Graduate of PC Now Pastor of Vietnam Church

The mortar-scarred Roman Catholic Church in Tan Hiep, South Vietnam, a tiny village 40 miles south of Saigon, is under the pastorship of a Hanoi-born priest who speaks with authority on Rhode Island quahogs and Providence College. Father Joseph Oahn, a 1958 graduate of the college, was sent to the United States along with his cousin Father Jos. Cong to continue his academic training. Both priests attended Providence College from 1954-58.

After having received his Master's Degree in History from Boston College, Fr. Oahn, leaving his cousin behind at the Trappist Monastery in Spencer, Mass., returned to his native Vietnam only to be forced into exile in the south due to the Communist takeover in the north. At first, he taught English in a seminary located in the famous Mekong Delta. In a recent letter, Father tells how the Viet Cong would come up to the opposite bank of the river upon which the seminary was located and broadcast propaganda to his students, urging them to defect to the guerillas. Despite their proximity to the Viet Cong, the seminary was never attacked. "We were ready if they tried," said Father, adding, "We had 35 grenades there!"

Father Oahn was later transferred to Sacred Heart Parish where he has lived ever since. "When I first came to the Tan Hiep parish," Father recalled. (Continued on Page 7)

Red Cross Seeks Blood for Vietnam

A movement for more positive action to assist the American soldiers in Viet Nam has developed on campus. The movement involves the collection of blood which will in turn be used for transfusions in Viet Nam.

Conducting the effort will be two seniors, Jeremy Lord and Vincent Marottoli. Both commented that such an idea has had very good results in colleges throughout the country.

Tentative plans call for the blood drive to be held in the beginning of the second semester. Operating the blood bank will be a unit from the Boston Red Cross Blood Headquarters, since the local Red Cross chapter does not have its own facilities.

The blood drive is being held in conjunction with local colleges which will use the PC bank as the main collecting point. Students and faculty members from all the schools involved will be encouraged to donate their blood for the Viet Nam shipment.

It has been asked by the Red Cross that PC furnish an estimate. (Continued on Page 6)

Freedom Debate Held on Campus

A debate was held Tuesday, January 11, at the college between two prominent Rhode Island attorneys, Aram Arabian and Milton Stanzler.

Mr. Arabian has many credits to his name—Special Assistant to the Public Defender (1942-1946), former Public Defender (1946-1961), and is presently a counsel to the State Director of Business Administration and State Selective Appeal Board. Mr. Stanzler is the counsel for the Rhode Island affiliate of the American Civil Liberties Union.

The topic for the debate was "Should Freedom of the Press Be So Free." Mr. Stanzler took the affirmative. The subject was handled from both a legal and moral standpoint. The Press's freedom was discussed from a Constitution view; it was pointed out that the Constitution guarantees this freedom and as it is part of the supreme law of the land, it should be upheld. In rebuttal it was stated that freedom of the press is not a license to promiscuously publish everything. It is a form of character assassination which has no news value and is just an "item to feed the idle curiosity of strangers." The Press was also attacked from the legal standpoint, as stated by Mr. Arabian, "reporting on crimes as the press does it in many instances is morally wrong and in some cases impedes the administration of justice."

Vista to Conduct Drive on Campus

The students of Providence College were recently asked by a member of VISTA (Volunteers in Service to America, the "domestic Peace Corps") to donate children's books for a library to be constructed in an underprivileged area of Virginia.

Miss Barbara Boudreau, a native of Slatersville, R. I., in a letter addressed to the COWL requested "many books for any age level, but especially for children."

"You have no idea how much good you would do if you could have a hundred, or more, books collected," Miss Boudreau wrote. "It would mean so very much to so many people."

She said many of the children in her area "are intelligent but hindered by their environment."

Books may be submitted to the COWL office at any time. Any books collected will be shipped to Miss Boudreau at her expense.

Miss Boudreau is a student at Trinity College in Burlington, Vermont. She is on leave for one year's service in VISTA. She is on the planning committee of the proposed library.

Members Enter Pershing Rifles At Cord Dance

Company K-12, PERSHING RIFLES, announces the initiation of 29 new members for 1966. An intense 13-week pledge period covering military training in all fields of drill and leadership produced a top-notch unit expected to take full honors as the Best Company in New England.

Col. Bunker Speaks On the Birch Society

The Political Union of Providence College last Monday evening presented Col. Lawrence Bunker, an executive member of the John Birch Society.

Col. Bunker began by way of an interesting and somewhat colorful introspection of the origin of the John Birch Society. It was organized in the year 1958 by a Mr. Welch in Indianapolis. The basic premises of the society are these: that the American system through the Constitution is best; also that the best natural resources we possess today is the individualistic drives of each and every citizen. The Society believes however, that we in this day are losing some of our valuable freedom. Mr. Bunker stressed that the organization was a non-profit, education society. He said further that the Birch Society was organized to meet and combat the air of indifference which is quite prevalent in the United States today. He said that this indifference began about the time of Franklin D. Roosevelt and has continued and grown right down to the present day. And if it continues, it will lead to the decay and ruin of the United States. As an example, Mr. Bunker used the U. S. embargo placed on Rhodesia which, in his estimation, is completely unlawful and unjustifiable. Since the United States is not at war with Rhodesia, its sole purpose is to aid England, our ally, who asked the U. S. to enforce the embargo. It was also pointed out that England who is "supposed to be our ally" is shipping what could be considered war materials such as fuel into North Vietnam ports. The people of the U. S. have become indifferent; they appear to be content just to watch unmoved from the grandstand instead of actually participating in the ballgame and taking part in some of the plays.

Mr. Bunker also compared the "bad name" given to the Birch Society to that given to a dog. He mentioned that if a certain dog wasn't particularly liked by certain individuals, they would blame that particular dog whenever chickens were killed. This same antithesis, said Bunker, can be paralleled to the John Birch Society. Some people will either call it a secret organization or a Communist movement and immediately the Society becomes branded. He continued to say that the two extremes of government as seen through the eyes of the John Birch Society are: a government with no control and a government with too much control of which the Society sanctions neither, but rather follows the center path. Also the two political extremes are apathy or indifference shown by the people and the organizing of such activity as a Coup d'etat. Again the Birch Society walks the middle of the road. And, he said, by no means is the Birch Society any more secret than many other societies and organizations such as the League of Women Voters, Col. Bunker did say that the only thing which might be considered secret is the membership list. However, he also specified that many other organizations also keep their membership files confidential.

Mr. Bunker then gave a short resume of the life of John Birch. Birch was born in India. From there he went to China where he became a missionary. The war came and he was viewed aiding downed American pilots in China. While in the service, he was promoted to (Continued on Page 9)

Editorially Speaking

The End Of A Privilege

Late Monday afternoon the following notice was posted on the dean's bulletin board in Harkins Hall: "In past years a senior with a B average had the privilege of not taking a final exam in that course. This privilege is no longer in effect. In the future all students will be required to take final exams."

As of today the announcement has been posted for only two days and already it has stirred a tremendous amount of protest. Discontent has risen from day-hops and dormies alike, from freshmen as well as seniors. Everyone is excited about the proposed change and their vigor is not without reason.

Probably the main argument against the notice resides in the fact that second semester finals serve no purpose either for the grad school bound individual or for the one about to enter the world at large. By May of one's senior year standing in class is complete, graduate schools have made their appointments, and jobs have been secured. Student achievement has been measured over seven and three quarter semesters and it is highly doubtful that on exam will change the record of an entire college career.

An added reason against the movement centers around the all important "morale" factor. Not only did the exemption rule motivate students to try just that little bit harder to attain a B average, but it also gave them something to which they could look forward in their final days at Providence College. It rewarded the students who had put the most into their college career and gave them the feeling of being a person again and not just a number locked in a heat infested room for two hours. All of a sudden this has been shattered.

For these and other obvious reasons we urge the administration to think twice about the current measure concerning final exams. Not only was the notice issued at a most inappropriate time (just before first semester exams), but the contents of it has definitely hurt the student morale here at the College. They cannot understand why a so-called "privilege" has been, for seemingly no reason, taken away. And neither can we.

The 55-Minute Class

It has come to our attention that some of the professors here at the college are laboring under the misconception that we have 55 or 57 minute classes. Thankfully, there are only a few of these men, but they are numerous enough to make things difficult for those students who may, and often do, travel from one building to another for their next class.

The 55 minute class works to the disadvantage of all concerned, since the erring professor is responsible not only for one or more students being late for their next class, but also for delaying the class that is to be held next in that particular room. In causing students to be late for their next class, he is being rude to the professor of that class and the students in that class by the disruptions that may result from tardiness.

We might add here that the students also have a responsibility to be in class on time. Unfortunately, this is a responsibility that is too often disregarded—and for reasons that are none too good. Indeed, if the students are not in class on time, they are, in a very real way, being rude to both the professor and their classmates.

Therefore, we urge that those professors who are most flagrant in going beyond the allotted time stay within the 50 minute period. It is understandable that an extension is called for once in a great while, but if the frequency occurs two or three times a week, the students should have the right to get up and walk out. At the same time, we hope that the students will be more careful about showing up on time for all their classes. If both sides cooperate, the situation will be much more pleasant for all concerned.

Around the Campi

Boston, Mass.—(I.P.) — Colleges and universities across the country are talking about the morals revolution on the campus, but one university is doing something about it.

Northeastern University recently announced publication of a unique book which discusses both contemporary student views and traditional social attitudes toward such controversial topics as college cheating, dating and sexual behavior, student freedoms and accompanying responsibilities, and challenges to student religious thought.

Distributed to the entering freshman class this year, the book, entitled "Stepping Stones or Stumbling Blocks: Basic Decisions in College Life," is a publication of the Russell B. Stearns Study, a nationwide center for the study of college social and ethical standards.

Emphasizing the wide-spread concern among educators about the nature and problems of today's college students, Northeastern Dean of Students Gilbert G. MacDonald stressed that the publication will be used to implement in-depth discussions of the topics included as well as other related areas.

"Students will be asked to read the book and give us their candid comments and suggestions in order that we may best determine how to approach these problems," Dean MacDonald said. "Based on these student discussions," he continued, "it is planned to revise and enlarge the book to include other topics as the use of alcohol, vandalism, group responsibilities of fraternities to the non-college community, or such other material as may be deemed significant."

Since its inception in 1961, the Stearns Study, which is headquartered here, has been engaged in research into a number of current social problems in cooperation with several colleges and universities. Dr. Charles W. Havice, dean of Chapes and chairman of the Department of Philosophy at Northeastern serves as Chairman of the Stearns Study.

The first chapter, "You and University Education," discusses the meaning of a university education and a definition of today's Educated Man. Students are advised to expect and welcome radical changes in their individual development and the opportunity to become exposed to new ideas and new persons of diverse backgrounds.

The freedoms and responsibilities of the college student are discussed in the second chapter, "Freedom and Responsibility," with special emphasis being placed on the importance of recognizing the fact that one's own sense of freedom must not impair that of another.

Chapter three, "Sex and the College Student," is concerned with problems relative to relations between the sexes with definite quotes conveying the definite impression that the "new morality" is proving unsatisfactory to many collegians.

A discussion of cheating in chapter four, "A Critical Look at College Cheating," reveals that pressures from the family and society as a whole are forcing some students to cheat who might not otherwise be inclined to do so.

MEMO— FROM THE EDITOR

The present situation at St. John's University in New York brings into focus one of the most controversial questions on the academic scene, the question of academic freedom of speech. Does a college professor have the right to speak his mind on a subject even though the administration which hired him opposes his viewpoint? I think he does.

The function of a college professor, quite obviously, is to teach. But does this mean that he should go into a classroom and disgorge a lot of information to his students for fifty minutes and then rewind himself like a tape recorder to prepare for the next class? If that is so, then it would be far more economical for universities to purchase tape recorders. Of course, then a student would have the legitimate right to come into a classroom, turn on his own tape recorder, and then leave. That might sound ridiculous, but that would be precisely the situation; tape recorders recording from other tape recorders.

In his function as a teacher the professor should seek to arouse curiosity, to make the student aware of questions that should be asked. If this involves bringing himself in conflict with the administration, then so be it.

But what of matters outside the classroom? Is a professor so obligated to a college that he must stifle his own thoughts to protect the image of the college that hired him? I do not believe that he is. The image of any college should rest upon the caliber of its graduates, not the personal opinions of its faculty. If the graduates of a college are well-educated and well-qualified to enter their chosen careers, then the college has performed its function and the college need not fear the condemnation of those outside.

ROMAN IN THE GLOAMIN'

Now as the end of the first semester draws near, one fact emerges clearly: you are all going to flunk out of school.

There are two things you can do about it. First, you can marry money. (I don't mean you marry the money itself; I mean you marry a person who has money. Weddings between people and currency have not been legal anywhere in the United States since the Smoot-Hawley Act. Personna® Stainless Steel Blades, on the other hand, are legal everywhere and are, indeed, used with great pleasure and satisfaction in all fifty states of the Union and Duluth. I bring up Personna Stainless Steel Blades because this column is sponsored by the makers of Personna Stainless Steel Blades, and they are inclined to get edgy if I omit to mention their product. Some of them get edgy and some get double-edgy because Personna Blades come both in Injector style and Double Edge style.)

But I digress. I was saying you can marry money but, of course, you will not because you are a high-minded, clean-living, pure-hearted, freckle-faced American kid. Therefore, to keep from flunking, you must try the second method: you must learn how to take lecture notes.

According to a recent survey, eleven out of ten American undergraduates do not know the proper way to take lecture notes. To illustrate this appalling statistic, let us suppose you are taking a course in history. Let us further suppose the lecturer is lecturing on the ruling houses of England. You listen intently. You write diligently in your notebook, making a topic outline as you have been taught. Like this:

- I. House of Plantagenet.
- II. House of Lancaster.
- III. House of York.

Then you stop. You put aside your pen. You blink back a tear, for you cannot go on. Oh, yes, you know very well that the next ruling house is the House of Tudor. The trouble is you don't know the Roman numeral that comes after III.

It may, incidentally, be of some comfort to learn that you are not the only people who don't know Roman numerals. The fact is, the Romans never knew them either. Oh, I suppose they could tell you how much V or X were or like that, but when it came to real zingers like LXI or MMC, they just flung away their styluses and went downtown to have a bath or take in a circus or maybe stab Caesar a few times.

You may wonder why Rome stuck with these ridiculous numerals when the Arabs had such a nice, simple system. Well, sir, the fact is that Emperor Vespasian tried like crazy to buy the Arabic numerals from Suleiman The Magnificent, but Suleiman wouldn't do business—not even when Vespasian raised his bid to 100,000 gold piastres, plus he offered to throw in the Colosseum, the Appian Way, and Technicolor.

So Rome stuck with Roman numerals—to its sorrow, as it turned out. One day in the Forum, Cicero and Pliny got to arguing about how much is CDL times MVIX. Well, sir, pretty soon everyone in town came around to join the hassle. In all the excitement, nobody remembered to lock the north gate and—wham! before you could say ars longa—in rushed the Goths, the Visigoths, and the Green Bay Packers!

Well, sir, that's the way the empire crumbles, and I digress. Let's get back to lecture notes. Let's also say a word about Burma Shave®. Why? Because Burma Shave is made by the makers of Personna Blades who, it will be recalled, are the sponsors of this column. They are also the sponsors of the ultimate in shaving luxury. First coat your kisser with Burma Shave, regular or menthol—or, if you are the devil-may-care sort, some of each. Then whisk off your stubble with an incredibly sharp, unbelievably durable Personna Blade, Injector or Double Edge—remembering first to put the blade in a razor. The result: facial felicity, cutaneous cheer, epidermal elysium. Whether you shave every day, every III days, or every VII, you'll always find Personna and Burma Shave a winning combination.

Dillon Members Tutor

Forty PC Friars know the feeling of appreciation.

They are volunteer members of the Dillon Club's Tutorial Program who spend one hour each week helping fifth and sixth graders in need of academic assistance. The children, numbering about 100, are students at Vineyard Street and Lexington Avenue Schools in an underprivileged area of southern Providence.

cial manufacturer, flash cards, games, etc.," commented William Struck. "The only thing we badly need is volunteers, so that we can expand our program."

The tutorial program was conceived last summer, before the Dillon Club—whose main purpose is to encourage fuller participation by the commuter student in the life of the college—began its first year of operation.

Miss Elizabeth Roque, a Providence social worker, suggested of its proximity to PC and its time of class dismissal.

Sixty names of students in need of assistance were submitted to Miss Margaret Murray, principal of Vineyard, who then sent letters to the parents, requesting approval. Fifty-three parents requested the PC tutoring, and most who refused did so because their children were already receiving private tutoring.

Miss Murray said: "Our children have needed something like this for a long time. I would like to extend the program to include the fourth and third grades if more PC students volunteer."

The program, started November 16, has apparently produced concrete results. One student who previously received C grades in arithmetic now is achieving B's. Others who previously failed in subjects now are passing. "It gives me the extra help I need," said a tooth-wanting pupil.

Although there is no marking of students by volunteers, the Friars learn of their charges' progress and difficulties from index cards and notes by the students' teachers, which are posted on a special board in the teachers' room at Vineyard.

Those wishing information or who are interested in volunteering for the tutorial program are urged to contact William Struck or Robert Baker either in person or by the Dillon Club bulletin board in the Harkins rotunda. Transportation to the schools, if needed, will be provided.

Volunteer tutors at the Vineyard Street School include Struck, Baker, Nikitaidis, John Waycott, Robert Griffin, Rene Marquis, Dennis Sorel, Robert Corrigan, Gerard Goguen, Russell Page, John Taraborelli, Richard George, Roger Lavoie, Timothy McGee, Joseph McMahon, and Richard Boucher.

John Volpigno, Clifford Wallace, Charles Cintolo and Joseph D'Antonio, also volunteers at Vineyard, will begin practice teaching on January 30. Only a minority of the volunteers are education majors.

The Lexington program is in the process of organization. The remainder of volunteers teach there.

Joseph McMahon is reminded of his early schooling as he reviews a history assignment with Patricia Silva.

"Our membership is increasing at a fast rate," said William J. Struck, president of the Dillon Club, concerning the volunteer program. "I guess word is getting around about how much good can be done with so little sacrifice—just an hour a week. And the guys are finding it interesting and beneficial experience."

Peter Nikitaidis, a volunteer, said: "I think the main value to us has been the reaction of the students we help; they're so happy. One great benefit to them has been motivation. Now they see a way to reach their proper level of academic achievement."

One pupil expressed himself excitedly, "I have a whole teacher!"

Robert Baker, program chairman, stated that the Friars visit Vineyard on Tuesdays at 2:30 and Lexington on Wednesdays at 3:30, each for one hour. Each volunteer is assigned two children in only one school. The children await the tutors in their school classrooms, where they receive instruction in arithmetic, social studies and reading.

"The City of Providence has even supplied us with over a hundred dollars' worth of educational materials—reading and arithmetic aids by a commer-to William Struck, a friend, the "tremendous need for this type of activity in the City." She then phoned Miss H. Gertrude Coleman, supervisor of elementary grades in the City, to discuss the possibilities of a tutorial program employing PC volunteers.

A meeting of the three was then arranged with Dr. George O'Brien, assistant superintendent of Providence elementary grade schools. Vineyard Street School was chosen for the initiation of the program because

On The Aisle

By JOHN McDONALD

Take a penniless drunk with a beautiful niece who loves herself, a brainless knight with lots of money and no redeeming qualities, a conniving maid who realizes her intellectual superiority and proves it through well planned practical jokes, a zany clown who's poetic syllogisms would baffle St. Thomas Aquinas, an egoistical, puritanical steward who thinks "his lady" is in love with him; put them under one roof, add some exterior complications like mistaken identity and a brooding nobleman who wants to marry the beautiful niece and there you have the situation that Shakespeare resolves in the comedy Twelfth Night which is playing at Trinity Square Playhouse until January 29.

I found this play to be well cast. Each character is able (both physically and intellectually) to rise to the demands of his role and the result is a polished, comic production.

To begin with Richard Kennedy and Robert VanHooten, the Toby Belch and Andrew Aguecheek respectively, start off their drinking antics and don't let up until the end. Both men are pros at the motions and timing of comedy.

Richard Kneeland is excellent as Malvolio. His diction and pompous strutting add a brilliant contrast to Feste the clown, Toby and Sir Andrew.

The injected scenes of "sorrow" by Orsino as played by William Cain, add to the zany quality of the play.

Catherine Helmond as Viola beautifully portrays the comic innocence of a young girl disguised as a boy who immediately begins to see the complications of disguise.

I think such an excellent production deserves the support of every student. The student tickets are only $1.50. I also think John McDonald is colossal as "a sea captain."

"They starched my shirt again!" Bert Brady won a bet by wearing Dan Casalaro's cavalier outfit to class. Joe College all the way.

COHC Will Hold Military Ball

The annual Military Ball sponsored by the Cadet Officer Honor Club will be held Friday evening, Feb. 4 from 9-1 at the Alpine Country Club. The dance is the social highlight of the year for the R.O.T.C. brigade and cadre staff. The Dudley Stanton Orchestra shall provide the music for the affair.

Clifford Marr, chairman of the dance, has been working on the project since late in November and he indicates that all of the plans are coming along quite smoothly. An important feature of the dance is the investing of approximately ten juniors with the blue cord symbolic of the club membership. These juniors will be chosen by a military board of review, this Thursday night. The cadets, in order to qualify must maintain a 2.4 scholastic average, show a keen knowledge of the military and above all be gentlemen in and out of the R.O.T.C. activities.

Mr. Marr asks that all those who wish to purchase tickets please see Les Murphy or Rich Cohen as soon as possible or if this is not possible to see any member of the C.O.H.C. to reserve a place.

Pershing Rifles . . .

The new members were received into Company K at the 6th Annual Cord Dance held at the Alpine Country Club this past December. Those receiving their Cords were: Normand Bernache, Michael Boden, Frank Brosnan, Ronald Brouillette, Edward Carroll, Joseph Cartey, John Demarco, Peter Desler, Joseph Faraone, Andrew Gordon, Kevin Hayes, Robert Helm, Dennis Kennedy, Richard LaFerte, Raymond Madison, Lawrence McDonald, Dennis Morgan, William Murray, George Picard, Donald Rehm, John Ruginski, Emile St. Andre, John Scanlon, Francis Stripling, Norman Tovey, Paul Torti, William Tynan, Lee Vick, and John Casity.

Among those in attendance at the Cord Dance were the Very Reverend William P. Haas, O.P.; the Very Reverend Vincent C. Dore, O.P.; Major Gen. Leonard Holland, State Adjutant General, and his wife, the Reverend Raymond St. George, O.P.; the Reverend Walter Heath, O.P.; and Lt. Col. Andrew A. DelCorso and his ROTC staff.

In other ceremonies, Lt. Col. DelCorso received an honorary Captainship in P/R's; Capt. John M. Faulhaber received an engraved saber from Company K for his work as past Advisor; Capt. Paul F. Fitzpatrick received an enameled membership plaque from his PERSHING RIFLE Company at Seton Hall University; Staff Sergeant Donal C. Fahey received an honorary membership in P/R's; and Cadet 2/Lt. Thomas L. Pasquale, Jr., received the Drill Team Saber.

The first major test of the new members' training will come on Wednesday, January 12, when an inspection team from 12th Regimental Headquarters at Northeastern University will pay a visit to Company K. The Company hopes to better last year's score, a record 91.

Reverend Joseph Connors Transferred to Mission

The Reverend Joseph M. Connors, a member of Providence College's faculty for the past three years, has been transferred to Saint Thomas Aquinas Seminary in Nairobi, Kenya. Father will be Spiritual Director of the seminary for diocesan priests and will also be teaching theology and sociology.

Father Connors applied for a missionary assignment to one of the three missions maintained by this Dominican Province of Saint Joseph in Pakistan, Peru and Kenya. He requested missionary work because he feels that, "the missionary aspects has always been an integral part of the apostolic of the Dominican order; right from the very beginning, the order concerned itself with those areas of the world where the Church was not yet planted."

Father expressed the wish that the college be given recognition in his decision to apply for a missionary post. He stated that Providence College has sacrificed its own self-interest in encouraging such missionary activity; "this is an expression of the college's interest and love in people and especially Africans in my case." Father Connors went on to say that "this (the college's encouragement) indicates Providence College's attempt to give something of itself to the world."

Saint Thomas Aquinas Seminary was founded in 1963 upon the request of Kenya's hierarchy. It is a six year seminary, two years of philosophy and four years of theology. The seminarians have had two years of a college education at a minor seminary before attending the Dominican institute. There are approximately 35 students attending the seminary and it is staffed by eight Dominican priests.

Father Connors, a graduate of Providence College in 1945, has been a faculty member of St. Joseph College, Cincinnati, Ohio. As a member of Providence College's faculty he taught sociology and theology at the same time assuming the duties of Assistant Director of Guzman Hall.

Father looks forward with anticipation to his new assignment at the Kenyan seminary. The length of his stay in Kenya depends upon the wishes of his Superior however, Father would enjoy a permanent assignment at the seminary. From his talks with others, who have been there, he received the impression that the Dominicans are warmly accepted by the people and government of Kenya. Father Connors sees as his main problem his identifying himself with the Africans and not to identify them with America; "for this is an African Church and not an American one." He stated that his stay at Providence College has been "wonderful"; due in no small measure to the cooperation of the student body.

Father pointed out that there are two priests from Providence College in Nairobi at the present time, Rev. Dennis Kane, O.P., and Joseph Desmond, O.P. He also stated that a graduate of the class of '65, Kenneth Daily, is teaching English in Kenya. Fr. Benjamin Fay, O.P., returned last year from Nairobi and is presently teaching philosophy here at the college.

Letters To The Editor

To Mr. Dawber, Jr., '68

I willingly accept and relish the challenge to support black independence in Rhodesia, but not in the light of recent news from the Congo, Ghana, Burundi, which you stipulated in your letter to the editor. I believe one views this mounting crisis with narrow and shallow perspective if confined to recent news of other African nations and thus renders a very subjective analysis of the situation.

You say "you both deplore and fully understand the reasons why the Rhodesian government broke from the Crown. It seems, here, and as you continued in your letter, an explicit display of ambivalence. Your co-existing ideas of deplored the Rhodesian government's actions and defending the Rhodesian government's actions seem evidently incongruous at best.

Your statement is that the "policy is unfair, in the short run, but it will in the long run far outweigh the benefits of a black ruled country." I agree with the policy's being unfair and also believe that the existing evils of this "unfairness" will proliferate at such a speed that the white Rebel Regime will superimpose its every dictate upon the politically unheard Blacks. By the mere visiting of Africa, I strongly doubt if one can become politically attuned to the many diverse ramifications underlying the front page coverage of the Rhodesian situation.

You say that the White governments are the only thing keeping the Blacks from killing each other. I contend that the White government has been responsible through "behind the scenes activities" in planting and nurturing the seeds of revolt and insurrection and have thus been responsible for the carnaging of Black lives.

Other African nations have been aided by Britain in setting up home rule: Ghana (1957) Nigeria and Somaliland (1960) Tanganyika (1961) Kenya (1963). Rhodesia, however, does not want the Blacks to have any voice or instrumental control over the political and economic ordering and functioning of the Rhodesia government.

I strongly believe this is not the first time that Her Majesty's government has fallen into a tricky situation, but it is one of the innumerable trials of here reign. Whether you think Her Majesty knows what is best for her subjects or not does not politically matter, for it is the Prime Minister and his Cabinet that formulate, promulgate and implement British domestic and foreign policy, not Her Majesty.

Maybe political and policy leanings should not fall for rash world opinion, but it must seriously contemplate and give its utmost attention, as it does, to the English public opinion, which has a deep concern about Rhodesia for many reasons, two of which are kinsmen and interests in industry and business.

You say to crush the revolt is a "bloody" foolish idea. If this rebel regime is not squashed, there still is the possibility of a "blood bath" which will be precipitated by the militant states of Black Africa joining forces with Russia who has already pledged herself "in providing the utmost assistance to the 'people' of Rhodesia. This joint commitment could lead to a more serious holocaust than if the Rebel Regime were dissolved through domestic ties. Wilson's choice is one between alienating his own electorate and alienating the African commonwealth nations. With his choice lies his political future and at least the immediate future of Rhodesia.

To conclude my challenge to this letter I surmise Mr. Dawber Lurched into this instead of Researched into it.

To the Editor:

Concerning your editorial, Dorm Rules: How Strict? (12/15/65), I find myself in personal accord with your statements. What I have experienced in my brief time on campus, however, is that the student talks about freedom and responsibility in a negative way. Freedom and responsibility are not based on the lack of duties. Freedom, in the psychologically mature sense, is freedom-to rather than freedom-from. As long as the mentality of freedom-from is operative we shall perpetuate negative thinking and thus immature thinking.

Rev. A. Winter Scheduled for Slavin Lecture

The Rev. Robert A. Winter, rector of St. Mark's Church, Warren, will speak on "Witness of the Episcopal Church in the Modern Ecumenical Movement" Tuesday, January 18, 8 p.m. in the Harkins Hall Auditorium.

Father Winter's talk, the third in the 1965-66 Robert J.

REV. ROBERT WINTER

Slavin Lecture Series, will be open to the public. It was originally scheduled for Nov. 9 but was postponed because of the northeastern power failure.

Father Winter is a member of the board of directors, Rhode Island Chapter of the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity; a member of the Ecumenical Relations Commission of the Episcopal Diocese of Rhode Island; and is secretary-treasurer of the Clericus of the Episcopal Diocese of Rhode Island.

The ecumenical series, named in honor of the Very Rev. Robert J. Slavin, O.P., sixth president of Providence College, consists of six lectures on the general theme of "Search for Understanding" and feature speakers from different faiths.

Air Force Seeks O. T. S. Candidates

The Air Force recruiting office in Providence has announced that there is still a great need for pilots and navigators through the Officer Training School program.

There are still openings in the program for those interested in administrative, technical, scientific, and engineering fields.

The three-month program leads to reserve commission as a second lieutenant and an immediate call to four years of active duty. Only college graduates are eligible for the program.

Seniors interested in the program are invited to call Sgt. DeSilva or Sgt. Anderson at GA 1-8911 or to visit the recruiting office at 368 Westminster Street in downtown Providence.

lected, "there was no rectory and no parochial school. Thanks to the Americans I could finish building both." Sacred Heart now has six classrooms with 700 young students living entirely on what support they get from the outside. "My Sunday collection," adds Father Oahn, "brings in only about 35 piasters" (less than thirty cents). With this, Father "Joe" as he is known to the Americans in the area, must tend to his 7,000 "parishioners," only 100 of whom are actually Catholics. But in Vietnam, as elsewhere, consolation and help for the needy are scarce, so Father Oahn's duties know no religious bounds.

Apart from his regular parish work, he is "principal" to his 700 school children, he administers to 350 Tan Hiep orphans, 150 of whom are crippled and seriously diseased, and he even cares for an orphanage in the neighboring provincial capital at My Tho. Besides all this, Father reports that he has found time to open up a restaurant for the poor and refugees in the area. "They have to pay very little," advises Father Joe, "and those who cannot afford to pay, just go in and eat." He serves over 500 people a day—ninety percent of whom are not even his parishioners. His one disappointment it appears is that he can no longer savor his Rhode Island quahaugs.

Through all this, of course, the war goes on and the fight against the Viet Cong swirls continuously about his parish. Two 105mm. howitzers for example are located a short 40 yards from his rectory, firing every night. "It doesn't bother me," says Father half-jokingly, "I am used to it by now." Father's parish has been fortunate in the past in being spared the savage disaster that inevitably accompanies war; but recently, his parish buildings have been the target for increased guerrilla attacks. "On November 30," announced Father, "my parish was mortared for the third time." Two people died and five were wounded.

Through it all, Father Oahn still cherishes his memories of Providence College. "God has been very good to America," Father reminisces, "for he has given to Americans a great prosperity, both from a social and religious point of view." Father sends his fondest wishes to the people of Rhode Island with the hope, we might suspect, that he may yet return to catch a glimpse of his Alma Mater—and possibly a meal of his favorite—Rhode Island quahaugs.

Past

Present

The Company's first engine, the Wasp, took to the air on May 5, 1926. Within a year the Wasp set its first world record and went on to smash existing records and set standards for both land and seaplanes for years to come, carrying airframes and pilots higher, farther, and faster than they had ever gone before.

In recent years, planes powered by Pratt & Whitney Aircraft have gone on to set new standards of performance in much the same way as the Wasp had done in the 1920's. The 727 and DC-9 are indicative of the new family of short-to-medium range jetliners which are powered by the highly successful JT8D turbofan. Examples of current military utilizations are the J58-powered Mach 3 YF-12A which recently established four world aviation records and the advanced TF30-powered F-111 variable-geometry fighter aircraft.

Your and the Future

Take a look at the above chart; then a good long look at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft—where technical careers offer exciting growth, continuing challenge, and lasting stability—where engineers and scientists are recognized as the major reason for the Company's continued success.

Engineers and scientists at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft are today exploring the ever-broadening avenues of energy conversion for every environment . . . all opening up new avenues of exploration in every field of aerospace, marine and industrial power application. The technical staff working on these programs, backed by Management's determination to provide the best and most advanced facilities and scientific apparatus, has already given the Company a firm foothold in the current land, sea, air and space programs so vital to our country's future. The list of achievements amassed by our technical staff is a veritable list of firsts in the development of compact power plants, dating back to the first Wasp engine which lifted the United States to a position of world leadership in aviation. These engineering and scientific achievements have enabled the Company to obtain its current position of leadership in fields such as gas turbines, liquid hydrogen technology and fuel cells.

Should you join us, you'll be assigned early responsibility. You'll find the spread of Pratt & Whitney Aircraft's programs requires virtually every technical talent. You'll find opportunities for professional growth further enhanced by our Corporation-financed Graduate Education Program. Your degree can be a BS, MS or PhD in: MECHANICAL • AERONAUTICAL • ELECTRICAL • CHEMICAL ENGINEERING • PHYSICS • CHEMISTRY • METALLURGY • CERAMICS • MATHEMATICS • ENGINEERING SCIENCE OR APPLIED MECHANICS.

James Bond - The Man

He was patting on his favorite cologne when the door buzzer sounded. Room service—dressed up as a French maid—was the most gorgeous creature he'd seen in some time. He remained poised, ready to reach for the Walther in his shoulder holster. He didn't recognize her, you refuse to let others take advantage of your good nature. Show decisiveness in all situations. According to the screen's Sean Connery who is James Bond to millions of women, "I think one of the appeals Bond has for women is that he is decisive — cruel, even. By their recklessness, and so should you. Don't be afraid to take risks to advance your goals, but be sure they're calculated risks.

Remember that style makes the man. Agent 007 treats himself well. Good hotels, gourmet foods and wines, important cars, are his way of life — his trademark. Why not cultivate your tastes too? Dare to have habits; a certain wine always at your table; an offbeat brand of cigarettes, the aroma of a special cologne. Always remember women prefer a man of taste. And people too take you at your face value. If you act as though you're entitled to the best, its more than likely that's what you will get.

Always be cool. This is really the "ABC" of the 007 hero. James Bond is above all, self-possessed. Keep your temper at all times — Secret Agent Bond may indulge in a flying tackle, but he never flies off the handle. You can also avoid the temptation to boast — let your actions speak for you. They'll say flattering things, if you've learned the secrets of Bond's appeal.

With a little practice, in fact, you may find it easier than you think to establish a firm "bond" between yourself and the 007 hero image.

For millions of men (and women), the James Bond image means adventure and excitement. A symbol of masculinity, 007, personified onscreen by Sean Connery, is probably today's most idolized hero. What makes an 007 hero? You may be closer to his image right now than you may think.

but something told him that she was there to deliver something deadlier than breakfast. He moved just in time as the knife flew through the air and imbedded itself with a twang in the wall behind him. Grabbing her shoulder, he spun her to the floor and trained the Walther on her...

NEW YORK (NAPS) — This isn't an episode from a James Bond adventure, but it could be. It's the stuff that dreams are made of — the daydreams of millions of men (and women). Will the dream hero shoot the intruder? It won't be necessary — because his male magnetism, a much more reliable deadly weapon than the automatic — already gives him "the license to kill... women."

What are the factors in the charm of the 007 type hero? For the countless men who would give a year's salary to know, there's a good word; you're probably closer to his image right now than you may think.

After all James Bond is a man like other men — only much, much more so. Your masculine traits are essentially the same ones he has — in spades. To achieve his kind of "supper-male" image, with whatever rewards it may bring, follow these tips from some experts who have obviously been spying on James Bond.

Know what you want and go after it. Bond isn't supposed to be a "nice guy" after all, he's a Secret Agent who's licensed to kill. Without drawing a bead on anyone, you too may find that you'll get what you want if nature women aren't decisive — "Shall I wear this? Shall I wear that?" — and along comes a man who is absolutely sure of everything, and he's a god-send."

Work hard on your well-groomed image. Bond is in great shape, and he dresses to kill; so should you, within the limits of your budget. Don't forget that for anyone as sophisticated as 007, good grooming includes the selection of after shaves and cologne and other scent-able grooming aids. In fact, a new line of men's toiletries, with the type of subtle masculine aroma that a man like Bond would favor, has been dubbed 007 and tagged with such slogans as "007 makes any man dangerous" and "When you use 007, be kind." The new scent is also said to give the "license to kill... women." Today the "scent" as well as the "suit" makes the man.

A smile can work wonders. This is especially true if you know when not to smile—which is most of the time! Bond is the quiet, almost somber type; his humor, when it flashes, is the dry, sardonic kind. When you smile seldom, acting as if you are preoccupied with weighty matters, a girl can't help wondering if you really are pleased with her. Then you flash your rare smile. Using these tactics, you may soon find that you have more to smile about!

Be adventurous — but with the right kind of caution. Bond loves the fight, but even more he loves winning. He knows the differences between daring and

Holiday Party Held By Albertus Magnus

The Albertus Magnus Club will hold its third dance of the school year on this Friday, Jan. 14, between 8 p.m. and 1 a.m. at the South Providence Hope Council Knights of Columbus Hall. This pre-exam dance, for couples only, is being held at the same location as the last dance on Dec. 4, held in conjunction with the Villanova basketball game.

By acclamation of those who attended the last dance, Mike Flanagan's band will again provide the entertainment.

Tickets will be $3.00 a couple, as usual, for non-club members. This includes the refreshments. Information, tickets, and maps may be obtained from the Club officers and social chairmen: Larry Kane and Tom McCormack, Ray 314; Al Matook, commuter; Tom Collins, M 103; Tom Liesegang, Joe's 307; Phil Soccoccia, Joe's A-3.

On Dec. 18, the Albertus Magnus Club of Providence College and the student nurses from Roger William's Hospital co-sponsored the second annual Christmas party for over two hundred underprivileged children enrolled in the Hospital clinic.

The party, which was held at Roger William's Hospital, was a tremendous success. The children consumed an abundant supply of cookies, cupcakes, ice cream and soda. Then they settled down to listen to WPRO's Leo LaPorte narrate one of the Christmas stories for which he is so well known. With the arrival of Santa Claus, all the excitement and enthusiasm which had been building up throughout the entire party came to a head. Santa distributed gifts to each child and then, pulling a name out of a hat, presented one of the children with a two-wheel bicycle. In like manner food baskets were given to fifteen lucky parents who had come to the party with their children.

The Albertus Magnus Club would like to publicly thank the Carolan Club, the Dillon Club, the Friars Club and the Student Congress without whose financial assistance the party would never have been possible. Congratulations are due to Bill Palin, chairman of the event, and to all members of the Albertus Magnus Club and the Roger Williams student nurses whose untiring work made the party the success that it was.

NOTES FROM THE

SPORTSDESK

By VINCENT MAROTTOLI

Once upon a time, there was a "basketball player" who was on a team with an internationally-renowned coach. And this "basketball player" reaped all the benefits which accrued from such an association, such as publicity. Meanwhile, there was another player on a near-by campus who had proved himself to be more versatile and was objectively judged to be a better player. But this player did not receive the newspaper coverage which the other "player" received. Many seemed to think that this was an injustice, and yet who could argue with the mass media?

But one trip to New York cured the disease. Jimmy Walker had to prove it on his own, without the facile assistance of a well-known coach. But prove it he did. He played some of his best basketball in the big city during the Festival and he dazzled the eyes of many of the writers seated around the court who had really never given Jimmy much thought.

Who is to blame for this injustice? Why should a star as talented as Jimmy be subject to a constant testing of his abilities? Publicity belongs with the professionals, and I for one am not in a position to know the proper channels for distribution of such information. My responsibility rests with the campus denizens, and yet I believe that many of us in the field learned much about the various angles involved because of this experience.

But I do not wish to accuse in this article, merely to praise. A new syllable has been added to the basketball alphabet, and it is my belief that the "Big W" will etch a long and illustrious history before he removes himself from basketball circles.

INSIDE STUFF: Rumors start easily enough and spread quickly. But many of them should be dispelled, and this includes the possibility of a certain varsity player returning to the eligibility list next semester. According to one official, this is a remote idea. That is bad news to any Friar fan . . . And to continue in the same vein, I have good reason to believe that my reporters will have fewer hockey players to write about come second semester, unless some scholastic inequities are resolved . . . By the way, I pay very well for tips such as these . . . And lastly, I would like to thank the six girls from Albertus Magnus College who did such a remarkable job distributing the Cowl sports' supplement at the opening game of The Festival. They wouldn't be a bad idea as a permanent fixture on the cheer leading staff.

aspects: power supply—a prime example is the recent yet unexplained blackout; and our water supply.

Col. Bunker then uttered the fact that the John Birch Society would like to have one hundred thousand in membership, and eventually one thousand in each congressional district. He also touched on their medias of communication. The one official communication is the monthly bulletin. The "American Opinion" is a periodic magazine, and "Review of the News" is a weekly summary.

Col. Bunker concluded his lecture with a question and answer period which proved colorful and somewhat beneficial.

the rank of Captain. While remaining in China John Birch was seized while in uniform and murdered by the Communists. The U. S. said nothing and the Birch family for an extremely long period of time knew nothing of John's fate. This is the indifference for which the John Birch Society fights so bitterly against.

Again Bunker reaffirmed the worries of the Birch Society with the idea of the human life aspect seemingly to become much less important in the United States. His view of the Korean Conflict, for example, was that the U. S. should have won by the end of 1950 but because the central government didn't want to win they let innocent young men be murdered. Bunker continued that his current policy towards Vietnam is "to win or ask why not."

The audience of some three hundred ladies and gentlemen were also warned of the sneaky Communist way. This is seen in Poland and other now Communist countries where the Communists took over certain key positions in the government. Before long a group which was made up of no more than three present Communists gained and kept control of an entire country. The John Birch Society believes that this is happening in the United States today. For example, the central government in case of emergency has full control of all communications and news media. And who has control of the central government? A few certain positions control much of the governments actions. Again, we are supposedly slowly sinking to the Communist power of subversion. This can be seen through two

Frosh Lose to UMass After Beating Brown

Al Hayes tossed in 35 points to lead the frosh basketball team to an 89-83 win last night against the URI cubs. The Friars had been down by 19 points at one time.

Hampered by poor ball handling and a cold shooting night from both the floor and the line, the Providence College freshman basketball team was defeated by the UMass frosh by a score of 87-72 in Amherst, last Thursday night. Bill Judkins led the P.C. scorers with 22 points. Two nights before the young Friars defeated the Brown freshman 85-73 with Andy Clary having the scoring honors with 24 points, two more than teammate Bill Judkins. This game marked the first appearance of Stu Marquis, a 6' 3" forward, idled since the start of the season with a leg injury. The return of this fine shooter, combined with the scoring and rebounding of Clary and Judkins and the fine play-making of Bill Harrington and Al Hayes, will give depth to the forces of coach Dave Gavitt.

The coach feels that his boys have put a lot of effort into the game, but lack of experience in playing together and the difficulties in learning the combination defense have been responsible of their defeats. Costly mistakes in the fundamentals of the game and frequent turning over of the ball haven't helped either. Coach Gavitt feels that the team has great potential and if the boys can play their game, they could beat anyone.

Fred Sullivan - A Symbol of Versatility

By GREG WALSH

Fred Sullivan is a guy who is going places. The rugged veteran left wing for the Friars is not only a hockey standout, but he is also well acquainted with the baseball diamond and a competent man with the books.

Sully's academic and athletic career had its first real beginning at St. John's Prep in Danvers, Mass. At St. John's, Sully starred in football, hockey and baseball, while maintaining a high academic average. By the end of his senior year, he had attracted much attention and received a large number of scholarships for both football and hockey. It was a difficult choice, but he finally decided to give up football for hockey and to come to P.C.

During his career at Providence, the senior Political Science major has been a regular on the baseball and hockey teams, and has kept a near Dean's List index. Sully is probably best remembered for his game winning, pinch-hit homerun against U.R.I. last Spring. He is also a very successful businessman. He owns a window washing business in Danvers which he set up himself when he was in high school.

After graduation Sully plans to attend law school, possibly Georgetown which is his first choice. And chances are that he will be defecting to the Jesuits because he scored highly in the Law Boards. But no matter where he goes or what he does, Fred Sullivan will be successful if he displays the same amount of determination he has exhibited at P.C.

Friar Pucksters Skate to Win; Down Bowdoin Easily, 7-1

Playing their first game at the R. I. Auditorium in three weeks, the Friar sextet got back in the winning groove last Saturday night with a big 7-1 win over a strong Bowdoin sextet. Tuesday, the Friars lost to Yale by a score of 3-2. During their three week absence from the Arena, the pucksters continued to be jinxed in Brown's Meehan Auditorium as they dropped three straight games on the unfriendly ice. One to Brown 3-1, another to the University of Minnesota-Duluth 4-1, and to McGill University of Montreal 3-0.

Against Bowdoin the pucksters began to flex the offensive muscle of which they are capable and which has always been a mark of a Friar hockey team. With all lines scoring the Friars showed their best offensive balance of the season, and led by their highly-touted sophomore line they banged home 3 goals in the first period, 3 goals in the second period and 1 goal finale. They took a total number of 46 shots at the net.

Over at Brown the rinkmen have played 9 games in the last 3 years; they have beaten Brown once in three games and have won of six games played in the Brown Invitational Tournament. This year the play of goalie John Campbell was the only thing Friar fans had to cheer about in the three games at Brown. In those three games Campbell stopped 96 shots many of these being of the spectacular variety as he continually frustrated opponents with his ability to out-guess them on break-aways.

Coach Zello Toppazzini blames lack of ice time and an injury to center Andy Branchaud early in the first game for his team's poor showing at Brown.

"We played as well as could be expected with the little ice time we had over the Christmas break. The boys really tried. When Andy (Branchaud) got hurt in the first game I had to put a sophomore, Dana Maus, in at center. It takes time to learn to play together and under game conditions its even harder."

The Friars next game will be Saturday in Waterville Maine against Colby. The White Mules have a young and aggressive team and should give the visitors quite a tussle. Following this game the Sextet will take a two week break for exams before returning to the ice for a rematch with the Eastern Olympics at Braintree, Mass.

URI Downed, 86-79; BC Next In Line

By JOHN CIEPLY

The Ram stew was tasty last night. PC won its 11th game as it defeated URI, 86-79, at the Ram Gym. But it was not won handily as the Rams battled PC throughout the game. Although the Friars had an 8 point half-time lead, 44-36, they had to contend with a charged up Ram team that whittled the lead to 4 points, 76-72, with 3:10 left to play. But successive buckets by Jim Walker, who scored 38 points, Jim Benedict and Bill Lasher preserved the Friar victory.

But the big story last week was not so much the two Friar victories, over Brown and Massachusetts, as the play of Mike Riordan. Mike, usually the steadiest of the regulars, went from what might have been his worst collegiate game, against Brown, to undoubtedly the best night of his entire career up at Amherst. When asked which he relished more, the twenty-six points or the seventeen rebounds, Mike replied, "There's no difference between points or rebounds — they're all the same. It's winning that matters." From anyone else but Mike, this might sound like a cliché. But the Friar forward has a reputation for supplementing his natural talent with real dedication.

None of the Friars, least of all Walker, were expected to be up for the Brown game after coming off the Boston College game and Holiday Festival triumphs. Even though Brown's ball handling appeared to keep them in the game, not even the Friars' poor shooting could make the game close, or the teams a true match. Walker's hot hand was especially cold, and only a resurgent second half enabled to pull out with a respectable fifteen points.

At UMass the story for Riordan and the rest of the team had to be and was different. Massachusetts had a good team and the individual players, especially Hill and Tyndall, were excellent shots. Riordan as usual, was given the task of guarding the toughest man on the opposing squad, Clarence Hill. "Hill was the toughest man I've had to guard; small, quick men give me the most trouble and Hill was small and quick." Along the same line, Mike summed up the pressures of playing the defense this year. "We've been helping out in the middle by sagging, since the team has no big man. If you draw fouls though, you have to play loose and you can't play the good defense." This was the trouble that Mike and Bill Blair got into at Houston, trying to get rebounds from Elvin Hayes. Blair fouled out of the UMass game also, but Mike stayed in to pick up the slack — along with every loose ball, rebound, and clutch shot — until Walker got untracked and started to hit also.

In both games Jim started slow and then played a good second half, but Saturday the pressure will be on for two halves. Boston College will be out for the proverbial blood when they take on the Friars in the ECAC game of the week, being broadcast across the entire East Coast. Although PC has the home court advantage, BC has all the psychological edge. It took Jim Walker's record fifty points to pull out a five point victory in the garden and Boston does not expect to see a repeat. On the Friars' side, however, is the fact that Willie Wolters poured in twenty-six points in that game while he had nowhere near that many in previous games or since.

This will also be John Austin's last chance to beat PC. He should be expected to put on one of his best shows — unless Mike Riordan has anything to say about it. Mike did a real good job on Austin in the Garden and is not at all afraid of being asked to repeat.
