Queen Arlene Mackey Reigns At Military Ball Honoring Colonel Moss

The Fourth Annual Military Ball sponsored by the Cadet Officers Honor Club was held last Friday evening at the Narragansett Hotel in downtown Providence. Approximately 230 couples and honored guests attended the affair which featured the music of Tommy Masso's orchestra.

Mr. Tom Bonnio, co-chairman of the ticket committee, told this reporter that the Ball was successful financially as well as socially.

The evening's celebration was not confined to the ballroom. In the foyer, committee room, and cocktail lounge, Cadets and their guests enjoyed themselves thoroughly. The entire evening was marked by a spirit of clean wholesome fun.

The high point of the evening came at midnight when Miss Arlene Mackey marched with her court beneath the crossed sabres of the Honor Guard to be crowned as Queen of the Fourth Military Ball. Miss Mackey was crowned by Colonel Roy P. Moss, P.M.S.&T., in whose honor the Ball was held. At that time Mrs. Moss, wife of Colonel Moss, was presented with a bouquet of roses by Mr. Edward Di Sanders, '55, on behalf of the Cadet Officers Honor Club. Later in the evening the Colonel and Mrs. Moss were feted at several parties held by cadets.

Upon her coronation Miss Mackey began her reign by dancing with her consort, Mr. John J. Kiernan, '55. She was joined by her court and their consorts.

All those people interviewed by this reporter expressed the opinion that the ball was one of the finest held yet.

Congratulations are in order to the Cadet Officers Honor Club for a job well done.

The Ball was well organized and carried off in an exemplary manner.

Clark And Stonehill Barrister Opponents

One Affirmative and one Negative team will represent the college next Monday evening in an informal debate with Clark University of Worcester, Mass., on the National Intercollegiate Topic: "Resolved: That the United States Should Extend Diplomatic Recognition to the Government of Communist China."

Representing the Affirmative will be Richard Martin, '56, and Richard Dixon, '58, while debating the negative will be Sal Gershovitz, '57, and Howie Lipsey, '57.

Last evening, after this column was written, Joseph Buckley, '56, and Martin Butler, '56, participated in an intellectual contest with some representatives from Stonehill College. The result was not known in time for publication in this issue.

Additional plans have been made for a dual debate with Holy Cross on Feb. 17 and a single debate with Boston College on Feb. 24. Both debates will be away.

Plans have been continued for a tournament to take place some time during March or April.

The faculty and the student body express their sympathy to Father Lawrence Hunt, O.P., on the occasion of his father's death.

Congress, Executive Powers Increased In Lively Meeting

The Student Congress in one of the most busy sessions in recent memory yesterday passed several of the most important pieces of legislation to come before it this year. Among the measures passed by the solons were two amendments to the by-laws of the Constitution and a bill standardizing the structure of future Junior class ring committees, while pending acts providing for primary elections and the establishment of voting precincts were referred to committee for further study.

The two amendments adopted were in regard to Article 4, Section 1 and Article 5. The first was amended to give the President of the Student Congress the official title of "President of the Student Body" and gives the chief executive the power to make appointments, with the consent of the Congress, to such positions as the Congress may create. Article 5 was amended by adding Sections 12, 13, 14, and 15 to the present Article. The new additions give the Congress the power to raise money in whatever manner it deems fit and to appropriate money for such purposes as are in accord with the Constitution. Section 14 is an elastic clause which gives the Congress the power to make all laws necessary for the execution of its powers. The remaining portion of the amendment gives the President the power to veto acts of the legislature. The Congress may, however, override a presidential veto by a two thirds vote. The amendments will become operative after confirmation at the next meeting. They were passed unanimously and were sponsored by Representatives, Hagan, Toole, Walsh, Lipsey, Leonardi and Quinn. They received the support of all Veracratic members.

The Quinn Act, which was also passed unanimously, limits the ring committee to six members of the Junior class to be appointed by the Junior officers and two passive members, one a Sophomore, the other a Senior to be appointed by the President of the Congress. A two-thirds vote of the committee is required in order to select a company.

Sent to committee for further study was a bill by Rep. Lipsey which provides for primary elections before the regular elections and which would set up polling places in all major buildings on the campus instead of

Soph Dance Friday Night Will Feature Sarazen

Members of the Class of '57 are going all out to make good that familiar "I'll do better in the second semester, Mom," pledge. To prove their good faith the sophomores have invited girls from nineteen colleges and schools to join them in dancing Friday night at Harkins Hall.

While announcing the social event, class president Tony DeBerardino told the COWL that Arnold Sarazen, whose band is becoming increasingly popular at campus events, will provide the music.

He also noted that despite the lofty purpose, a slight tariff will be collected.

B.V.C. To Frolic February 18th

On Friday, February 18 the Blackstone Valley Club of Providence College will sponsor its February Frolic. The "Frolic" will be held at the new Pawtucket Country Club, on Armistice Blvd., in Pawtucket.

Dancing, for this semi-formal, non-floral affair, will be from 8:30 p.m. to 1:00 a.m. Music will be by Via Stevens Band, consisting of nine pieces and featuring a female vocalist.

The cost of the bid is $3.50 per couple and may be obtained from Paul Fournier, '56, Tim Harrington, '55, Jack Kelly, '55, and Charlie Gyns, '55.

Speeding On Campus

"There goes the signal by the man with the checkered flag and the speed kings of the P.C. campus ride again. Here comes the lead car—down Donnelly Drive around the corner by Harkins Hall. . . ." Perhaps we will all awaken some morning to hear these words blaring across the campus from rasping loudspeakers. Don't be too surprised if this should happen, for it looks as if the beautiful tree-shaded lanes of P.C. are fast becoming a raceway. We don't mean to imply that all of the Providence College students are crazy drivers—on the contrary, we firmly believe that the majority of students who have occasion to bring automobiles on campus are careful and considerate, but as always, there are a few who have no regard for the other fellow and who ignore all the rules and regulations which are made for the safety of all. These are the people at whom this is directed. These are the people who always cry "I didn't mean it," . . . after it has happened.

Wake up! Wake up before it's too late and the flag in front of Harkins is flying at half mast some morning. Perhaps if some of these characters had to cross between Aquinas and Harkins someday at 8:20 or at noon time they'd begin to think a little bit, instead of barreling along as if they were on the last lap of the Indianapolis 500. It wasn't very long ago that one of the maintenance men here at the college narrowly escaped being seriously injured—perhaps even killed. So take it easy, boys . . . there's no gold cup for the winner—just a heavy heart and a lot of sadness for the loser. It's better to be a little late for class than it is to injure someone—did you ever think of leaving from home just a few minutes earlier? It won't kill you, but it could kill someone else if you don't.

Remember, the most dangerous part of a car is the nut that holds the wheel.

Seniors, This Is It!

It's almost over, Seniors. The four year grind that very often seemed to be all in vain will shortly come to an end. Now the opportunity presents itself for putting that last perfect rung in your ladder toward success!

Ah, but those four years have indeed been brief ones at that. That Freshman week of 1951 was not so very long ago. Profs were new, and faces were different, but you quickly became accustomed to the newness of college activity on Smith Hill. You (or at least most of you) cracked the books during that year and then topped off everything with a Freshman Hop.

Sophomore year came, and almost as rapidly, went. Your ranks had mysteriously diminished but (for some unknown reason, you figured) you were still here. You plugged through those seemingly pointless Soph subjects. Finals came, and with them the end of your second formative year.

Junior year came and with it, your choice of a major subject. You then departed on that intellectually rocky road toward that often diminishing but never vanishing land of Doctors, Economists, Teachers, and Writers.

1954 and your Senior year began. You promptly proceeded to sponsor a successful "Farmer's Festival," first social event of the year. Graduate Record exams, quarterlies, and semesters came and then before you was that Last semester.

So, Seniors, this is it! The final moulding work is underway. In four months the finished product will be unveiled. The Success or Failure of the work has been and will be up to you.

"The Cornerstone" 13th Cent. Panorama

By Joseph Buckley

This is the second novel written by Zoë Oldenbourg. Her first one, "The World Is Not Enough," was widely acclaimed by both critics and public, and it is likely that her second book will receive the same attention.

The historical panorama is very wide, extending from France to Palestine in the turbulent years of the early thirteenth century. As the author shows us in the outrages perpetrated against the heretics of southern France and the abject poverty and semi-slavery of the serfs, one can see that the thirteenth was not exactly the greatest of centuries. But Mme. Oldenbourg paints her rapine and pillage in such simple and plain tones that the impulse is to feel sympathy for the sinners and the sinned against instead of a feeling of disgust and revulsion.

The thread that holds the entire book together is the Linnieres family who live in the rich French province of Champagne. The individual members of the family are starkly set against the bright tapestry of tournament, crusade, joust, and pilgrimage that so characterized the thirteenth century. Anisian, the lord of Linnieres, too old at forty-eight, blind in one eye and losing his sight in the other, begetter of many bastards, is forced from his feet to go on his third pilgrimage, to the Holy Land. Herbert, called "Les Gros" by the peasants, is huge, passionate, and violent. Cruel not for the sake of cruelty but only because it is his nature to take what he wants even though it be his half sister, he is in his own conscience so justified in his actions that he can hire someone to make a penitential pilgrimage for him. Finally Haguener, is almost out of place in this country with his too idealistic nature. Poor Haguener is trained in arms and knighted even though his heart is so weak that he collapses from the over exertion of armed combat. He even holds the ideals of chivalry so strongly that he humbly becomes the vassal of the beautiful and cold Marie of Mongenost and performs her asinine trials of fidelity even though she is eternally separated from him by her marriage.

These three men, Anisian the grandfather, Herbert the father and Haguener the son have the shoulders on which the fabric of the novel is draped. This is not all. For tragedy Mme. Oldenbourg introduces Eglantine, bastard daughter of old Anisian and half-sister to Herbert. She is a tragic character from the start. Tall and slender, with the velvety eyes of a doe and long brown hair, she is seduced into incest by thirty-eight year old Herbert when she is only seventeen and then forcefully married to his swineherd. Embittered against life by this, she performs an abortion on herself and dedicated her dead baby to Morgan, the fairy queen. A witch at eighteen, she dies horribly on the pitch forks of rebellious peasants.

To look at the tragic life of Eglantine, one would be led to think that the mainspring of the lives of these people were their passions and desires. Far from it. Here is seen the depth of the novel that eludes the casual glance. The title of the book is "Cornerstone" and this cornerstone is their Catholic religion. Mme. Oldenbourg conveys the idea that although on the outside this age was one of violence and material power, on the inside are the spiritual riches which transcend all poverty, crime, and lust. So at first glance old Anisian, alone, blind, and dying of exposure in the hills of Palestine, seems to have lost more than any one else in the book. His sight, home, family, and riches are gone. Materially speaking he is the poorest man.

But through his agony, pain, and suffering, Anisian has come to a greater knowledge and realization of God. Actually we can see that he has gained more, and is far richer, than any of the others in love of God, as the parched and bleeding lips utter the words:

"Libera me, Domine
De morte aeterna."

Only an author of Mme. Oldenbourg's character could possess the power of creating these living people on the chessboard of one of the most colorful of centuries. And only one with her insight could show through the apparent destruction of an old man that in the final judging, as the title of her first book shows, the world is not enough.

Collegiate Viewpoint

By Daniel C. Walsh

The recent fall of the government of Pierre Mendes-France demonstrates only too clearly the need for sweeping constitutional reforms and revisions in France. The document of 1946 has proven to be inefficient and unworkable as can be seen in the long succession of short lived governments in France since the 1944 liberation. The new premier, when he is confirmed by the Assembly, will be the 21st to occupy the post since that date and it is doubtful that his chances of success will be any greater than those of his predecessors. The average life span of the governments which they formed has been five months—the cabinet of Mendes-France managed to outlast this expectancy by two months before it was called on to 'cash in its chips'.

Not Bad in Theory

Under the French constitution, all real authority and power rests with the legislative body, which arrangement in itself is not bad or unworkable in theory (or even in practice as the British system can attest). Yet this seems not to be the case in France. The basic difficulty seems to lie in the excess of political parties scattered throughout the country. At the present time, there are no less than twelve of them represented in the Assembly and, since no one party is sufficiently strong to maintain a working majority, the executive must depend upon a shaky coalition to carry him along. As soon as a few members break away the government collapses. Most of the political parties in France are small groups with narrow objectives and are either parties of personality or parties of principle. The followers of Charles de Gaulle—soldier turned politician—are an example of the former while the Popular Republicans, who are devoted to the idea of a united Europe typify the latter. Thus, very seldom is there a single reason for the downfall of a premier. Usually it is a combination of reasons—each separate group or faction having its own grievances to settle.

Not Real Reason

This was the case with Mendes-France. The real reasons for his political assassination are not to be found in the North African issue. This was merely the convenient means of toppling him from power by a vote of no confidence. The dissatisfaction lay in other areas. His sponsorship of German rearmament lost him the support of those who fear further aggression from a revitalized Germany while his aloofness toward EDC, on the other hand, alienated those at the other end of the spectrum who would like to see Europe completely united. There are still those Frenchmen who seem to live in a day long past and dream of a mighty French Empire and they were disillusioned by his policy in regard to Indochina. The now famous Mendes-France milk drinking plan instituted in an effort to cut alcoholic consumption hurt him still further with other groups and his efforts to stabilize the economy frightened the industrialists. All of these reasons, which have been piling up almost from the day that he assumed office, finally came to a head in the North African debate. The waiting vultures saw their chance and they took it.

Come Back By Pinay?

The latest word was that Former Premier Antoine Pinay was willing to make an attempt to form a new cabinet. Whether or not he will succeed is up to the Assembly. If he does succeed, the question is—how long will he last? In 1952 he lasted for nine months before resigning before the Assembly could throw him out. At that time he swore he'd never accept the post again, but from all indications he seems to have changed his mind. At any rate, the prevailing feeling seems to be that the new premier, whoever he may be, will not last more than a few months at best. Pinay is a bitter opponent of Mendes-France and was one of those who helped to bring about his defeat last week.

There is an old saying that a chain is no stronger than its weakest link and the years of French instability and indecision which have followed the second World War have certainly made her the weakest country in the western community of free nations. This situation certainly does little or nothing to help the anti-Communist crusade.

What Next?

In the meantime, there seems to be little or no hope that any constitutional reforms are in the cards for France. Just what they should be I will leave to someone more familiar with the French constitution to speculate about. Of course, this is a problem that only the French themselves can solve, but it seems apparent that until something is done France will continue to grope around in the dark and that a once proud and mighty nation will stumble along like a poor relation.

Letter To The Editor

I am writing this letter on behalf of the Friars' Club in regard to the Hockey Testimonial to be held Feb. 15 in the Narragansett Hotel.

The Friars' Club considers it a privilege to have been one of the clubs on campus to have been invited to attend, and have voted to support it 100%.

In the three years that hockey has been a part of the athletic program, it has supplied us with many thrills and has more than adequately represented the college against all the other powerful colleges and universities of the East.

I am sure that many of the students will want to attend the testimonial, and so all Friar members will carry tickets which students may buy.

Now is the time for P.C. to get behind our great hockey team. Let's all get behind this banquet and show our appreciation of their accomplishments!

Sincerely,

Dan Lynch,

Pres. Friars' Club.

Jr. Prom Vote Thurs.; Class View "Urgent"

The Junior Class held an assembly last Friday in Harkins auditorium for the chief purpose of discovering the class sentiments toward the Junior Prom Weekend before final commitments were made. Class President James Renzi presided.

Due to failure of the majority of the class to vote on the question of whether to hold a weekend or just a Prom, the issue is still undecided.

However, a referendum has been arranged to take place in Harkins auditorium on Thursday, Feb. 10 (tomorrow). All Juniors should vote! The ballot will include three questions: "Do you intend to go to the Junior Prom?"—"If you intend to go to the Prom, do you desire a weekend or just the Prom?"—"If the majority of the class favors a weekend, will you attend?"

The reason why these questions have been proposed is that if a weekend is planned, all the events will be included on one ticket, which will cost approximately $5.00 more than would a prom bid.

If accepted by the Juniors tomorrow, the weekend will open on Friday evening, April 29th, with the Prom. It will be held at the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel in Providence. The announcement of the band which has been chosen will be made in the near future.

The following afternoon will feature a picnic and field-day. The festivities will continue through Saturday evening with a jazz party at Rhodes-on-the-Pawtuxet Annex.

Sunday morning the Juniors and their dates will attend Mass and receive Communion here at the college. A Communion Breakfast will follow.

Bids for the weekend (or Prom, as the Juniors decide) will be sold on a "time basis plan" by Juniors in their respective concentrations. Anyone wishing to help in that capacity should contact George Hickey, ticket chairman.

Dick Gleason, co-chairman of the Ring Committee, announced at the assembly that those juniors who had not ordered their rings as yet could still do so by leaving their deposit and being sized by Mr. Sullivan in

Frosh Frowns On Frenzy At Veritas

By JIM WESTWATER

As I entered the COWL office Monday evening, the editor was nervously walking around, wondering what other stories he could add to this week's two page issue. "I got it," he said, "we'll write something on the Veritas, the school yearbook. Someone should be able to dig something up next door." Then Jim Renzi sent one of his colleagues across the hall to interview Mr. Fortin.

As I entered the Veritas office, I had to open and close my eyes three times to make sure I was in the right place. It reminded me of a regular outburst in a neighborhood tavern. You could hardly see with all the smoke—people were running all over the 2x4 cubicle mansion and everyone looked as if he hadn't slept in two weeks. The place resembled Times Square during the rush hour. As I fought my way towards the editor's desk, I was given three cigarettes, two books of matches, a copy of last year's Veritas, and a shot in the arm. The editor, Mr. Fortin, had a telephone receiver in one hand; he was typing with the other, motioning to a fellow with his elbow, and holding a conversation with a couple of his staff members.

All of a sudden, I stopped and said to myself, "What's all the commotion here for? Wasn't it last week that I was here—how come this sudden outburst of activity?" Then it dawned on me!—The deadline must be near! Yes, I was right. There was a sign on the wall which read—"All stories must be submitted by Friday to meet next week's deadline."

Isn't it funny though—people are all the same. They always leave things to the last minute.

the book store. These late orders should be submitted as soon as possible in order to obtain the rings by the end of March, the time as set by the Herf-Jones Company for delivery.

The class was also reminded by Paul Fournier, chairman of the forthcoming Talent Show, that tomorrow, February 10th, is the deadline for the return of all "patron slips" for the program. Fournier also urged those students (of any class) wishing to aid in the production of the show to contact Jim Santaniello, show director, as soon as possible.

Fr. Quirk To Address History Club Members

Kenneth Langer, '56, President of the History Club, has extended an invitation to the student body to attend a lecture to be given by Father Quirk, O.P., Ph.D. The talk will be given at 8:00 p.m. tomorrow night in Aquinas Hall Lounge. The topic to be discussed by Father Quirk, who is head of the Economics Department here at the college, will be the Economic Aspects of New England.

Langer, who has scheduled several lectures in the past months, states that "The turnout of the student body for the lectures in the past has been gratifying, and I hope that many take advantage of this informative interesting, and timely lecture."

Valentine Dance At Driftwood Sat.

Atmosphere, the key-note of the Kent County Club functions, has once again set the scene for a Valentine dance which will inaugurate its 1955 season with a Valentine Dance to be held this Saturday evening. The affair, which will feature music by Frank Baron's orchestra, will be held in place of the annual club semi-formal usually presented during the Christmas recess. The annual dance was unfortunately postponed by the club because of conflicting dates with the activities of other clubs and the difficulty in finding a suitable place to hold the dance.

William Sweeney, '57, and Daniel Barns, '57, co-chairmen of the dance, have announced that it will be held at the "Driftwood" from 8:00 to 12:00 on Saturday, Feb. 12. Because of crowded conditions at the last dance, tickets will be limited. They may be purchased from any of the club members. The admission is $1.50 per couple.

Real Iron-Man Job

It was a taste of nectar—a sip of ambrosia. It was fought with vigor—won with ecstasy. It was the Cuddy magic hypnotizing the Bear. It was a coach's gamble—a bet on five men. If they lost, he was wrong. If they win, a pat on the back.

Vin's gamble?—could five men go the route? True, Kerr fouled out late in the game, but Vin's strategy had already payed off. It was a full team effort in which four of the five starters were in the double brackets. The other starter, the little fellow, Frank Williams, made up for his lack of points by incessantly annoying the invaders from College Hill. As a glance at the scoring column will show, Frank isn't much in the basket getting department, but he makes up for it in his all around spirited floor play. Donny Moran, another member of that famous clan came in as a late replacement and chipped in with two important points to add to the woes of Stan Ward.

Ted Tedesco has begun to come out of his scoring slump. In the last few games he has been hitting with more consistency.—Keep it up, Ted.

Some Consolation For The Bruin

We must say that the Bears have one bright spot in their outfit. In their captain Ed Tooley, they have one of the finest performers ever to wear a Brown uniform. He proved this Saturday as he racked up 25 points.

Ritch Does A Fine Job

The 25 points scored by Ed should not over-shadow the job done by our own Jack Ritch. Ritch's play was outstanding—a game long duel with Tooley. John's improving play under the boards and his fine shooting eye have been a great help to the Friars in recent contests, and both of these fine points showed very well in the game with Brown.

Brown game congrats . . . to Tedesco and Pascale for their fine shooting and hustling . . . to Ken Kerr for his excellent board coverage . . . to Williams for his scrappy play . . . and to Don Moran for those two points and some good floor play.

Fighting Friars In Home Final With Norwich

By BILL FLANAGAN

Enjoying perhaps their easiest encounter of the season, Dick Rondeau's Friar sextet rolled up a comfortable 7-0 margin and then coasted to a 12-2 victory over a game, but outclassed Springfield six in the Springfield Colosseum last Thursday night. Ed Monahan repeated the trick he pulled a year ago against Yale, by pacing the attack against The Gymnasts with five goals. He thus became the second Friar to light the lamp five times in a single game this year, Mike McDonough having done the same earlier in the season against Tufts.

Tonight is your final chance to see the hustling Black and White as they make their last home appearance at the Auditorium against the Norwich University Cadets. The Norwich sextet, making their formal debut here, have a team that can score as demonstrated by their one sided victories over Middlebury and Amherst. Thus the Friars' defense, which has been spotty this year, will be put to test.

In looking over the season in general, the Friars have for the most part turned in good performances against some of the top teams in New England. The biggest problems that have confronted Coach Rondeau have been the lack of one or possibly two additional defensemen to help that undermanned corps, and the lack of a steady performer in the nets. However, the team, to a man, has hustled all the way and we should be proud of the reputation they have established in their first formal sea-

Ski Club Plans Trip To Vermont

There will be a meeting of all members of the Ski Club on Tuesday, February 15th, at 7:30 p.m., in Harkins Hall.

The primary purpose of this meeting is to elect officers for the coming year. Final discussion will be held on the proposed Ski trip to Vermont (Feb. 18-22) and plans for a club party in the near future.

There will be a film on skiing and refreshments will be served. Members are welcome to invite guests if they desire.

All members are urged to attend this important meeting because of the elections and the ski trip. A time schedule for the trip will be distributed at the meeting.

Regattas Planned For P.C. Mariners

The regular monthly meeting of the Sailing Club will be held tonight at 7:30 in Aquinas Lounge.

Commodore Pollard urges that all who wish to join the club and participate in the sailing this spring attend this meeting without fail. A temporary schedule of those assigned to regattas was adopted at the last meeting, and those who wish to participate and did not attend the last meeting are urged to register now before the arrangements are made final.

son in the ice sport. To their credit have come victories over Tufts, Brown, Northeastern, A.I.C., and Springfield, while the Black and White have gone down fighting to such powerhouses as B.C., Harvard, Tufts, Yale, Princeton, and Brown.

Friars' Ironman Attempt Downs Brown, 66-62

For the first time in three years, Providence College was the underdog in the annual Brown tilt. Yet they accomplished what they could not do when they were favorites. And that was to defeat the Bruins, which they did by a 66-62 margin last Saturday night at Mt. Pleasant Gym. Before an enthusiastic dorm-weekend audience, the Friars first string became iron men with all but Captain Ken Kerr playing the whole show. Kerr was replaced after he fouled out with five minutes remaining by Don Morgan, who performed admirably in the contest's crucial climax.

In the first half P.C. took a commanding lead. But the Bears pressed hard in the second session. The decision wasn't determined until the final seconds, with both teams still battling at the wire.

Ed Tooley of Brown was high man for the night with 25 points, while John Ritch led the victors with 19. Mike Pascale followed closely after Ritch, as he contributed 18 markers. Both Kerr and Tedesco had 13, while Frank Williams, who played his best floor game of the season, had one. Don Moran dropped in a goal in the closing seconds which helped to reduce the pressure on his teammates, and did a great defensive job.

Dinner To Honor Friar Sextet

Up until this year the Providence College hockey team has been operating on an informal basis. However, this year they are playing in varsity and freshman competition, and the club has achieved fine success and favorable reviews from sports men of the area.

As a tribute, both to the coach and the players, the P.C. varsity hockey team will be feted by the Hockey Boosters Club in conjunction with the P.C. Alumni at the Narragansett Hotel, on February 15th. The General Manager of the Rhode Island Reds hockey team, Terry Reardon, will be principal speaker for the occasion.

The purpose of the dinner is to inaugurate the admission of the team into the NCAA.

Donations for this affair will be five dollars. Students have been invited to attend this banquet.

NOTICE

There are tickets on sale at the Athletic Office for tonight's Hockey game with Norwich. The price is 50 cents.

Cuddymen Face Merrimac At Mount Pleasant Tonight

Friar Marksmen "Snip" Ivy Teams

The Friar Sharpshooters went Ivy hunting last Friday at the Cranston Street Armory and came back to P. C. with two fine specimens, victories over Yale and Brown. Although the Allenmen figured to have a rough time of it they won with comparative ease. These were the five top scores that decided the match.

Brown—1344
Yale—1333

With these two wins the Friars moved into first place in the Southern New England Rifle League, sporting a 4 and 1 record. The second place Coast Guard team has a 3 and 1 record. This Saturday, the "Nimrods" move to Boston to fire against Boston University and the University of Connecticut in a 3-way match.

PROVIDENCE CLUB

The social committee of the Providence Club announced plans for a pre-Lenten dance to be held Tuesday, February 22, at the Club Mongenais. Members of the club are urged to watch the bulletin board for further pertinent facts.

With a fine victory over Brown tucked under their belts, the P.C. Friars prepare themselves for two games this week, one at home tonight and the other away on Friday.

Tonight the Friars play host to Merrimac College from Mass. Not much is known about the Merrimac team, only that they have been playing a schedule which includes many of the small colleges throughout New England. In their last outing to the knowledge of the Cowl sports department, they beat Stonehill of North-easton. The only scorer of note that the club has on its roster is a fellow by the name of Martin. In the 13 games the team has played, Martin has averaged 29.6 pts. to rank him among the top ten scorers in small colleges in the country.

Fairfield on Friday

On Friday evening the Cuddymen travel to Conn., to play their ever dangerous opponents, Fairfield. In two meetings with this team last year the Friars had to settle with a split. In the first meeting at home the Friars prevailed, but when they journeyed to Waterbury they were defeated.

Again this year the team faces the problem of playing Fairfield on their home court in the Waterbury Armory. The loss to Fairfield last season could have been avoided, but the Friars played sloppy ball and thus dropped the decision.

At this stage of the game, the Friars have finally seemed to have found themselves and if it keeps up on Friday night they may most likely come home with the bacon.

Next Wednesday finds the Friars in another intrastate game, and again the Friars will be the host team, this time to URI.

Dance, Jazz, Friars Win, Highlight Dorm Weekend

"Manhattan, Isle of Love" was the theme of the annual Dorm weekend that was held on last Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, Feb. 4th, 5th, and 6th. Over 100 couples attended this social climax of the Carolan Club year. The guests of the club members included girls from colleges and school of nursing in the eastern part of the United States. During the weekend the Lounge, Dining Room, and Penguin Room of Aquinas Hall were successfully transformed into noted society spots of New York City.

The weekend began on Friday evening with a cocktail party in the Lounge which had been decorated to represent the Stork Club. At this party, many of the couples were introduced to new friends or met old acquaintances that they had not seen since last year's Dorm Weekend.

After the cocktail party the couples journeyed to the candle-lit Copacabana to feast on the excellently prepared and attractively served lobster salad dinner.

Following the dinner, dancing was enjoyed until midnight by the formally attired members of the Carolan Club and their guests. In the lounge Hugo Basso and his orchestra provided the music while Frank Baron's combo entertained in the Penguin Room. The Penguin Room had the atmosphere of the famous N. Y. night-spot—"Birdland." Other Manhattan society spots that were highlighted in the Penguin Room were such places as "Billy Rose's Diamond Horseshoe" and "Joe King's Rathskeller."

After the dance many of the couples attended the Military Ball at the Narragansett Hotel before proceeding to the many gay parties at the hotels in downtown Providence.

On Saturday afternoon the weekend frolics were entertained by Hugo Basso's combo at Birdland, formerly the Penguin Room of Aquinas Hall. Such adjectives as fabulous, terrific, and colossal were heard from those describing the afternoon's entertainment. The rafters of the building were in danger of collapsing because of the applause that followed Dud Lee's imitation of Louis "Satchmo" Armstrong's famous song, "Basin Street Blues." Refreshments were served to the weekenders during the afternoon. Toward the end of the jazz session a light supper consisting of assorted sandwiches, cake, and coffee was served.

After the jazz concert, the weekenders proceeded to the P.C.-Brown basketball game at Mt. Pleasant Gym. The climax of this enjoyable day was when both the freshman and varsity teams defeated the teams from the neighboring school.

On Sunday morning the attention of the Carolan Club members and their guests was focused on the spiritual side of life. The Holy Sacrifice of the Mass was offered in the dormitory Chapel by the Rev. Edward M. Casey, O.P., Dean of Men and moderator of the club. After Mass, a breakfast was served in the Dining Hall. Following the breakfast, the Rev. Edward Halton, O.P., Dean of Freshmen, gave an informal lecture on the topic "Veritas." This lecture was enthusiastically received by all those attending. The weekend closed with an open house from 1:00 to 3:00 o'clock. At this time the guests of the dorm-dwellers were escorted through the rooms of Aquinas Hall.

The favor for the weekend was a small stuffed penguin, the penguin being the mascot of the Carolan Club. Each penguin had a small P.C. emblem held by a small chain around its neck. Inscribed upon the emblem was the appropriate "Providence College Dorm Weekend 1955."

Some of the girls who attended the Dorm Weekend came from the following colleges and schools of nursing: Albertus Magnus College, New Haven, Conn.; Trinity College, Washington, D. C.; Howard University, Washington, D. C.; College of New Rochelle, New Rochelle, N. Y.; St. Rose College, Albany, N. Y.; University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia; Syracuse University, Syracuse, N. May Examinations Are Advised For Pre-Medical Students

Princeton, N.J., January 17. Candidates for admission to medical school in the fall of 1956 are advised to take the Medical College Admission Test in May, it was announced today by Educational Testing Service, which prepares and administers the test for the Association of American Medical Colleges. These tests, required of applicants by almost every medical college throughout the country, will be given twice during the current calendar year. Candidates taking the May test, however, will be able to furnish scores to institutions in early fall, when many medical colleges begin the selection of their next entering class.

Candidates may take the MCAT on Saturday, May 7, 1955, or on Monday, October 31, 1955, at administrations to be held at more than 300 centers in all parts of the country.

The Association of American Medical Colleges recommends that candidates for admission to classes starting in the fall of 1956 take the May test.

The MCAT consists of tests of general scholastic ability, a test on understanding of modern society, and an achievement test in science. According to ETS, no special preparation other than a review of science subjects is necessary. All questions are of the objective type.

Application forms and a Bulletin of Information, which gives details of registration and administration, as well as sample questions, are available from pre-medical advisers or directly from Educational Testing Service, 20 Nassau Street, Princeton, N.J. Completed applications must reach the ETS office by April 23 and October 17, respectively, for the May 7 and October 31 administrations.

Salvatore To Lead Liturgy Group Again

"It is wonderful to see this club rise from one of a few members to such an active campus club," said Joseph Salvatore at the first anniversary club meeting February 3. "We have started from scratch and thanks to the student interest we are able to have interesting and varied meetings."

Elections were conducted for the new year. Joseph Salvatore was re-elected club president, Michael McDermott was elected vice-president with Jerry Deary and Louis Warren named Secretary and Treasurer, respectively, by the attending members.

The foundation and revival of "Gregorian Chant" was the subject discussed by John Daly after the business of the meeting was dispensed. Two guests from Brown attended the meeting. They brought with them a record Mass of the Angels. The recording was Gregorian Chant sung in English. Part of this record contained Vespers also in English.

IT CAN'T HAPPEN HERE

Lawrence, Kansas—(ACP)—When a Kansas University coed discards her white socks and saddle shoes and puts on high heels, stockings, and a dress for three days on campus and in class, things are likely to happen.

And when a male student goes against the taboo of ties and wears one for three days with a white shirt and jacket, there's bound to be a hullabaloo.

Forty-eight sociology students here found out the hard way what it means to "go against society," the Daily Kansan reports. At the urging of their professor, the students agreed to "dress up" for three straight days, not tell anybody about the experiment and keep logs on the reactions.

Log reports "showed how by satire, sarcasm, laughter, heckling, ridicule, and name-calling the campus subculture attempted to enforce and keep intact its rules," the article said. One sociology sophomore reported that her best friend said "I think you're crazy. Crazy people do crazy things—and you're crazy."

"My roommate," said another coed, "didn't even want to walk with me to class because everybody was staring."

A male student recorded the following comment: "I think a tie is all right if you have a picture taken or to go to a funeral or a wedding or something—but not every day. If you keep that up, it'll be a funeral for you."

The comment to end all comments was "It's so unkansan!"

To the instructor, the experiment was "a rousing success."

Korea Veterans
Elect Study Of Arts And Science

Disabled Korea veterans who have taken vocational rehabilitation training are aiming for the arts and sciences in higher proportion than their fellow-veterans disabled in World War II, a Veterans Administration study disclosed today.

According to the study, 44 percent of all disabled post-Korea veteran-trainees have chosen high-level objectives in the professions and in the managerial field.

Of the WW II disabled who received training, 35 percent selected such objectives.

Thus far, 23,000 disabled Korea veterans have enrolled in the four-year-old training program under Public Law 894. Another 606,000 veterans disabled in WW II have trained under Public Law 16, a companion bill in effect nearly 12 years.

Thirty-five percent of the Korea veterans trained for trade and industrial occupations—such as machinist, repairman and the like—compared with 35 percent of the WW II group.

Farm training attracted 6 percent of the Korea veterans and 14 percent of the WW II veterans.

Eleven percent of the Korea veterans and six percent of the WW II veterans trained for clerical positions. Sales training accounted for only two percent of the Korea veterans. Five percent of those who served in WW II chose this course.

Two percent of the veterans in each group trained for such occupations as meat cutter, barber, shoe repair and like categories.

Among the post-Korea disabled veterans who selected professional training, accounting was the most popular subject. Teaching ranked a close second, followed by engineering, science and law.

The professional objectives of WW II veterans differed appreciably. In their case, teaching led the field, followed by accounting, engineering, law, and medicine and related subjects.

Veterans of both WW II and Korea who trained in the trades and industry, chose similar subjects, the VA survey showed. Among both groups, mechanics courses ranked first in popularity, followed, for both, by metalworking.

Woodworking courses were third for the post-Korea group and fourth for the WW II veterans; construction training ranked fourth for the Korea veterans and third for those of WW II.

VA said the pattern of courses chosen by disabled Korea veterans may change as time goes on and more veterans enter the training program. The WW II pattern is not likely to change, because comparatively few veterans are expected to enroll in the future.

just in Harkins Hall. The second provision is designed primarily to facilitate voting and to bring out a larger number of voters. The measure drew the greatest amount of debate during the course of the session and quite a bit of opposition developed. Several speeches were made on the floor by the members, including Representatives Lipsey, Hagan, Toole, Gentile, Leonardi, Walsh, Reilly, McNellis, Quinn, and DeBerardino. The proposal was finally referred to the ways and means committee.

Also sent to committee was a controversial measure proposing a weekend for the day students comparable to the Dorm Weekend. The bill drew heavy fire from several of the representatives, many of whom felt that the idea, while a good one in theory, would never work out in practice. The act was termed as "impractical and unworkable" by its opponents and "sound" by its proponents.

The rest of the meeting was occupied with routine business. Acting President David Webster presided. More information will be available next week.

AIRBOUND GREETINGS TO STUDENTS ABROAD

New York — (ACP) — New York City College students took to the air January 6 and 7 in an effort to "strengthen the bond between students everywhere."

Twenty-five helium-filled balloons carrying greetings to students throughout the world were released to mark the end of a month-long campaign at CCNY to raise funds for World University Service. Small plastic satchels attached to the balloons carried copies of a special "overseas" edition of Observation Post, CCNY weekly student publication, which included a message of greeting printed in English, French, Spanish, and Russian.

The balloons were expected to stay aloft for more than a week and many probably will reach Europe, the report said.
