Circle K hosts Special Olympics

By Karen Ryder

On Saturday, March 15, Alumni Commission was the setting for a Special Olympics basketball tournament. The annual leadership competition, including teams from the greater Rhode Island area, The Providence College Circle K , in conjunction with the Special Olympic chapter of the Special Olympics, was responsible for making this the first such competition to PC in a number of years.

Steve Evangelista, the executive director of the Rhode Island Special Olympics, described the organization as, "a program of sports training and athletic competition for the mentally retarded. " In 1966, at the start of the program, 60 members resided in Rhode Island. Today, that number is increased to a total participant enrollment of over 1400 individuals. Evangelista described the growth of the Special Olympics programs in Rhode Island, including such sporting events as: swimming, soccer, and frisbee. Any mentally retarded person from age 8 and on, is eligible to participate.

Gigi Evans, a representative of the Rhode Island Special Olympics, described the tournament this Saturday as the final plan for this year's Special Olympics. "It's here because it's true, not true because it's here."

BOG elections

By Donna Bunn

"It's here because it's true, not true because it's here."

The BOG will hold elections tomorrow for next year's Executive Board. The officers are as follows: president, vice-president and treasurer. Each will have two candidates. All of the candidates are members of Milton, junior class.

President candidate L.J. Manning is a political science major from Pittsburgh, PA. He has been chairman of the Constitution Committee for the past two years and served as a representative to Student Congress during his freshman year. When asked what he would like the BOG to accomplish next year, Manning replied, "I have an objective to create a more workable relationship with Student Congress and other student organizations. I would also like to continue the well-rounded programming of student oriented events that the BOG demonstrated this year, especially in light of the drinking age being raised."

Dan Connor, a business management major from Milton, MA, is also running for the office of president. He is presently chairman of the BOG Lectures Committee. In stating his goals for new members of the BOG he said, "The BOG has been very successful this year, but if the drinking age goes up next year, the BOG will be forced to change. Obviously, the BOG will have to focus on non-alcoholic events such as the Film, Coffeehouse, Video and Travel Committees. The biggest asset the BOG will need next year is creativity, which can be provided by and the proper leadership, the entire board can be innovative, and imaginative as well."

This year's vice-presidential candidate is Nancy Falco of the Publicity Committee and Mark O'Rourke. Tuttle comes from Windsor, CT, and majors in health services administration. She has served on the BOG for three years, formally as a member of the Publicity Committee and now as its chairperson. Mark O'Rourke, a marketing major from Arlington, MA, has served two years on the BOG and is presently chairman of the Film Committee.

Liz Olekas and Mike Joyce are both running for the office of treasurer. Olekas, a business management major, hails from Westfield, MA. She is currently major chairperson of the Social Committee and Coffeehouse Committee. Joyce is serving as previously as the chairperson of the Ring Weekend Core Committee of the Class of '81.

Congress proposes $10 activity fee hike

By Joyce Simard

At the Student Congress meeting held on Sunday, March 16, Mary Ellen Burke, chairperson of the Faculty Survey Committee, reported that the results of the Faculty Survey, conducted last semester, will be released in booklet form prior to spring registration. This year's survey was conducted by Marie Robitaille, former chairperson of this committee.

Dave Mulliner, chairperson of the Athletic Board, announced that rosters for intramural softball will be available sometime next week. The season will begin after spring vacation.

The Food Committee will be conducting a survey in regard to the dinner program. Raymond Cafeteria. R.A.'s will distribute the surveys to resident students who will be given two entries to rate each item from 1 to 5, with 1 being the least appetizing and 5 being the most appetizing.

Sign-ups for the upcoming tournament, to be held Friday at the King Philip Center, will begin on Tuesday, March 21 in the Congress Office. Meetings will take place on Tuesday, March 25.

Manning is running for next year's president, and in particular, to the club's president, Cecilia Scott. Scott, a sophomore from Taunton, MA, first became involved with the Special Olympics as a summer job. She felt it would be a good project for Circle K, a service organization of the school, to undertake. Scott proceeded to get in touch with Evangelista, their efforts culminating in Saturday's tournament.

A highlight of the day was an appearance by Ernie DiGregorio and John Nolan, who handed out awards. Scott stated that this was a "tomato" for all the students, who were anxious to do some hand shaking with their idols.

Missing: one black-jack table

By Lewis DiPore

As part of Parents' Weekend, two weeks ago, the senior class sponsored the annual Casino Night according to PC's 62nd Anniversary. McPhail, O.P., it was a successful evening among an anonymous person or persons ignorantly ripped off a black-jack table. Whenever it probably wouldn't have, had he or she realized the possible consequences. Although not expensive, the table is a rental and is licensed and tightly regulated as gambling machines by the state; thus it is a state offense if posed by anyone other than the licensor, or licensee. In that regard, the theft will soon be reported to the State Police. So, whoever has the table should now be sufficiently forewarned that the table will not make a very good souvenir or piece of furniture.

Father McPhail has offered to talk confidentially with anyone who knows the whereabouts of the table. If anyone is able to locate the table, you could call him and say something like, "Hi, Father, guess what I found!"

Wednesday will give seniors a chance to reminiscence about their four years at PC with the Senior Slide Show at the Viking Hotel in Newport. Dancing after the show will be provided by "Naked Cowboy," a club in the Ocean State. The special event will begin at 7 p.m. in the "Dinco Newport," a club in the Ocean State. A cruise to Block Island is offered for those wishing to go to individual events, the prices will be as advertised.

Parents' Night will be held from 9 to 11 p.m. on Saturday, March 21 at the King Philip Center at 10 a.m.

The Commencement Ball will be held Friday at the King Philip in Wrentham. A choice of roast beef or chicken cordon bleu (chicken stuffed with ham and cheese) is available for the entire. Open bar and dancing will round out the night. Parents' events will include an appearance by Ernie DiGregorio and Joe Nolan, who handed out awards.

Anne Manchester takes over as PID

By Donna Bazin

Anne Manchester, a 1975 graduate of Providence College, recently returned to PC as the new Public Information Director. She replaced Joe McAlear, who is presently Public Information Director at Springfield College. In her new position, Manchester’s main functions will include overseeing PC publications and official College statements. She is the editor of the Providence Magazine and of the Alumni Update Newsletter. She graduated from PC in 1975 with a BA in humanities, and from Purdue, com laude in 1978, with an MA in public communications and journalism. While at Purdue, Manchester participated in the Providence-in-Europe program in 1973-74, and worked for the Courier as well as being a photographer for the yearbook. At Purdue she was a graduate teaching assistant in the department of communication. After graduation from Purdue she worked at Channel 12, WPRI. She worked as a field reporter, in promotions and productions, and also in camera and electronic graphics as a communications producer. She also did occasional talk shows for WPRI.

Since September, 1978, Manchester has been a visiting lecturer at the continuing education program at PC, in the department of business administration. Manchester will be very beneficial to PC as a Public Information Director. Her former experiences will be of excellent assistance. Manchester remarked, “It is good to be back; I feel as if I am coming home. There have been a lot of good changes. Women seem to be gaining momentum, with a viable role in all phases of campus life. People are really starting to notice them.”

Students to rank on campus food

The 1980-81 Food Committee is already hard at work striving to meet the needs of those who satisfy their appetites at any of PC’s three dining facilities. Whether it be Alumni Cafeteria, Raymond Cafeteria or Mural Lounge, anyone frequenting these spots can play an active part in the improvement and evaluation of the overall operation of the cafeteria. The committee depends mainly on feedback from the students in order to produce new ideas and suggestions. These suggestions are then presented to the Executive Food Committee, which is comprised of such people as Rev. Walter Heath, O.H.P.; Paul Wyrell, manager of Alumni Cafeteria; Joseph Murphy, manager of Raymond Cafeteria; Debbie DeMusis, chairperson of the Student Congress Food Committee; and Joe Potenza, chairman of the Student Congress. The committee has found that the suggestion box in the cafeteria does not provide an accurate idea of the general consciousness of student opinion. In view of this situation, the committee has devised a set of three surveys, the first of which will be issued by R.A.’s this week.

Basically, the survey asks that students vote on a scale of 1-5, every item that is served in the cafeteria. Upon tabulation of all the results, the committee can objectively see where the items fall objectively and will be sold. The results of the survey will be beneficial to the students, in that the cafeteria will serve two meals of the same rank at the same time. The actual institution of any new long-range goals will depend on costs and the feasibility of the suggestions. R.A.’s are urged to participate honestly and accurately because they receive their surveys from their R.A.’s, either today or tomorrow. Any student who wishes to further their influences in this direction can leave their name and box number in the Congress office. Any and all new-comers to the Food Committee are welcomed.

BOG Elections

The BOG will hold elections for its Executive Board on Thursday, March 20, from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. in Lower Slavin and from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. in Raymond Cafe. For further information contact Dorian Murphy, 3209 (box no. 2785).

Runners get free clinic

The Department of Environmental Management's Division of Parks and Recreation announced today the department will be sponsoring a free clinic for runners from 9:30 a.m. to Noon, Saturday, March 22, in Room 110 of Providence College's Slavin Center.

William Ryan, chief of the division, said the clinic will feature a panel discussion by experts on key aspects of the sport, including training patterns, medical considerations, diet, health benefits and equipment choice.

Speakers will include John Trayon, two-time World Cross Country Champion and member of the 1980 Irish Olympic Team; Bob Ambato, PC's track and cross-country coach who has led teams to 68 consecutive dual meet victories and was recently named Rhode Island Coach of the Year; Dr. Frank Santopietro, a podiatrist with a special interest in running equipment; Dr. Dario Harrara, cardiologist and an expert in the field of sports medicine; and Ms. Linda Coop, a dietician with a specialty in the nutritional needs of the runner.

The panel will be moderated by George Schoell, organizer of the Rhode Island State Marathon and an eight-time Boston marathoner.

Reservations for the free clinic are necessary and may be made by calling the division at 277-2632.

Walters speaks on working women

By Tom Bowen

On Tuesday, March 4, Susan Walters, a CPA for Ernst and Winney, spoke to Phyllis Rorak's business communications class. She talked about women in the accounting field and the job interviewing process.

Walters, who is married to basketball coach Gary Walters, earned a bachelor's degree in psychology at Union College. After five years she went back to school and earned her masters in business administration at Dartmouth College, and she became a CPA last year.

Walters stated that it is easier for women in accounting than for women in other fields, because in accounting one deals with quantitative tests and technical managerial skills. Thus, one's credentials are not open to subjective opinion as in other fields.

"The public accounting firms stand behind their women employees," explained Walters. "Some clients do not want to deal with a woman accountant. But the firm backs her up and the client has the option to accept this or look elsewhere."

Walters stated that, in the accounting field, women are subject to the same expectations and demands as men are. She explained that accounting is a team oriented operation, with each member of the team responsible for doing part of the entire job. If one member does not carry their own responsibility, the fiber of the team begins to break down.

As far as other fields in business are concerned, Walters noted that women do not play the same games as men do. For instance, most women do not join the exclusive country clubs that men join. Also, women do not have the same "safety conversation piece" (i.e., sports) that men use to break the ice with a client.

Walters also discussed the job interview process. With the class, she advised everyone to be prepared for each interview. "If you can get information on the company and think up questions, it shows the interviewer that you are interested."

Money squandered as administration dawdles

There is no excuse for wastefulness in any area, and especially not in the realm of finances. It is ironic, then, given the present period of economic pressure, that a flagrant instance of financial wastefulness exists right here on Providence College campus. Specifically, we are referring to the security gatehouses on River and Hasley Avenues. These gatehouses were constructed in early January for the purpose of tightening security, especially on both upper and lower campus.

Critiqued at a cost of roughly $50,000, most agreed that this expenditure was worthwhile, since it would insulate better campus security.

Presently, the gatehouses are in full operation, and the Editorial Board of the Cowl finds it hard to believe they have been an asset to security. It's almost as if the gatehouses don't exist. There have been no restrictions at the gates regarding vehicles, only in the area. For instance, the vehicle may or may not enter the campus.

There is no apparent reason why this situation should exist. The Safety and Security Committees reports on the operation of the gate on January 29. Revisions were made on the original policy at a second meeting on February 15. The total plan was then approved by the Committee on Administration on February 20. Thus, the guidelines for operation of the gatehouses have already been set.

Visitors passes and parking permits have been decreased, and the new fees are ready for distribution. The final step involves receiving the "seal of approval" from the president of the College, Rev. Thomas R. Petersen, O.P. Herein lies the problem. The proposed policies have been under consideration for nearly one month, yet no action has been taken.

The most disturbing part of this entire situation concerns the fact that these houses are being staffed by guards who have been given no rules for their operation. The College, in essence, is paying these guards to guard nothing in vain, and do nothing. The houses have been staffed for one month and the College has expended over $4,000 on wages for these personnel to do nothing.

The Cowl Editorial Board considers this to be an example of excessive wastefulness. In the interest of economy alone, the gatehouses should not have been staffed until a policy was accepted. This has been a waste of not only money, but also manpower and time. The Editorial Board of the Cowl urges Father Peterson to consider the policies proposed by the Safety and Security Committee, and take action before more precious time and money are wasted.

WDOM offers service to PC and community

It is a recognized and appreciated fact that PC's many student organizations spend much time and effort to provide various services for the student body. One group in particular offers its services tirelessly and consistently.

WDOM, the College radio station, fits this description. Although not as visible as many other organizations, WDOM adds much to the College community, and the Editorial Board of the Cowl feels that they deserve additional recognition.

WDOM is licensed by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) to "serve in the public interest," and an effort to provide various services for the student body. As a non-commercial educational channel, WDOM meets the requirements of their license, the station must broadcast a designated amount of "educational and community interest" material. Thus, WDOM provides a diversified schedule of programs.

The station's coverage of campus events such as volleyball games, basketball games, and academic events is reflected in the College and community.

In an attempt to serve the community, WDOM recently participated in a Leukemia Radiothon. Streaming from West minister Mall in downtown Providence, the station, in conjunction with other community radio stations, was successful in raising over $10,000 for the cause. The dedication and hard work is truly admirable.

The Editorial Board of the Cowl congratulates general manager Mike McCormack, Frank Evans, program manager, and the entire staff of WDOM on the success of their venture. Their dedication has not gone unnoticed. They have proven themselves to be an asset to both the College and community.

Are you trying out for the Friars Club? Why or why not?

March 19, 1980

Mary Anne Viola, '83
"Yes, because they are really well-organized and have some really nice people!"

Ronnie White, '82
"No, I didn't consider it, but I decided I didn't want to be a Friar. I don't think I fit the image."

Liz O' Donovan, '82
"No, I don't think I would be competitive for a summer job if you know in advance what your interviewer wants to hear, or what an employer would like to read in a letter of application," she says. "Here is a list of things that you should try to avoid in your application letter:"

1. "I'm a good swimmer." Don't assume that your employer will know what you mean by "a good swimmer." If you are applying for a job that requires swimming, be sure to mention your swimming skills specifically.

2. "I know how to type." This is a basic skill that most employers expect. Be sure to mention any other skills you have that might be relevant to the job.

3. "I've never been fired." If you have been fired from a job, don't be afraid to mention it. Explain why you were fired and how you have learned from the experience.

4. "I've never taken a vacation." If you have never taken a vacation, don't be afraid to mention it. Explain why you have never taken a vacation and how you plan to take one in the future.

5. "I'm a fast learner." Be sure to explain what you mean by "a fast learner." If you are applying for a job that requires quick thinking or problem-solving, be sure to mention your ability to think quickly and solve problems.

6. "I'm a team player." Be sure to explain what you mean by "a team player." If you are applying for a job that requires working with others, be sure to mention your ability to work well with others.

7. "I'm a hard worker." Be sure to explain what you mean by "a hard worker." If you are applying for a job that requires hard work, be sure to mention your ability to work hard.

8. "I'm a quick thinker." Be sure to explain what you mean by "a quick thinker." If you are applying for a job that requires quick thinking, be sure to mention your ability to think quickly.

If you follow these tips, you will be well on your way to getting the job you want. Good luck!

Hints for the summer job search

1. Don't apply for a job if you can't stay for the whole season. Employers expect their workers to be committed to their positions.

2. If you are interested in a job, be sure to show initiative and enthusiasm. Employers are looking for people who will go the extra mile to get the job done.

3. Be sure to check with your college's career center for information about summer jobs. Many colleges have relationships with local businesses and can help you find summer employment.

4. If you are interested in a job, be sure to ask about the duties and responsibilities of the job. Employers expect you to be familiar with the job you are applying for.

5. If you are interested in a job, be sure to check with your college's employment office for information about summer jobs. Many colleges have relationships with local businesses and can help you find summer employment.

6. If you have good communication skills and an outgoing personality, you will have a better chance of getting a summer job interview. An articulate person has a definite edge over someone who is more reserved and shy.

7. If you have a high-paying position in an expensive resort, you must bring some professionalism to the job. That means experience in a similar job and also means a professional attitude. Professionals don't just work 9 to 5 or 5 o'clock, and they may have to do things before or after hours to show initiative and imagination on their own.

8. Think of yourself as a product. What can you do? Who could use your skills? Be sure to apply for jobs that are a good fit for your skills and interests.

9. Employers are looking for people who will help them grow and develop. Be sure to show that you have the skills and experience they need.

10. Be sure to check with your college's career center for information about summer jobs. Many colleges have relationships with local businesses and can help you find summer employment.

If you follow these tips, you will be well on your way to getting the job you want. Good luck!
Rev. Edwin I. Masterson, O.P.: businessman to priest

By Kathy Hansen

Perhaps you've seen him. He walks along campus paths with a friend, in the late afternoon or early morning. He's a sharp, charming businessman who finds people delightful.

He's Rev. Edwin Ignatius Masterson, O.P.

Father Masterson first came to PC as a student, in 1924. The College was an all-male establishment, and "practically all the students were going for the priesthood." Yet, when Father Masterson graduated with a liberal arts degree in 1928, he became not a priest, but a businessman, first as a loan officer for Metropolitan Life in New York City, then as a public accountant with the Audit Company of America. Ordained in 1933, he returned to PC in 1935 to head the business department.

In 1977, Father Masterson headed the business department. In 1973, he stopped teaching. Since his retirement, he has the job of getting the papers at the front door for the Dominican community, and is the official squirreled feeder around campus.

Nominated for the Person of the Year award in both 1972 and 1973, Father Masterson is an Emeritus member of the PC Corporation.

Happy Saint Patrick's Day!

Dore's soliloquy

By Lori Evangelou

I savor the quietude which now lingers in the vacated halls. Everyone has abandoned the dormitory for the long winter weekend. After the last traveler closed the door behind her a quiet stillness crept up on me. The echo of pitter pattering feet scuffling in slippers was heard now throughout, as the girl's voice and the library, but also St. Pius Church, where was the President's office, was quiet too. And since then, many, many changes have occurred.

Father Masterson cited the biggest change as being the "advent of the girls to PC," which has given PC "more beauty, more happiness, and more interest. God bless them."

Mission: rescuing runaway youths

Rev. Bruce Ritter, O.F.M., has a special calling: he rescues runaway youths from sex peddlers. This Sunday, Father Ritter will speak in '64 Hall at 7 p.m.

"These are not the pretty poor," says Father Ritter, the Franciscan priest who has founded a haven for teenage prostitutes, runaways, and con artists. "Since the children have nothing to sell but themselves, they're easily victimized by the so-called victimless crime of prostitution."

Father Ritter, an expert on prostitution and child pornography, founded and directs New York City's Covenant House, where thousands have sought help.

The lecture is sponsored by the Board of Governors, the Counseling Center, and the Chaplain's Office. Admission is free.

PC sings the flu blues

By Jeff Esposito

This season, this time of year—this opportunity for misery known as the flu season—is here. Whether it snuck up or was blantly in its attack on us is not the central question. It is here and we all have to cope with it—with pills, with bedrest, with chicken soup. The flu brings more than aches and pains, coughs and misery with it as it rolls in on this campus.

Oh sure, you can try preventive medicine, that aged euphemism for ducking germs. You can gargle all day, get plenty of rest and exercise, even go to bed early and not stop the flu. It rolls in and through, a freight train in the diseased railroad of life. It can't be stopped.

When it comes many things happen—none of them very good.

Of course the body aches, the throat becomes sandpaper, the disposition becomes nonexistent. Friends disappear, trying to preserve themselves. The influenza is a poor substitute for the little bedroom you left behind.

When you become well enough to go back to classes and see how much work has been missed, your academic life passes before red, tired, aching eyes. Soon, everyone knows you have a couple of distant acquaintances contract the flu. It's very simple to see what a real community we have when everyone is playing pass the white stuff, and most would rather die than sing Christmas carols. The flu season also makes all people love spring. "Hang on, spring's coming," they huddle—fair-weather friends in the most literal sense.

Yet, T.S. Eliot observed "April is the cruellest month." He probably never had the flu.

COA interviews

By Steve Sylvia

Interviews for the student representative to the Committee on Administration will be held next week by the Student Congress. To be interviewed, a student has to sign-up in the Congress office by Friday, March 21, at 4:00 p.m.

The COA is made up of faculty and administration who advise Rev. Thomas R. Peterson, O.P., president of the College, on the day to day operations of the school. Information given to Father Peterson by the COA members is helpful in his final decision making.

The International Association of Students in Economics and Business Management is looking for talented, motivated Providence College students to join the local chapter of the world's largest student-run organization and participate in our 1981 activities.

Student talent search

The Providence Water Color Club will present an Open Graphics Show at the Club Gallery, 6 Thomas Street, from March 16 through April 4. On exhibition will be original prints, drawings and photographs.

An opening reception will be held on Sunday, March 16, from 2:00 to 5:00 p.m. Gallery hours thereafter will be Tuesday-Saturday, 12:30 to 3:30, Sundays, 3:00 to 5:00 p.m.

Stella Artois (Ar-twa) is part of a brewing tradition that began more than 600 years ago in the year 1366. The robust, hearty lager taste comes from old world brewing that patiently insists that every drop is matured a full 63 days.

Today in more than 50,000 bars and restaurants all across the Continent, Europe's discriminating beer drinkers ask for the great taste of Stella Artois.

Now you can, too.

DiGregorio is also an honorary member of the Special Olympics Board of Directors, and Dave Cagis, the Athletic Director of PC, is the honorary head coach.

Funding wise, Evangelista explained that the organization depends mainly on "corporate contributions and fund raisers." Companies such as McDonald's and Coca-Cola also make contributions of food for the various competitions.

The cheering competition, which was judged by sophomore Sarah Williams, saw South County, Bristol and Newport as top winners. Newport, Bristol and Cranston took first place in divisions A, B, C, respectively.

Wildcats take EAIAW title, Lady Friars take second

The story was familiar. A strong Lady Friar squad played their hearts out but came out on the short end of the score against, you guessed it, UNH. In a game in which the unofficial national women's hockey title was stake, UNH preserved their three year dominance over the Lady Friars, 5-2.

The Big Red was still outplaying us on emotion..." said UNH coach Mark "Randy" Fiske with shots from all over the ice and in a six minute span late in the period, the Lady Friars were trailing by 3-2 through much of the third period.

Larry Tobin slid one under Fiske at 12:24 while Denis Martin cooled his heels in the penalty box for a hooking infraction. Dan Duffy tipped in a Jim Gibson slapshot at 17:14 and Roy Kerling scored on a three on two break at 15:56 of the final period.

The second period splurge was not quite enough however. Kathy Bryant scored on a three on two break at 15:56 of the final period, the game was so close that the issue was not over until the Wildcats pumped two goals by Jane Ford in the final five minutes of the contest.

"It was such a game but the way the game was going," said UNH coach Rus McCurdy, "We hadn't been scoring and they had been outplaying us on emotion..."

The Lady Friars' emotion was not quite enough however. Kathy Bryant scored on a three on two break at 15:56 of the final period.

Gail Griffith finished off the scoring several minutes later with a tally at 16:29.

The Lady Friars had kept the Wildcats hands full with strong forechecking. The explosive Wildcat offense was held in check and the Lady Friars were able to take the lead early in the game.

Kathy Lenahan, who figured in both goals for the Lady Friars, scored an unassisted goal at 12:21. Cindy McKay set up Mary Ellen Pannalecher for two goals, at 14:40 and 16:09, and UNH skated off with a first period lead, 3-1. In between McKay netted a goal of her own.

The Lady Friars turned the tempo of the game around and dominated on offense in the second period. Mary Ellen Riordan popped in a power play goal at 1:23 to close the score at 3-2. This was the first EAAH hockey tournament ever held. Since no other women's hockey tournaments are being held this year, the Wildcats may claim to have the national title, albeit unofficial.

Tom Palomara and the Lady Friars have achieved remarkable success this past season, putting together their best seasonal record ever. They were undoubtedly one of the dominant women's hockey team in the nation. Unfortunately they were not the only dominant team. Providence College and the University of New Hampshire are becoming two of the toughest rivalries in collegiate athletics.

Loss to Cornell last Friday wasn't the first

Ironically, the Friars had a chance to eliminate their playoff nemesis, Cornell, before the regular season was over. If the Friars could have defeated the Big Red on their home ice, Lynah Rink, Cornell would have been denied a playoff berth.

The Big Red, backed by 4,000 screaming, manic fans, had ideas of their own.

Despite struggling through most of the regular season in which they only compiled a .500 record, Cornell put on a fine performance and upset Providence, which was then ranked second in the East, 5-2.

Despite one of the closest finishes of the year, the Friars escaped the first period with a 1-1 tie. Bruce Raboin was called early in the Providence end. The Big Red was always one jump ahead whether forechecking or backchecking. The Friars tied it up on a RANDY Velischek drive from the left point. Steve O'Neill had passed the puck to Velischek from behind the Providence net to set up a Velischek screen shot which eluded Derek Elloe.

Cornell opened second period scoring early at 2:42. Roy Kerling, leading goal scorer for the Big Red, tipped in a Jim Gibson pass from the left corner.

Jeff Whisler's score on a play which he would repeat against Cornell in the Boston round was tied again. That was to be the last time Colgate had a chance to pull an upper.

A quiet, calm pep talk by Lamoriello in between periods kept things in perspective. "If said that all year long we've remained poised and kept our composure I couldn't see why we shouldn't do it in the next period." Well, regardless of what he said, it was the desire of his players who wanted the game more than Colgate did.

The question at the start of the period was, would the Friars come out flying or flat? The fingers were crossed but not for long... A shot by Jim Colucci that broke through the pads of Guy Imlerd made it 4-3 at 5:22. At 8:43 it was 5-3 in Dan Martin's net.

The Friars weren't looking back, only ahead. Sullivan scored his second to make it 6-3. Then the Gopher line came back into the picture after opening the scoring. Freshman Kurt Kleinendorst to Steve Anderson made it 7-2. When the score was tied up with 26 seconds left in overtime, who would be the last time Colgate had a chance to pull an upper.

PC downs Clarkson in consolation, 6-5

In a consolation game played at the Boston Garden Saturday night the determined Friars rallied to a 6-5 victory over the Clarkson Golden Knights. PC entered the third period trailing by 4-1 but managed to tie the score, 5-5, with 26 seconds left. In overtime, who else but captain Jeff Whisler put in the winning score. But, as fate would have it, the Golden Knight captain Dave Mackay broke down the ice alone after blocking a shot and netted a shorthanded goal with 1:27 left.

Still, Providence was not going to give up. A Martin to Kleindorfer to Steve Anderson pass tied it up with 26 seconds left to send it into overtime.

Whisler's shot from the face-off circle gave him his second goal of the contest and a 6-5 win for his team with 1:15 left in the first overtime period. It was Whisler's record 124th straight game.

Cornell University overpowered Dartmouth 5-1 for the ECAC Championship in a contest played after the consolation game. It was Cornell's 7th all-time championship, a feat duplicated by no other team. Cornell had a .500 record during the regular season but began to improve at the end of the year. They defeated the Friars on their last game of the season to make the playoffs and upset top-seeded BC to advance in the tournament.

Lady Friars take hoop title

It was to be a weekend of upsets. First Queens then BU fell to the tough Lady Friars as they captured their first ever Eastern Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women Northeast basketball championship.

Lynn Sheedy and Mary Ann McCoy were the headliners for the Lady Friars, but they were supported by a stunning cast of thousands. Joan Finneran, Rita Fraser, Peggy Egan, and Madeline McCoy all contributed to what was maybe the finest show in Cambridge two weekends ago.

The Lady Friars, who were seeded fourth going into the tournament game at Alumni Arena on March 8 and 9, opened the play-offs against top ranked Queens and took a 71-64 decision.

Sheedy netted 21 points in sparking the Lady Friars to the finals. Mary Ann McCoy turned in 14 and Joan Finneran had 15.

On Sunday the Lady Friars took on BU in the championship game. Sheedy, playing with the same inspirational spirit that has characterized her play all year, and hit two quick baskets for a four point Lady Friar lead, 55-51. From that point on they never looked back.

BU took the lead back at 57-55, but Joan Finneran and Rita Fraser stepped up to dominate BU throughout the contest and had a comfortable 35-20 lead at half time. BU played frantically in the second half and closed to within seven with three minutes to play. Mary Ann McCoy and Joan Finneran poured it on and insured the Lady Friar victory, 68-55.

Mary Ann McCoy was top scorer for the Lady Friars with 17, Lynn Sheedy popped in 11, while both Rita Fraser and Peggy Egan each scored 10.

give Cornell the lead with 5:44 left. PC tried desperately to capitalize in the remaining minutes, but coach Lou Lamanno was not about to give up. Already up there just didn’t want us to win.

Maybe it was Cornell’s fate to win. One thing is for sure; they certainly didn’t give us a chance to win their favor. With seconds left in the first quarter, a Hobger shot off the backboards dejected in front of Eliot. Colucci flipped it into the net and the red light flashed, signaling a goal. But, good light, signaling the end of the period, cancelled out the good light. At first, the Providence players thought they had scored. But, again, after a discussion between the referee and goal judge, the game was called.

Scott Fiske made as many saves in the final period as expected of a modern goalie. He did a good job controlling the game in the crease, but he couldn’t cut off the full circle and cut down the angles on the Red first pair.

"The record belies a man of stature," but Craig Virgin of the United States stands today as a giant in the world of cross-country. With an aggressive display of calculated running strength, the 25 year old graduate of the University of Illinois led home a star-studded field of runners to notch his first victory in the most prestigious of all races, the World Championship.

On March 9, 200 runners from 30 countries gathered at the Long-champs race course in Paris, France to compete in this international contest of speed and endurance. Three PC students were present at this event: John Treacy, Dan Dillon and Ray Treacy.

Treacy, Dan Dillon and Ray Treacy.

The pace was brisk early in the race, and Virgin, who got off to a slow start and himself third at 11,180 meters, closed to within seven with three minutes to play. Mary Ann McCoy and Joan Finneran poured it on and insured the Lady Friar victory, 68-55.

Greedy Rutgers advances

By Mary Gibbons

The Lady Friars ended their glorious 1980 season with a loss to the superior team from Rutgers University, 70-54, in an AIAW tournament game, Alumni Arena, Saturday night.

The Lady Knights took control of the game from the start, doubling PC's score at the half, 32-16. Despite the loss, it was a memorable game for the Lady Friars. Co-captains Lynn Sheedy and Mary Ann McCoy said their college careers come to an end before an unbelievable crowd of 1,076.

Sheedy and McCoy, both having topped the 1,000 mark in career points, led the Lady Friars in scoring with 18 and 13 points respectively. Junior standout Kathy Dwyer, back in action after an injury early in the season, added 8 points to the Providence effort and sophomore sensation Rita Fraser contributed 6 points. Madeline McCoy was very strong defensively, snatching many rebounds. Linda Wade, Joan Finneran and Sue Huston walled off PC in their first national tournament. Freshmen Peggy Egan and Janeanne Rastelli did their share to aid the Lady Friars.

Finishing with a 22-7 record, this was one of the best years ever for the Lady Friars. Strong efforts by all proved to bring PC through an incredible season to national competition.

Congratulations to all!
Lightning strikes twice....Cornell wins again, 6-5

Red four goal rally sinks Friars

By John Brandolino

It was all that an ECAC playoff game should be. There was action, tension, the controversial calls, and the comeback. When it was all over, Cornell University had turned a last period 5-2 deficit into a stunning 6-5 victory over the Friars.

In the second period, Providence led 4-1 after three unanswered goals in five minutes. "Then, we played defensively, rather than offensively," commented defensemen Jim Colucci, "and they came right back at us."

Cornell took advantage of two powerplays and capitalized on shots from the point to wrap it up with four goals in the final period. Early in the contest, both teams had trouble controlling the puck. As the players warmed up, so did the tempers. The play before and after the whistle was heated and tough. Late in the first period, the Friars started the scoring during a Big Red hooking penalty. Steve O'Neill saw Jeff Whisler flying down the right side. One quick pass later, captain Whisler had put the puck by Red goalie Darren Eliot. But the Friar lead didn't last for long. With 33 seconds left in the period, Cornell's captain Doug Berk knocked the puck by Scott Fiske to even things up.

Hustle was the name of the game in the second period. Heavy checking by Cornell was offset by outstanding defensive plays by Fiske and company. Randy Velichek and Jim Colucci battled hard in the corners and sent mars Cornell players head first into the boards. The tension was there—penalties were even called after the whistle. But these two talented teams just shrugged off what they could and gave the 10,000 plus crowd what they came to see—Good hockey.

At 8:24, beautiful passing set up defensemen Jon Hoberg close to the Red net. He wheeled around an opposing player to slap in the puck for PC's second power-play score. Less than two minutes later, John Sullivan battled to slip a pass near the Big Red crease. Once there, Denis Martin made it 3-1. If that wasn't enough, the PC powerplay setup added one more. Mike Gouin gave the Friars a three goal lead with just 5:41 left in the second period.

After that, it seemed as if Providence controlled the tempo. However, a controversial Cornell goal, with just 32 seconds left, narrowed the margin to two. The Red goal light didn't go on after the apparent score and it took the goal judge and the referees a few minutes to decide that it counted. "I never went in. I was right there," said Martin. "They gave them a little incentive."

Early in the third period a goal scored on a 2 on 1 break cushioned the Friar advantage. Scott Kleinendorst tapped a pass to Paul Statnik, who had the left side of the net wide open. It was then 5-2.

Ironically, it was then time for Cornell to begin doing what it did last year at this time—comeback. The Friars still worked well together, but they lapsed into a backchecking game. With 10:24 left, Dave Collicot fired a long blast by Fiske. With 16:14 left, Jeff Batke scored on what looked like an instant replay of the previous goal. A high-sticking penalty on PC gave Cornell's John Ochs a chance to tie it up when he tripped in a shot from the point. And yet another Friar penalty saw Roy Køring put a slapshot through the crowd to make it 6-5.

What will be remembered?

If anyone had walked into the Providence locker room at 12:30 a.m. last Saturday they would have sworn they walked into a Providence locker room at 12:30 game away. Somebody up there from the blue line," an emotional Lamoriello said softly. "They were just getting the铅 in the closing seconds of the last period of play. That's what the people will remember."

But what about the things that will matter? "Two things carried them through the second and third periods, character and pride," commented Lamoriello. "They didn't last for long. With 33 seconds left in the period, Cornell's captain Doug Berk knocked the puck by Scott Fiske to even things up."
