Alagero, Casserly, Pearson in race for top Congress position

By Steve Sylvia

Elections for the Executive Board of the Student Congress will be held tomorrow, January 24. All students are eligible to vote, and elections will be held in lower Slavin from 9:30 a.m.—1:30 p.m., and in Raymond Cafe from 4:30—6:30 p.m.

The three presidential hopefuls are all juniors. They are: Paul Alagero, a management major from East Aurora, Bill Pearson, an accounting major from Valhalla, NY, and Barbara Casserly, who previously was president of her class and chairperson of the Legislative Committee, has been a member of the Food Committee and was the Editorial Editor of the Cowl last semester. She stated as her main objective, if elected president, to be "getting more students involved in student affairs and re-establishing a resident life committee which involves the faculty and student looking into library noise: Students and faculty hear too much

By Brian Otvos

A call is out from students and faculty to try to reduce the amount of noise generated at Phillips Memorial Library. Throughout the year and especially during the fall semester the noise level in the library has tended to be more of a place of socializing rather than studying. This occurrence has irked many students, and now the administration is seeking a solution to the problem.

Mr. Joseph Doherty, Director of Phillips Memorial Library, elaborated on the subject. "Exams period brought nearly 600 (additional) students to the library, and the noise level was too high. The librarian's job is not supposed to be one of disciplining the students, but it seems they have been forced to do so, as of late."

Doherty criticized the childish behavior of students who explode firecrackers or turn off the lights in the library. He commented that college students should be more mature and respectful of their fellow students and the librarians.

A move to write in a new rule in the student handbook concerning proper behavior in the library is in order, but Doherty does not see this as an effective measure. "Hopefully, peer pressure will make the students reduce the noise level for their own sake," he said. Doherty admitted that absolute silence is impossible, but excessive noise should be controlled. "The sporadic noise is caused probably by students taking breaks from their studies," he said. Doherty said. Apparently, many students do not realize how far a distance they should be from the noise level of their own sake.

Barbara Casserly

Paul Alagero

solid body and to work aggressively for student needs.

Ludwig, a freshmen English major from Taunton, MA, and Ken McGunagle, a junior political science major from Cranston, RI, Ludwig is a student representative on the Financial Aid Task Force, which aids students in obtaining financial aid. McGunagle is the treasurer of his class and served as the chairperson of the class for '82 and the chairperson of the Academic Research Committee. Robitaille is a representative of the Class for '82 and the chairperson of the Academic Research Committee. McGunagle is a representative of the class for '82 and the chairperson of the Academic Research Committee. Robitaille is a representative of the Residency Board president, has been responsible for getting kitchenettes installed in the remaining dorms and renovating the Colonel's Corner. His main objective, if elected, will be to "lead the Student Congress as a

Mass for St. Thomas set for Jan. 28

A solemn celebration of the feast of St. Thomas Aquinas, the patron of the Dominican Priory on campus, will take place on Monday, January 28, at 4:30 p.m. in the Aquinas Chapel. The principal concelebrant of the Mass will be the Very Rev. William B. Ryan, O.P., Prior of the Dominican community, and the guest homilist will be the Very Rev. William J. Hill, O.P., Associate Professor of Systemic Theology at the Catholic University of America and President of the Catholic Theological Society of America.

Students will be recited as part of the Mass and special music will be provided by various college groups. All members of the College community are cordially invited to attend the Mass Monday afternoon and join with the Dominican Fathers in the celebration of their patronal feast.
Members of a PC sociology class were afforded a unique opportunity several weeks ago, when they were privy to the taped Channel 6 talk show, "Six at Large." The show featured a look at a five part series that two Channel 6 reporters had done on prostitution in Providence, Fall River, Ma. and Providence.

Upon hearing of the series, Reverend Paul M. James, O.P. chairman of the department of sociology, anthropology and social work at Providence College, was impelled by "intellectual curiosity" to obtain the tapes of the series to show to his criminology class. Not only did the class view the tapes, but Channel 6 had agreed to come to College to discuss their experiences with the students. During the segment of their investigation, the two reporters walked through sections of Fall River and Providence; Hickey posing as a prostitute and Collajezzi posing as a potential customer.

Several days after their visit to PC, Father James received a reciprocal invitation to attend the taping of the talk show hosted by Trinity College, who was in charge of promotion and public relations at Channel 6. The panel of the show consisted of Hickey, Collajezzi and Father James, among others. The show, based on the series and prostitution in general. Towards the end of the show, a number of the students addressed the panel.

The general consensus of the class and Father James, at the finale of the show, was negative. Father James explained, "The impression of the class was that we were being used in order to give Channel 6 "good press" at the expense of the series. The students felt that the program did not go into depth in the investigation. For example, the reporters allegedly spent three months executing the investigation, yet only two nights out of that period were actually spent on the streets. While the investigators of Providence and Fall River, Hickey and Collajezzi talked to a number of prostitutes and "johns." Their conclusions and findings in the investigation were based primarily on their undercover work.

However, the class found the presentation of the reporters' views to be rather vague and misleading. Their main disagreement was that the reporters and Channel 6 had done a very "mediocre job" on something that could have had a lot of potential, and they felt that they "used us to promote their show."

Father James' suspicions were further confirmed when he discovered that the first taping of the talk show was not good and would have to be redone. Both he and the students had doubts that this was not accidental frenzy for the re-taping. Father James speculated that perhaps, during the program, the studio audience had "over-shadowed the directors and the reporters and the management made the tapes look as good as they would have liked." Father James also felt that throughout the taping, "We were manipulated because Taylor asked misleading questions."

To add insult to injury, Father's name later appeared in Jack Major's column in the Providence Sunday Journal. In the article, Major stated that "Having severely criticized the series, "The Flesh Peddlers," and that he later received a letter of self-defense from Peter Leone, the Channel 6 news director. Major quoted the section of Leone's letter that intimated that Father James and his class had been supportive of the series. Two weeks later Major rectified Leone's comments by stating that he learned from a phone call from Father James that he was not supportive of the series. In fact, he stated that Father James told him that the show "strained 2 or 3 on a scale of 10."

Father James summed up his feelings about the entire experience, "The objective of the reporting is to create a good documentary, and any conclusions which they may have drawn came from insufficient facts, they didn't pay any real cause or connections between the facts which they were found in their conclusions." Of its overall benefit for the class, Father James stated, "If anyone, they found out not only how not documentaries are made, but how not to make them."

Raymond and Alumni Cafeterias. Steve "Veg" McGuire, chairman of the Food Committee, explained that the committee had suggested having a non-smoking area last year, but the idea was voted down by Student Congress. Rhode Island state law has directed that all public places must have a non-smoking area. The committee includes school cafeterias, Mr. Joseph Murphy, director of food services, arranged for the areas to be established.

McGuire also observed that the area in question is a bit far from the center. He was quoted as saying "Providence and Fall River are too large, it is something many people wanted. I just think it is sad that we had to wait for something to happen before we went through."
New music - new spirit
R.I. Philharmonic

By Candemas

Rhode Island Philharmonic Concert
Wednesday, January 23, 1980 Page 3

New music - new spirit. Instead, I found myself engrossed in the music. Maestro Cassuto, having promised quality programming, is reaching his musicianship and creative effort not altogether unanalyzing the "new piece," an effort not altogether unpleasing. Certainly the third section "Primitire Dance," with its interesting rhythmic structures and syncopation, brought out a lucidity of tone in the central harmonies which showed the orchestra to best advantage. In fact, it is this substantial musical quality which was missing in the first two sections. Because the piece is best described as a tone poem, there is some frustration in separating the message of image from the technical composition. The former worked well enough. But "Arid Landscape," while it came across with a musical spaciousness quite acceptable in theme, still left me questioning the unchallenging repetition of sounds. Unhappily, this was followed by a definitely lacy section called "Runchers Whistling Song," not helped musically by some very tentative brass players—perhaps due to an unfamiliar score.

The concerto, on the other hand, moved with surprising excitement, especially when one considers the visual discomfort of the pianist, sitting on the left hand side while his right rests by his side or on the piano. Mr. Fleischer, in recognizing the work's need to involve a full keyboard effect, used pedal and first-rate fingering proficiency to create the illusion of two hands.

To look over and only hope the music was to become aurally pleasant. Certainly the third section "Primitive Dance," with its interesting rhythmic structures and syncopation, brought out a lucidity of tone in the central harmonies which showed the orchestra to best advantage. In fact, it is this substantial musical quality which was missing in the first two sections. Because the piece is best described as a tone poem, there is some frustration in separating the message of image from the technical composition. The former worked well enough. But "Arid Landscape," while it came across with a musical spaciousness quite acceptable in theme, still left me questioning the unchallenging repetition of sounds. Unhappily, this was followed by a definitely lacy section called "Runchers Whistling Song," not helped musically by some very tentative brass players—perhaps due to an unfamiliar score.

The concerto, on the other hand, moved with surprising excitement, especially when one considers the visual discomfort of the pianist, sitting on the left hand side while his right rests by his side or on the piano. Mr. Fleischer, in recognizing the work's need to involve a full keyboard effect, used pedal and first-rate fingering proficiency to create the illusion of two hands.

To look over and only hope the music was to become aurally pleasant. Certainly the third section "Primitive Dance," with its interesting rhythmic structures and syncopation, brought out a lucidity of tone in the central harmonies which showed the orchestra to best advantage. In fact, it is this substantial musical quality which was missing in the first two sections. Because the piece is best described as a tone poem, there is some frustration in separating the message of image from the technical composition. The former worked well enough. But "Arid Landscape," while it came across with a musical spaciousness quite acceptable in theme, still left me questioning the unchallenging repetition of sounds. Unhappily, this was followed by a definitely lacy section called "Runchers Whistling Song," not helped musically by some very tentative brass players—perhaps due to an unfamiliar score.

The concerto, on the other hand, moved with surprising excitement, especially when one considers the visual discomfort of the pianist, sitting on the left hand side while his right rests by his side or on the piano. Mr. Fleischer, in recognizing the work's need to involve a full keyboard effect, used pedal and first-rate fingering proficiency to create the illusion of two hands.

To look over and only hope the music was to become aurally pleasant. Certainly the third section "Primitive Dance," with its interesting rhythmic structures and syncopation, brought out a lucidity of tone in the central harmonies which showed the orchestra to best advantage. In fact, it is this substantial musical quality which was missing in the first two sections. Because the piece is best described as a tone poem, there is some frustration in separating the message of image from the technical composition. The former worked well enough. But "Arid Landscape," while it came across with a musical spaciousness quite acceptable in theme, still left me questioning the unchallenging repetition of sounds. Unhappily, this was followed by a definitely lacy section called "Runchers Whistling Song," not helped musically by some very tentative brass players—perhaps due to an unfamiliar score.

The concerto, on the other hand, moved with surprising excitement, especially when one considers the visual discomfort of the pianist, sitting on the left hand side while his right rests by his side or on the piano. Mr. Fleischer, in recognizing the work's need to involve a full keyboard effect, used pedal and first-rate fingering proficiency to create the illusion of two hands.

To look over and only hope the music was to become aurally pleasant. Certainly the third section "Primitive Dance," with its interesting rhythmic structures and syncopation, brought out a lucidity of tone in the central harmonies which showed the orchestra to best advantage. In fact, it is this substantial musical quality which was missing in the first two sections. Because the piece is best described as a tone poem, there is some frustration in separating the message of image from the technical composition. The former worked well enough. But "Arid Landscape," while it came across with a musical spaciousness quite acceptable in theme, still left me questioning the unchallenging repetition of sounds. Unhappily, this was followed by a definitely lacy section called "Runchers Whistling Song," not helped musically by some very tentative brass players—perhaps due to an unfamiliar score.

The concerto, on the other hand, moved with surprising excitement, especially when one considers the visual discomfort of the pianist, sitting on the left hand side while his right rests by his side or on the piano. Mr. Fleischer, in recognizing the work's need to involve a full keyboard effect, used pedal and first-rate fingering proficiency to create the illusion of two hands.

To look over and only hope the music was to become aurally pleasant. Certainly the third section "Primitive Dance," with its interesting rhythmic structures and syncopation, brought out a lucidity of tone in the central harmonies which showed the orchestra to best advantage. In fact, it is this substantial musical quality which was missing in the first two sections. Because the piece is best described as a tone poem, there is some frustration in separating the message of image from the technical composition. The former worked well enough. But "Arid Landscape," while it came across with a musical spaciousness quite acceptable in theme, still left me questioning the unchallenging repetition of sounds. Unhappily, this was followed by a definitely lacy section called "Runchers Whistling Song," not helped musically by some very tentative brass players—perhaps due to an unfamiliar score.

The concerto, on the other hand, moved with surprising excitement, especially when one considers the visual discomfort of the pianist, sitting on the left hand side while his right rests by his side or on the piano. Mr. Fleischer, in recognizing the work's need to involve a full keyboard effect, used pedal and first-rate fingering proficiency to create the illusion of two hands.
Women are an integral part of Providence College. Over the years, they have contributed much and are a significant role in the scheme of things. They have proven themselves not only academically, but also by their involvement in activities and athletics.

Considering the athletic realm, much has been accomplished. Mrs. Helen Bert, director of women's athletics, and her staff have made giant strides with the women's programs. Funding for programs and scholarships has increased. Coaches are of a better caliber. And the women athletes—well, the demonstrate a level of skill and are setting records that have never before been realized.

Considering the success of these women athletes, one needs to ask: why, then, is the question of the women's access to that entrance they would need? If firefighters ever needed to enter directly from Eaton St. The competition was scheduled to follow the men's basketball game against Holy Cross. Cross. Unfortunately, the end of the men's game also marked the end of the fans. The crowd left.

A question of safety? Inconsistencies need attention

During the past semester, there were renovations done in Fennell Hall which seemingly created more problems within the building. On the fourth floor of Fennell Hall, north and south ends, there are two sun porches. These porches were used when Fennell Hall was part of the Chapin Hospital property. Two students lived on either border each porch, and early in September, immovable bars were placed on the adjacent windows. "To prevent people from entering or gaining access to the sun porches," according to Mr. James Cunningham, director of Safety and Security.

Also, on the first floor, a formerly functional door at the north end of the hallway is now locked and unusable. The Editorial Board of The Cowl views these moves, which were said to be security improvements, as a combination of confusion and explanation. First, the locked door in the first floor does not serve to increase security. However, there is limited security to begin with. The building is totally accessible to anyone, via the front door of the building, 24 hours a day. What is the real reasoning behind the locked door? Is it to stop someone from using the fire escape? The Editorial Board of The Cowl favors the latter explanation of the same type of screen in Fennell.

The Editorial Board of the Cowl views these moves as a lack of awareness of the policies of the Bookstore. It has been brought to our attention that our treatment of this topic was not wholly accurate. The Editorial Board of The Cowl places great importance on journalistic integrity, thus we would like to set the record straight on this issue.

According to Mr. Dennis Hughes, manager of the Bookstore, the average student studying at PC spends less than $100 per year on texts, not $150 as we had originally stated. Our figure was derived from the national average. At PC, however, the number of total sales during the current term, by total enrollment, yields a significantly lower total.

Basiclly, The Bookstore’s sitauation is similar. And economy minded student—both are out to save money. The Cowl recommended that, whenever possible, the paperback edition of a text be ordered over the hardcover versions. Apparently, this practice is already in use. All Bookstore purchase orders read “Ship cloth only if paper is not available.”

Contrary to popular belief, selling college text books is not terribly profitable. In fact, the Bookstore's pre-tax profits for the year were about 16%, a decline from past year's. Hughes explained that the parties grossing the highest profits in this deal are the publishing companies, who set the actual price of the texts.

Lady Friars deserve support

The band left. Even Friar Roy left. Only a few loyal fans remained.

Regardless of the fact that the women were playing a nationally ranked team, in the First Annual Invitational game, few stayed to cheer them on. Ultimately, the women beat Cheyney State, 50-46, but the victory would have been that much sweeter, had they received a little more moral support.

Mrs. Bert summed it up well with the comment, “The PC family has a commitment to men and women.” The Editorial Board of the Cowl wholeheartedly agrees. The inconsistency in the treatment of the two is unacceptable. Instances have been cited whereby the Lady Friars could not secure enough support from the College to use even the Friar center, not to mention their ignored request for a “fans’” bus and the talents of the PC band and cheerleaders. Trivial as this may sound to some, attendance and moral support is a women’s sporting events does make an impact on the outcome of their games. The Cowl urges administrators, faculty and students to increase their attendance at, and support of, Lady Friar events. As with all PC athletics, these teams work hard at what they do, and both deserve and appreciate the backing of the College.

To err is human. Last week the Cowl published an editorial examining the high price of college texts along with the policies of the Bookstore. It has been brought to our attention that our treatment of this topic was not wholly accurate. The Editorial Board of the Cowl stands by its original recommendations to the College’s professors. Considering the exorbitant prices of books, we urge them to prudently select texts necessary to their courses. Using different books each semester for the same course places undue financial burden on students. In conclusion, the Editorial Board of the Cowl realizes that the student body and the PC Bookstore are fighting the same battle—that of acquiring the best possible books for the lowest possible price.
Dear Editor:

Two weeks ago a girl who obviously doesn't go to school here as in the front row of Aquinas Chapel at the 10:30 p.m. Sunday Mass. I was standing squashed right against a pew with some guy's elbow in my side and a missal at my neck. I tried to warn her, but when I moved, everyone around me started to topple over, like dominoes. I was trapped. All I could do was watch. She weaned through the kids giggling in the back and the ones gagging for air, by the bodies sleeping on the floor and benches, and past the students leaning all along the length of the wall.

She walked over the metal grating which went "thump, thump" under her cloaks, and right up by the vain winds in the front seats. You won't believe this part, but this chick shammed right up to the sideways pewl! I swear it. We could all see her profile for the entire length of the Mass. It was hysterical. Guys were checking her out and teachers and priests nodded in approval. I felt not sure for her, for how was she to know?

The bicylone became as silent as all and gazed in awe as this girl read ALOUD during the responses and even sang when Sister Gall asked her to. Who was this kid, and how could she do something like this in public?

Thank goodness my fervent prayer was answered and she kept her jacker on. If not, her Levi's waist and length size would have been exposed to all!

I could watch her up there all by herself with no bad breath being circulated in her face and no one standing on her toes. I'll bet she could even see the prince.

That day in Murial and in the dorms she was the talk of the campus. Kids were calling her everything in the book, but it all led back to the same conclusion.

This chick was smart!
Grand Opening of Last Resort
a BOG success story

By Ken Dagesser

The PC campus witnessed the christening of a new social club on January 18, the Board of Governors' The Last Resort. Located in the former service building on Lower Campus, The Last Resort provided fun and entertainment, which will be continued one weekend night each week. For the BOG, the grand opening was an overall success.

Opening night marked the culmination of a year and a half of preparation and hard work for the BOG, since the closing of the old Wooden Navel in 1978. The facility houses two rooms. One room contains a built-in bar, and the other holds a games area, a stereo system lends atmosphere to the Resort at times when there is no live entertainment. Plants, which hang from the skylight and along the walls of each room, lends the interior an inviting feel.

The BOG hopes that the Last Resort will provide an inexpensive alternative to the Rat, and to off-campus bars. BOG vice-president Joe Doherty said that the resort seeks to provide a relaxed, friendly atmosphere. Doherty stressed that the continuation of the facility relies upon trouble-free events, but was optimistic about the Resort's future development.

Because of the size of the building, attendance is limited. Tickets will be sold on Thursdays, between 1 and 4 p.m., in the BOG ticket office.

The facility is managed by John Durkin and Bobby Clark, chairmen of the BOG The Last Resort Committee. The BOG will continue to provide Sunday night movies in The Last Resort, along with a weekday morning coffee house.

BOG coffee house

By Joe Brandolino

Monday marked the opening of the BOG coffee house for its first full semester. Early last semester, the idea of a coffee house was suggested to the Board of Governors by Ronald P. Cerwonski, Ph.D., chairperson of the business department. A survey was taken, and it was determined that a coffee house would be a pleasant and practical service to both students and faculty. John Durkin and Bobby Clark, chairpersons of the Last Resort Committee, along with the aid of Tom Corcoran and Joe Doherty, BOG president and vice president, respectively, transformed the idea into reality.

The coffee house, located in the last resort on Lower Campus, is managed by the BOG, with work study students providing the See COFFEE HOUSE, Page 7
What's Cookin'

By Mitch Bernet

How does one sum up Providence College night life? If a bookstore were the proper place to shop for potential young Friars on the advantages of the social life at PC, one might per­haps be known as the "Boring, Predictable, above average social life at Providence College." I am sure that on many occasions you have been faced with the dilemma of what to do with your night time hours. Well, here at PC your choices are endless. For the enthusiastic, there is the Rat, that cozy little establishment in Lower Slavin where there is no such thing as bottled beer, live music or room to sit down, but is abundant in the department of lines at the door, drunken birth­day celebrations and 1950 songs by Frank Sinatra and Bing Crosby screaming from the Juke Box. The Rat, however, is fun when accompanied by a group of people who like to drink and talk while watching inebriated young coeds stumble out one a stretch, after a long night of drunkenness and many stumbles.

Small, but formal and an off-campus party, every so often you find that someone is having a party at his apartment, featuring many kegs of beer. These parties can be quite a variety of range of enjoyment. From a Friars Club gathering at the Brian Fleming Estates, to the beer chugging, wild blasts of Tom Rips, a PC student knows where to go and not to go for his own personal kind of evening. These two are packed, but somehow you just don't seem to mind. But the best part is that you don't need the permission of the dean to drink past one o'clock. And you don't have to put up with the bartender your PC I.D., you get a grimace of disgust. I have experienced Counts

Elect

Barbara Casserly

Congress President

No. 1 on the ballot

PC: No Party College

By Mitch Bernet

What's next? Well, how about an off-campus party? Every so often you find that someone is having a party at his apartment, featuring many kegs of beer. These parties can be quite a range of enjoyment. From a Friars Club gathering at the Brian Fleming Estates, to the beer chugging, wild blasts of Tom Rips, a PC student knows where to go and not to go for his own personal kind of evening. These two are packed, but somehow you just don't seem to mind. But the best part is that you don't need the permission of the dean to drink past one o'clock. And you don't have to put up with the bartender your PC I.D., you get a grimace of disgust. I have
Spaceman receives standing ovation

By Tom Bowen

Bill Lee needed no introduction to the audience who packed "4-H Hall on Monday night. The former Boston Red Sox, and now Montreal Expo left-handed pitcher received a standing ovation the moment he entered.

In his typical style, Lee, with his heavy beard, was dressed less than casually for the occasion. He wore a red baseball cap, tee-shirt, hunting jacket, and a pair of German General's World War I pants. Some observers might have been affronted by the rather informal approach taken by Lee. But then Bill Lee never did take himself seriously.

Lee has the reputation of being flaky, a spaceman. However, he claims that this label is mere the result of a prejudiced right-handed press than anything else. He reasons that, "Since the left side of the brain controls the right side, left-handed people are the only ones in their right minds."

Statements such as this made Lee a controversial, if not always popular, figure in Boston. He was never one to be afraid to say what was on his mind, and to stick up for what he believed was right. During the Boston busing crisis, Lee called himself a survivor. "My purpose in life is to survive," he commented. "I do this by running six miles every other day. I recognize that one's metabolism changes as one gets older. Thus, if one does not stay in decent shape, that person will be in a bad way."

Lee admits that he likes a good beer, but he drinks in moderation and he later goes out and runs it off. Also, he says he does not like to drink "all that other stuff."

Lee has also admitted to having used pot. The Commissioner of Baseball, Bowie Kuhn, wanted to fine Lee for having made a comment that was detrimental to the better interests of the game. In a rebuff, Lee said that he never claimed that he smoked pot, but that he just used it. When asked how he used it, Lee replied, "I used pot by sprinkling it on my organic pancakes."

For all his humorous comments and relaxed outlook on life, Bill Lee is a fierce competitor. He is determined to stay in shape, play for three more years, and then go back to Washington. There, he can settle down, raise his family, live off the land, and stay away from the likes of Don Zimmer, Billy Martin, Bowie Kuhn, and all that pollution from Pittsburgh.

COMING ATTRACTIONS

BOG Travel Committee presents:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Date</th>
<th>Event</th>
<th>Price</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Jan 24</td>
<td>Newport Jai-Alai (cancelled)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jan 25</td>
<td>Hockey PC vs BC</td>
<td>$4.00</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Feb 14</td>
<td>Hockey PC vs UNH</td>
<td>$4.00</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Feb 15-17</td>
<td>Killington Ski Weekend</td>
<td>$70.00</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Feb 27</td>
<td>Whalers vs Bruins</td>
<td>$7.00</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>March 4</td>
<td>Medieval Manor</td>
<td>$15.00</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>March 12</td>
<td>Celtics vs Houston</td>
<td>$5.00</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>March 15</td>
<td>Budweiser Brewery Tour</td>
<td>$2.00</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>March 23</td>
<td>Old Sturbridge Village</td>
<td>$2.00</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Andy Pratt concert

By Donna Bunn

Saturday night's BOG-sponsored Andy Pratt concert is most accurately described as a presentation of extremes. The show opened with comedian Bill Campbell, whose act was successful on the whole, although at times he relied too heavily on crude language for a lot of his laughs. Some of his funniest lines involved TV commercials and how different they would be if they interviewed "real" people with "real" reactions. He also did a good job satirizing the driving conditions in Providence and Boston, questioning the purpose of yellow traffic lights when people didn't even stop for red ones.

Following Campbell's half hour stint, Andy Pratt entered what would normally be considered a bare stage, with no accompanying musicians at all, a grand piano, a folk guitar, and a sound system that left a lot to be desired. His first song was piano-accompanied (as were most of his numbers), fast-moving and loud, and it served as an excellent agent to excite the audience. From there he introduced a much slower, more melancholy number entitled "Powerful Friend," which dealt with problems like drugs and alcohol and the need for a "powerful friend" to see you through such hang-ups. This served as a subtle introduction to what would be presented later on.

Another piano number called "Sing To Me" followed; it concerned that usually overused song theme, romantic love. Andy Pratt's piano performance alone merits him as a musician worth seeing—his talent was unbelievable, especially when coupled with his ability to keep a rock rhythm alive without the aid of background instruments.

The folk guitar was first put into use for the next number, "IT Won't Last!" turned out to be one of the evenings most powerful performances—it was intensely played and sung, and the lyrics held great meaning as well, because following that number Pratt explained the Christian theme in his music and his desire that the audience recognize and understand it.

From that point on, he proceeded to reinforce his tested monotony with songs that were more obviously Christ-oriented.
Residence

(Continued from Page 1)

true for the men. However, he explained that RA's should have enough common sense to know when to counsel and when to discipline.

As compensation for services, RA's receive the amount necessary to cover room and board fees. For the 1979-80 year, this fee was $2310, but according to the Colonel, this fee will rise to approximately $2600 with the expected 10% increase in room and board. The RA is listed on the regular student payroll and is paid this sum via check via the Treasury Office. For this reason a student eligible to receive work study is a preferable candidate. However, work study is not a requirement.

The applications will be screened by the Residence Office, the qualified persons will be interviewed by a panel consisting of Rev. Walter Hoth, O.P., director of residence, Col. Del Corso, assistant director of residence, Donna McCaffrey, assistant director of women residents, various head residents and present RA's. According to Col. Del Corso, the interview's purpose is to see that a prospective RA act naturally.

"We must simply await a decision" - Gavitt

U.S. Olympic Basketball Coach Dave Gavitt released earlier this week the following statement on the possibility of a United States boycott of the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow.

"My role as the U.S. Olympic Basketball Coach is tactical rather than strategic. The matter of whether we play is a strategic decision by those at the U.S. Olympic Committee and the United States Government to work out. A great deal of preparation has already been accomplished relative to the selection, preparations and training of our Olympic Basketball Team. These plans will activate in May with the holding of Olympic Basketball Tournaments for one week, at Raleigh, N.C., to select our team. I am sure that all possible participants would be disappointed if we were not to participate. I am equally as certain that participation at a site other than Moscow would be greeted favorably. However, at the present time we must simply await a decision by those at the strategy making level."

Imtramurals get Underway

By Rich Williamson

After two weeks of play, both A and B divisions look very well balanced with no team having a clear advantage. Unh's boxing team, Hungo's Boys, led by Terry Mulligan and Rick Condon, seem to have a slight edge but Cosmic Debris with Bobby Brothers, along with the Gately, look to give them a lot of trouble. It was basically these same two teams which battled it out for the championship last year. Other strong A league teams are Mark Heaven's Penta and the Mill-High Club.

There are 15 tough teams in B division which bose a total of 51 teams. This weeks number one spot is held by the Eagles by virtue of a 3-0 record. Teams which will challenge for that spot are the Staffers, S.O.M.F. and the Cretins, which has been together for four years.

As far as the girls go, the JD's look very good but coach Adam of Adams Bar and Grill hopes to win his first championship with a team led by Kelly Callahan.

Early signs show that this season will be very competitive and exciting one.

Ratcliffe, Mulligan shine in first indoor meet

By Mary Gibbons

The Lady Friars track team got off to a very promising start in their first meet of the indoor season at Boston University on Saturday, January 19. Although the team battled it out against each other, the Lady Friars made a fine showing overall.

Cross country veterans dominated the distance events with Sue Ratcliffe and Donna Mulligan posting first place finishes for Providence. Ratcliffe won the mile with a time of 5:14, and Mulligan had a winning time of 11:16 at the championship. Jane Ladd also fared well in that race. Senior Janice Cataldo ran a strong second in the half mile with a time of 2:20.

Mary McGuire led the Lady Friars in the field events, finishing third with a high jump of 5'2". A joint effort by Mary Hodbud, Chris Hedges, Sharon Clegg and Janice Cataldo gave the Lady Friars a second place finish in the 4x4 mile relay.

Led by co-captains Sharon Clegg and Janice Cataldo, the Lady Friars should prove to be very competitive and successful throughout the season. Coach Cathy Cerra provides the team leadership, Cerra strives to keep a very competitive and exciting team.

Be the first with the inside story!

Become a typist or proofreader for The Cowl.

Sign-up in the Cowl Office, Slavin 109.

$21-3599

Frey Florist & Greenhouse

"Flowers for any occasion or no occasion at all"

50 Radcliffe Ave Providence, R. I.

Key Scores

Hungo's Boys 63 A.V. Pub 56
Cio. Debris 60 Burning Embl. 56
Eagles 60 Terrapins 30
H.B.S.B. 41 Donairs 36
Penetrators 66 46ers 53

Intramural Hockey

A League Rankings

1. SMA 3-0
2. S.PI 3-1

B League Rankings

1. Dumpsters 3-0
2. Seamen Shooters 3-0
Division II
1. Schooners 3-0
2. La Moone 1-1
3. Renegades 1-1

Girl's League
1. Rink Rats 2-0
2. Silver Skates 2-0

Presented by the BOG Film Committee

This Sunday - Jan 27

7 & 9 pm
Last Resort
$1.00 w/ PC ID

"WONDERFUL"

Chainsmoke, The Angel's

"A TOUR DE FORCE"

L. DiStefano, Conspilation

""Norma Rae"

Vince Caffey, New York Times

"ATRIUM"

"WONDERFUL"

Chainsmoke, The Angel's

"A TOUR DE FORCE"

L. DiStefano, Conspilation

521-3599

"Flowers for any occasion or no occasion at all"

50 Radcliffe Ave Providence, R. I.
The right point. Scot Fiske made captain Jeff Whisler blocked a key popup it into the open net.

the save but let the rebound go. They were superb at the right time," commented Lamoriello. Indeed the penalty killers had to play well as they were called on to kill off a Catamount power play with minutes remaining in the game.

"The students really helped us," said Lamoriello, "particularly when we were killing that last penalty." Many players echoed the same feelings saying "They helped us greatly," and "I hope the same feelings saying "They helped us greatly," and "I hope we played defensively." The team from Troy, New York

Lamoriello doesn't feel that this is a problem on his team. "There's no such thing as a "mere freshman" attitude on the team. If an uppersclassman gets bumped, it's for the benefit of the team. We're very team oriented, and that's important."

The Lady Falcons came in second this past weekend in a tournament at the University of New Hamp­shire, and in their own special way, you can bet that the freshmen were and will continue to be a big part of the team's success.
Friars roll over Rams

Friars (Continued from Page 12) and breaking downcourt, catching the Rams off guard. Rich Hunger had five steals in the game, most of them coming off crucial pass interceptions.

Out of the locker room came a frustrated Rams squad, trying to erase a 17-22 Friar lead. Relief was nowhere in sight however. The Friar zone defense, which has been giving up less than 60 points a game, jumped all over guards Mick Johnson and Horace Owens, allowing them no inside penetration. Rebounding was the only hope for the Rams to get back into the game but the smaller PC team out rebounded the Rams, 33-31.

Jerry Scott chipped in most of his game total 13 points in the second half to help the Friars rolling. Ricky Tucker smartly penetrated the zone, leading and controlling the ball and regularly finding Scott open under the basket. Once there, it was either two points for the Friars or a Ram foul.

URI tried to work inside on the Friars but with little success. Jimmy Wright, 6-9 forward for the Rams, was the central figure of the Rams' lane offensive plans but he hit for few of his field goal attempts.

With 8:41 left in the contest, Providence held a commanding 63-42 lead while continually running off the clock in their careful offensive drives. At one time in the second half PC controlled the ball for 1:10 before the Rams got a chance to score. Coach Walters cleared the bench with six minutes remaining but the Rams were still unable to put their offense together.

Bill Fields led all Friars scorers with 23, followed by Rudy Williams with 19, Jerry Scott, 13, Ricky Tucker, 8, and Rich Hunger, 7. Rich Hunger was an invaluable asset to the well organized defense which kept the Rams to their lowest first half score of the season.

Friars sink North Carolina A&T 74-61

By Ed Rohr

PC with 22 points, followed by Williams, 19, and Fields, 12. But each of the starting five performed strong as a single unit too. The experience of the zone defense baffled their opponents and held them to a lowly 23 shooting percentage in the first half. Ricky Tucker performed the ball handling chores admirably once again, once setting up a Rudy Williams' slam dunk. Rich Hunger also rocked the boards with a tomahawk jam, in what may have been one of the more exciting moments of the game.

The Friars upped their record to 10-6 and have looked very impressive in their last two games. The schedule gets tougher for the Friars this week however. The Friars, 9-1 in Big East competition, go up against UConn on Wednesday, January 23, and Seton Hall on Saturday, January 26.

Lady Friars take second at UNH

By Kathy Lenahan

The Second Annual Granite State Women's Hockey Tournament was held last weekend and the host team University of New Hampshire walked away with top honors. Providence College finished in second place with a 1-1 tournament record.

The Friars upped their record to 10-6 and have looked very impressive in their last two games. The schedule gets tougher for the Friars this week however. The Friars, 9-1 in Big East competition, go up against UConn on Wednesday, January 23, and Seton Hall on Saturday, January 26.

The Friars upped their record to 10-6 and have looked very impressive in their last two games. The schedule gets tougher for the Friars this week however. The Friars, 9-1 in Big East competition, go up against UConn on Wednesday, January 23, and Seton Hall on Saturday, January 26.

The Friars upped their record to 10-6 and have looked very impressive in their last two games. The schedule gets tougher for the Friars this week however. The Friars, 9-1 in Big East competition, go up against UConn on Wednesday, January 23, and Seton Hall on Saturday, January 26.

The Friars upped their record to 10-6 and have looked very impressive in their last two games. The schedule gets tougher for the Friars this week however. The Friars, 9-1 in Big East competition, go up against UConn on Wednesday, January 23, and Seton Hall on Saturday, January 26.
Defense Tightens up as pucksters dump Catamounts, 2 - 1

By Ron Piscione

It was billed as Super Bowl Sunday but the real super game was played not in the Rose Bowl but in Schneider Arena. The Friars of Providence College and the Catamounts of UVM, both with identical 8-2 ECAC records, faced off in what was probably the most exciting Friar hockey games of the season.

"This was a great college game," commented coach Lou Lamoriello after his team had safely locked up a 2-1 decision against the ECAC Western Division leaders. "A great team effort, everyone was intense."

The line of Dennis Martin, Steve O'Neill and John Sullivan provided all the scoring punch that the Friars needed. John Sullivan's goal at the 13:45 mark of the third period turned out to be the game winner. Steve O'Neill and Jim Collicchi scored what may have been their biggest assists of the year in setting up Sullivan's goal.

This was the second game in a row that the first period went by scoreless. But before some of the patrons had reached their seats for the start of the second period, Steve O'Neill had given the Friars the lead, 1-0. O'Neill continued his hot scoring streak with a shot from the side of the net. Scott Kleinedorff dug the puck out from the side of the net and fed O'Neill for the power play goal at 0:58.

The lead was shortlived however as a Chris Zimmerman shot off a rebound tied the score at the 2:14 mark. John O'Connor in the second half and at times were down by more than twenty before the final buzzer ended their agony.

Rudy Williams quickly started hitting from all over the floor in the first half. Williams hit seven of eight from the floor before the game was more than eleven minutes old.

Surprisingly the Rams helped the Friars cause with various travel calls and a starting defense that consisted of a four man zone with Horace Owens constantly providing all the scoring punch that the Friars needed.

By John Brandolino

Devastating, embarrassing, demoralizing—whatever adjectives could be applied to the trouncing to which the Friars subjected the URI Rams last week, one thing was certain, the PC squad handed it to the Rams from the opening tipoff to the final buzzer.

With a roaring home crowd of over 10,000 behind them, the Friars overpowered rival URI at the Civic Center, 74-59. The Rams, previously ranked number one in New England, trailed by 15 after a PC dominated first half in which the Friars shot 65 percent from the floor. URI was unable to cut the PC lead to less than 12.

(Lefl) Jerry Scott, eighth leading scorer in the Big East Conference, goes up for two against Horace Owens of URI. (Below) Rick Tucker drives against the Rams' Mick Johnson. Tucker was named Big East Rookie of the Week for his play against URI and N.C.-A&T.

PC-URI matchup. The WRams had possession with seconds left. The PC lead had withered to two and a steal later, the WRams had possession with seconds left. The PC lead had withered to three. The final shot at the buzzer went in for the WRams. The shot had not drawn any fouls and the Lady Friars had possession at the 2:10 mark to give the WRams a one point halftime lead.

Despite an opening baseline hoop by Mary Ann McCoy, Naomi Graves soon wrapped up a three long set shots. Costly Providence fouls allowed the WRams to tie the score suggested, the Lady Friars were down by more than twenty before the final buzzer ended their agony.

In a game that wasn't as close as the score suggested, the Lady Friars downed the URI WRams at the Civic Center, 55-54. The victory, coupled with a 48-41 loss to Fordham gave the Lady Friars a split for the week and upped their record to 11-3.

Neither team could take advantage of its opportunities in the slow starting first half of the PC-URI matchup. The WRams used six foot center Kim Dick to supply their inside offense. Guard Chris Dinotto, a fast moving player with an accurate shot, provided the outside shooting as the WRams kept pace in the back and forth battle. Dick managed a three point play at the fifteen minute mark to give the WRams a 4-2 edge, but Lynn Shedy carried the Lady Friars along with three long set shots. Costly Providence fouls allowed the WRams to take a 23-20 lead with three minutes left in the half. Mary Ann McCoy and Linda Wage rallied in the last minute of the half to give the Lady Friars a one point halftime lead.

With six minutes remaining, PC was sitting on a comfortable lead, 50-39. Using what offense they could the WRams tried, but failed, to pull any closer. With 1:40 remaining in the game, the WRams were still down by ten, 55-45.

In the final 100 seconds, the WRams made their move. Two fouls and a steal later, the WRams had possession with seconds left. The PC lead had withered to three. The final shot at the buzzer went in for the WRams. The shot had not drawn any fouls and the Lady Friars had possession at the last point URI rally.

Kim Dick was high scorer with 22 points for the losing cause. Mary Ann McCoy was 8 for 13, with 18 points. Kathy Dwyer chipped in with 16 and Lynn Shedy netted nine.

The Lady Friars winning coming came to a halt when they came up against Fordham University on January 19. Senior co-captain Mary Ann McCoy reached a milestone in this game by scoring the 1,000 point of her college career. MaryAnn had scored all but one of the Lady Friars offensive scoring 20 points in the 48-41 loss.