the same thing. War subjected them to many temptations—and there was always, under fire, the business of keeping alive—but those were external attacks. Going into the world now they must face the greater problem of being in the world but not of it; the problem of maintaining their integrity whatever the odds. It won't be easy. They must be forever on guard, for danger, while not always evident, is always there. What they have learned at Providence College, over and above dates and figures, should be a safeguard helping them to carry their chalices unshielded through the crowd.

Chemistry Students Develop Inexpensive Denistometer

Culminating a study and project which the Rev. Frederick C. Hickey, O.P., of the Department of Chemistry undertook in the early 40's three students majoring in chemistry recently reported on the modifications and improvements which have made the instrument a sensitive yet stable, accurate yet inexpensive "homemade" instrument used for the quantitative spectrographic analysis of the elements. The abstract of the principles of construction of and the use of the instrument, a densitometer, were presented by three juniors, Gaetano A. Buccino, New Haven, Conn., Frank T. King, Providence, and John F. Riley, New Bedford, Mass. at the Fourth Annual Eastern Colleges Scientific Conference held in New York City, April 28-29.

Presentation of the paper also marked the first time that Providence College was represented at the conference which was established to promote undergraduate research in the natural sciences. Four hundred delegates from one hundred colleges attended the two-day session at Barnard College.

The aim of quantitative chemical analysis differs from that of qualitative in that the former seeks to determine the amount of materials present in a substance while the latter entails in a sample of a particular kind.

No part of the present paper will be quoted or translated into any language without the written permission of the author, Ralph E. Cuthill, '50, the former student of the college. TheObjet de the present paper is to provide the best possible analysis of the spectral line.

Rebutting and modifying the circuit has occupied most of their free time since last fall. A common ground for the amplifier, shorter leads and smaller batteries were put in to offset induced alternating current and the heater supply voltage was changed to 120 volts. The light source was placed in a rigid yet flexible position to provide the best possible analysis of the spectral line. Although no determinations have yet been made in the laboratory, the experiments of the committee, the college, are means at the disposal for accurate spectrographic analysis.

TALKING NOTEBOOK COMES IN HANDY NEAR EXAM TIME

Atlanta, Ga. — (P.) — A talking notebook is a big help when examinations roll around at Emory University, according to Jeff Abraham, senior psychology major. Instead of a notebook of scratched class notes, Abraham assembles a reel of tape recordings of significant lectures. Then he just sits back and listens.

"It's a streamlined way to cram for exams," he admits. "But recorded lectures have their drawbacks. I don't have time to listen to all 48 hours of class ever again — and the professor is sure to ask us about something I didn't replay." Abraham declares that the tape recorder is most valuable for playing the lecture the same evening, and in helping him to understand a lecture better. But he still takes some notes.

Teachers do not object to the machine in the classroom. They are interested, and are anxious to listen to their own recordings. Abraham can pick up the professor's voice from the front row. His machine weighs only 15 pounds; holds a reel of tape that records for two hours, and is silent in operation. The tape can be erased by simply recording over it.

"Perhaps the recorder could attend class for me when I want to take a cut, but I haven't tried that," says Abraham. "I catch a little sleep. I know I can hear the lecture later.

ROVING REPORTER

By Gerald Gregory, '51

We are inclined to believe that most students do read the COWL despite their occasional skirmish of the subject matter that has been edited and reported. Some students are prone to criticize the policy of the COWL on the basis that it does not represent the views of the student body as a whole, but is inclined to express those views which are favorable to the administration only. The COWL does not object to any form of constructive criticism and welcomes all feasible suggestions that may be offered by any member of the student body. When queried concerning the COWL, the below-named students answered as follows when asked what do you think of the COWL?

WILLIAM O'NEIL, '31: I can't say there is much improvement since the members of the staff are doing their best with little help from the student body.

A. H. LESTER, '28: The Literary Column is pleasant.

A. BONI, '28: I think the COWL could be improved by coming in closer contact with the student body.

JAMES HARRISON, '52: In my opinion the COWL has always effectively reported the school news. It is enjoyable as well as informative to read all matters contained within.

J. NOLAN, '31: The COWL fulfills its purpose and that the purpose is to get out all the news and semi-news items each week. I suppose also that student limitations prevents those who write the COWL from using more of the common journalistic jargon in recording the events they choose. Thus, I think of the COWL that it is adequate as to its purpose, but I think of it further that it should widen its scope of interest, and raise its tone to be more than the small individual organ of a small and not-so-distant college.

THE COWL, WEDNESDAY, MAY 10, 1950
FRIAR FOOTBALL

by Bob FLanagan

PRACTICE MAKES PERFECT

When spring training was first originated in the major leagues, there were many spoof and fun events upon the practice as useless and an expensive vacation for the ballplayers. The times are different now for the all-important conditioning program during the late winter months in the warm sunshine of the South. In these pre-season days the athletes are in top shape for the days of playing in the spring and summer.

In the baseball, of course, there can be no actual spring training and when college baseball is played, if it be New England, the South, or wherever, it is for some semester workouts. Here at Providence College, Coach Bob Martin has really had his back up against the wall. A baseball is a typical sport which has to have a pitching team to shape. It was nobody's fault. The cold weather made it impossible for the squad to work outdoors in March, and in April the spring vacation came at a beautiful time to do such. Therefore, no exercises for the team. So, Hal Martin had to field a team in the last week in April with a minimum of practice. Especially last Friday we did see the effects in the series against the old stagers, the Brown College Rams. Five members of the University of Maryland team were present. A team that was not to be outdone. It is our express wish that Hal Martin has a little better luck next year when he will have to prepare adequately for the Friars for the league.

OFF TO HARTFORD . . .

The Providence College Rams, Warren Conn., Larry DePalma of Providence College, will be returned to the professional baseball wars as soon as school is over. Larry DePalma of Providence College is a key freshman track teams. The following track meet to be held in New England is an important conditioning program during the late winter months in the spring and summer.

FLYING FRIARS . . .

The Providence College Friars are flying as an alumni now. Saturday at Springport, July 4, they will meet in the 880 yard run. In last year's meet, Bill Sherry, Lussier, Couture, and a four solid singles, while Buzz Barry will play a key role. Buzz Barry scored three runs for the Friars.

Hand Friars Losses

Despite outblowing their opponents, 14-4, the Providence College Friars were unable to break into the win column this week. They outscored Brown, losing 11-10, dropping a disappointing 11-8 defeat to the University of Rhode Island, and suffered another set back to the University of St. John. This time the Friars lost 6-5. But, they maintained their pride, as they dropped their seventh straight game.

Coach Hal Martin's charges put on their best offensive show thus far, but were victimized of their own lapses. Pitcher Bill Fagan turned in the most startling effort of the series. He held the thundering Eagles hitless for five innings, despite the one run in the first. He was cancelled out of action by relief hurling. He registered six strikeouts and doled out eight free passes. His selection was justifiable, as he held the opposing team under 4 runs.

Breaking into the starting lineup so far this time, the Friars, Coach Hal Martin's nine dropped its fifth straight game in the league standing with a 3-7 record. Coach Martin's team is expected to remain the cellar dwellers in the league.

HAWKERS 4--TERRIFICS 3

The most thrilling game last week was staged between the Providence College Hawks and the Harvard College Terrifics. The score was 4-3 and it was a game of tight playing. The Terrifics were outplayed by the Hawks, but they were able to overcome the powerful Terrifics.

The Terrifics scored their first run in the third inning off the pitching of Jim Gallagher. He didn't miss a beat in the first three innings. The Hawks tied it up when Marucchini singled and was advanced to second base on an error. Marucchini later scored on a fielder's choice, scoring a run. The game was played with the bases loaded and runners on third for the Hawks. The Terrifics' victory was marred by 26 walks and 30 runners in scoring position, but were victims of their own lapses. As they dropped their seventh straight game, the Hawks are expected to remain the cellar dwellers in the league.

REMAINING GAMES

The Providence College Friars continued to outscore themselves ball games. Coach Hal Martin's team will do much better in the coming tilt. The batters are starting to find the range, and the overworked five men pitching staff will have a chance to rest. This squad assembled by Coach Martin is a powerful one. The team is expected to remain the cellar dwellers in the league.

Eager for revenge, Coach Hal Martin's youthful Friars take on the Brown Bruins this afternoon at Hendricks Field. The P.C. nine is bent on securing the season's series with their city rivals, since the Bears took the first tilt, 8-5, Lefty Bill McNamara ended the Friars starting assignment for Providence, while Brown may counter with Bill Hayes or Norm Dendy.

Friday, the Friars journey to Kingston for the first contest in a home series with the Rams. Jim Sethimon will probably get the nod from Coach Martin in that game.

Despite the weaknesses which have been displayed in some of the previous contests, it is expected that Coach Hal Martin's team will do much better in the coming tilt. The batters are starting to find the range, and the overworked five men pitching staff will have a chance to rest. This squad assembled by Coach Martin is a powerful one. The team is expected to remain the cellar dwellers in the league.

The contest with Holy Cross was marred by 26 walks and 30 runners in scoring position, but were victims of their own lapses. As they dropped their seventh straight game, the Hawks are expected to remain the cellar dwellers in the league.

ACTION IN PC Game

Brown Cross

Star pitcher Buzz Barry performed his brilliant pitching of Jim Gallagher, the Freshman cuffed to an easy victory. They gathered a total of twelve hits, one, a triple by Grier, off the offerings of Leicesters' Billy Lyons. In the first inning P.C. touched the opposition for three runs, two of which scored when Bill Quinn singled with the bases full. They then picked up another in the second, three in the third and seven in the sixth.

But even more impressive than the power exhibited by the Freshmen at the plate was the spectacular hurling of Jim Gallagher. During his four innings on the mound Jim allowed no runs on three hits.

Beaver Power Relieved Jim in the fifth so that he would not be overworked.

In the final three innings, the game rallied for three runs in the eighth to sew up the de- cision.

REMAINING GAMES

The remaining home games on the Providence College Friars schedule are: Brown, this afternoon, Rhode Island State, May 17; and Providence University, May 20. The contests scheduled away are: R.I. State, Boston College, Springfield, Providence, and Holy Cross.

1. Howard Dooley (P.C.) defeated George Accetturo (P.C.) 8-6.
2. Louis Codega (P.C.) defeated Fred Dinger (R.I.) 5-4.

Three Alarm Friar

At a testimonial banquet for the successful edition of the 1948-1950 Providence College basketball team, three co-captains were elected for the 1956-1951 Friar hoop team. For the first time in the basketball history of P. C., three athletes will lead their co-heralds on the court for the incoming season. The co-captains are: Ray Garcia, Frank Pelligrino, and Sam Nissel. All are now juniors.

Garcia is a Newport product where he graduated from Rogers High School as a three sport star. His game of basketball and on the gridiron. After spending a semester at Long Island University he came to Providence and immediately became one of the top scorers on the squad. His defensive ability and backboard rebounding make him a necessary asset to any basketball team. Working from an offensive forward position this season, Polly has been effective from both inside and outside. Big things are expected from him next season from his basketball fans.

One of the few non-New Englanders on the squad, Sam Nissel is the third co-captain. He hails from St. Mary's, Penn., and has quite a name for himself in P. C. Athletic circles. He was the high scorer on the freshman basketball team three seasons ago, and last year was outstanding in his sophomore and junior years on the basketball court. His deft set-shots and one-handers have been very heart-warming on not too occasional lines to basketball fans of Providence College. Also, Sam has been the regular center fielder for Hal Martin's baseball nine the past two seasons.

Co-captains Nissel, Pelligrino, and Garcia.

This capable trio of hoopsters were to be a perfect choice for the captainship of next season's team. With three co-captains, the team should be a well knit and more compact organization. For the first time Providence College will field an NCAA championship aggregation.

Charles W. McKeen, O.P. Choulain was faculty representative at the convention. Daniel J. Sullivan of the college is president of the Federation.

The initial speaker was Mr. John Reynold of Fairfield University. Mr. Reynold, who has been in the United States only a few short months, and who came from Palestine, spoke on the government machinery in the USSR. Concerning the fate of Communist government if Stalin should die, he explained that any political positions have been given to the higher echelons to prevent a complete collapse of the government.

Miss Gladys Fuller of Anna Maria College in Fitchburg, Mass, who is secretary of the Student Congress, co-editor of the 1951 Veritas, a member of the Newport Club and at present sergeant-at-arms, will be treasurer. John W. Sheir, Simsbury, Conn, a member of the Camera Club and Hartford Club dance chairman, was elected to the sergeant-at-arms office.

Assignments of members to usher at the evening devotions at the Grotto of our Lady of the Rosary and at the baseball games was also posted at the meeting.

Final plans were discussed for the club's annual picnic at which the alumni of the university will attend.

Healey, a veteran, was Sophomore Class president last year. He also served on his class freshman dance and Junior Prom committees. He is a graduate of La Salle Academy, where he was known as "Bill". He is Senior Class president and secretary-treasurer during his junior year.

Kerin, a New Britain High alumnus, has been active in the Hartford Club, the Carolon Club and the Friar's Club to which he was elected in 1948. Also a veteran, he is now in the Naval Reserve. Besides the usual vice-president duties, he will act as president of next year's Freshman Class until its election of officers prior to the second semester. According to the Constitution he will also represent the Freshman Class on the Congress in voice until that time.

Patterson is the only one of the new officers who has seen previous service on the Student Congress. The only resident student among this year's four Sophomore Class representatives, he was on the Congress Legislative Committee. He is also Sophomore Class secretary and a Glove Club member. Faulkner is a former Army corporal and a graduate of Harewood High School, where he played varsity hockey.

code for caps, gowns, and hoods for the various degrees.

"According to the provisions of the code," Father Bergkamp said, "the academic garments of Doctors, Masters, and Bachelors differ in materials, shape and length. The doctors' gowns, as befits their greater dignity, is of richer materials, of most copious folds. His hood is of greatest length, his cap alone may carry the tassel of gold...

The hoods are edged with the color appropriate to the degree, the same color being used for the tassel on the mortar board. Apart from traditional warrant, most of these colors have been selected because of distinctive associations. The white for arts is borrowed from the white fur that trims the hoods of Oxford and Cambridge graduates, and designates the Bachelor of Arts degree.

Scarlet, symbolizing the burning faith and zeal of the Church, is worn by Doctors of Divinity and Theology in England and America. The pink brocade worn by Oxford Doctors of Music accounts for the use of that color here to indicate the faculty of Music. The faculty of law takes the royal purple of the king's court, while to philosophy is assigned blue. 'The color of truth and wisdom.' The
