Red Cross Seeks Blood for Vietnam

A movement for more positive action to assist the American soldiers in Vietnam has developed on campus. The movement involves the collection of blood which will in turn be used for transfusions in Vietnam.

Conducting the effort will be two seniors, Jeremy Lord and Vincent Marottoli. Both are seniors, Jeremy Lord and Vincent Marottoli. Both are seniors, Jeremy Lord and Vincent Marottoli.

A debate was held Tuesday, January 11, at the college between two prominent Rhode Island citizens, Aram Arabian, former Public Defender (1942-1946), former Public Defender (1942-1946), and Milton Stanzler, former Public Defender (1942-1946).

The topic for the debate was “Should the Press of the Press Be Free?”, and Mr. Stanzler took the affirmative. The subject was debated by both a legal and moral standpoint. The Press’s freedom was discussed from a Constitution view; it was pointed out that the Constitution guarantees this freedom and as it is part of the supreme law of the land, it should be upheld. In rebuttal, it was stated that freedom of the press is not a license to publish anything. It is a form of character assassination which has no news value and is just an “item to feed the idle curiosity of strangers.” The Press was also attacked from the legal standpoint, as stated by Mr. Arabian. "reporting on crimes as the press does it in many instances is morally wrong and in some cases impedes the administration of justice.”

The students of Providence College were recently asked by a member of VISTA (Volunteers in Service to America, the “domestic Peace Corps”) to donate children’s books for a library to be constructed in an under-privileged area of Virginia.

Miss Barbara Boudreau, a native of Slaterville, R.I., in a letter addressed to the COWL requested “many books for age level, but especially for children.”

You have no idea how much good you would do if you could have a hundred, or more, books collected,” Miss Boudreau wrote. “It would mean so very much to so many people.”

She said many of the children in her area “are intelligent but hindered by their environment.”

Books may be submitted to the COWL office at any time. Any books collected will be shipped to Miss Boudreau at her expense.

Miss Boudreau is a student at Trinity College in Burlington, Vermont. She is on leave for one year’s service in VISTA. She is on the planning committee of the proposed library.

The End Of A Privilege

Late Monday afternoon the following notice was posted on the dean's bulletin board in Harris Hall: "In past years a senior with a B average had the privilege of not taking a final exam in that course. This privilege is no longer in effect. In the future all students will be required to take final exams."

As of today the announcement has been posted for only one class, but it has stirred a tremendous amount of protest. Discontent has risen from day-hoops and dorms alike, from freshmen as well as seniors. Everyone is excited about the proposed change and their vigor is not without reason.

Probably the main argument against the notice resides in the fact that second semester finals serve no purpose either for the grad school bound individual or for the one about to enter the world at large. By May of one's senior year standing in class is complete, graduate schools have made their appointments, and jobs have been secured. Student achievement has been measured over seven and three quarter semesters and it is highly doubtful that on exam will change the record of an entire college career.

An added reason against the movement centers around the all important "morale" factor. Not only did the exemption rule motivate students to try just that little bit harder to attain a B average, but it also gave them something to which they could look forward in their final days at Providence College. It rewarded the students who had put the most into their college career and gave them the feeling of being a person again and not just a number locked in a heat infested room for two hours. All of a sudden this has been shuttered.

For these and other obvious reasons we urge the administration to think twice about the current measure concerning final exams. Not only was the notice issued at a most inappropriate time (just before first semester exams), but the contents of it has definitely hurt the student morale here at Providence College. It rewarded the students who had put the most into their college career and gave them the feeling of being a person again and not just a number locked in a heat infested room for two hours. All of a sudden this has been shuttered.

The present situation at St. John's University in New York brings into focus one of the most controversial questions on the academic scene, the question of academic freedom of speech. Does a college professor have the right to speak his mind on a subject even though the administration which hired him opposes his viewpoint? I think he does.

The function of a college professor, quite obviously, is to teach. But does this mean that he should go into a classroom and dispense a lot of information to his students for fifty minutes and then rewind him like a tape recorder to prepare for the next class? If that is so, then it would be far more economical for universities to purchase tape recorders. Of course, then a student would have the legitimate right to come into a classroom, turn on his own tape recorder, and then leave. That might sound ridiculous, but that would be precisely the situation; tape recorders recording from other tape recorders.

In his function as a teacher the professor should seek to arouse curiosity, to make the student aware of questions that should be asked. If this involves bringing himself in conflict with the administration, then so be it.

But what of matters outside the classroom? Is a professor so obligated to a college that he must stifle his own thoughts to protect the image of the college that hired him? I do not believe that he is. If anything, a college should rest upon the caliber of its graduates, not the personal opinions of its faculty. If the graduates of a college are well-educated and well-qualified to enter their chosen careers, then the college has performed its function and the college need not fear the condemnation of those outside.
ROMAN IN THE GLOAMIN'

Now as the end of the first semester draws near, one fact emerges clearly: you are all going to flunk out of school. There are two things you can do about it. First, you can marry money. (I don't mean you marry the money itself: I mean you marry a person who has money. Weddings between people and currency have not been legal anywhere in the United States since the Smoot-Hawley Act. Persanna® Stainless Steel Blades, on the other hand, are legal everywhere and are, indeed, used with great pleasure and satisfaction in all fifty states of the Union and Dubuth. I bring up Persanna Stainless Steel Blades because this column is sponsored by the makers of Persanna Stainless Steel Blades, and they are inclined to get edgy if I smit to mention their product. Some of them get edgy and some get double-edgy because Persanna Blades come both in Injector style and Double Edge style.)

But I digress. I was saying you can marry money but, of course, you will not because you are a high-minded, cleaning, puritanic, hard-faced American kid. Then, therefore, to keep from flunking, you must try the second method: you must learn how to take lecture notes.

Three or four out of ten American undergraduates do not know the proper way to take lecture notes. To illustrate this apposée, you are taking a course in history. Let us further suppose the lecturer is lecturing on the ruling houses of England. You listen intently. You write diligently in your notebook, making a topic outline as you have been taught. Like this: 1. House of Plantagenet. 2. House of Lancaster. 3. House of York.

May you wonder why Rome stuck with these ridiculous numerals when the Arabs had such a nice, simple system. Well, the Arabs had your own system, the vigesimal, but they never knew them either. Oh, I suppose they could tell you how much V or X were or like they just flung away their styluses and went downtown to buy the Arabic numerals from Sulaiman The Magnificent, but Sulaiman wouldn't do business—not even when Vespa- stan raised his bid to 100,000 gold piastres, plus he offered to throw in the Colosseum, the Appian Way, and Techni- numerals when the Arabs had such a nice, simple system. They may wonder why Rome stuck with these ridiculous

You may wonder why Rome stuck with these ridiculous numerals when the Arabs had such a nice, simple system. Well, the Arabs had your own system, the vigesimal, but they never knew them either. Oh, I suppose they could tell you how much V or X were or like they just flung away their styluses and went downtown to have a bath or take in a circus or maybe stab Caesar a few times.

It may, incidentally, be of some comfort to learn that you are not the only people who don't know Roman numerals. Once I knew a man who never knew them either. Oh, I suppose they could tell you how much V or X were or like that, but when it came to real zingers like LIX or MMC, they just said, "Boo, hiss!" and went downtown to have a bath or take in a circus or maybe stab Caesar a few times.

"Our membership is increasing at a fast rate," said Wil- liam J. Struck, president of the Dillon Club, concerning the volunteer program. "I told the word is getting around about how much good can be done with so little sacrifice—just an hour a week. And the guys are finding it interesting and benef- ficial experience." Peter Nikitaidis, a volunteer, said, "I think the main value to us has been the reaction of the students we help; they're so happy. One great benefit to them has been motivation. Now they see a way to reach their proper level of academic achievement."

One pupil expressed himself excitedly, "I have a whole teacher!" Robert Baker, program chairman, stated that the Friars visit Vineyard on Tuesdays at 3:30 and Lexington on Wednes- days at 3:30, each for one hour. Each volunteer is assigned two children in only one school. The children await the tutors in their school classrooms, where they receive instruction in arithmetic, social studies and reading.

"The City of Providence has even supplied us with over a hundred dollars' worth of educational materials—reading and arithmetic aids by a commer- cial manufacturer, flash cards, games, etc." commented Wil- liam Struck. "The only thing we badly need is volunteers, so that we can expand our pro- gram."

The tutorial program was con- ceived last summer, before the Dillon Club—whose main pur- pose is to encourage fuller par- ticipation by the commuter stu- dent in the life of the college—began its first year of opera- tion.

Miss Elizabeth Roque, a Prov- idence social worker, suggested of its proximity to PC and its time of class dismissal.

Sixty names of students in need of tutoring were sub- mitted to Miss Margaret Mur- ray, principal of Vineyard, who then showed them to the pare- nts, requesting approval. Fifty- six names were received by the PC, and most who refused did so because their children were already receiving private tutoring.

Miss Murray said: "Our chil- dren have needed something like this for a long time. I would like to extend the pro- gram to include the fourth and third grades if more PC stu- dents volunteer."

The program, started Novem- ber 16, has already produced concrete results. One student who previously re- ceived C grades in arithmetic now is achieving B's. Others who previously failed in sub- jects now are passing. "It gives me the extra help I need," said a tooth-wanting pupil.

Although there is no marking of students by the tutors, the Friars learn of their charges' progres and difficulties from index cards kept by the students' teachers, which are posted on a special board in the teachers' room at Vineyard.

Those wishing or informed who are interested in volunteer- ing for the tutorial program are urged to contact William Struck either in person or by the Dillon Club bul- letin board located behind the Parker's roda. Transportation to the schools, if needed, will be pro- vided.

John Volpigno, Clifford Wal- lace, Charles Cintolo and Joe- seph D'Antonio, also volunteers at Vineyard, looked forward to the program. "This will enable us to help some of the children who previously failed in subject areas by one hour each day at 3:30, each for one hour. Each volunteer is assigned two children in only one school. The children await the tutors in their school classrooms, where they receive instruction in arithmetic, social studies and reading.

Take a penniless drunk with a beautiful niece who loves her self, a brainless knight with lots of money and no redeeming qualities, a conceited malcontent who realizes her intellectual superiority and proves it through well planned practical jokes, a sassy clown who's poetic syllogisms would baffle St. Thomas Aquinas, an egotistical, puritanical steward who thinks "his lady" is in love with him; put them under one roof, add some exterior complications like mistaken identity and a brooding problem who wants to marry the beautiful niece and there you have the comedy Twelfth Night which is playing at Trinity Square Playhouse until January 29.

I found this play to be well cast, especially (both physically and intellectually) to rise to the demands of his role and the result is a polished, comic production. To begin with Richard Kennedy and Robert VanHouten, the Toby Belch and Andrew Aquecheek respectively, start off their drinking antics and don't let up until the end. Both men are pros at the motions and timing of comedy. Richard Kneeland is excellent as Malvolio. His diction and pompous strutting add a brilliant contrast to Feste the clown, Toby and Sir Andrew.

The injected scenes of "sorrows" by Orsino as played by William Cain, add to the sainy quality of the play. Catherine Helmond as Viola beautifully portrays the comic innocence of a young girl disguise as a boy who immediately begins to see the complications of disguise.

I think such an excellent production deserves the support of every student. The student tickets are only $1.50. I also think John McDonald is colossal as "a sea captain."

COHC Will Hold Military Ball

The annual Military Ball sponsored by the Cadet Officer Honor Club will be held Friday evening, Feb. 4 from 9-1 at the Alpine Country Club. The dance is the social highlight of the year for the R.O.T.C. brigade and cadre staff. The Pendeny Stanton Orchestra shall provide the music for the affair.

Clifford Marr, chairman of the dance, has been working on the project since late in November and he indicates that all of the plans are coming along quite smoothly. An important feature of the dance is the inviting of approximately ten juniors with the blue cord symbolic of the club membership. These juniors will be chosen by a military board of review, this Thursday night. The cadets, in order to qualify must maintain a 2.4 scholastic average, show a keen knowledge of the military and above all be gentleman in and out of the R.O.T.C. activities.

Mr. Marr asks that all those who wish to purchase tickets please see Les Murphy or Rich Cohen as soon as possible or if this is not possible to see any member of the C.O.H.C. to receive a place.

"They starched my shirt again!" Bert Brady won a bet by wearing Dan Casalaro's cavalier outfit to class. Joe College all the way.

Reverend Joseph Connors
Transferred to Mission

The Reverend Joseph M. Connors, a member of Providence College's faculty for the past three years, has been transferred to Saint Thomas Aquinas Seminary in Nairobi, Kenya. Father will be Spiritual Director of the seminary for diocesan priests and will also be teaching theology and sociology.

Father Connors applied for a missionary assignment as one of the three missions maintained by this Dominican Province of Saint Joseph in Pakistan, Peru and Kenya. He requested missionary work because he feels that, "the missionary aspect has always been an integral part of the apostolic of the Dominican order; right from the very beginning, the order concerned itself with those areas of the world where the Church was not yet plantated."

Father expressed the wish that the order be given recognition in his decision to apply for a missionary post. He stated that Providence College has sacrificed its own self-interest in encouraging such missionary activity; "this is an expression of the college's interest and love in people and especially Africans in my case."

Father Connors went on to say that "this (the college's encouragement) indicates Providence College's attempt to give something of itself to the world."

Saint Thomas Aquinas Seminary was founded in 1963 upon the request of Kenya's hierarchy. It is a six year seminary, two years of philosophy and four years of theology. The seminarians have had two years of a college education at a minor seminary before attending the Dominican Institute. There are approximately 33 students attending the seminary and it is staffed by eight Dominican priests.

Father Connors, a graduate of Providence College in 1945, has been a faculty member of St. Joseph College, Cincinnati, Ohio. As a member of Providence College's faculty, he taught sociology and theology at the same time assuming the duties of Assistant Director of Gunam Hall.

Father looks forward with anticipation to his new assignment at the Kenyan seminary. The length of his stay in Kenya depends upon the wishes of his Superior however. Father would enjoy a permanent assignment at the seminary. From his talks with others, who have been there, he received the impression that the Dominicans are warmly accepted by the people and government of Kenya. Father Connors sees as his main problem his identifying himself with the Africans and not to identify them with America; "for this is an African Church and not an American one." He stated that his stay at Providence College has been "wonderful"; due in no small measure to the cooperation of the student body.

Father pointed out that there are two priests from Providence College in Nairobi at the present time, Rev. Dennis Kane, O.P., and Joseph Desmond, O.P. He also stated that a graduate of the class of '65, Kenneth Daily, is teaching English in Kenya. Fr. Benjamin Fay, O.P., returned last year from Nairobi as a professor of philosophy here at the college.

Letters To The Editor

To Mr. Dawber, Jr., '68

I willingly accept and relish the challenge to support black independence, although, perhaps, not in the light of recent news from the front line in Ghana, Burundi, which you stimulated in your letter to the editor. I believe one of the major miseries which is known with narrow and shallow perspective if confined to recent news of other African nations and thus renders a very subjective analysis of the situation.

You say you both deplore and fully understand the reasons why the Rhodesian government broke from the Crown. It seems, here, and as you continued in your letter, an explicit display of ambivalence. Your co-existing ideas of deploring the Rhodesian government's actions and defending the Rhodesian government's actions seem evidently incongruous at best.

Your statement is that the "policy is unfair, in the short run, but will in the long run far outweigh the benefits of a black-dominated country," agree with the policy's being unfair and admit that the existence of this "unfairness" will proliferate at such a speed that the Rebe Regime will superimpose its every dictate upon the people, the policy which has already pledged herself "in providing the utmost assistance to the people of Rhodesia." This joint commitment could lead to our serious involvement in a "bloody" foolish idea. If the Rebel Regime were squashed, there still is the possibility of a "bloody" war which is sure to be the only possibility of a "bloody" foolish idea. If the Rebel Regime would come politically attuned to the many diverse ramifications of the front page coverage of the Rhodesian situation.

You say that the White governments are the only thing keeping the Blacks from killing each other. I contend that the White government has been responsible through "behind the scenes activity" in planning and nurturing the seeds of revolt and insurrection and have thus been responsible for the carnage of Black lives.

To the Editor: Concerning your editorial, Donu Rules: How Strict? I find mine in personal accord with your statements. What I have experienced in general time on campus, however, is that the student of Freedom from responsibility in a negative way. Freedom and responsibility are not antithetical. Freedom, in the psychologically mature sense, is freedom to choose freedom from. As long as the mentality of freedom-from is operative we shall probably continue to experience the negative thinking and thus immature thinking.

To have any voice or instrumental control over the political and economic condition of the Rhodesia government.

I strongly believe this is not the first time that Her Majesty's government has fallen into a trap; however, it is one of the innumerable trials of her. Whether you think Her Majesty knows what is best for her subjects or not is the political question for it is the Prime Minister and his Cabinet that formulate, execute, and answer Brighth domestic and foreign policy, and not Her Majesty.

Maybe political and policy leanings should not fall for rush world opinion, but it must seriously contemplate and give its utmost attention, as it does, to the English public opinion, which has a deep concern about Rhodesia for many reasons, two of which are kinsmen and interests in industry and business.

You say to crush the revolt is a "bloody" foolish idea. If you mean that this policy is a "bloody" foolish idea, then I agree with you. However, there is still the possibility of a "bloody" war which is sure to be the only possibility of a "bloody" foolish idea. If the Rebel Regime were squashed, there still is the possibility of a "bloody" war which is sure to be the only possibility of a "bloody" foolish idea. If the Rebel Regime would come politically attuned to the many diverse ramifications of the front page coverage of the Rhodesian situation.

I contend that the White government has been responsible through "behind the scenes activity" in planning and nurturing the seeds of revolt and insurrection and have thus been responsible for the carnage of Black lives.

Other African nations have been aided by Britain in setting up home rule: Ghana (1957) Nigeria (1960) Tanganyika (1961) Kenya (1963). Rhodesia, however, does not want the Blacks to have any voice or instrumental control over the political and economic condition of the Rhodesia government.

To conclude my challenge to your letter I surmise Mr. Dawber Lurched into this instead of Researching into it.

The Company's first engine, the Wasp, took to the air on May 5, 1926. Within a year the Wasp set its first world record and went on to smash existing records and set standards for both land and seaplanes for years to come, carrying airframes and pilots higher, farther, and faster than they had ever gone before.

In recent years, planes powered by Pratt & Whitney Aircraft have gone on to set new standards of performance in much the same way as the Wasp had done in the 1920's. The 727 and DC-10 are indicative of the new family of short-to-medium range jetliners which are powered by the highly successful JT8D turbofans. Examples of current military utilization are the JSF-powered Mach 3 YF-12A which recently established four world aviation records and the advanced TF30-powered F-111 variable-geometry fighter aircraft.

James Bond: The Man

He was patting on his favorite cologne. Then the buzzer sounded. Room service—dressed up as a French maid—was the most gorgeous creature he'd seen in some time. He remained like other men to rush for the Walther in his shoulder holster. He didn't recognize her, you refuse to let others take advantage of your good nature. Show decisiveness in all situations. According to the screen's Sean Connery who is James Bond to millions of women, "If one of the appeals Bond has for women is that he is decisive—crueI, even. By their recklessness, and so should you. Don't be afraid to take risks to advance your goals, but be sure they're calculated risks.

Remember that style makes the man. Agent 007 treats himself well. Good hotels, gourmet foods and wines, important cars, are his way of life—his trade-mark. Why not cultivate your tastes too? Dare to have habits; a certain wine always at your table; an offbeat brand of cigar, the aroma of a special cologne. Always remember women prefer a man of taste. And people too take you at your face value. If you act as though you're entitled to the best, its more than likely that's what you will get.

Always be cool. This is really the "ABC" of the 007 hero. James Bond is above all, self possessed. Keep your temper at all times—Secret Agent Bond may indulge in a flying tackle, but he never flies off the handle. You must resist the temptation to boast—let your actions speak for you. They'll say flattering things, if you've learned the secrets of Bond's appeal.

With a little practice, in fact, you may find it easier than you think to establish a firm "bond" between yourself and the 007 hero image.

For millions of men (and women), the James Bond image means adventure and excitement. A symbol of masculinity, 007, personified unceasing by Sean Connery, is probably today's most idolized hero. What makes an 007 hero? You may be closer to his image right now than you may think.

The U. S. said nothing and the

This is the indifference for which the John Birch Society

Again Bunker reaffirmed the worries of the Birch Society life aspect seemingly to become much less important in the United States. His view of the Korean Conflict, for ex-government didn't want to win

they let innocent young men

Once upon a time, there was a "basketball player" who was on a team with an internationally-renowned coach. And this "basketball player" raped all the benefits which accrued from such an association, such as publicity. Meanwhile, there was another player on a near-by campus who had proved himself to be more versatile and was objectively judged to be a better player. But this player did not receive the newspaper coverage which the other "player" received. Many seemed to think that this was an injustice, and yet who could argue with the mass media?

But one trip to New York cured the disease. Jimmy Walker had to prove it on his own, without the facile assistance of a well-known coach. But prove it he did. He played some of his best basketball in the big city during the Festival and he dazzled the eyes of many of the writers seated around the court who had really never given Jimmy much thought.

Who is to blame for this injustice? Why should a star as talented as Jimmy be subject to a constant testing of his abilities? Publicity belongs with the professionals, and I for one am not in a position to know the proper channels for distribution of such information. My responsibility rests with the campus denizens, and yet I believe that many of us in the field learned much about the various angles involved because of this experience.

But I do not wish to accuse in this article, merely to praise. A new syllable has been added to the basketball alphabet, and it is my belief that the "Big W" will etch a long and illustrious history before he removes himself from basketball circles.

INSIDE STUFF: Rumors start easily enough and spread quickly. But many of them should be dispelled, and this includes the possibility of a certain varsity player returning to the eligibility list next semester. According to one official, this is a remote idea. That is bad news to any Friar fan . . . And to continue in the same vein, I have good reason to believe that my reporters will have fewer hockey players to write about come the second semester, unless some scholastic inequities are resolved . . . By the way, I pay very well for tips such as these . . . And lastly, I would like to thank the six girls from Albertus Magnus College who did such a remark-

Col. Bunker then uttered the fact that the John Birch Society would like to have one hunddred thousand in membership, and eventually one thousand in each congressional district. He also touched on their media's of communication. The one official communications was the monthly bulletin. The "American Opinion" is a periodic magazine, and "Review of the News" is a weekly summary.

Col. Bunker then ended the lecture with a question and answer period which proved colorful and somewhat bene-

Al Hayes tossed in 35 points to lead the frosh basketball team to a 91-73 win last night against the URI cubs. The Friars had been down 17 points at one time, but came back to win. Hampered by poor ball handling and a cold shooting night from both the floor and the line, the Providence College freshmen basketball team was defeated by the URI frosh from a score of 57-72 in Amherst last Thursday night. Bill Judkins led the Friars scorers with 22 points. Two nights before, the young Friars defeated the Brown froshmen 85-73 with Andy Clary having the scoring honors with 24 points, two more than teammate Bill Judkins. This game marked the first appearance of Jim Marquis, a 6-2 forward, idled since the start of the season with a leg injury. The return of this fine shooter, combined with the scoring and rebounding of Clary and Judkins and the fine play-making of Bill Harrington and Al Hayes, will give depth to the forces of coach Dave Gavitt.

This year feels that his boys have put a lot of effort into the game, but lack of experience in playing together and the difficulties in learning the coaching defense have been responsible of their defeats. Costly mistakes in the fundamentals of the game and frequent turning over of the ball haven't helped either. Coach Gavitt feels that the team has great potential and if they can play their games, they could beat anyone.

Friar Pucksters Skate to Win; Down Bowdoin Easily!

By Tom Hutton

Playing their first game at the R. I. Auditorium in three weeks, the Friar sextet got back in the winners' column last night with a big 7-1 win over a strong Bowdoin sextet. Although the Friars lost to Yale by a score of 3-2, during their Thanksgiving break from the Arena, the pucksters continued to be flexed in Brown's rink. With this win, they dropped three straight games on the road.

One to Brown's 3-1, another to the University of Minnesota-Duluth 6-0, and finally to the University of Montreal 3-0.

Against Bowdoin the pucksters began to flex the offensive muscle of which they are capable and which has always been a mark of a Friar hockey team. With all lines scoring the Friars showed their best offensive balance of the season, and led by their highly-touted sophomore line they bunched home 3 goals in the first period, 3 goals in the second period and 1 goal in the final. They took a total number of 21 shots on goal for the game.

Over at Brown the rinkmen have played 9 games in the last 18 days. The team has won once in three games and have won of six games played in the New England Invitational Tournament. This year the play of goals and defense has been especially good with only one thing Friar fans had to have the loss of Jim Riordan. In those three games Campbell stopped 96 shots, many of these being of the spectacular variety as he continually frustrated opponents with his ability to get out in front of them on break-aways.

Coach Zello Toppazzini blames lack of ice time and an injury to center Andy Branch - and center not been to show the best of his game this season, his team's poor showing at Brown.

"We played as well as could be expected with the little ice time we had over the Christmas break," said Andy (Branch). "When Andy (Branch) got back, we were able to put a sophomore, Dana Maus, in at center. It takes time to get into a game, and we're still playing under game conditions it's going to take some time for us to get back to form."

The Friars next game will be Friday night in Waterville Maine against Colby. The White Mules have a young and aggressive team and should give the Friars all they can handle. This game the Sextet will take a two-week break for exams before returning to the ice for a rematch with the Eastern States at Braintree, Mass.
