Committee strives for alcohol awareness

With the approval of Rev. Thomas R. Peterson, O.P., president of the College, an alcohol awareness committee was formed late last semester by Rev. John A. McMahon, O.P., assistant vice president for Student Services. The catalyst for the formation of this new committee was a request made to Father McMahon by the College’s Committee on Discipline.

The purposes or goals of the committee are many, but they may be summed up in stating that the committee will attempt, in various ways, to change the college community all of the consequences that the responsible decision to imbibe involves. The committee is not anti-alcohol; it is anti-misuse.

With the proposed raise of the legal drinking age in Rhode Island, one of the tasks facing the committee will be to offer to the college, especially administrators, censors and so be able to expand their education, Gustave Cote, chairman, also stated that he felt the reason behind the department’s fairly recent growth spurt was that an increasing number of students were discovering the need for marketable skills in the outside world.

It was pointed out that this growth was due to demand, not to any increase in the number of students in the department.

The new policy adopted is this: If a student does not have a PC I.D., he/she will not be allowed into any BOG activity or function. There are to be no exceptions to this rule. The Board saw no reason why every student could not comply with this request.

Guests will be allowed in, under a sponsorship program. The student with a PC I.D. may sponsor or sign-in no more than two guests. The guests must be approved by the student with the PC I.D. request. Guests will be allowed in, under a sponsorship program. The guest will be allowed in, under a sponsorship program. The student with a PC I.D. may sponsor or sign-in no more than two guests.

The Providence College Planning Council held their Tuesday in ‘64 Hall to discuss a proposed curriculum change within the business department.

As the chairman, Rev. Thomas R. Peterson, O.P., the committee was organized to oversee revisions in academic areas of the school. This process will extend over the next year or so, eventually taking all academic departments into consideration. In approaching this matter, the committee’s function has been to “allow the department to plan for itself,” according to Father Peterson.

They do this by inviting all interested department members (faculty and students alike) to participate in the preliminary meeting.

Dr. Frank Cerwonka, business department chairperson, necessarily played a major role in Thursday’s meeting. The session opened with several essential questions directed to him by committee members.

When asked what he felt the business department’s greatest problem was, Cerwonka replied that the department’s continued growth was the problem in terms of adjustment, specifically the need for more faculty.

The committee generally agreed that the staff was overworked. Committee member Alan Van K. Thompson suggested that college

"Communication is not dead" Workshop held
By Karen Ryder

The workshop consisted of various exercises and discussions that strengthened listening and speaking abilities. During a workshop session, a brief film was shown, depicting students within a classroom setting. By observing the film, Ms. Phillips' students could see why type of question provoked what type of response, and then apply this to their own experiences in the classroom.

Listening skills were emphasized through the use of triads, which are groups of three students who observe, listen, and reflect. After the speaker had voiced his opinion on a controversial issue, the listener gave a recap of what the speaker has just said. The reflector then evaluates how well the listener and speaker performed in their roles.

Having been alerted to their strengths and weaknesses in communicating, the students apply what they have learned about themselves to their behavior in class.

Ms. Phillips described the workshop as "a one-shot deal."

Brother Kevin O'Connell was the Master of Ceremonies, Donna McGlone, President of Dore Hall, made a statement on behalf of students and faculty.

"We're very happy in Dore Hall. We know we have a special person who watches over us and keeps us in his prayers. That person is Father Dore."

He described Fr. Dore as one of the best people to ever attend Providence College. He arrived at Providence College in 1932.

Mr. Joseph Gemma of the Providence College Sociology Department, it just needed to be revitalized.

This was the objective when he and Bill Phillips of the Counseling Center met to create and implement a Communications Workshop. The workshop was specifically designed for Ms. Phillips' two Introduction to Sociology classes.

It's prime purpose was to improve students' speaking and listening skills and be made aware of them, as well as the barriers that exist in communicating.

new policy were discussed and enacted. Basically the Board of Governors is a volunteer organization which sponsors events for the students at PC. The events occur at least once a month.

This was the objective when she first proposed last October, by Mr. James Cunningham, director of Safety and Security. The intention was to put the office in a more advantageous location.

At the time, there was much discrepancy over the reasoning behind this move. There was a majority of people at PC that a security office in the basement of Joe's could certainly not be more advantageous than one in the heart of student activity; Slavin Center.

Having held a preliminary meeting to gather ideas and opinions from the business department, the next step for the Planning Committee is to decide how these suggestions can best be used in revising the curriculum.

Debate Team: Young and successful

It was not long ago that Providence College did not have a debate team. Since then, one has evolved that has become active and successful. It was in 1977 that Henry Moniz and Peter Comerford were discussing the start of a debate team at PC. They were informed that Brown University was holding a tournament. They put out the initial investment for entry fees, et al., and went on to take third place. At that time, their primary concern was the simple enjoyment of intercollegiate competition and the joy of talking. These ideas are still present, but their understanding has clearly evolved.

Presently, the team is chaired by senior Peter Comerford and sophomore Frank Manni.

"Over the years, we have become increasingly aware of the Dominican tradition of disputing that contradicts the traditions of the Dominican Order," comment Manni and Comerford.

Obviously, the team's youth has not deterred their success. The team has been compared favorably, by one official of the Canadian University Society for Intercollegiate Debate, with much older teams, such as those at Yale and Columbia. A former head of the University of Toronto Debating Union, Geoffrey Buergher, put it this way: "Providence College has one of the best American teams on the circuit."

"We on the debate team have come a long way toward our goal of making Providence College even better as being a liberal arts institution in the long tradition of the Dominican Order," comment Manni and Comerford. "We would like to thank all the faculty and administration members who have helped us along the way."
Baccalaureate Mass: On campus or at the cathedral?

(Editors note: Because of the importance of this topic, the Editorial Board has decided to present both sides of the issue.)

Grotto

For steely-eyed traditionalists and romantics alike, the Grotto is the best choice for PC's Baccalaureate Mass. Its very location makes it the most logical choice for the Class of '80's final Mass as part of the Providence College community. It would be a real pity if the seniors were forced to relocates in the city. About the only reason a PC would travel to downtown Providence to attend a basketball game in the Civic Center, the same place which houses the Commencement activities. At least one major event encompassing the whole class should be held on campus.

The sentimental value of having Mass on campus simply cannot be understated. Looking back 10, 20 or 30 years from now, reflecting on a ceremony at the Grotto would be infinitely more satisfying than an afternoon at the cathedral. The cathedral is certainly imposing and beautiful, but has little real significance to the ordinary PC senior. While such a move is sure to be met with debate that because the Grotto is outdated, the cathedral could make the Mass more meaningful in this respect.

Another reason for moving the Baccalaureate Mass to the Cathedral is the weather, unpredictable even in May. The cathedral, located a mere 100 yards from the Grotto, would be heated and air-conditioned. If weather conditions precluded the celebration of the Baccalaureate Mass in the Grotto, a logistical problem would result. A change in location on the day of the Mass would result in, among other things, difficulty in notifying everyone involved and last-minute arrangements for transportation. These arguments are not presented with the intention of neglecting tradition for the sake of practicality and ceremony. Seniors who favor the cathedral as the site of the Baccalaureate Mass are not discounting the value of the Grotto. It has been proposed that a mass for seniors be celebrated in the Cathedral earlier in the Commencement week. If this idea is realized, the seniors will have a mass of their own that would be personal, memorable, informal and easily rescheduled.

Cathedral

The site of the Baccalaureate Mass for the Class of '80 was chosen last week during a Mass class meeting. PC's Grotto has always been the traditional site for the Mass. However, for many reasons, the Cathedral of Saints Peter and Paul downtown Providence would be a better location for this year's Mass.

The major problem with the Grotto is the lack of seating. Because of the way the altar of the Grotto is graded, only about 1200 chairs can be rented for use at the Baccalaureate Mass. With the large classes of recent years, this number is not sufficient to accommodate the graduates, their families and other members of the College community. It is especially uncomfortable for those who are seated on ground which may be cold and damp. The students should take into consideration their parents and grandparents, for whom adequate seating would be available at a cathedral.

The cathedral would also provide the atmosphere proper to the Baccalaureate Mass. First, there is a good sound system which would better project the music of the Brugy. Also, the Baccalaureate Mass is by its nature a dignified ceremony, and the cathedral would make the Mass more meaningful in this respect.

With the addition of these new security measures, however, this scene has been destroyed. The architectural structure of these gatehouses has been unfavorably compared with that of a Fossil Mall. The Grotto agrees that these houses are advantageous to the general safety of the College. We recommend, however, that a revi­sion to these structures be made so that they might blend in more smoothly with the surrounding scenery.

Security gatehouses: Asset to campus safety, yet revisions are suggested

This past week, the security gatehouses, constructed at the Harkins Hall and Husley Ave. entrances, became functional. A product of the Safety and Security Committee, this project has been in the planning stages for almost two years.

The Editorial Board of the Cowl applauds this venture. It will obviously be an asset to the campus, and hope fully, reduce the incidents of vandalism and theft. Once the gatehouses begin operating on a permanent basis, student, faculty and staff automobiles will be required to show a sticker in order to gain entrance to campus. All other vehicles will be found in violation of this law. Indeed, these are all worthwhile steps.

The Cowl does, however, question several aspects of the planning of this project. The purpose of the poles constructed at the Husley Ave. entrance to Upper Campus is puzzling. It is obvious that their function is to control the flow of cars passing through the determined area. Why however, was the first pole built so close to the guard house? The opening designed for one car to pass through is just barely adequate. The Editorial Board of the Cowl suggests the removal of the first pole. In the event that a fire truck would have to speed through this narrow opening, it would greatly hamper its progress.

Another issue which must be addressed is that of the security system that must be installed. A smart idea that has been suggested is the installation of a security system that can be turned on and off remotely. The Cowl, however, questions the feasibility of this system. It is possible that a system of this type could be installed, but it is uncertain whether it would be effective.

With the addition of these new security measures, however, this scene has been destroyed. The architectural structure of these gatehouses has been unfavorably compared with that of a Fossil Mall. The Grotto agrees that these houses are advantageous to the general safety of the College. We recommend, however, that a revision to these structures be made so that they might blend in more smoothly with the surrounding scenery.

Are you willing to risk your neck for a beer? It seems that quite a few PC students are, and it's not only their necks, but their heads, ankles and arms, too. Streets were constructed specifically to regulate the flow of traffic in the area, and are doing a good job of it!

What seems insane to me, is not allowing students an easy, safe walkway along this route. At it exists now, if and when you walk to Brad's, Dana's, or an apartment in this area, you have to be pretty agile to survive the trip.

Climb the inclining wall. Step over the barbed wire fence, then climb or jump your way onto the pile of broken glass, eight feet down. Add to this cold weather, a pair of clogs and occasionally a few inebriated youngsters and you've got a very hazardous situation.

The extent of this problem can be illustrated just by speaking with the students who've suffered badly sprained ankles, ripped shirts, scraped hands or lacerated heads, to name a few.

The purpose of this commentary is to awaken whomever is responsible for the door in the fence (the security, neighbors, the College or police) in order to get it unlocked.

If students are going to move between PC and the rest of the world anyway, they might as well do it safely!
Emerging problem of a new decade: A challenge for Providence College

By Bill Sullivan

Throughout the course of human history, time has been a friend, an excuse, a helper. Within its never-ceasing and powerful grasp lies the entire scope of human destiny, marked by changes that have been brought about by its all-pervasive and never-ending presence. Thus, while the transition from one day to another, or from one decade to another, one with seemingly insignificant parts, of a much larger panorama, the psychological aspect of engaging in a new decade—its new hopes, new fears, and seeming uncertainty—are far from insignificant. For, with the transition comes not only a realization that the world can somehow be made better, but also the realization that our lives should be directed toward that end. Indeed, in analyzing ourselves as individuals, we must realize that the roles that we, as maturing college students, will have to take will demand a clarity of purpose and degree of leadership that can only be achieved through a balanced and complete education. Toward that end, it seems only logical to evaluate and hopefully appreciate the worth of an education that stresses the whole of human history, time has been a

Providence College is, and always has been, a liberal arts college that stresses the various aspects of a balanced education, an institution that seeks to develop the whole person, through a core curriculum that varies significantly and which includes courses ranging from music and art to biology and chemistry. This diverse core curriculum has been a hallmark of PC, a tradition of some sixty years. The liberal arts tradition here at Providence College must continue to maintain

To dream of the future, to make predictions of what will be, is in many ways just short of "hubris." It is, however, perfectly legitimate to consider the importance and the gravity of the positions that we, as college students, will be accepting within the next few years. In considering the roles that we must take in order to forge the world into what we want it to be, we must look back at the past, analyze the present, and use this knowledge to create a better future. The burden of leadership will be, for many of us, a challenge that will have to be shouldered with an admixture of courage, determination, and strong inner conviction—traits that can be attained here at PC. In uncertain terms, the future is seen today as a challenge that must be met by men with clear minds and vision that are realistic, beneficial, and balanced in a world that often seems to be nothing more than some fleeting episode in a dream-like Disneyworld. And here at PC, where unity, co-operation, and other positive attributes are fostered, the future in many cases appears to be a little brighter, as tomorrow's leaders prepare for the challenges that they will face in the episodes that has always been a part of PC.

As Russian forces continue their invasion of Afghanistan, the President of the United States was forced to draw the line. Since he could not put military pressure on the Soviets, the President decided to pressure the Soviets by issuing his Olympic boycott ultimatum. Thus, the Russians either pull their troops out of Afghanistan by February 20, or the U.S. does not compete in Moscow this summer. This would mean a terrific sacrifice on the part of American athletes, especially when you consider the gravity of the situation and the importance of the Olympics. The liberal arts tradition here at Providence College must continue to main­

The following is a copy of the Energy Task Force’s report on the results of the Energy Conservation Questionnaire sent out in December.

The Energy Task Force mailed approximately 5,000 questionnaires to the Providence College community requesting information on possible energy conservation measures for the campus. 102 questionnaires were returned. 22 came from students, 80 from faculty, administration, and staff. The number one energy related problem on campus appears to be temperature windows in most of the buildings. People complain that many areas are greatly overheated for at least part of the day, while other areas fall below 60 degrees.

Although it may be necessary to open windows to compensate for overheated rooms, we should be very careful to close them when we leave the room so that heat does not continue to escape.

A second area of concern centered on staff, faculty and students carelessly leaving lights on and windows open in unused rooms. Faculty are asked to be especially careful in monitoring lights and windows as they leave classrooms. Students are asked to monitor lights and windows in classrooms and dorm rooms and additionally to be careful to turn off stereo, TV, lights, and any other electrical equipment as they leave their rooms. Since we do not pay the energy costs of the college directly, (although we do pay it indirectly), many of us treat energy as free. This attitude and the related behaviors need to change.

Several respondents pointed out particular broken windows and other specific problems. Other suggestions for conservation include:

- Automatic water shutoff valves in the lavatories.
- Restricting the water flow in showers.
- Timers on showers.
- Double doors on building entrances.
- Timer switches on lights in appropriate areas.
- Heavy curtains for dorm rooms.
- Plug in dorm corridors.
- Reducing the amount of light in the library and Raymond Hall.
- Turning off lights in the athletic fields when they are not in use such as during rain storms. (But others point out that many of our outdoor lights are crucial for security reasons and we should turn them on at dusk and not wait for full darkness.)
- Close the college longer in the library and Raymond Hall.
- Close the college longer in January/stay open in summer.
- Field Chiefs when they are not in use.
- Replace the Dominican community’s cars with more energy efficient models.
- Close the Dominican community’s cars with more energy efficient models.
- More storm windows and insulation: 50% to college, 25% to students, 25% to faculty and staff.
- Close the library and Raymond Hall.
- Conserve paper in lavatories, offices, and in mass mailings.
- Institute recycling programs for paper, glass, and aluminum.
- Encourage car pooling among commuting students and employees.

The Energy Task Force is currently involved in dealing with most of these problems and suggestions. Research is being conducted on the feasibility of various measures to improve the heating systems, building envelopes, water usage in showers, car pooling. We want to encourage the entire college community to practice these measures as much as possible and to contact us when specific problems or suggestions concerning energy use arise.

We want to thank those individuals who completed the questionnaire. We are incorporating the various suggestions into our research and recommendations on campus energy conservation.

If the decision to boycott the Games does not deter Russian aggression in Afghanistan, it is still a wise move. After all, the Russians have spent an enormous sum in preparation for the Games, and if the United States did not participate, it would deal a tremendous blow to the propaganda that surrounds the Olympics. To Russia, the Olympics are a golden opportunity to show the world that they can beat the United States.

Hopefully, the conflict can be resolved and the 1980 Olympics will not become a Communist fiasco. Once the crisis passes, the Games will go on.

Meanwhile, Russian tanks roll on.

Big East Tournament tickets on sale

Big East Commissioner Dave Gavitt announced today that through the efforts of the seven members of the Big East that over 4,000 tournament package tickets have been sold to the season ticket holders of the respective schools.

According to Gavitt, "this is a tremendous start in our attempts to sell out the tournament when you consider that the 4,000 figure does not include students and tickets that have not yet gone on public sale."

Gavitt announced that the Providence Civic Center will begin taking mail orders for either individual tournament tickets or individual sessions. The tournament package ticket, which includes a ticket to all four sessions and includes six games and a special copy of the Big East Tournament News, will cost $32. Tickets for individual sessions are priced at $8.

A tournament ticket brochure can be obtained by either stopping by the ticket office of the Civic Center or by calling the Civic Center at 331-0111 or the Big East office at 272-9108.

The three-day Big East basketball tournament, to be staged in the 12,000-seat Providence Civic Center, is scheduled for February 28, 29, and March 1. There will be six games played and this will be broken down into four separate sessions.

The sessions are as follows:

- Session no. 1—First round doubleheader. 7 & 9 p.m., February 28

According to Gavitt, "ticket orders for individual sessions will not be filled until February 15. Package ticket orders will be filled first up to February 15. On that day, individual mail session orders will be filled and then that will be followed by a public sale over the counter at the Civic Center."

Gavitt made two other announcements concerning the tournament.

- Providence College, regardless of where it finished (unless it were to win the regular season championship and thus draw a by) will play in the tournament opener which is scheduled for 3 p.m. on Thursday afternoon.
- Providence College, regardless of where it finished (unless it were to win the regular season championship and thus draw a by) will play in the tournament opener which is scheduled for 3 p.m. on Thursday afternoon.

Gavitt also announced, "that for the Thursday and Friday games, the Big East will not allow any games to be televised in Rhode Island, Massachusetts, or Connecticut unless it is sold out 48 hours prior to the scheduled tip-off."

This is the first Big East Tournament in history and according to Gavitt, "the initial response has been excellent. But it is our goal to sell out this building for all four sessions. This is a tall order, but I think with the type of teams we have and the excitement that will take place in the Civic Center, that collegiate basketball fans will want to be a part of the first Big East Tournament."

As to who will play who, Gavitt said, "the final regular season standings will determine that. The way things are going, I don't think we will be able to make a final determination until the last Saturday (February 23) of conference play."

The tournament format calls for the regular season champion to draw a bye into the semifinals. The other bracket will consist of the no. 4 seed vs. no. 7 seed and no. 3 seed vs. no. 6 seed. The other bracket will consist of the no. 5 seed vs. no. 9 seed, and no. 3 seed vs. no. 6 seed. These two winners facing each other in semifinal play.

BC on top in ECAC, 4-1

For two months Boston College and Providence College had been battling for supremacy in the ECAC. Like most neighborhoods, however, the ECAC has only enough room for one bully. BC made themselves the undisputed leaders of the ECAC last Friday night by downing the Friars, 4-1.

The Eagles entered the game with an ECAC record of 9-1-1, with the Friars hot on their heels sporting a conference record of 9-2. BC gave themselves breathing room over the only team, barring late season turnarounds at BU or UNH, which will challenge them for the ECAC eastern division title and guaranteed home ice in the playoffs by downing the Friars.

With forty seconds to go in the game, every corner of McHugh Forum began to rock with the chant of "We're number one!" That is every corner but the far left corner of the stands, where the PC fans had gathered to witness the battle of the giants. There they just stared in quiet frustration as the one man who was the single biggest factor in BC's victory over the Friars, Eagle net-minder Doug Ellis. Ellis had stopped all but one of the shots that the Friars dumped in on him and had just put an exclamation point on his fine performance by setting up Billy O'Dwyer's open net goal. O'Dwyer's goal gave the Eagles a 4-1 lead and put the game out of reach for the Friars.

Both the Eagles and the Friars played very physical games and gave the 4200 who saw the match at McHugh Forum a golden lesson in how to play the game. Unfortunately for Providence, the referees felt some of the physical play was outside the legal limit. The Eagles first two goals came on BC power plays.

Lee Blossom, first year man for the Eagles, whipped home a twenty footer from the slot right in front of Scott Fiske on the power play of the first period. Steve O'Neill tied the score at 16:05 on a pretty play. O'Neill stole the puck at center and skated in alone on the left wing for the score.

The first period ended 1-1, but things went downhill for the Friars after that. Scott Fiske was peppered with 19 shots in the second period as the Eagles took control of the game. Fiske leaped and dove in front of most of them but two eluded him.

The first came only 55 seconds into the period. Scott Kleinendorst had already been called for a hooking penalty at 0:26. Whisler had gone to his knees to block a shot by Mike Murphy once on that power play, but when he tried a second time, Murphy wheeled around him and blasted a 30 footer cleanly past Fiske.

One of the finest PC scoring bids of the game came when Paul Stasiak broke in alone on the left wing and dove in front of the net. Seconds later, Billy O'Dwyer upped the BC lead to 3-1 with a shot from the left board.

Friars still seek first Big East win

After smooth sailing past URI and NC A&T, the Friars founder on the rocks ahead of Big East competition. The Friars, 0-3 in conference play, are in danger of foundering completely on their maiden voyage through the Big East schedule.已有和 Seton Hall, two teams that Providence had a good chance to beat, handed it to the Friars last week.

Both games had striking parallels. In each game, the opposition shut off the inside game of the Friars, one with a man-to-man and one with a zone defense. The Friars dropped behind, then battled back into the game by good defensive play before the opponents took over and built big leads.

It was the Corny Thompson show in New Haven last Wednesday. The 6:30 center for the Huskies scored 27 points while leading the Huskies over the Friars, 74-63. He also pulled down 14 rebounds, made four steals and garnered four assists in the command performance. Thompson netted the first ten points for the Huskies as they battered out to an early 14-2 lead.

The inside game of the Friars was completely non-existent as the Huskies defended the Friars man-to-man. The Friar offense consisted mostly of outside shots and they did not even get many of those. The Friars turned the ball over 21 times, allowing the Huskies to amass an 18 point lead during the first half.

The Friars refused to quit, however. Slowing the tempo, both kept Thompson away from the Providence boards, where he had a field day, and also allowed Providence to chip away at the Huskies’ lead. An alert Rudy Williams’ steal enabled the Friars to close the gap to 37-30 at the half.

For five minutes in the second half, the Friars and Huskies traded buckets and the Friars trailed by only five. This was as close as they got. Before the final buzzer, the Huskies had run up an eleven point lead.

Williams was the bright spot for the Friars. Williams, with 24 points, was the only consistent producer on offense.

On Saturday, a battle of the Big East cellar dwellers was staged at Seton Hall. The Pirates, 0-4 in conference play, dealt the Friars their third Big East loss in a row. The Friars played well for the first ten minutes of each half, but ran into cold spells at crucial times. The Pirates scored eight.

Offense takes over as Lady Friar pucksters win two

By John Brandolino

The Lady Friars boosted their record to 8-2 as they downed a tough UVM squad at Schneider Arena. Saturday, forward Julie Ford picked up a well deserved shutout as the line of Connie Richer, Mary Ellen Riordan and Kathy Lenahan provided most of the game’s excitement. These three linemates combined for five goals and seven assists to lead the Lady Friars to a 7-0 victory.

Earlier in the week, the Lady Friars crushed the University of Connecticut, 12-1. Mary Ellen Riordan and Kathy Lenahan were keys to the Lady Friar attack in Thursday’s game, also. Riordan scored the hat trick, while Lenahan netted two. Mary Beth Hannon and Alexis Spogbo also had in a pair each and Sue Duffy, Diane Seraghty and Sissy

Bogosian each scored one in the Lady Friars’ romp.

Saturday afternoon was more of the same as PC came out passing in the first period. Two minutes into the game a Lenahan to Riordan to Richer passing-break brought the puck into the Catamount zone, where Lenahan scored in her first of three goals for the afternoon. About mid-period, the same line flooded the Vermont end with offense. Richer fought well to keep the puck inside the blue line and it went off. Her perfect pass set up Lenahan in front where she banged it in for her second goal and a 2-0 Friar lead.

Next, Duffy, a former Friar leading scorer who was switched to defense, broke through two Catamount defenders and fed Spogbo for the final goal of the period.
