DES Sponsors Catholic Liberal In PC Lecture

John Leo, associate editor of Commonweal and self-styled Catholic liberal, lectured on "The Laymen in the Church" last Thursday night in the Guild Room of Alumni Hall. Mr. Leo's lecture was sponsored by the Delta Epsilon Sigma Honor Fraternity.

Having pointed out that the term "laymen" is an obsolescent word, Mr. Leo gave a history of the laymen in the Church and explained why "laymen" is becoming extinct. He noted that the Protestant Reformation set the hierarchy of the Church against the laymen since the laymen were responsible for the mass rebellion. Also, he said that from the Reformation until Pope John, Catholic theology seemed to be a reaction against the laymen or the attitudes of the modern world.

Today Mr. Leo sees a greater participation of laymen in the governing of the Church. He thinks that the Church is becoming a bit more democratic since it hears the ideas of the laymen. For this more democratic thinking Mr. Leo gave the reason of a more charismatic attitude in the Church. Charism is the thinking that the gifts of the Holy Spirit are distributed in an indeterminate way so that no one is positive of the receivers of them.

The second part of the lecture was devoted to the thoughts of Harvey Cox, author of the ultra-liberal Secular City. Mr. Leo described Cox as one who is in favor of the Church embracing the secular world. Mr. Leo said that neither he nor Harvey were sure if embracing the secular world would solve the many problems of the Church, but many reasons for this proposal

Cadet Honors Club Announces Award

The Cadet Officers Honor Club has presented its first annual award to the Dillon Club of Providence College. The award, a $25 savings bond presented to Dillon Club President Bill Struck, was given in recognition of the great strides the club has made during the past year. A similar award will be given out by the COHC in years to come.

The COHC also has continued the tradition of orientating juniors in preparation for summer camp. Last week, under the direction of Frank Capecci and Kev Phelan, the club sponsored its first of a two week indoctrination period. Instruction included bedmaking, rifl stacking, and a lecture on locker displays.

A second phase will be held in the future centering around a question and answer period concerning summer camp.

John Leo, associate editor of Commonweal, spoke to a large audience in the Guild Room last Thursday.

Reverend M. Iakovos Scheduled to Speak On Orthodox Church

The Most Rev. Metropolitan Iakovos of Philadelphia of the Eastern Orthodox Church will lecture at Providence College Monday evening, March 21.

He will discuss "The Roman Catholic and Orthodox Relationship: Theology and Experience" at 8 p.m. in the Harkins Hall auditorium. His talk will be the fifth in the current Robert J. Slavin Lecture Series.

The ecumenical series, named in the memory of the Very Rev. Robert J. Slavin, sixth president of Providence College, consists of six lectures featuring prominent speakers from different faiths. The theme for the series is "Search for Understanding."

Metropolitan Iakovos, who came to the United States in 1964 after being exiled by the government of Turkey, was born in Greece in 1920. Following graduation from schools in Greece and Turkey, he was ordained Deacon in 1942 and served as Archdeacon and preacher in the Archdiocese of Cacidon.

In 1946 he was appointed secretary to the Holy Synod and later was appointed chief secretary to the Holy Synod by His Holiness Patriarch Athenagoras.

Reverend Iakovos is now a member of the Holy Synod and of its committees on ecumenical affairs, doctrine and canonical law. He participated in the Second Assembly of the World Council of Churches in Evanston, Ill., and is now a member of the executive and central committees of that body. He also participated in the First Pan Orthodox Conference at Rhodes in 1963 which discussed the problem of a dialogue with the Roman Catholic Church.

Kenneth Shea Named Dillon Club President

Kenneth J. Shea, '67, has been elected president of the Dillon Club. Unopposed, he received all of the 210 votes cast by 55.1% of the club's members Monday.

Joseph Pilla, '68, received 105 votes and defeated Frank Esposito, '68, 103 votes, in the race for the vice-president's post. Two voters abstained.

Elected secretary was Raymond Shawcross, '68, who also ran unopposed. The treasurer's office was won by Robert McClanaghan, '68, who defeated Robert Baker, '67.

All class representatives were unopposed. Elected for the Juniors were Joseph Clifford and John Waycott. Sophomore representatives are Thomas Fogarty and Geoffrey Rob. Frank Ferranti and Martin Madden are freshman representatives.

Mr. Shea, a major in history education who is married, served as the club's vice-president in its first year of operation, last year, and again this year.

"The same policies set up last year by William Struck (outgoing president) will be carried out and some new policy will be introduced to the club in the near future," the new president said. He declined to comment on the nature of the changes.

Mr. Pilla served as club secretary this year and Mr. Esposito as a representative.

The new officers announced an assembly open to all commuter students to be held March 22 at 1:50 p.m. in Harkins Hall auditorium, at which commuter students running for Student Congress will speak.

They said a measure was passed at a recent club meeting, calling for such support of the commuter candidates of congress elections.

The Dillon Club, whose purpose is the provision of campus and off-campus activities for day students, is moderated by the Rev. Francis R. Prout, O.P.

A boat ride on April 23 and a dance on May 21 will conclude this year's club activities. Plans for a Hawaiian luau have been advanced to next fall because of a conflict with other weekend activities.

Fr. Hogan Announces Lighting Installation

The library's electric bill has been decreased and the power of lighting more than doubled with the installation of new fluorescent lights recently, the Rev. Ernest A. Hogan, O.P., librarian, has announced.

The new lighting system cost over $2,000 and was suggested to Father Hogan during the first semester at a meeting of the Student-Administration Committee.

The old lamps were the best available when they were installed about 20 years ago, said Father Hogan, and he remembers employees of a large electric company taking light readings then before suggesting a suitable system.

"But when we had the old lights measured recently," said the librarian, "they were found very inadequate according to modern standards." He considers the new system "one of the best investments the library has ever made."

Replacement of the old lights would have been made during the Christmas recess, but the order was too large, to be filled so soon, Father Hogan was told by the electric company. It was completed last week after about six weeks' work.

In a formal statement Father Hogan said: "I wish to sincerely thank the members of the library staff, the faculty, and the student body for their patience,"

Correction

In an article on the Dean's List that appeared in last week's Cowl it was stated that the purpose of the new marking system was to decrease the number of students achieving the Dean's List. This was an error on our part.

The new marking system was inaugurated to eliminate some of the inequalities of the old system and to provide a fairer judgment of a student's academic achievement.

Socialist N. Thomas To Speak at College

Norman Thomas, six-time socialist candidate for the Presidency of the United States, will speak on Tuesday, March 22, at 8 p.m., in Harkins Hall auditorium. Mr. Thomas' topic "What Are The Answers" will deal with the development of socialism in the United States.

He was born in Marion, Ohio, the son of a Presbyterian minister. In 1901 he entered Bucknell University in Lewisburg, Pa., and in the following year transferred to Princeton University from which he graduated as valedictorian in 1905.

After graduation he worked at the Spring Street Settlement in New York City at a salary of $500 per year. In 1907 he became assistant pastor of Christ Church in a New York City tenement district. In 1910 he married Frances Violet Stewart. After attending Union Theological Seminary, he was ordained and given the American Parish in East Harlem, where he remained for seven years. He has five living children, fifteen grandchildren, and three great grandchildren. His two sons were with the American Field Service in Africa during World War II, and when the United States entered the war, his younger son joined the Navy.

During World War I, Norman Thomas took a definite anti-war stand and was active in the American Union Against Militarism. In 1918 he resigned from his missionary parish because its supporters were withdrawing their aid from it on the ground of his socialist and anti-war activity. He founded and edited The World Tomorrow and was one of the organizers of the Civil Liberties Bureau, which be-

NORMAN THOMAS

During the next few years Mr. Thomas was active in the Socialist Party, took part in many free speech fights, and in many other struggles in support of the rights of workers to organize. In this connection he won several important victories in the courts for civil liberties—the most significant of which was a dramatic free speech fight in the Passaic textile strike of 1926, when he was arrested for defying the attempt of the sheriff of Bergen County to establish a permanent condition of riot law.

Norman Thomas challenged Paul McNutt's "Hoosier Hitlerism" (that is, his government under military law of Sullivan and Vigo Counties, Ind.) by speaking at a mass meeting in

Editorially Speaking More on Dean's List

In last week's issue of "The Cowl" there appeared an article headlined "Father Lennon Reveals New Grading System." It was stated that the new system of plus grades (B+, C+, etc.), contrary to the hopes of the Committee on Studies, "has actually resulted in an overall 2.5% increase in the number of students making the dean's list." Father Lennon seemed to object to the fact that 18.2% of the student body was appointed to the coveted circle (including 24.8% of the senior class) and used examples from other schools to illustrate, what he consider, large number of students on the dean's list.

We of the "Cowl" have a few objections to the article. To begin with, the tone of the article seemed to indicate a direct cut into the intelligence and drive of the PC students. Having finished reading the article, one received the impression that the only reason one made the dean's list the past semester was because of easy teachers or the new marking system. Somehow, as students of the College ourselves, we cannot agree with such a statement. An increase in the dean's list does not necessarily mean that teachers have "eased up" as the old cliché goes—it may also mean that more work was done by students who "deserved" to make the dean's list.

Another objection we have to the article lies in the manner of its presentation. PC was compared to two schools with a lower percentage of dean's list students, yet we do not see how these two schools alone could be indicative of a growing trend in limiting dean's list students. What about Brown, Pembroke, or RISD? Surely their percentage cannot be lower than PC's.

As far as the new marking system itself is concerned, we believe that it represents a marked advance over any system used thus far at Providence College. There is an immense difference between the student with a 79 average and the one who is somewhere around the 70 percentage. The plus system does not do away with the injustice completely (only the "point system" which we favor could do this), but it is at least a step in the right direction. Any thoughts about going back and reviving the past system would certainly be a mistake which would hurt students and teachers alike.

Senior Suggestion Again

Last week, the Cowl offered a "Suggestion for Seniors." To say the least, a mild furor from all camps has arisen. The editorial suggested the possibility of a dinner at the Senior Prom; and encouraged the calling of a class assembly to discuss this and other suggestions—so that all the seniors would be satisfied that they are having the best possible Week-end.

Since then, we have been pelted with suggestions from all sides—some not printable. Many members of the senior class have offered their ideas as to what could be done to make a more successful finale to our college life. These have run the gamut from a post-midnight buffet at the dance to junking the whole thing. However, the most vociferous responses have come from the class administrative quarter. It seems they have taken offense to the mere "suggestion."

They claim that a call went out for volunteers; but there was almost a total lack of response. Funny—I've searched the campus—every stall—and have not yet been able to find such a call. The only Senior announcement was dated November 30. Admittedly, I merited it only a cursory glance, but even here I found no call. Even if it was there, I hardly think that an announcement would sufficiently generate the spirits of enough Seniors to bring them out in droves.

Now is the time, for all who care, to act—before it is too late. We encourage all the Seniors to take an active part in their week-end and to help lift the burden of organizing such an affair from the shoulders of our class officers. Further, we encourage the calling of a class assembly so all can be informed of the Week-end's progress (?) to date.

Around the Campi

Big Rapids, Mich.—(ACP)—A survey conducted at Ferris State college found nearly half of the respondents admitting they had cheated in some way in the course of their college careers.

The survey, taken by a marketing research class, revealed that scholastic dishonesty—inclusing such acts as copying during an exam, purchasing exams, or lying about absence—was most pronounced among upperclassmen (44.2%), and especially among seniors (51%).

Respondents holding a 3.0 or higher grade point average displayed the least tendency for cheating, while the 2.0 to 2.5 group was found most prone to cheat.

Los Angeles, Calif.—(I.P.)—If a professor of California State College at Los Angeles wants to know what his students really think of him as a teacher, he can find out by purchasing a student publication called "Prof-ile."

This document, which sells in the campus bookstore for 30 cents per copy, will tell a professor if students think his lectures are thought provoking, if the lectures are based on course material, or if tests are fair.

Although other universities and colleges have produced professor evaluation surveys in the past, the CSLA publication represents the first time students and faculty have worked together to compile such a document. In fact, all questionnaires utilized in the surveys were actually distributed in the classroom and with the professor's permission.

Supervised by a group of student leaders, "Prof-ile" was devised, according to student body president Feliz Gutierrez, "to help serious students get the most out of their education by carefully selecting professors and not having to rely primarily on the campus grapevine."

How do the professors take to the critique? Most say they are pleased. Said one: "No professor should fear student opinion. Both students and professors can receive much benefit from this survey." Another: "This is an excellent idea." Only one responded: "I think this kind of questionnaire is uncalled for and I don't care to cooperate with you in it."

With the help of psychology and English department faculty, students contacted professors and sought permission to distribute questionnaires in the classroom. This procedure, it was decided, would provide three improvements over former methods of evaluation:

1. The distribution method guarantees that each student truly had the class with the professor about whom he comments;

2. The environmental conditions under which the questionnaires are completed are nearly identical;

3. A larger minimum response per professor is guaranteed.

Each student was asked to rate an individual instructor on eight points, ranging from "To what degree is the professor concerned about you as a student..." to "In comparison to that of other professors, the amount of work is..."

MEMO—

FROM THE EDITOR

Last Monday's Dillon Club elections provided an interesting picture of the situation of the day-hops on the PC campus. Slightly more than one-half of the membership, 55.1% to be precise, voted in the election. This is a rather poor showing, to say the least. Unfortunately, this is not an isolated case. All too often, many of the day-hops on this campus are content to let campus extra-curricular activities pass them by. This is not necessarily a flat condemnation of the day-hops. The apathetic situation that exists is not entirely of their own making.

A basic problem is the lack of facilities which would attract day-hops to the campus after class hours. I might add that Fr. Haas is keenly aware of this problem and its solution is one consideration in the ten-year development program. It is fairly obvious that with a decent library and, at a later time, a student union, day-hops would have good reason to remain on campus after class hours. Day-hops would then become more an integral part of the College. However, this is all in the future. An immediate solution can be found only by the day-hops themselves. It is up to them to be more involved in the goings-on around this campus. And it is the Dillon Club which is the perfect vehicle for this involvement.

It might be advisable for the Dillon Club to initiate a study, in cooperation with the Carolan Club, to determine the feasibility of close cooperation between these two organizations. I am not recommending a merger of the two groups by any means. Both serve a necessary and specific function, a function which is at times quite distinct. But these two clubs do not always run at cross-purposes and with close cooperation a major step could be taken toward integrating, if I may use that word in this context, the mass of day-students into the general stream of campus activity. Such cooperation could also help eliminate the undercurrent of bad feeling between the dormies and the day-hops. This animosity is helpful to no one, not the dormies, not the day-hops, and, least of all, not the College.

Vietnam Combat Veteran Joins ROTC Staff at PC

One of the more recent additions to the faculty of Providence College is in the person of Captain Samuel L. Lemmon, Jr., who is presently the ROTC Senior Class Instructor. Captain Lemmon, who hails from South Carolina, speaks with a noticeable Southern accent which underlines his deep insight into the problems confronting our nation today. Though his appearance denotes a pride in his uniform and his accomplishments, Captain Lemmon's manner is more befitting a studious professor rather than the tough airborne-ranger that he is.

A West Point graduate (class of '56), Captain Lemmon's first duty station was at Fort Carson, Colorado, where he was with the 9th Infantry. A three-year tour in Germany was followed by a twelve-month stay with the 1st Infantry at Fort Riley, Kansas. During his assignment with the 1st Infantry, Captain Lemmon received the Army Commendation Medal for his work as a Company Commander.

After spending some time learning Vietnamese in California, the Captain embarked for Viet Nam in December of 1964. He served as a Battalion Advisor and Assistant G-3 (Operations) Advisor for the 21st Infantry Division of the Army of the Republic of Viet Nam (ARVN). As a member of the Military Assistance Command Viet Nam (MACV), Captain Lemmon distinguished himself both as an advisor and as a soldier, winning the Combat Infantryman's Badge, the Bronze Star for Valor, the Bronze Star with the First Oak Leaf for meritorious service, the Air Medal for meritorious achievement while flying 25 hours (under fire). Besides the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry for Valor, the Captain also holds the Medal of Honor (1st Class) for meritorious service, the highest medal that an American can be given by the Vietnamese government. For wounds sustained in battle, Captain Lemmon holds the Purple Heart.

The Captain speaks about the hardships he witnessed in Viet Nam, especially in the Mekong Delta where the 21st Infantry Division (ARVN) is located. But he emphasizes the toughness of the Vietnamese people and their army. He speaks respectfully of the "good little trooper" whom he advised, and slept, and ate with for six months. When asked about their spirit, the Captain reminded the reporter that the Vietnamese have been fighting for 20 years. Whereas the American knows that he only has to serve for so many months, the Vietnamese' future is a vague blur of "tomorrow's" with more fighting and only a hope for an end that is not yet in sight.

"My division (21st ARVN) operated in the southern Delta. . . It is the most outstanding in Viet Nam." The Captain underlines the fact that the 21st Division is taking the war to the Viet Cong, that the fighting is done by the Vietnamese themselves, and that they are really winning and securing the vast Delta region. The 21st Division does not need American troop units to aid it, but it does use American equipment, especially the helicopters. Most of the division's operations are air-mobile, consisting of walking troops with two to three battalions of helo-borne units.

Captain Lemmon had little contact with the Pacification Program but he did see signs of its results and he knows its worth. "Through pacification is where we will win the war. We must deny the V.C. access to food, supplies, and popular support." The Captain noted that emphasis on pacification programs is growing and that coverage into the "grass roots" areas is expanding.

Captain Lemmon now resides in Old Smithfield Village, Greenville, with his wife and four children. He requested an ROTC assignment upon his return from Viet Nam and he likes the "stability" here. When asked if he had formed any impressions about the Brigade at Providence College, the Captain said that he was "favorably impressed" by the cadets and he is looking forward to working with the members of the Army Instructor Group here at the college.

Ring Design Was Presented To Sophomores at Meeting

The design of the ring for the Class of 1968 was presented to a majority of class members recently in Harkins Hall auditorium by representatives of Dieges & Clust of Providence, the contracted manufacturers.

Mr. Austin Crawford, PC '40, sales representative for the local company, and Mr. George A. Flynn, designer, spoke to the students concerning the evolution of the suggested design and ordering procedures.

Using an overhead projector,

Mr. Flynn explained to an audience of about 500 how the ring committee of the class arrived at its final choice.

In preliminary remarks Mr. Crawford praised members of the committee for their devotion. "They have logged more than 63 hours, sacrificing valuable time," he said. "You can sense their dedication to the class. You can taste it."

Orders for the rings will be taken in Alumni Hall March 23, 24 and 25.

George Flynn, designer of the ring for the Class of '68, explains the evolution of the final choice to the sophomores in Harkins Hall.

As a result of this meeting, the right to picket was restored and ultimately military law was abandoned. He was one of the first in the country to call attention to the plight of the sharecroppers of the South and helped to organize the Southern Tenant Farmers' Union. In 1935 he was leader in action against the Ku Klux Klan and the Tampa, Fla., police, who were responsible for the murder of Joseph Shoemaker by flogging. Even better known is his share in the dramatic and successful struggle against the Frank (I am the law) Hague machine on the issue of free speech in Jersey City, N. J.

In World War II, Norman Thomas actively fought for a peace based on the cooperation of free peoples and rejection both of vengeance and imperialism. Since then he has campaigned for world disarmament, with international control and inspection, applying to criticism of the Soviet Union the same standards of value that he applies to his own country.

He has run for many offices in addition to the Presidency on the Socialist Party ticket, including the offices of Mayor of the City of New York and Governor of the State of New York.

Mr. Thomas is chairman of the Post War World Council and of the Labor Research Institute. He is a member of many committees, among them the League for Industrial Democracy, the Workers Defense League, the National Committee for a Sane Nuclear Policy, the Inter-American Association for Democracy and Freedom, and Sharecroppers Fund. He is an honorary co-chairman of Iberica Publishing Co. He is a frequent speaker on radio and television programs. He writes a column twice a week and is a member of the American Newspaper Guild.

On The Aisle

By L. BRUCE PORTER

Last Saturday evening the Rhode Island Civic Chorale, under the direction of Dr. Louis Pichierri, presented one of the most impressive concerts by a local group within recent memory. A large and responsive audience was in attendance at Veterans Memorial Auditorium for this performance. The program, which was the chorale's first attempt at opera-in-concert, consisted of Mascagni's Cavalleria Rusticana and Boito's Mefistofele: Prologo. This was a formidable program, indeed.

In presenting the prologue from Boito's Mefistofele, Dr. Pichierri continued his practice of bringing before the public new and provocative music. In the past he presented Rhode Island premieres of Orff's Carmina Burana and a long-lost work of Vivaldi. This opera by Boito is especially interesting in that it has never attained basic repertoire status, though it is infinitely more profound than Gounod's Faust and his equally appealing and beautiful melodies and choruses. Opera devotees have always expected it to eventually replace Faust, and it is still frequently performed in the opera houses of Italy and South America. In itself the prologue is a tour de force of musical beauty and dramatic intensity. It is "sung in the heavens" where heavenly and infernal forces are contrasted in music of overpowering dimensions befitting the awesome spiritual struggle at hand.

Boito's masterpiece spoke forth with resounding significance in this performance. The choruses were properly balanced and delicately blended. The work of the Rhode Island Boy Choir was excellent in this number. The solo bass, Nicholas De Marzo, gave a very pleasing interpretation to the awesome portrayal of Mefistofele that the score demands. His voice was powerful and dark, and his style was refined. Even the orchestra was excellent in this work, and Dr. Pichierri had everything in absolute control.

Bio Club Holds Social Activity

The Albertus Magnus Club is sponsoring a masquerade dance on Friday, March 25, at the Hope Council, K. of C., in South Providence. The caper is the fifth one held this year by the Biology club. The affair, the theme of which is "Mask and Flask," will run from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m.

This dance promises to be especially interesting with the added diversion—only couples with a costume of some sort will be permitted in the dance. The couple with the most original costume will be awarded the door prize.

Entertainment will be provided again by "The Rogues" and refreshments are included in the nominal fee of $3.00.

Tickets are available from the officers and the social chairmen of the club.

The Mascagni one act opera is an old chestnut whose performance requires considerable effort and talent if it is to sound vibrant and alive. The power and beauty of their voices and their fine dramatic portrayals made Rina Telli (Santuzza) and Giovanni Consiglio (Turiddu) the truly outstanding performers of the evening. The chorale did an equally splendid job here, but there were some rather rough moments on the orchestra's part.

Dr. Pichierri is to be praised for the spirit with which he attacked this herculean task and produced such truly enjoyable results. This was a most memorable evening. The Civic Chorale has grown in quantity and quality over the years under the capable direction of Dr. Pichierri, and it stands now as one of the most significant assets of the Rhode Island cultural community. It deserves the patronage of all those interested in the future of the arts.

long-suffering and charity during the period when the new lights were being installed."

Use of the library during installation decreased fifty per cent, he said; and the users were unusually loud. Indicating that he hoped the increased disturbances were due only to "understandable circumstances surrounding the installation," Father Hogan requested that "all remember that the tradition of the PC library—'Silence Reigns'—is a policy that has obtained graces from God."

Another effect of the same Student-Administration meeting was the increase in hours of operation of the library which was begun earlier in the first semester. Action followed a suggestion at the meeting that some restriction be placed upon the traditional unrestricted use of books made by all faculty members. Faculty members who wish an indefinite loan now are requested to order duplicate copies for availability to the students.

Newport Festival

George Wein, producer of the Newport Festivals—Folk, Jazz, and the new Opera Festival—announced a new ticket policy for all three festivals. A 20% discount will be given on all tickets for all festivals purchased by mail prior to May 15th. The list price tickets for Jazz and Folk will be $3.50, $4.50 and $5.50; for Opera, $3.50, $5.50 and $7.50. For further information write the Newport Jazz, Opera, or Folk Festival: Newport, R. I.

New York's famed Metropolitan Opera will join the Newport Festivals in presenting America's first major summer Opera Festival. The Opera Festival will present four major operas in concert form in the five day span of July 12th thru July 16th, with the full orchestra, and chorus and stars of the New York Company. The programs to be announced shortly will include a unique series of musical and technical workshops.

were given. Since the Church institutions were irrelevant to many, Mr. Leo argued that the Church's notions of order must be seriously modified. He also said that in this very secular world people judge truth by efficacy not by metaphysics. Mr. Leo said that the typical American Catholic is "fed up with the abstract, idealistic, truth, metaphysics and that they want to know what is now workable even in the area of truth.

In the question period, which was an "harangue" as Mr. Leo expected, the lecturer suggested that the role of the Church is primarily to teach and to free. Reasons for this are that the Catholic social institutions cannot be a factor in the world's problems since federal institutions are more capable to provide material needs and that the whole idea of the Church as a social worker is left over from the temporal idea of the Church in the Middle Ages.

Because of Mr. Leo's poor style, he made a weak impression on much of his audience, but the lecture itself did create some serious thinking.

Students' Blood Sent to Vietnam

The Political Union of Providence College collected over 190 pints of blood yesterday for U. S. armed forces in Viet Nam.

James T. McKenna, '66, chairman of the Viet Nam Blood Drive, announced that 50 of the donors were from the ROTC's Pershing Rifles and Special Forces groups.

Blood was taken in an American Red Cross vehicle. The Red Cross has been contracted by the Department of Defense to assist in blood donations "specifically for the use of forces in Viet Nam," according to Vincent Marottoli, assistant chairman of the PC drive.

The blood drive was suggested to the Union's executive board earlier by its president, Jeremy Lord, '66. Each donor gave one pint.

Pershing Rifles Hold Rifle Firing Exercise

On Saturday morning, March 12, Company K-12, Pershing Rifles, held a firing of the M-1 Rifle. After leaving P.C. at 8:30, the Company moved to the Wanskuck Rod and Gun Club on Route 146. There the members fired live ammunition for familiarization with the M-1, a semi-automatic weapon which was used during World War II and the Korean War.

Each member had the chance to fire for score and for effect. Firing for score involved single rounds; for effect, each firer used an eight-round clip. Each man fired approximately 35 rounds.

Despite the snow, the members did well in their scores. For many it was the first time they had ever fired live ammunition with a military weapon.

Along with the Company, under the command of Cadet Capt. Michael D. Miggins, were Captain Paul F. Fitzpatrick, Advisor, and Staff Sergeant Donal A. Fahey, NCO Advisor.

SOPHOMORE MEN:

Want to be a leader and double your chances for success in life? You can, by earning both a degree and an Army officer's commission at the same time... even though you may not have taken ROTC training in your first two years!

Through a new program, you can be commissioned as a Second Lieutenant after taking two years of Army ROTC training while you complete your studies for a college degree. You can qualify for this program by attending a special six-week summer training camp after your sophomore year and then completing the ROTC Advanced Course in your junior and senior years of college.

Here's what ROTC training and an officer's commission will do for you:

- It will qualify you to fulfill your military obligation as an officer.
- You will learn to organize, motivate, and lead others.
- You will develop leadership qualities that many college men miss—self-discipline, physical stamina, poise, bearing, the acceptance of responsibility and other qualities that contribute to success in either a civilian or military career.
- You will receive $40 per month during your junior and senior years, plus pay and mileage for summer training.

The training and experience you will receive through Army ROTC will pay off for the rest of your life. A decision to take advantage of this new program could be one of the most important you will ever make.

You owe it to yourself to investigate this new important opportunity.

For complete information on the new Two-Year Army ROTC Program see the Professor of Military Science on campus.

War against Car Frauds

By JAMES A. HUESER

In Tulsa, Oklahoma, two owners of a motor rebuilding exchange were sentenced to five years in prison for defrauding the public. What were they doing? Under the guise of exchanging motors in cars, they repainted the old motor but did not change the motor or repair it. In Miami, Florida, an automatic transmission repair shop hung up a sign on the front door: "Closed for Vacation." Actually it was closed because it was caught defrauding the public in the repairing of automatic transmissions. In Columbus, Ohio, three automatic transmission shops were indicted for defrauding the public. In Los Angeles several shops were indicted for defrauding the motoring public on repairs to their cars.

War has been declared on the many gyms in the auto repair field who make their living defrauding the public by not repairing the car according to what needs to be done; charging for work not done; or making repairs not necessary for the automobile to operate properly.

Spearheading the battle to clean up the auto repair field is the Independent Garage Owners of America, Inc., a national trade association with 5,000 members in 36 states. They have been joined by several other trade associations in the automotive field to help protect the motoring public from dishonest auto repair shops.

How can these shops continue to operate? The Chicago based National Association states: "It's the public that helps keep these fraudulent repair shops in business because the public thinks it gets a bargain on car repairs when low prices are advertised for specific jobs." However: "This type of shop can be eliminated if the motoring public would complain to their local Better Business Bureau, Police Department, or District Attorney when they feel they have been defrauded. The protest must originate with the filing of the complaint. Too many people are reluctant to do this because they do not want to get involved or do not want to profess their lack of knowledge of the workings of their second largest investment—the automobile."

How to Detect Gyp Shops

The first indication of a gyp shop is generally its advertising. Such gyms are consistent advertisers and will tell the motoring public it can exchange present inoperative automatic transmissions for a rebuilt unit for $39.75 or $49.50. In reality it costs a minimum of $100.00 to remove a transmission from the car and replace with a rebuilt unit. This is in addition to the cost of the unit. Motor exchange is another area of gyp operation. The gyp will advertise exchange of motors for $49.50. These shops are generally the people who repaint the old motor without removing it from the chassis or repairing it.

Brake shops will advertise brake relining at prices ranging from $6.95 to $19.95. A recent national survey shows the average brake job will cost between $40.00 and $50.00. Paint shops, tune-up shops, front-end alignment shops all use the same tactics, bait advertising to lure the public into thinking they are getting a bargain.

Often times the gyp shops will use inferior parts or used parts taken from wrecked automobiles. While the car may function for a short period of time, the car owner soon has his vehicle back in a shop to do the job right.

How to Pick a Reliable Repair Shop

IGOA has set forth several suggestions to help the motoring public pick a reliable automotive repair shop. Before having a shop repair your car ask for a diagnosis of the trouble. Reliable shops are equipped to test the car and find the trouble within a few minutes. There are times, however, when it may take longer because of a series of trouble spots. In this case, the reliable shop may charge for the diagnosis, with the charge being refunded or applied to the total cost of repairs.

Other questions to ask the repair shop: are the replaced parts retained for customer inspection and an explanation given why such parts had to be replaced? Does the shop itemize the invoice, separating material and labor and showing what work was done? Does the shop road-test the car before returning it to the customer? Does the shop guarantee its work? What happens if the car doesn't work right and has to be returned for adjustments?

Other indications of a reliable shop include location. Is the shop on a well traveled street or is it in a back yard, down an alley in a storage garage or under a shade tree? Is the work done during normal business hours or in the evening? Many of the gyms work only in the evening because the operator works elsewhere during the day. Is the shop a member of the local Chamber of Commerce? Does the shop display memberships in his industry's trade associations? Is the shop clean? How is his credit rating?

It is also advisable to ask the repair firm for a list of his customers. Check with these customers. Ask about the quality of work. Was the shop fair and reasonable with its prices? How many years has the shop been in business?

This seems like a lot of trouble to go through just to have your car repaired right, however, your automobile is generally your second largest investment. Taking a little time to check on the person about to repair your vehicle will save you money over the years, because a reliable auto repair shop will guarantee its work and will be most anxious to give you information about the firm. The gyp will dodge the questions you ask and will try to get you to sign a blank repair order.

Each questionnaire also asks for the student's academic year, grade point average, sex, and whether the class is part of his major course of study.

The Associated Men Students, already at work on next year's "Prof-ile," said the new edition will also contain a descriptive statement of the professor's style, lecture delivery, and test frequency.

As has been stated in this column before, it would be a wise and propitious move if some type of publication of this general type were to be taken and presented to the student body here at the College. In the interests of academic progression, this is the only answer that exists to the problem of improvement of the teaching level.

International Relations Club Attends UN Model Assembly

By ROBERT NEJAKO

Last week, the International Relations Club sent to the National Model General Assembly 15 delegates, representing the United States. Previous to the actual work of the Model General Assembly, the delegation was briefed for over two hours at the United States Mission by several heads of departments and experts on the several salient points of contention that would be likely to come up for discussion. Included were the United States' position on Red China, Viet Nam, Uses of Outer Space and the Definition of Aggression.

Generally, according to James McKenna, Chief Delegate of the

"In the Colonial Committee, John Dawber and Peter Nikitaidis were commended by their chairman for 'brilliant maneuvering,' along with the Delegation from El Salvador in up-setting opposition trends. The floor fight was concerned with the proposal of the delegation from Trinidad on the 'Self-determination of Peoples in Trust Territories' — a proposal that condemned the United States for failing to grant this self-determination.

"In the Plenary Session, Thomas Miano and I spoke against the Admission of the Peoples' Republic of China while the rest of the delegation Joseph Hadley, Chairman of the Providence College delegation and chairman of the Legal Committee of the National Model General Assembly, stated that "Overall, the P.C. delegation was rated as good. The difficulties inherent in representing a major power kept the United States from doing an excellent job. This could be blamed only on a lack of experience on the part of the delegates. However, in my committee, as well as the other five, P.C. fared well in comparison with the other major powers who were generally represented by big-name, Ivy League schools.

"I was disappointed by the preparation of many colleges.

P.C.'s superior preparation was the key to their success in the Plenary Sessions.

"Observations made by other committee chairmen showed that our performances were at least adequate and, in a few places, excellent.

"I would like to thank, on behalf of the entire delegation, Father Haas, the Student Congress, the Carolan Club, the Dillon Club, Political Union, and the St. Thomas More Club for their contributions which enabled us to attend this conference.

It is the observation of this reporter that the P.C. delegation was quite successful, considering the attacks directed at them as the representative of the United States. For all intents, the U. S. controlled the Western Bloc and was quite successful on the floor of the Plenary Sessions.

Letter to the Editor

To the Editor:

Congratulations to the editorial staff of The Cowl! You have again succeeded in stirring up a mountain of controversy without even helping to first construct the molehill of reality. I am referring to an editorial which appeared in last week's Cowl entitled "A Suggestion For Seniors." It is unfortunate that the Cowl editors did not see fit to examine the Commencement Weekend format before criticizing it.

The question of a dinner at the Commencement Ball is a moot one. The pros and cons of the feasibility and expense of this undertaking are still under consideration by the committee. Many aspects must be considered and all suggestions presented to the Committee are greatly appreciated.

However, a second point brought up in your editorial is not so moot. The Cowl grossly insulted the Senior Class Officers and Weekend Committee members when it suggested that the class be allowed to plan "their" weekend. This was a gross insult because the officers of the Class of 1966 have encouraged ideas and suggestions from the first day they assumed office. To sample class opinion, a suggestion box for Commencement Weekend was placed in Harkins Hall. Unfortunately, but typically, no opinions were expressed. When the planning of the weekend was to begin, Chairman Patrick Gallagher petitioned all class members to serve on the committee. The "overwhelming" response to this plea netted the class a total of 13 workers. These are basically the same workers that had so successfully planned Sophomore and Junior Weekends. It is interesting to note, gentlemen, that no member of the Cowl sits on this committee. In fact, the Cowl hasn't even made an attempt to interview the Weekend Chairman. Therefore, gentlemen, the class of 1966 is more than a little mystified as to the source of your "factual" information.

Hopefully, future comments on student activities will be prefaced by a knowledge of the circumstances and planning surrounding said activities.

Respectfully yours,
John P. Cullinan
President, Class of 1966

Latest Edition of PC Nine Prepares for '66 Season

By Pete Meade

The basketball fervor has quieted down over the past few days, but there will only be a brief respite for the avid sports fan. Unnoticed, working diligently behind the headlines, of the basketball season, the 1966 Varsity Baseball team is nearing the completion of their intense preparation.

Under the direction of Coach Alex Nahigian, the candidates for pitchers and catchers have been practicing since the first week in February. Right now there are approximately 17 aspirants for the pitching berths, and the staff will not be selected until the week prior to the opening game on the first of April.

As for the remaining varsity candidates, the returnees from last year's squad will compose the nucleus of the starting team. This is due to the short length of time that the team has in which to prepare for the season opener.

Coach Nahigian commented that there was too little time in which to hold varsity tryouts and simultaneously give the probable starters enough work to sharpen their skills for the first game.

He explained that tryouts would be held after the first road trip on the first weekend in April, and all hopefuls are urged to come out at that time. According to the coach, there still are opportunities for the new candidates as the team has not been set at every position.

Among the many changes that Coach Nahigian plans to make this year is to move Co-captain Leo McNamara from his usual spot at shortstop to third base. The reason for this is the sophomore keystone combination of Bill Pettingill and Steve Saradnick, who have been playing together since high school. Rather than try out a new double-play combo, Coach Nahigian has decided to go with this pair, as their experience with each other's play around second base should strengthen the Friars' defense in the middle of the diamond.

Another change will be the move of Jim Petteruti, an outfielder last year, to first base in an effort to tighten up the infield.

All-in-all, this season should be successful for the Friars. With the development of the pitching staff, headed by returning letterman, Jim Jones, Coach Nahigian expects to field a very competent team.

ST. PAT'S ANSWER TO THE YANKEES: Jack O'Rourke and Leo McNamara are at the helm of this year's Friar nine.

FROM

By VINCENT MAROTTOLI

Who ever heard of Villanova fifteen years ago? In track circles, that is? The fact remains that the well-known Villanova track teams started only ten years ago in an effort which other athletic personnel would be wise in imitating.

As much as I despise the school (basketball circles, that is), I must hand it to it for its initiative and foresight which one often finds lacking at other institutions. Villanova, in fact, lacks its own field house for track events and must find accommodations at local arenas.

And yet here is a school that awards 22 track scholarships each year, that has two field coaches and two distance coaches, that has at least one "big" name in each major event, and that is not much larger than PC.

Now I realize that one old reliable argument which can and will be hurled in my face is the fact that PC just lacks the money to support such an expanded track program.

My argument is more of a question — why? Why should a college not that much larger, not that much richer, and certainly not higher scholastically, be able to field such remarkable teams — in basketball and football as well as track?

Why should PC not give serious consideration to expanding the intercollegiate track programs?

There are many reasons why and also many possible solutions and motivations for doing so. Most notable is the prestige associated with the Friar track team. They are, to my knowledge, the only varsity team on campus that boasts in excess of a 3.0 overall collective average.

Thus there is much to be derived from this aspect. Now money matters. There is talk of support by the college for another fall varsity team, if one ever materializes. It seems that much better use of the money can be obtained by channeling it into the track program.

Recruiting is another problem. Villanova, despite its peculiarly nationalistically associated name, each year obtains excellent track prospects from Ireland. It would seem that PC could easily establish a suitable framework for recruiting, if the permission were given to it.

Of course, additional coaches would be needed; yet if we can match the calibre of the existing coaching staff at PC, there would be little doubt as to the potential available.

Perhaps I go off on tangents such as this only after members of the track team fare excellently in national tournaments, and yet pass unnoticed by most of the public and the college body.

And yet I hope that the usual tendency to neglect such student airs is eliminated and that the track team can become a varsity sport in the true sense of the word.

Rifle Team

The Friar rifle team closed out its season last Saturday by defeating Worcester Polytech and Boston University. The PC team beat Worcester at the PC range. The results of the BU match were exchanged by mail.

The Friars fired a total score of 1260 out of a possible 1500 points. Pete Smith led the way with a 264. His brother, Paul, was not far behind with a 256. Capt. Roy Kudrzycki fired a 255. Mike Byrnes finished with a 245 and Bill Madigan rounded out the top five PC shooters with a 238. Worcester Polytech fired an 1182 while BU fired for a score of 1193.

The team finished the season with a 4 and 2 record. During the year they defeated Boston College and Brown University as well as BU and Worcester.

B'Ball Captains . . .

When you see the guys getting down, you have to say the right thing to cheer them up. But most important, you have to set the atmosphere so things don't start. But this team made it easy."

Bill is very hopeful of moving up to the NBA next year and with 60% from the floor and 90% from the foul line, he should rate more than a quick glance. If that doesn't materialize, however, Bill figures to settle here in Rhode Island and carry on with the educational work he is doing now through practice teaching.

(Ed. Note: Jim Benedict, co-captain will be featured in the next issue of The Cowl.)

Intramural News

By JOE McMENIMEN

The end of the indoor sports season at P.C. usually means the end of the intramural program, but not so this year. Val Lombardi and Bill Roberts have arranged a program that will keep the students busy right up to exam time.

The basketball league is almost at an end, with the playoffs left to come. However it could be up to the remaining sports to decide who is the overall winner in the intramural race. At this time the race is between the Boston Club and the Albertus Magnus Club. Albertus won the football title to take the lead, but Boston fought back, and is leading the basketball league, thus creating a tie.

A bowling league is being formed, in collaboration with the Carolan Club. Ray Murphy is in charge, and anyone interested in entering a team should see him for details. His room is 218 in Stephen Hall.

Again this year volleyball will be played. Last year it was run on an individual basis but there was enough interest to warrant the formation of a league. All clubs interested in entering teams should contact Mr. Louthis in the coaches office.

Golf, which was successful last fall, will again be offered this spring as soon as the weather permits play to begin. Play will again be conducted at the golf club in Seekonk. Anybody interested may contact Bill Roberts for details.

A new idea this year is a fishing derby for those interested in fishing. Paul Skinner, S. 108, a representative for the Carter Worm Farm, promises to provide worms as bait for anyone interested. Mr. Skinner will be in charge of this affair, although it will be run as a separate activity not connected with the intramural association.

Hockey Captains . . .

During his four years as a Friar, Frank brought to opponents his Canadian-style hockey which involved a good deal of checking. After graduation he plans to go to graduate school and has already been accepted for Computer Science at The University of Massachusetts.

Frank will marry a girl from North Providence next September and after earning his degree he would like to "enter the world of business." Providence will genuinely miss this amiable Canuck.

Frosh Hoopsters Come on Strong

"These boys were much like the freshman team of four seasons ago. That team, which included 'Benny,' Blair, and Lasher, started relatively slow but finished strong." With this Coach Gavitt summed up another successful freshman basketball team.

Commenting on the future of the starting five the coach feels that Al Hayes, Jim Coady, Andy Clarey, Stu Marquis and Bill Judkins all should possibly see action on the varsity squad. Looking at the boys individually, "Skip," the team's leading scorer, "shows a good potential in the back court" while Clarey and Judkins are both "good forwards." Jim especially pleased Mr. Gavitt with his work under the boards.

The best-played game this year, in Coach Gavitt's opinion, was the second URI game. "The team played a very patient game, made few mistakes and came from behind to win."

As far as next year's frosh team is concerned, Coach Gavitt commented that several excellent prospects have expressed interest in playing for PC, but that only with the start of the season can the final roster be completed.

The N.C.C.A. news for Providence College has not been ALL bad, as was evidenced of late by the fine representation given by two of Coach Ray Hanlon's star runners, Barry Brown and Jerry Riordan. The two competed in the N.C.A.A. Indoor Track Championships held last Friday and Saturday in Detroit, Michigan.

Brown, who qualified for the two mile by virtue of his second-place finish in the IC4A's last Saturday and his current ranking of fifth among the top two-milers of the country, finished eighth in the two mile in Detroit, posting a time of 9:05.6.

Although this is not his best clocking at the distance, the torrid early pace set by the unstoppable Gerry Lindgren of Washington State and 1964 Olympic participant (the eventual winner) accounted for the sub-par performance of many of the top-flight runners in the field.

Riordan, on the other hand, had to qualify on Friday afternoon in order to earn a spot in the finals of the mile, a chore which he accomplished admirably. He finished second in his heat, tying Ed Dean of Notre Dame and at the same time setting a new school record for the mile run with his time of 4:08.9. In the finals held on Sat. afternoon, his 4:10.1 clocking earned him seventh place among the top eight milers in the country.

Needless to say, Coach Hanlon was understandably pleased with the performance of the two, noting that this was the first time that P.C. has ever had two entries in the N.C.A.A. Indoor Championships, and commending both for their fine efforts.

The next outing for the track team will be the University of Connecticut Relays to be held next Sat. at Storrs, Conn.

Co-Capt. Blair Recalls PC Thrills and Honors

By JOHN CIEPLY

"He's good as gold!" Jim Walker's statement after last year's St. Bonaventure's game really sums up the worth of Friar co-captain Bill Blair. His reputation after four years is entirely that of a hustler, a team player, a clutch player.

His biggest thrills were all pressure packed moments that will live in the memories of the fans as long as they live in his own mind. "There's been a few," he recalled, "Winning the Iowa game, standing there at the foul line and making those shots . . . and the Illinois game, tapping it in was a big one."

Billy's jump shot, which is about the prettiest shot going, is also one of the most dependable and his percentage for the year ended up near the 60% mark.

But when he moves to the foul line, there is no question about it, Bill is the best in the country and the fans are astounded when the shot does not fall. What is his secret for a 91% average? "I practice a lot," he answered, "but mostly I try to push everything out of my mind except for the basket."

Bill is easily one of the best dressed men on campus and his sartorial splendor is complemented by his love of music. His tape recordings of rhythm and blues selections relax the team before every game. But this is no eccentricity, because "psyching up" is a major part of Bill's athletic philosophy. Before a game he can be seen constantly on the move. "I hate to stand still. I think it's better to get my body toned up before the game and stay that way for the whole game. Not just loosing up for five minutes and stop. That's very important to me, that's the reason for the tape recorder."

And what's the story behind the rubber band he always wears? Bill smiled and said, "In my sophomore year a friend gave me a yellow rubber band for luck, just as a joke. I wound up starting for a while so I've worn it ever since . . . Its got to be yellow."

Bill took his job as co-captain very seriously and as he said, "It was a real responsibility."

Brander and Kelly: Captains by Example

By TOM HUTTON

One year ago this week coach Zellio Toppazzini called a meeting of his underclass lettermen pucksters for the purpose of selecting co-captains. From this meeting two junior defensemen emerged as captains-elect: Brian Kelly and Frank Brander.

A full hockey season has passed since this election and it was not one of the Friars better ones as they compiled a 7-14 record; but this was not due to a lack of leadership by Kelly and Brander. They inspired their teammates all season by their constant hustle and their never-say-die attitudes.

Brian, whose home is in Needham, Mass., came to Providence as a transfer from West Point in 1963 and entered his sophomore year. He worked out with the team his first year but was ineligible to play under N.C.A.A. rules. In his junior year, Kelly's steady play won for him the nod in the election for captain. This season Brian was plagued by injuries, but he didn't allow that to stop him as he played every game with his shoulder and ankle heavily taped.

His popularity among his fellow students is evidenced by his election as Vice-President of the Class of '66. Kelly recalled that perhaps his biggest thrill playing hockey for P.C. beating West Point last season on their own ice surface. The rink at Army is reputed to be the toughest ice surface for opponents to win on in the East.

As for the future, Kelly is still undecided but it is certain that what ever he does, he will do it well.

Frank, the rugged defenseman from Kirkland Lake, Ontario, proved to be the backbone of the defensive corps during his three varsity years.

In Canada, Frank played Junior A hockey which is the next step to pro. Upon graduating high school he was faced with the decision of turning pro or going to a college. A friend of his was going to college and playing hockey in the States. The friend, Rick Heximer, told his coach, Tom Eccleston, about Brander. Eccleston contacted him and in the September of 1962 Brander entered Providence College as a member of
