This Is Where the Story Began...

Construction of the field house has continued to run smoothly over the summer and the facility is due to open shortly. The exact date is still uncertain, pending the official turning over of the building to the College from the Bailey Building Company.

The building has been named the Peterson Recreation Center in honor of College president, Rev. Thomas Peterson, O.P. The Center includes Alumni Hall which has undergone extensive renovation.

Alumni Hall will only be accessible through the main lobby of the field house. Some improvements on Alumni include new male and female training rooms, a rehabilitation room for injured athletes, a new women's locker and exercise room, and a passenger elevator.

The history of the field house dates back to October of 1978 when Father Peterson appointed a committee to study the feasibility of constructing a field house. The committee reported that a new structure would not be "a luxury or convenience," but "a necessity for the health of students and quality of life on campus."

Father Peterson affirmed this need, announcing "Alumni Hall, the College's first athletic facility, was constructed in 1954 when our student body numbered only 934. We now have more than 3,400 students and more than 70 percent of them participate in our intramural program."

1961: On October 31, the dedication ceremony of the Peterson Recreation Center will be held. The costs have not exceeded the specified amount and the building adjoins Alumni Hall, as originally planned by the Corporation.

The new center consists of two levels. The Lower Level of the structure contains the field house and the raquetball courts.

The field house is the main area of the building. A massive 300 feet by 160 feet room, it contains a 200 meter track encircling five basketball courts with rubber surfaced floors. These courts are readily converted for tennis or volleyball usage. Furthermore, a mesh screen can be pulled down between each court to partition each area. This area is known as the Begley Field House in honor of Rev. Aloysius Begley, O.P., athletic director of the College from 1948 until his retirement in 1971.

COWL Interview

"My most difficult moments have had to do with...the necessary slowness of the decision-making process in an academic institution."

Dr. Paul Van K. Thomson, vice president for academic administration since 1965. I think it is time for a change.

COWL: How do you foresee becoming your predecessor?

THOMSON: My successor will be chosen by the Corporation, and I have no idea of who that person will be.

COWL: Following your resignation, who will be your role at the College?

THOMSON: I will continue to teach, as I have been doing during the 32 years I have been a member of the faculty, I expect to have a sabbatical semester in the fall of 1982, during which time I hope to pursue a program of study abroad.

COWL: During the 32 years you have been a faculty member, have you been your most enjoyable moments as vice president and your most frustrating moments?

THOMSON: My most enjoyable moments have been in promoting the admission of women to the College and in having a part in certain changes in the academic programs of the College. Some of these changes have created departments of psychology and political science.

30th Year Celebration

ROTC Gives Awards

By Tim O'Hara

On Wednesday, September 9, the Providence College ROTC detachment officially began its 30th school year with a presentation of awards earned by cadets over the summer months and the announcement of the new battalion chain of command.

Installed as the new corp commander was David E. Swift. Cadet Lt. Colonel Swift is a New Bedford native entering his senior year at Providence College in accordance with Rhode Island state law: "College policy permits the consumption of alcoholic beverages only by persons of legal age and only in dormitory rooms, the Rathskellar, and at approved social functions where proper permission has been obtained from the appropriate authority, viz, the Office of Student Affairs or Residence. Even if there is no violation of federal, state, or local laws, students are prohibited from being intoxicated; or

Drinking Policy Drafted

By Cathy Jahn

Despite many statewide efforts last year to lower the legal drinking age at 19 in Rhode Island, it was raised to 20 as of July 1, 1981. As a result of this change in state law, a corresponding college policy has been drawn up regarding the consumption of alcoholic beverages on campus. Since the various aspects of campus life are all affected by the change, the committee on alcohol policy has been convened to devise a new policy for all social activities on campus, as well as within the dorms themselves.

On September 8, 1981, Rev. Dr. Paul van K. Thomson, vice president for student services, issued a statement on the alcoholic beverage policy here at Providence College in accordance with the college-wide alcohol policy statement of the American Association of University Professors. The statement disclosed: "College policy permits the consumption of alcoholic beverages only by persons of legal age and only in dormitory rooms, the Rathskellar, and at approved social functions where proper permission has been obtained from the appropriate authority, viz, the Office of Student Affairs or Residence. Even if there is no violation of federal, state, or local laws, students are prohibited from being intoxicated; or

ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE POLICY

Office of the Vice-President for Student Services

FROM: Rev. John G. McGreavy, O.P.

RE: Alcoholic Beverage Policy and Rhode Island State Law

DATE: September 8, 1981

College policy permits the consumption of alcoholic beverages only by persons of legal age and only in dormitory rooms, the Rathskellar, and at approved social functions where specific permission has been obtained from the appropriate authority, viz, the Office of Student Affairs or Residence. Even if there is no violation of federal, state or local laws, students are prohibited from being intoxicated; encouraging or contributing to the intoxication of another person; carrying open containers of alcoholic beverages outside a student’s room, the Rathskellar or the limits of the permitted social gathering. In addition, the use of KEGs of beer without prior permission is prohibited.

The above statement appears in the Student Handbook, page 26, No. 14. This has been and is college policy.

In order that we may fully comply with the new State Law (legal drinking age, 20 years) this fall, as well as in accordance with the college policy.

Any student violating any part of the above stated policy will be fined $25 and have the beverage confiscated.

If a student deliberately violates the policy will be fined each time ($25) and be subject to possible further disciplinary action, namely, appearance before the Committee on Disciplinary Enroll from residence or local

The above is effective immediately and promulgated with the support and approval of the President and the Committee on Administration.

There have been many changes here at PC over the summer, not the least of which is the new PC Bookstore at Slavin Center. What many are probably wondering, though, is whether there is a new bookstore and where the plan to move it originated.

The move was being most of the theatre space in Harkins Auditorium, the book store at the beginning of each semester, leaving the theater to be closed for relocation. The move allowed the PC Bookstore, coordinated and supervised the move from Harkin’s Hall auditorium to its new Slavin location from old to new. Bookstore hours are 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturday.

The new bookstore is a more central and spacious location for students and faculty. The old bookstore was located in the basement of Old Slavin, while the new bookstore is located in Slavin Center. What is new about the new bookstore is that it has greater freedom to work with people outside the campus, and it has more power as part of a larger company.

The reaction to the new bookstore has been positive and enthusiastic. Comments from students include that it is noticeably bigger, more convenient, and more efficient because everyone goes to the bookstore once a day and everything is well marked so you don’t have to go searching for what you need.

Dennis Hughes, manager of the PC Bookstore, coordinated and supervised the move from Harkin’s Hall auditorium to its new Slavin location from old to new. The bookstore has become a completely separate entity because the new bookstore is owned by Barnes and Noble, Inc., the parent company of the PC Bookstore. The new bookstore has become a part of the new ownership. In addition, the new bookstore is able to provide more services to the students and faculty.

The move to Slavin Center has allowed the bookstore to expand its operations. In addition to providing textbooks and other materials, the bookstore is now able to offer a gift shop and a campus bookstore. The gift shop was moved into the bookstore under the name in order that everything from both stores be accessible to customers. The campus bookstore is a joint venture between the bookstore and the college.

The move has been well received by students and faculty. The new bookstore has been praised for its convenience and efficiency. The new location has also been praised for its larger space and more comfortable atmosphere.

The move has also had a positive impact on the college. The new bookstore has allowed the college to expand its operations and offer more services to students and faculty. The new location has also allowed the college to offer more events and activities. The new bookstore has allowed the college to expand its operations and offer more services to students and faculty. Joel Kaufman Earns Highest LSAT Score

Senator Claiborne Pell (D-R.I.) congratulated Joel Kaufman of Warwick, a Providence College senior working as an intern in his Washington, D.C., office, for earning a perfect score in his law board examinations last month.

Kaufman, 20, a son of Eli and Berenice Kaufman of 11 Driba Dr., recently earned an 800 score in his Preliminary Scholastic Assessment Test (LSAT) — the highest score possible in the examinations which are instrumental in determining admission to law schools.

"Your score," Pell told Kaufman, "is outstanding. In fact, in last year's law boards for June only 70 students, out of more than 1,000,000 who sat for the law school entrance exam, earned a perfect score. I am extremely proud to have a young man of so much ability participating in my law firm's internship program."

A Providence College student, Kaufman is majoring in political science and humanities and, this summer, participated in the Apple, Continued from Page 3, computer science department, the science and technology survey is the computer lab, which a student must take as a prerequisite to entering the college.

"The Apple computers let the student make his own environment," said Mandelare. The complete set up, consisting of a disk drive, typewriter-style keyboard and video display is entirely independent and accessible.

Although less complex than the former system, the Apple is geared to both beginners and advanced computer users for a wide spectrum of abilities. Special programs include programming for color, sound, and music. "A really bright student can even get the computer talking," added Mandelare.

Essentially, the most revolutionary element of the new system is the video component. Mandelare stressed that "the movement in society is towards video displays. We have to keep up with that." Currently, nine newspapers in the United States are transcribed and delivered over video display computers. "I'm sure we're seeing more of that in the future," he added. The system is available for any PC student or faculty member. Drop by Library Room 118 and step into the future!

Profile: The Class of '85

The numbers tell the story in profiling this year's freshman class. The PC Admissions Office, under the direction of Michael R. Backes, yesterday released the official figures for the Class of '85.

Continuing to follow the trend of recent years, women outnumber men 491 to 463 in a class of 954 students. There are 706 resident students and 248 non-residents. The majority of freshmen, 33.9 percent of the men and 25.2 percent of the women, are from New York. Only 5.0 percent of the men and 10.4 percent of the women are from New Mexico, Pennsylvania, and California, Florida, Illinois, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, New Mexico, Pennsylvania, and Virginia. In addition, there are freshmen from many foreign countries, such as Belgium, Canada, Hong Kong, Puerto Rico, and Venezuela.

Business majors form the majority of the class, with 26 percent choosing this course of study. Those choosing to remain undecided make up the next largest percentage at 21 percent. Other popular majors for the Class of '85 include political science 12 percent, math/computer science 6 percent, biology 4 percent, psychology 4 percent, French 4 percent, English 4 percent, and all others 25 percent.

Academically, 44 percent of the freshmen were ranked in the top 25 percent of their high school classes; 18 percent of the men and 36 percent of the women.

The Admissions Office received a record 3,937 applications for the Class of '85. Always highly competitive, admission for resident students was even more so, with 2,947 applying for only 296 dorm spaces available. Due to these housing restrictions, admission was extended to 363 fewer students than last year.

NEW BRUNSWICK, NJ (CPS) - A conservative legal foundation, in what critics claim is a test case for a right-wing assault on the Public Interest Research Groups (PIRGs) nationwide, has vowed to continue its courtroom challenge to the way PIRGs gain the money for students.

The Mid-Atlantic Legal Foundation has sued Rutgers University on behalf of three Rutgers students, who object to student participation, funding of the university's chapter of the New Jersey Public Interest Research Group (NJPIRG).

The suit says the funding procedure violates the First Amendment.

NJPIRG, like PIRGs on campuses across the country, is funded by a "check-off" system. At Rutgers, $2.50 of each student's fee automatically goes to NJPIRG. If the student doesn't want PIRG to get the money, the student can check a box on the registration form, and will have the money refunded.

Mid-Atlantic claims the system forces students to support causes with which they don't agree. A U.S. district court, however, had previously disagreed with the argument in July, dismissing the suit. Mid-Atlantic, however, has now filed an appeal, and promises to pursue the case.

The political battles in the arena of student fees involve the idea that student fees, including checks-off money, be used to support causes. A student at Rutgers, for example, clearlyento the Home of 16.4 percent; 10.4 percent of the men, while 25.2 percent live in the approximate cost of $2,500 per year.

"The Senate internship," Kaufman said, "provides invaluable insight into the sub-structure of the American political process." The Pell Senate Internship Program, which began when Pell came to the Senate in 1961, has already brought more than 1,000 Rhode Island and students to Washington for a period of experience in the operation of the United States Senate and Pell's office.

Many of former Pell interns have returned to Rhode Island and have become active in political life, either as elected officials on the state and local levels or as representatives in a variety of political campaigns.

The PIRG decision, made by the Legislature, had created a revolution in society. The student can even get the computer talking, which is supposed to be educational but in actuality is very politically motivated.

"At private schools," he adds, "such groups have their status regularly reviewed in order to obtain continued funding. At Rutgers, there's no accountability.

Not so, says Ed Lloyd, a NJPIRG official. "Every three years we come up for a student referendum at Rutgers. A high checks-and-balances system definitely exists.

If this would be a genuine free speech issue," Lloyd says, "I'd object right along with the three NJPIRG official. "Every three years we come up for a student referendum at Rutgers. A high checks-and-balances system definitely exists.

Providence College has many things to be proud of, one of which is an athletic program with a history of successful seasons for a variety of varsity teams. Another is an intramural program that allows all students to participate in sports purely for enjoyment.

The College’s most recent endeavor in the area of sports is the newly constructed field house, adjacent to Alumni Hall. For some time now, the field house has been the highlight of conversations, as the excitement and anticipation of its completion has grown. While not yet officially open, students and faculty alike already realize the benefits this facility will have for athletics at Providence College.

Just this summer, it was announced that the Corporation of Providence College had voted unanimously to name the field house after the school’s president, Rev. Thomas R. Peterson, O.P. Father Peterson has suggested that individual areas of the sports complex be named in memory of three men who were responsible for much of the development of the school’s fine athletic program. The proposals are, for the racquetball court area to be named for J. Vincent Cuddy, with the building’s main area being named for Rev. Aloysius B. Begley, O.P., and the swimming pool area being named for Rev. Joseph B. Taylor, O.P.

Mr. Cuddy, who passed away last March, held positions in the PC athletic department for 31 years. As head basketball coach, sports information director, assistant athletic director, business manager of athletics and associate athletic director, Mr. Cuddy was an invaluable asset to athletics at Providence College.

Father Begley, at 1931 graduate of PC, served as athletic director at the College from 1946-1971. Throughout his years of service to the school, Father Begley saw the College’s basketball and hockey teams attain both regional and national successes, as well as the inception of indoor and outdoor track, tennis, soccer, golf and cross country teams. Father Begley received numerous honors for his contributions not only to PC athletics, but for his “influence upon Rhode Island sports.” Father Begley died in 1978.

Father Taylor, a graduate of the PC Class of 1926, also made outstanding contributions to Providence College athletics. He is best remembered for his position as associate director of athletics at PC from 1956 until his retirement in 1971. During his 15 years in this position, Father Taylor worked closely with Father Begley in overseeing the development of the College’s athletic programs.

After reviewing the accomplishments of these three gentlemen, the Editorial Board of The Cowl feels that at least one or all of them deserves the honor of having the entire field house named in his memory.

Father Peterson, of course, deserves no less than the highest respect for his position as president of the College, and his influence upon the PC community throughout his 10 years of dedicated service to the school.

However, the Editorial Board feels that the naming of the new facility for Father Begley, Father Taylor or Vin Cuddy, would be a more appropriate measure to forever preserve the memory of their long years of work in making PC athletics what it is today.

The Cowl Suggests: A Fieldhouse By Any Other Name

Keep Off The Grass

Students returning to Providence College this fall have noticed some major facelifts in the physical state of the PC campus. The most obvious, of course, is the new fieldhouse. Not only is the building itself an attractive addition to the campus, but students will also notice the beautiful shrubbery and lawns surrounding the facility.

All around campus, the newly seeded lawns and shrubbery are a welcome improvement to the school’s appearance. However, a cooperative effort is necessary for these improvements to be maintained. The Editorial Board of The Cowl asks that students not walk on new areas of the lawn or those just seeded. Also, please remember to walk around the newly planted bushes and flowers.

Providence College is our home, no matter how brief the stay. We at PC should have pride in its appearance and take care to see that its natural beauty is not destroyed.
In My Opinion...

Mary Little, an English major from Saybrook, Ct., and Cathy Jahn, an English major from Cromwell, Ct., express their views about the new college drinking policy in this regular Cower feature.

The new legal drinking age: 30 years. Ask any freshman or sophomore on campus, for they know it only too well. In fact, nothing has been more emphasized in the halls of PC dorms during the past two weeks than the fact that the majority of students now living on campus are of an illegal drinking age. The result: strict college policy enforcing the new state law. As students who are affected by this new policy regarding alcohol in the dorms, we would like to point out some of the problems which we feel exist because of it.

To begin with, the enforcement of the new rules concerning the very presence of liquor in a dorm is not uniform throughout the dorms on campus. In particular, one point of the policy issued to security, resident staff, and desk personnel (for the purpose of enforcing the new drinking age according to college policy) states that a person carrying liquor into a dorm must show proof of identification if stopped and asked by desk personnel. Such a policy may work well in women’s dorms, but because there are no desk personnel in men’s dorms, it does not appear that the new rules can be fairly enforced by this policy.

It discriminates against the female students on campus, and although it is obviously not an intentional discrepancy, it is one nonetheless.

Another point which has fallen under a great deal of scrutiny in the enforcement of the drinking policy in the dorms concerns students found drinking in their rooms. According to college policy as it appears in the Student Handbook, page 36, no. 14, “Even if there is no volition of federal, state, or local laws, students are prohibited from being intoxicated, encouraging or contributing to the intoxication of another person; carrying open containers of alcoholic beverages...

A Scout’s View of Flying

By Steven Sloan

I was sitting in the tea room of an Inn in Inchinnadice, Scotland, sipping on some tea (of course!) when I turned on the radio and heard the news. It was clear that the picture was very much the same as usual. A banner of barbaric-like people were parading around the streets. The people were both the government and his followers. A study suggests that virtually every one of the revolutionaries who helped overthrow the Shah and install Ayatollah Khomeini in power two-and-a-half years ago are either dead or gone.

Five close associates of Khomeini fled to exile a few weeks ago with a price on his head. Another prominent Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, is in disgrace. Iran is accused in Iran’s political turmoil, a fourth was killed in the Iraq war and a fifth was wounded in the conflict and plays little part in the governmental maestro long island.

Twelve Iranian political leaders greeted Khomeini on his return from exile. Four have been assassinated, one died of heart attack and two are under ominous house arrest. Another has been publicly disgraced, one was shot into political disfavor and is trying to work his way back into favor with the regime. Only one of the 12 has survived without difficulty in the revoluntary ruling circles.

MONEY FROM MOSCOW: A revolutionary Red tide is lapping at the shores of poverty-stricken, military-dominated Latin American neighbors which Washington has traditionally defended against foreign intervention under the historic Monroe Doctrine. Central Intelligence Agency officials now fear a new communist subversion in the area spearheaded by Cuba and financed from Moscow.

A secret report being circulated among CIA strategists warns, “Latin America’s time has come.” The timing and opportunities, political and psychological, offer an irresistible field for Soviet intervention.

The Russians, the analysts say, will avoid any missile confrontation with Reagan. They will be slow and steady.

The Soviets will install dislike and distrust of the United States by means of the old bogeymen of imperialism and neocolonialism.”
Robert Coles, the psychiatrist and writer, has been visiting Northern Ireland and talking with children there. For years Coles has been studying children in situations where two days ago when his books documented the courage and wisdom of young black children facing racist hatred as they integrated the public schools. He talks with the children and asks them to draw pictures for him. He goes to know them and their families over periods of months and years. As a physician, he sometimes offers them medical help in exchange for their time. His recent trips to Northern Ireland and South Africa have taken him to what may be the world’s most extreme settings of hatred.

All of the children Coles spoke with in Northern Ireland have lost close relatives and neighbors to violent death in “The Troubles,” the communal warfare between Catholics and Protestants. Each of these children might be killed at any moment in an act of terrorism or revenge. Many have committed violent acts themselves. They may be afraid of becoming the next to be killed. They may have a great fear of being killed with British soldiers or with members of the other religious community.

What would one expect of children living in such a setting? Poor personal conditioning, stunted minds poisoned by hate, violent behavior, a cynical lack of ideology and beliefs, a few predictable results among the children of Northern Ireland. Violence and hatred breed violence and hatred. But he found some encouraging results.

Writing in last December’s issue of The Atlantic Monthly, Coles says: “You can begin, in the process of talking to the children and asking them to draw pictures, to observe a dedication and a sense of mission and belonging, of those things that add positive results of terrible historical event. Coles writes: “Apathy and self-pity yield to the excited flush of taking on enemies, fighting them to the death. A strong sense of history, a fervent religious commitment, an attachment to neighborhood and nation (be it to Britain or the Irish Free State), all combine to make individuality less prominent. Among children, pictures of the self are done with great reluctance; among adults egotistic display is rare. These are people who feel solidarity with certain others, and have an enemy help define who is a friend.”

Perhaps that is why the urge to go to war is so strong in human societies. By acquiring enemies we also find friends, commitment, mission and transcendence of self. A Catholic mother in Northern Ireland said this to Coles: “We’re not a spotted people; and our children aren’t spoiled. They may swear a lot at the Orangeays, and they may be tough, even with each other, but they’re not brats, they’re not out for themselves, each for himself. They’re for each other, for the Ardeyne (their neighborhood), and for a United Ireland.”

It is easy to define oneself and one’s group by reference to an enemy, and somehow religious loyalties help the process along. The Ayatollah unites his country against Satan and America. This kind of psychological dynamic may account for Ronald Reagan’s intentions in the question of whether the Soviets believe in an after-life. If they do not expose our religious values, it will be easier to unite the country against them. It is the same dynamic that is working as religious values are espoused at the center of our domestic political debates, and it is the reason these debates have suddenly turned so bitter and sometimes hateful.

Without enemies and wars, and in considerable affluence, we do less well in many respects than those乡镇endangered children of Northern Ireland. We arrange work that is not satisfying; and then we try to avoid it. We become world-class champion materialists, feasting on our own toys with electronic devices and other possessions. We suffer in vain that they will be taken by a stranger or surpassed by a neighbor. Our spirit is not friendly and protective, and we seem to become less charitable as we grow more affluent. And perhaps most telling of all, large numbers of us are preoccupied with the excitement and meaning we experience as spectators of sports, those highly-ritualized war games. Or, as an Irish pediatrician, talking of his patients, said to Coles: “They go back to the States and have everyone crying for those who were killed. I saw plenty of children there in America who never saw a soldier shoot a gun. But a bomb goes off, a loved one injured or killed, and they write a poem as though it were the finest souls this earth has seen.”

There is a famous ethnographic film called “Dead Birds.” It depicts a group in a tribe called Arodyne (their neighborhood), each for himself. They worked hard and they felt good. They were working toward a goal, as they did in the factory, as they did in the army. They worked hard and they felt good because they were working toward a goal. They worked hard and they felt good because they were working toward a goal. They worked hard and they felt good because they were working toward a goal. They worked hard and they felt good because they were working toward a goal.

The Recreation Center

dards and is suitable for competition. The pool, ranging from four to 12 feet in depth, also has a 1 meter diving board. The pool filter system is described as “the best available.” Therefore, swimmers will not be required to wear bathing caps. Adjacent to the pool are a set of sliding doors which lead to the cement sun-bathing terrace. This area, facing McVinney Hall, is fenced in for privacy. However, a shower in the new shower rooms near the pool is mandatory prior to entering the pool area.

Directing pool activities will be Richard H. Burrows who has been appointed to the post of Aquatics Director. Burrows, who degree from Indiana University is a member of the 1976 All-Ivy Swimming Team and is to be inducted into Brown’s Hall of Fame. Currently, he is the head swimming coach at the Little Rhody Aquatic Club. Burrows, a 1979 All-American and Master’s National Champion, was Master’s National Champion this past year. Furthermore, he is a recipient of the Thomas Temple Award for Outstanding Achievement and the Joseph Watmough MVP Award, both from Brown University.

Also newly appointed is Robert S. Amato who will act as assistant athletic director. A graduate of PC, he was an outstanding runner. He holds a Master’s degree from Rhode Island College. Amato, who has coached track for 13 years, includes among his achievements six “New England Coach of the Year” titles and has an overall cross country record of 122 victories, 141 losses, and 1 tie. In 11 of the past 12 years, his cross country teams have competed in the NCAA.

Other new employees of the recreation center include 60 students in the work-study program. Lifeguards have yet to be hired, pending state certification.

J rry Alaimo will act as director of the new facility. When asked about the possibility of a swim team or water polo club, he commented, "It's up to the students. We are here to provide a service to the students. Whatever is within our power legally and financially, we will do. He urges students to voice their requests to members of their Student Congress, or to him personally.

Aquatics Director Richard Burrows, who has his office along the poolside commented, "We want to get as much use out of the facility as possible." He, too, is open to suggestions from the student body.

The Intramural Athletic Board office will now be located in the Upper Level of the new facility near the main lobby. Also relocated is the office of Helen Bert, director of Women's Athletics.

Usage of the Peterson Recreation Center will be restricted only to undergraduates, faculty, and staff for the first semester. In January, when the traffic flow for the facility is measured, the College hopes to accommodate alumni and community members, depending upon the demand. Fees for usage are yet to be determined by the Committee on Administration.

However, members are permitted to bring guests, at a fee of $2 except for use of the racquetball courts, in which case a fee of $6 per hour will be imposed. All members and their guests must register in the main lobby.

A PC ID is necessary in order to gain entrance into the facility. Other rules include a one hour limit on the five courts of the Lower Level, except in instances where no one is waiting to use the court.

The Peterson Recreation Center will be open between noon and 10 p.m., Monday through Saturday, and noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday for the first semester.

New Providence College

Welcomes Ms. Mohammadi

By Erin Donahue

As the new year begins Providence College not only welcomes the new freshman class but also Susan Mohammadi to its faculty.

Ms. Mohammadi has an interesting background. She was born in Tehran, Iran, but at age six moved to Beirut where she received her primary and secondary schooling. She obtained her bachelor's degree in economics at the American University of Beirut then returned to Iran to work at the American Embassy as an economic researcher. Six months later Ms. Mohammadi was at Vanderbilt University in New York studying for her master's degree. She is currently writing her dissertation for her Ph.D. Ms. Mohammadi is quite accomplished. She speaks four languages—Persian, Arabic, French and English. She is also very artistic as she likes painting (especially nature) and drawing. She enjoys sailing, horseback riding and traveling. She has visited Europe, Russia, and Mexico.

Ms. Mohammadi loves the New England area and is very impressed with the PC student. She has a charming and pleasant personality and will be a definite asset to the economic department.

Annual Mixer Mania

By Maryann Asalamo

The school year is underway and the Providence College Board of Governors helped kick off with the first mixer of the year. Slavin Center swelled with coeds, anxious to renew old friendships and kindle new ones. A great number of freshmen turned out to preview the scene and meet their fellow students. An unexpected number of upperclassmen also attended, allowing for a pleasant mixer atmosphere.

The Todd Hobbin Band, after being warmed up by Paul Strowe, got the crowd moving by 11 p.m. Most of their songs were original and kept the place hopping. Meanwhile, Strowe moved downtown to a bit more mellow atmosphere in Alumni Cafeteria. Strowe has worked before as a warm-up act for the Todd Hobbin Band although he is a separate artist.

By midnight, the crowd began to disperse and Todd did his best to bring '64 Hall to life again. Some songs they sang included "Even Sills and Bob Seager favorites. PC welcomed the band back for an encore and Paul Strowe joined in with Todd and company to sing "Cat Man Do." All in all, things ran smoothly considering the new drinking policy and the large turnout.

Heath's Barracks

What An Adventure

By Kathleen Fryer

While most of the PC's student body was settling into the comforts of a dormitory with one, two, or three roommates, there were a few girls who were told that they would be residing in "Heath's Barracks" with eight, nine, or 10 other roomies. During the summer, a certain percentage of people dropped out or simply decided not to show up for a variety of reasons — financial complications, transfers, etc. From this quota, residence was able to project a stipulated number of free beds that will be available at the start of the school year.

Those girls who did not meet the deadline set for room deposits clammers for space, and the offer of accommodation is based on the amount of dropouts. This year there were two-thirds less dropouts. This year.

So Many Changes

By Judy McNamara

For most, a return to PC after a work-bogged, action-packed summer, consists mainly of a 3-hour gym, before one feels as though he has never left. This year things seem a little different. Certainly many new faces plopped across our gravy campus as many of the old faces are missed. But have you noticed the improvements and how not only greener, but there’s a lot more of it. Class of '85... It's Not That Bad

By Lisa Shaheen

Making the transition from high school to college is a difficult obstacle for a teenager to overcome. He or she must leave behind the security found with friends and family and attempt to make new acquaintances and form new bonds. Some students become confused and intimidated by this new environment, and yet others look to it as a chance to seek out new relationships and learn more about people from different areas of the country.

Providence College has a wide variety of people, each with his or her own goals and opinions. Having been on campus only one week, one may discover several things about himself which allows for insight and prompts an examination of feelings. One becomes filled with mixed emotions while being away from home and can feel homesick and cut off from family. Yet excitement about making new friends and experiencing new things is an even bigger part of this adaptation.

How is the freshman class at Providence College adjusting to the college life? Up until last weekend the general feeling around campus was one of disappointment and incomprehension. Did the school forget that the Class of 1985 arrived on September 1? Why wasn't there anything planned for the Labor Day Weekend? The majority of the freshman class felt alienated from the rest of the school only because they didn't have the time to become acquainted with the other students or the area.

The majority of the freshman class obviously is enjoying the freedom and independence present from being away from home. However, when asked about the rules and regulations imposed upon them, they are not very enthusiastic in airing their opinions. Not many students mind the fire rules, because they realize that they are enforced for their own protection, however, upon mentioning the drinking policy one comes upon some resistance.

Today's society places great emphasis upon individuals accepting responsibility for their actions, but when it comes down to setting a legal drinking age some people become frustrated. 18-year-olds from Connecticut and Rhode Island become angry when their right to consume alcohol is taken away from them as soon as they cross the Rhode Island border.

One can't argue with the law, but an 18-year-old from Connecticut feels that she has just as much freedom in high school, if not more, as she has now. Many others feel the same way. However, one must look at all the benefits Providence College has to offer. The strictness is only for the good of the students and is only for their protection. One doesn't appreciate the cleanliness of the grounds and dorms until he or she has gone to visit another college campus.

When freshmen were asked about what factors influenced their decision to attend PC some answered, "I felt that PC would give me a well rounded education academically as well as socially." Others liked the atmosphere and the location. Providence College has a lot to offer, and the Class of 1985 is looking forward to a rewarding and challenging year.

Students are required to be familiar with all College policies, rules and regulations. Copies of the Student Handbook are available at the Office of Student Services.

Being a young man today isn't easy. You're really at the beginning of your life. But life, even with its conflicts, poverty, war, and environmental danger, holds more promise today than ever before. Many trusted institutions do not seem so permanent anymore. Our schools, police and government suffer prejudice and even physical attacks. The family, once the core of social unity, is threatened by new pressures. Sure, it's enough to make you wonder about your future...and worry about it.

Well, you can do a lot more than worry. There's something you can do about making tomorrow's world a better one. You can join the men who are working to eliminate social inequality and poverty and drugs... working to restore respect for your country.

Your Church, the Knights of Columbus need you. In return, membership in the Knights of Columbus will bring you the rewards of dedicated service. You will enjoy camaraderie and interaction with others prominent in your community.

It won't be all work, either. The Knights enjoy a wide range of recreational activities that you can enjoy with your family and friends.

You will be eligible to participate in the Knights of Columbus Insurance Program. Available only to Knights and their families, it has provided millions in insurance benefits.

New Bookstore in Slavin a Success

By Ray Maraceco

What does Providence College have in common with the world's largest universities as John Hopkins and Columbia? We all share the same bookstores: Barnes and Noble. This summer the company which owns the largest bookstore in the world moved into the Lower Level of Slavin Center.

There are many advantages to this new bookstore over the one previously located in the Downtown West student center. First of all, the Gift Shop has been added into this large and newly furnished room. The hours have been lengthened for the convenience of the students and the faculty. The shelves are well-stocked and the hours have been extended to accommodate them.

Although this new bookstore has many advantages, there are still some things that need to be improved. One of them is the selection of books. While the bookstore has a wide variety of titles, there are still some areas where they could improve. Another area that needs attention is the price of the books. Many students have complained about the high cost of textbooks and other materials.

In conclusion, the new bookstore in Slavin Center is a welcome addition to the Providence College campus. It offers many advantages to the students and faculty, and it will continue to make improvements in the future. We can only hope that it will continue to grow and become the hub of activity that it is intended to be.
Thoughts While Not Shaving

By S.J.J. Yeg McGuire

If the name of this inspiring little column has traditionally been a stumbling block for the average reader, that is because the writer of this inspiring little column has tradition unfamiliar with this day, it is a celebration for all of the college students, a two-fold form: academic and social. This year's agency for President's Day varies from that of the past. The usual convention has been eliminated because a similar ceremony will be taking place at the grand opening of the field house. Instead of a convocation, attention will be focused upon the various departments of the Providence College Recreational Center, or the new Freshmen's Hall.

Perhaps, like a mother who in spite of a more practiced hand, has not fully realized how astute senior compared PC to Providence? ("Of course not!"

As the Chairman, the Very Reverend Thomas H. Peterson, S.J., wrote to all students concerning President's Day, that start at nine and end at five. "The business schools are going to turn out a surfeit of MBA's.

Some educators think that with the growth of these business-oriented programs, the bubble is about to burst. The bubble was certainly not the freshmen who are getting younger? Is that more interesting than not getting better, we're getting older.

A few pertinent points should be observed; a few potentially damaging questions should be posed. To start, do you now, except in a putting stance., if you name (quickly,) three people who live in a dormitory? Is your hair (or your boyfriend's) more than two inches shorter than it was last year? Has your car to drive up to Slavin to see if I can recall days when our youthfulness was appreciated by other employers who intend to be focusing more on the country's economic.

Eugene Jennings, a Michigan State University professor foresees a glut of MBA's in the job market. He says that a recession will cause companies to turn out a surfeit of MBA's.

GM's recruiting administrator says, "We'll be more selective because we'll be recruiting a smaller number." This trend will also be followed by other employers who intend to concentrate on the best schools such as Harvard, Stanford, the University of Pennsylvania, and the University of Chicago.

However, starting salaries of even these graduates may rise slower than they did in the past. Employment of MBA's may be further hurt by the fact that they are often hired into training positions where they may not start contributing to the company for several months. As Ford's Mr. Valsa points out, while Ford cannot help but recruit engineers, "the name won't be true of business-degree holders."

Even with just a slowdown in MBA hiring during a recession, a glut could develop. Frank Maugus, director of executive placement at Amex Inc. says: "The businesses are going to turn out a surplus of MBA's.

Many recruiters are already demanding prior work experience, not just an MBA, for positions in their junior-executive corps. While MBA hiring is getting more selective and demanding, some MBA programs may also be facing survival problems.

Only 14, or 27 per cent, of graduate-level business schools are accredited by the American Association of Collegiate Schools of Business. Warnings have come from educators that too many marginalized MBA programs have sprouted up. The growth of these programs is attributed to the ease with which universities can make money on them. An MBA school requires no special facilities and often is staffed by the faculty that teaches the undergraduate business courses.

"Now," says a placement official at a prestigious business school, "the bubble is about to burst.

Some educators think that with a recession, potential MBA students will see the situation of job openings in the market, and will react to that. As a result, there will be a market ad justment.

“I think music is going to become less of a tranquilizer for the masses and become more of a message carrier like it was in the 1960s,” James Destri, keyboard man of the rock group Blondie, predicts. Blondie drummer Clem Burke compares it “to a record playing over and over. I mean it’s cyclical and the same sound is heard again and again.”

Destri and Burke explained this return to the 60s as part of a never-ending cycle. He describes this unique evolution that he believes will take place in the next 10 years.

“Music is going to have a very strong influence again,” he said. “The leading artists coming out will be the ones who can start making music that 13 years from now we will still pay attention to.”

Burke also sees a repetition in the sound of “American Gigolo.” The title song from that movie, “Call Me,” was Billboard magazine’s number one single of 1980. “American Gigolo” was a big step for us, and came at a time when we needed it,” Burke says. “We hope to do more with movies in the future, perhaps the life story of the band.”

The expanding horizons of Blondie have caused the group to become, like most pop businesses, a tightly-run business.

“Blondie exists as a corporation now, not just a rock and roll band playing purely for fun in the streets on Saturday night,” Destri says. “We’re all share holders with secretaries and the whole thing.”

“I can wake up in the morning and say I’m a songwriter and keyboard player or say I’m treasurer of this corporation and ask myself which I am going to be today. It’s all very weird.”

“I can go outside my house, which is as big as Debbie’s, and play around and nobody bothers me,” Destri says. “But Debbie can’t even leave her house sometimes because someone will always be there. So we accept everything that’s happened.”

Destri contends that the attention Debbie Harry got helped not only the band’s popularity, but the other band members’ private lives.

What has happened is success and success and the group’s expansion into movies (“Union City Blue” and “Roadie”), and the sound track for the movie “American Gigolo.” The title song from that movie, “Call Me,” was Billboard magazine’s number one single of 1980.

“American Gigolo” was a big step for us, and came at a time when we needed it,” Burke says. “We hope to do more with movies in the future, perhaps the life story of the band.”

In fact, Destri and Burke say that Blondie’s roots are black. “I don’t think there would have been a Blondie if there wasn’t a Supremes or a Motown sound,” Destri says.

“Obviously, the Blondie sound has changed, but I think that was necessary because of the innovators or imitators,” Burke adds. “There was a tremendous backlash in new wave music and, instead of people trying to be original, they’re trying to copy what is proven wise.”

He sees Blondie as “a true mob group in that we assimilate various styles and incorporate them into our sound.”

But Blondie has never been a typical rock band. The band has had an identity crisis of sorts because former Playboy model and lead vocalist Deborah Harry is generally considered to be Blondie.

“Where the Rolling Stones have been a less a band if they were called The Big Lips, which is Mick Jagger’s biggest trait,” Destri wonders in reply to questions about the effect of the confusion.

“Everything has worked out for Blondie as we had pictured in our wildest fantasies,” Burke says. “We were prepared for what’s happened over the past five years, so we took for granted how popular Debbie would become.”

“I think music is going to be today. It’s all very weird.”

“I can go outside my house, which is as big as Debbie’s, and play around and nobody bothers me,” Destri says. “But Debbie can’t even leave her house sometimes because someone will always be there. So we accept everything that’s happened.”
Senior Athletes Honored

By Rich Lewis

Bill Reardon, a senior who is the Big East Conference golf champion, and Jackie Gladu, a freshmen who has excelled in three sports, are the 1980-81 athletes of the year at Providence College.

Other major awards went to Joan Finneran, a senior who has played volleyball and basketball for four years, Sheila Barry, a senior who has run track and cross country for four years; Steve DellaPunta, a senior catcher on the Friars' baseball team, and cross country for four years; and cross country for four years; and cross country for four years.

Reardon, who came to PC from Providence College, is the first golfer ever to win the prestigious PC Athlete of the Year award. He resides in nearby Rumford and shot a final 73 in the rain last October at Agawam Hunt in nearby Rumford and shot a final 73 in the rain last October at Agawam Hunt in nearby Rumford and shot a final 73 in the rain last October at Agawam Hunt in nearby Rumford and shot a final 73 in the rain last October at Agawam Hunt.

Reardon had a 1:1:1 individual record as the Friars' No. 1 golfer this season, which was the medalist in five of PC's seven dual meets and had a 1:1:1 individual record over four years.

A semifinalist in the Rhode Island state meet for the second straight year last season, Reardon was an NCAA All-America honorable mention pick last year when he was one of only two New England individuals selected to compete in the NCAA tournament. He also played in the NCAA tournament this spring.

Last spring Reardon, a business management major, won the Rhode Island Division I championship, was second in the New England Intercolligate tournament and placed fifth in the Salem State Invitational, the New England last fall and in the Yale Invitational which drew five 21st best teams in the East and South.

Gladu, from West Newton, Mass., becomes only the second freshman at PC (Kathy Lenahan, from Orange, Conn., was the other) ever to win the college's highest athletic award. She won it by excelling in field hockey, ice hockey, and field hockey.

Last fall, Gladu was the Lady Friars' second leading scorer in field hockey with 17 goals (of the team's 50) and 4 assists for 21 points as the team finished its first season in Division I competition with a 1:1:1 record.

Gladu, who came to PC from Newton North High, was also the second leading scorer on the ice hockey team during the winter, scoring 31 goals, assisting on 30 others for 51 points. She helped the Lady Friars to a 3:5 record and championships in the Northeastern Christmas Tournament, the Concordia invitational in Montreal as well as a runnerup finish to unbeaten New Hampshire in the finals of the Northeast Regional.

She was one of the top hitters and fielders on the PC softball team this spring which bowed in the finals of the Rhode Island State Tournament to nationally ranked Rhode Island, but had its best year ever.

Finneran, from Scituate, Mass., received the Paul Connolly Memorial Award, given annually to the woman athlete who best distinguished herself both academically and athletically while displaying leadership qualities.

Finneran starred in volleyball for four years, basketball four years (as a starter) and two years in track and field and competed in regional and national tournament as well as in all three sports.

She was a leader of the Lady Friar volleyball team which, in the past three years, has posted records of 36-4, 47-17 and 46-17. A starter the last two seasons in basketball, Finneran played on teams which were 64-27 in her four seasons and won the Northeast Regional title two years ago. Joan played tennis in the 1978 and 1980 spring seasons and for the '80 team competed in the Division I national tournament.

Barry was honored with the Sine Qio Non Award, presented to a senior who had earned a significant contribution to the PC athletic program with proper recognition.

She has been the Lady Friar's top five runners for four straight years and since her freshman year, improved her time in cross country by more than six minutes. Barry has qualified and competed in both the New England and Eastern Regionals in cross country and track and the highlight of her career this spring was a 6th place finish in the Division II national cross country championships as a junior.

Sullivan received the Sine Qio Non Award given to a man who excelled in the ECAC playoffs in hockey for four straight years and in the NCAA tournament twice.

A fourth-year ice hockey player for the Friars, he played in 114 games during his career and scored 95 points (2 goals and 81 assists.)

Selected as the unsung hero by the New England Hockey Writers Association last Winter, Sullivan, from Bloomington, Minn., was third on the team in goals scored this year with 15 and finished seventh overall with 27 points.

DellaPunta, from Cumberland, R.I., took home the Mal Brown Award, the oldest athletic award on campus and presented annually to the student who best emulated the attributes of loyalty, leadership and sportsmanship which characterized Mal Brown, our former PC trainer.

DellaPunta led the Friars in hitting last year with a .378 average, a single-season record eight home runs and 26 runs batted in. He was the team's starting leftfielder during his career and helped the Friars win the '78 and '80 spring seasons and win the NCAA Division II national tournament.

two and a half years ago, developed into one of the best of the senior cross country runners in Ireland.

The team appears ready to add to their consecutive dual meet string which now stands at 28, based on the fine efforts in need of by all runners over the summer. August 31, Bims won the "On The Rock's" racecouse in Warwick, Quinn a close second, and O'Tyson fifth.

New challenges exist for the team this year as they must contend with a tougher schedule that includes a tri-meet with Arkansas and Penn State, the number two and three teams in the country last year, at Penn State. They will defend their Big East title against Villanova, 10th in the nation last year, and host of other fine schools. Other meets include the NCAA Championships in New York against powerhouses of the East Coast, as well as attempting to capture an unprecedented eighth straight New England title. The season concludes on November 23, at the National Championships in Wichita, Kansas.

be playing almost every Division 1 team in the East, including road trips to western power North Dakota and defending national champion Wisconsin.

Other road trips include the Canadian Cup tournament in Montreal and a cross-country hike to American International College of San Diego. If the Friars can put together a consistently winning team against such a tough schedule, then they are certain to achieve national recognition.

On paper, this year looks optimistic. All Coach Lamoriello has to do is organize everything into his system. It's going to be a lot of work, but this payoff could send Providence College all the way to the N.C.A.A. playoffs.

The nationals, by the way, are scheduled to be played at the Providence Civic Center. Center this year. Who knows? Maybe last year's "famous final scene" could be played again in front of a home town crowd.
Mayor Edward D. DiPrete announced that he will again be hosting the Cranston Fall Harvest Festival Road Race. The race, which will start and finish in front of Cranston City Hall, will be held on Sunday, September 27, 1981. The starting time for the race is 11:30 a.m. and runners are required to report to City Hall one half hour before the start.

The race is being held as one of the many activities scheduled during the Harvest Festival weekend. This is the third consecutive year in which Mayor DiPrete has hosted this event.

This year’s race will be 5.4 miles in length. It is open to any interested runner. In addition to trophies to the top 10 finishers, other awards will be presented to: the first female finisher, the first female master (over 35 years of age), the first female junior (18 years old and younger); the first male finisher, the first male master (over 35), the first male senior (over 50), and the first junior (16 years old and younger). All participants entering who are under 18 years old must have their race application signed by a parent or legal guardian.

Mayor DiPrete stated, “I invite all interested runners to participate in this year’s road race. The race adds color and excitement to our Festival. I am sure all those who participate will enjoy themselves both during the race and afterward at the Festival.”

Last year’s race was won by Mark Rerick who covered the 5.4 mile course in 28 minutes and 18 seconds. The first female finisher was Kathy Donahue who finished in 38 minutes and 19 seconds. The course for this year’s race is from Cranston City Hall on Park Avenue south on Hayward Street to Pontiac Avenue. South on Pontiac, west on Sockanosset Crossroad, north on Midway Road, east on Garden City Drive back to Pontiac. North on Pontiac, north on Hayward to the finish in front of City Hall.

PROVIDENCE RI — Rich Lewis, director of sports information at Providence College, has received two publication awards by the College Sports Information Directors of America. The 1980-81 PC ice hockey brochure was judgment as the best in the nation and the Friars’ basketball game programs from this past winter were selected as the best in the East. Lewis edited both publications.

The awards marked the ninth straight year the sports information office at Providence College has received national and regional recognition for its athletic publications.

PROVIDENCE, RI — David R. Gavitt, athletic director of Providence College, today announced the appointments of Robert S. Amato and Richard H. Burrows to the positions of athletic director and aquatics director, respectively.

Amato, a native of Providence, graduated from LaSalle Academy in 1970 and from Providence College, where he was an all-conference basketball player. He is still in the PC record book as a member of the record-setting sprint-medley relay team. He also holds a master’s degree from Rhode Island College.

Now in his 12th season as track coach, Amato has taken a highly successful program and molded it into a national power. His runners have consistently ranked with the best in the country.

"I am very pleased and concerned about the appointment," said Gavitt. "Bob has distinguished himself as the track team coach. I am pleased that we will now embed his abilities to the administrative area and am confident that Bob will make major contributions in continuing our success of our overall athletic program.

Including among his coaching accomplishments are six "Outstanding Coach of the Year" titles (1972, 1975, 1976, 1977, 1980); seven consecutive New England cross country championships; one of the nation’s outstanding swimming teams (sack of collegiate history) and an overall record of 1-412 victories, 31 losses and one tie.

The 1979 Words Unlimited "Coach of the Year." Amato has coached runners who have won 16 All-American honors and 17 New England Championships. His cross-country teams have competed in the NCAA in 11 of the last 12 years and have five consecutive top ten finishes: 1978-79, 7th; 1979-80, 5th; 1980-81, 3rd and 1977-78.

Prior to returning to his alma mater in 1980, Bob coached at Bryant College for two years and Raphaël’s Academy in Pawtucket, R.I., for four years where his cross-country teams never lost a meet. He also taught in the Providence School System until 1966 and most currently was a teacher in the East Providence School System.

Bob lives in Johnston, R.I., with his wife, Janice, and their three children, Lynn, Robert and Eric.

Richard Burrows, a resident of Cranston, R.I., has a bachelor’s degree from Brown University and an M.D. from Indiana University. A member of the 1978 All Ivy swimming team, Richard is also a member of Brown’s Hall of Fame.

"As we look forward to the opening of the first pool in the northeast., we are most pleased to have our aquatic director serve with such an outstanding background in swimming and aquatics," said Gavitt.

Before coming to Providence College, Burrows was the head swimming coach at the Little Rhody Aquatic Club, which has one of the most competitive swimming programs in the northeast and has produced several nationally recognized swimmers.

"Bob has distinguished himself as the track team coach. I am pleased that we will now embed his abilities to the administrative area and am confident that Bob will make major contributions in continuing our success of our overall athletic program."
