

BOG to open Last Resort

Lower Campus is the site for a new, multi-purpose facility, the Last Resort. Organized and operated by the BOG, the Last Resort is housed in the structure formerly known as the Service Building. According to the Board of Governors president, Tom Corcoran, the facility will have various functions. "It's presently being used to show movies on Sunday nights. Now we're going to use it for coffee and doughnuts in the morning, as a spot to present lectures and possibly for a Coffee House and Social Club."

Starting within the next two weeks, coffee and doughnuts will be offered, tentatively, from 9 a.m. to 12 noon, Monday through Friday. This service will be provided for a minimal fee for both students and faculty. "1,500 surveys were administered concerning the value of starting a program like this, and we received positive feedback," explained Corcoran.

Co-chairpersons, Bob Clark and John Durkin, explained plans for beginning a coffee house on weeknights. Soloists and small bands are scheduled to provide entertainment. The BOG lecture committee is also considering using the facility as a forum for their speeches. Opening dates for the aspects of the Last Resort are cited as being in November.

During weekends, the Last Resort will serve as a social club. Tentatively, this will be operated on the basis of selling tickets during the preceding weeks and collecting the tickets at the door upon entering. Live entertainment along with refreshments will be featured. The hours of operation are projected as being 8 p.m.-1 a.m. "We're still working in this aspect," Corcoran conceded, "but plans should be finalized in the near future."

The building has a capacity of roughly 150 people, and its interior has been refurbished and renovated. Many of the improvements were implemented by BOG members, which included carpentry work, consisting of the construction of a bar and a stage, painting, and general cleaning. The BOG is in the process of purchasing a stereo and a television, and also plants, signs and lights for decorative purposes. "We've also invested a lot of money in security for the building, but we feel that it is worth it..." said Joe Doherty, BOG vice-president. Screens have been placed on all the windows and an alarm system is now in operation.

The idea for this project is not a new one for the BOG. The concept itself has been in the works for over a year, but plans have continually met with stumbling blocks. The project's major problem has been in obtaining a liquor license. "We tried to get a license a year ago," explained Corcoran, "but our advisory board and lawyer advised against it. So we have experienced problems in the past in opening a social club. Presently, these

What would dorm life be without representatives? In case you were wondering, the void has been filled. On October 22, the Resident Board, headed by William Pearson, welcomed its new recruits.

The lower campus results are as follows. Fennell Hall will be guided by president Ron Proctor, who will be assisted by James Healy as vice president, Ned Callahan as social chairman, and John Loester as treasurer. Presiding over Dore Hall is Lynn Abbott, assisted by Cheryl Shea as vice president, Maura McGuire as social chairman, and Cathy Stefano as treasurer.

Andy Kushner will be taking over the presidency of Guzman Hall with Dave Roberts serving as vice president and Mike Adams as treasurer. Joseph Hall elected Tom Bowen to be their president. Other officers include Timothy West as vice president, Paul Irving as social chairman, and Tom Sheehan as treasurer. Right next door in Stephen's Hall, Bill Sullivan was elected to serve as president assisted by vice president Neil Murray and social chairman John Durkin.

Raymond Hall will be governed by Brendan Callahan as president, David Rennie as vice president, Jamie O'Brien as social chairman, and Pat Leydon as treasurer. Finally, the officers of McDermott Hall are Mike Carbone, Mike Galante, David Bourn, and Tim Dugan.

Meagher Hall elected Liz Oleksak to be its president. Other officers include Karen Downey as vice president, Marianne Howley as social chairman, and Maribeth

Congress ponders money allocation

By Joyce Simard

The Student Congress meeting, held on October 21, was the scene of much action. A resolution was passed stating the disapproval of Congress in regards to a proposed move of the Security Office from Slavin Center to Joseph Hall. Sue Berg, vice president of Student Congress, supported the resolution because "Slavin is the central location on the Providence College campus, so there is no need for a move to Joe's. The office, at present, is easily accessible to students in need of security, much more so than Joe's would be."

Mark Brady, president of the class of 1980, proposed a resolution by Congress to appropriate $1,000 to each class from the Student Activity budget of $88,000, over which Student Congress has control. This resolution would be in effect starting January 1, 1980, allocating $500 to each class for the spring semester. In September of 1980, the next full academic year, the $1,000 appropriation will begin.

Brady stated the following reasons for this proposal. "The four classes represent the entire student body. In previous years, the classes have had three dates which to hold money-making events. In the past two years, we have only been able to hold two events, causing a great loss of money to the classes. This is due to the decision not to hold functions on school nights and also to the increased number of clubs on campus that need dates for events. The classes need some money to fall back on."

In conjunction with this, George West, president of the Dillon Club, stated, "The classes have no way of knowing if their events will be successful financially. The Dillon Club has had its share of success and failure, but it isn't as crucial to us, as it is to the classes because we have had our budget to fall back on. The classes have nothing. We should recognize the classes' right to exist and Congress should help them to do this."

Admittedly opposed to this was the Board of Governors. Tom Corcoran, president of the BOG, and Bobby Clark, chairman of the "Last Resort", spoke against this proposal as they feel that this move would hurt the students and their right for diversified entertainment. Clark spoke on the repercussions of this proposal on the students. He stated, "The

"Most mothers want their sons to grow up to be President, but not to get involved with politics along the way," commented Governor Garrahy, whose son John is a junior at Providence

The Rhode Island governor, J. Joseph Garrahy, spoke at a Providence College press conference on Thursday, Oct. 18, with eight journalism students, his son John, a political writer for the Providence Journal, M. Charles Bakst, the chairman of the Michael Ryan, his special assistant and a state policeman. The Introduction to Journalism class, taught by Ted Holmberg, editor and publisher of the Pawtuxet Valley Daily Times, is an elective

1980 Finale date changed

Providence College commencement date has been changed, according to the Committee on Administration. As a matter of convenience, rather than a break from tradition, commencement will take place on Monday, May 19, 1980, instead of Tuesday, May 20.

This rearrangement of dates was made primarily on behalf of graduates' parents. In the previous years commencement exercises have been held on Tuesday, following commencement week festivities. However, due to occupational conflicts, traveling complications and the need for additional lodging arrangements, the date has been reset.

In keeping with traditional events the Providence College Class of 1980 plans to continue commencement exercises in the Providence Civic Center.

Colonel's Corner grand opening

By Glynis Aubrey

Last weekend, Oct. 24, brought about the grand opening of the Colonel's Corner at Providence College, located directly below Mural Lounge in Raymond Hall.

Last year this room was used by Student Affairs and when it was given up, Bill Pearson, the president of the Resident Board, made a grab for it. The Resident Board fixed up the room so that it could be used by those resident students who wish to throw parties, but don't have the facilities to do so.

The room can also be used by clubs, and has been completely done over. According to Pearson, new tables were installed, as well as a new lighting system with colored flood lights. There is the possibility of a new stereo system in the near future.

Pearson acknowledged the help of the Resident's office and Everett D. Burns, the director of the Physical Plant, in the preparation.

With everything set up the grand opening was held on Oct. 20, at 8 p.m. Pearson said, "The place looks really nice and students should try to keep it this way. The students should know that they are paying for it. The money comes from lost meal cards, which a student has to pay for to get a new one. The money collected is turned over to the Resident Board and the students get in back in things like to Colonel's Corner," said Pearson.

Reservations for the use of the Colonel's Corner can be booked through the information desk in Slavin. Dennis Leahey, the student manager, is the person to see. Pearson said that the room is "mostly booked up, but some appointments can still be made."

Anxiety workshops successful

By Judy McNamara

Those who checked out their mailboxes last week found a yellow piece of paper in it with "TENSE?" splashed across the top. If you threw it away, you missed a valuable opportunity.

William Phillips, the Personnel and Vocational Counselor of Providence College, directed a test on anxiety workshop on Tuesday, October 16 and 23, which was sponsored by the Counseling Center.

Mr. Phillips' intentions were three-fold. First, he wanted to give people a deeper understanding of stress. He explained, "Stress is not only normal, but necessary to all." Stress can be both positive and negative. "Positive stress motivates one to do the best job possible, often due to the pressure involved. Negative stress, however, can overwhelm one and thus inhibit performance," he said. Secondly, Phillips set about teaching the students how to deal with stress in their own lives. According to Phillips, relaxation of both mind and body promotes better studying habits, as well as more accurate retention of material. Thirdly, Phillips taught different ways of relaxing the body, and expressed the sentiment that was the most difficult part of the workshop for the group.

Karin Obrig, who attended the workshop, said that "during the workshop I experienced a total sense of relaxation," that she had never encountered before. She

A bit of Switzerland comes to Providence

By Judy McNamara

Paul Spillmann, a native of Sion, the capital of the canton Valais of Southern Switzerland, dwells here in our own Fennell Hall. Paul is a participant in the European Recipient Scholarship Program, which he became interested in while performing in a stage play in Switzerland with students from "the States."

Paul attended the University of Fribourg in Switzerland. This term, 17 PC students are spending their junior year in Fribourg as members of the Providence-in-Europe program. Fribourg is a bilingual university, offering both French and German.

Spillmann's native tongue is German, yet he speaks English fluently and is pursuing further study of the language. He acquired his ability to speak English when he studied it in school and through his contacts with students at Fribourg, but mostly through his encounters with the language here in America.

The European scholarship program, as well as the Providence-in-Europe program, are great assets to language majors. Students have direct exposure to a language in its native setting. Paul Spillmann received this scholarship after expressing interest and writing essays concerning his desires and reasons for wanting to come to the United States.

Paul relates that there are significant differences between American college life and European college life. "People are in more of a hurry here, striving to make appointments, classes and especially in meeting deadlines." Paul feels that European Universities possess a freer academic atmosphere and that students tend to take things one day at a time.

Paul Spillmann

The University of Fribourg, and most other colleges in Europe, do not provide on-campus housing. Students rent housing or apartments if they are unable to commute to school. Paul is enjoying dorm life since it is a new and challenging experience for him. He feels that campus life brings students closer together. Paul has indicated that he has made many friends at PC, and already feels at home in a foreign world.

It will be interesting to see how the PC students react to their new environment in Fribourg. According to Dr. Laurent Gossie, director of the Providence-in-Europe program, students return with a better perspective of other countries in addition to the immeasurable advantage of knowing a second language.

Although the Providence-in-Europe program is not an actual scholarship offering, it coincides roughly to the present tuition rate at PC. The program costs about $300, and includes tuition, room and the round trip flight. No board is provided. Housing is arranged by the resident director at Fribourg.

PC, on the other hand, offers one yearly scholarship to a Fribourg student chosen by the University of Fribourg. The scholarship is offered to a student pursuing English studies. Paul Spillmann is concentrating on English Philology and Literature as well as philosophy, and he has hopes of obtaining his Masters degree within two years.

Peterson initiates housing task force

By Thomas Brown

In an effort to solve the problem of the on-campus housing situation, Reverend Thomas R. Peterson, O.P., President of Providence College, has appointed a Housing Task Force to look into the problem. The Task Force will study the off-campus housing situation in order to ascertain the future availability of such housing. The Task Force, chaired by Donna McCaffrey, Assistant Director of Residence, is expected to present its findings sometime in November.

"As it stands now," said Father Peterson, "there are no plans to undertake construction of new dormitory facilities, mainly because of the enormous financial burden of such a project." He feels that the college has reached its residency capacity and he isn't sure whether the school should grow much larger than it already is.

A possible lottery system has yet to be worked out, according to Father Peterson. The main question is: Who will be given priority? "Freshmen and sophomores should be given preference over upperclassmen with regard to on-campus housing," said Father Peterson. This is due to the general trend for juniors and seniors to move off-campus.

Concerning the possible use of the East Building as a dormitory, Father Peterson said that it would have to be decided whether it would be necessary to use the building, and if so, whether it would be a male or female dorm. He emphasized that no action will be taken until the findings of the special Task Force are reviewed. Peterson hopes to have some answers by the end of November.

'Point Plan' proposed

By Arlene Andreozzi

Sharon Treacy, chairman of the Food and Variety Store Committee, submitted a copy of a Point Plan System for review to both Reverend Walter J. Heath, O.P., director of Residence and Joseph Murphy, director of Food Services.

The purpose of the Point Plan System is to provide students with an alternative to the standard meal ticket presently used at Providence College. The Point Plan System would make use of a ticket book instead. Students would have the option of using their tickets at the cafeteria or at an on-campus food and variety store, which is also being considered for the future.

Treacy obtained the Point Plan System idea from a student representative from Boston College, where the system is currently in effect. However, the main problem is trying to adapt this system to the needs of Providence College.

A meeting held between Fr. Heath, Murphy and the Food and Variety Store Committee is presently being scheduled. The possible problems and benefits of adopting the system and constructing the store will be discussed at this meeting.

In a survey taken last year, students were very receptive to the idea of an alternative dining plan and a variety store. However, to date, no action has been taken.

Academic research practice and purpose

By Donna Bunn

The first concern of the Academic Research Committee of Student Congress is "to improve existing courses and suggest new ones," explained chairman Jim O'Connor. Recently, however, the committee has become involved with a new development in the academic affairs of Providence College.

For the first time in ten years, Rev. Thomas R. Peterson is organizing a special committee to completely update the entire school curriculum. According to Dr. Paul van K. Thomson, vice president of Academic Administration, the special committee is designed to evaluate individual departments, to decide whether courses are structured in the best possible way, and whether graduates are finding jobs with the educational background they receive here, at Providence College. An example of the committee's past accomplishments is the Western Civilization Program, which began as a result of this evaluation eight years ago.

One student representative will be appointed to the committee. According to O'Connor, each department in the school should have a faculty-student committee, in which one or several students are directly involved with the decision making of that department. In this way, a departmental student representative could discuss specific problems and ideas with a student on the President's committee. The committee believes that this is a step in the right direction. The added information will enable the students to knowledgeably contribute much more, with a more accurate idea of the student's voice.

The problem that the committee has encountered is that some of the departments have not yet established a faculty-student committee. The Academic Progress Committee is in the process of contacting these department heads, asking them to appoint persons to discuss pertinent matters with the students on the President's committee.

Eastern Civilization "We can not go on thinking there is only western Civilization"

Peterson

By Robert Graham Fiore

The Roman Tertullian once posed the question, "What has Athens to do with Jerusalem?" Providence College's Development of the Western Civilization program may be seen as one attempt to answer him.

The two year course focuses upon the origins and evolutions of western history, religion, philosophy, and literature.

But the program, by its very nature, disregards for the most part what may be collectively termed as "Eastern Civilization."

This "oversight" may be corrected in the near future. The formation of a task force to study the feasibility of an "Eastern Civ" course was announced recently by PC President Rev. Thomas R. Peterson, O.P.

During his speech at the convocation, marking the beginning of the 1979-80 academic year, Peterson mentioned that plans for such a program were now being considered.

In an interview, Father Peterson stressed that the present world situation makes such a program most beneficial to the student, from both a philosophical and practical perspective.

With the opening of relations with China and the growing worldwide economic importance of Japan, we cannot go on thinking that there is only western civilization. There is a rich history and culture in the east that students should be aware of. One way of doing this would be through a program similar to the present Western Civilization course."

Dr. Rene Fortin, director of the Development of Western Civilization program, agreed with Peterson on the potential benefits of an "Eastern Civ" course.

"Students sometimes finish the two year DWC course with the attitude that the western world encompasses all reality. They overlook the fact that what comprises western civilization is only about five percent of the total land mass of the world," he said. "Besides this, the east offers a history rich in culture. China alone has a history dating back thousands of years."

Both Fortin and Peterson indicated that there has been student interest in a study of the east.

"I have received inquiries from students on numerous occasions concerning interest in the eastern world which is largely overlooked in the present program of study," said Fortin.

Peterson pointed out that an evening school course in the Chinese language was very popular, despite its difficult nature.

He also offered a somewhat more pragmatic viewpoint.

"There are increasingly more opportunities for employment and careers abroad today in fields such as international trade, business, and politics. A working knowledge of a peoples' culture is almost essential to understand the people themselves. Students who have limited their scope of study to the western world are at obvious disadvantage in understanding the international or worldwide scene."

As far as integrating a program of eastern study into the present curriculum, both Peterson and Fortin were quick to point out that it would not be a required course as is Western Civilization.

"I would not think it would be required for anyone," said Fortin. "It would be a limited program for interested people probably offered as a junior or senior year elective. It would greatly enrich our offerings as far as curriculum is concerned."

Fortin admitted that there are problems to be dealt with.

"One big disadvantage is that everything will have to be done in translation. There is always the risk of losing the author's meaning through even a good translation. This is especially true when dealing with poetry."

But Fortin cited the availability of instructors as a more pressing issue. "There is a tremendous problem of manpower to be dealt with here. The course would require people, (i.e., teachers), with a highly specialized background in the study of the east. There are people on campus now who would undoubtedly qualify, but nothing has been officially resolved as yet."

Peterson was somewhat more optimistic: "The problem here may be seen as faculty, but I feel we have a nucleus of people already: Dr. (Michael) Metallo in the history department, Dr. (Susan) Marsh in Political Science, myself in Philosophy, and I'm sure the English department has much to offer. This is one of the topics that the task force I am appointing will look into."

Peterson concluded: "I hope to see this program implemented shortly on an experimental basis. There has to be a better understanding of the culture of the east, including political ideologies and religious beliefs, in order to have a clear understanding of what type of life these people lead and the problems they face."

"The stereotyped connotations of the east that many people have are many times untrue and only serve to inhibit the possibility for genuine knowledge."

Administrative ability of security chief seen lacking

Most will contest to the fact that the Security Office is an invaluable part of Slavin Center. We, at the Cowl, recently discovered that Mr. James Cunningham, the newly appointed director of Security and Safety, has arranged to have the security office moved to the basement of Joseph Hall. We fail to see the necessity, or the value, of this move.

In 1973, the security office was moved from Stephen Hall to the then newly opened Slavin Center. The move was necessitated at that time so that the office could be in a more advantageous location. Security has worked effectively in its present location. It would appear that a move to Joseph Hall would not be an improvement, but a step backwards. Sources have indicated that this change is being implemented so that the office would be in "a more central location." What could be more central than Slavin Center? They are obviously referring to geographical centrality. We hold that even though Slavin Center is not the "center of

"I think it (security) may be moving to Joe's. I don't know, it's still in the planning stages. You should talk to someone who knows better than I. Try Father McMahon."

the campus," it is the center of student activity.

The security office is presently able to provide various services, due to its location. It's site allows security personnel to moderate Alumni Hall, and the parking lots, not to mention the union itself. In light of the construction of the field house, it would appear essential for them to remain within close proximity. Isolated in the basement of Joseph Hall, one of their main purposes would be defeated.

It is our guess that the department has opted for this move so that they may be in closer proximity to the rapidly growing lower campus. Again, this reasoning proves imprudent. A guard house to be manned 24 hours a day, has recently been approved to be situated at Huxley Avenue. Wouldn't this provide the additional security needed for this area? Thus far, the Editorial Board of the Cowl can discern no constructive reason for an action of this nature.

"I was not contacted prior to the decision having been made, nor did it go to the Safety and Security Committee. No mention was made of it at all."

—Father McMahon

A veil of secrecy seems to have enveloped this entire decision. When Cunningham was questioned regarding this on October 22, he explained, "I think it (security) may be moving to Joe's. I don't know, it's still in the planning stages. You should talk to someone that knows better than I. Try Father McMahon."

Upon inquiring, the Cowl found that not only was Father McMahon, chairman of the Safety and Security Committee never consulted, but neither was supervisor of Security, Mr. James Marsland. In fact, when questioned, Father McMahon stated, "I was not contacted prior to the decision having been made, nor did it go to the Safety and Security Committee. No mention of it was made at all."

This course of events can only lead us to question the administrative ability of Cunningham, in directing the security office. It is outrageous to assert that a man in this position would not make a major decision such as this public. The Editorial Board of the Cowl demands a more prudent planning and decision making process. We remind Mr. Cunningham that our suggestions are in the best interests of the college community. We're both working for their benefit.

Student activism: Silence is deadly, not golden

Silence. It is a big problem here at Providence College. The saying "silence is golden" can only go so far—it can be deadly. The apathy and passiveness of students in the seventies is inexcusable. If we, as students, cannot get upset about things that are not only happening to us here at PC, but also things that are going on in the world, it just shows that we are a generation that is concerned with nothing other than our self-centered selves.

This is a particularly timely topic, as last Friday, members of Kennedy's "Camelot Administration" warned New England high school students concerning the evils of the lack of radicalism that is pervasive among students in this country.

Compared to other college campuses in the country, Providence College stands out as an example with a lack of student activism.

Last year, when social events were not allowed to be held on school nights, students were not "up in arms", although they were upset. The recent dorm council elections are an example of a lack of student involvement. Not only were the number of candidates so minimal that some of the races were uncontested, but voter turnout was unbelievably low.

When 42% of the students on campus, and 25% of off campus students were taken ill last year because of salmonella poisoning, the result was a potential boycott of dinner one evening in Raymond Cafeteria. And that was it. Students didn't seem overly upset about something that effected their physical health.

Try to initiate a boycott? The outcome is hopeless. Last year, Chris Correia tried to begin a Nestle food boycott. Beyond his own activities, it failed miserably. One can visit other college campuses and see signs of boycotts, antinuclear demonstrations, and concerns over the situation in South Africa. Here at Providence College, students show no concern for what is going on in the world. One begins to wonder if many students at Providence College even open up outside newspapers.

Providence College students have the potential to have their voices heard, but they don't use it. Students can register to vote here in Providence, but they don't even bother to do that. The apathy is all TOO apparent.

So what is the problem here at PC? Are we afraid to speak out? All we have to do is pull together and unify. We are potentially a powerful group, that would have to be dealt with politically. But we won't be, if we remain silent. Silence is deadly.

PC reaffirms policy for bias suits

The procedure for redress of civil rights complaints has been reaffirmed by a college affirmative action committee headed by vice president for community affairs, Father Joseph L. Lennon, O.P.

An employee, faculty member or student who believes that he or she has been discriminated against on grounds of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin, should first discuss "his complaint with the individual in charge of the area in which the alleged discrimination occurred."

The committee stated, "If the aggrieved person is not satisfied with the immediate supervisor or superior, within two weeks he may consult with the affirmative action and/or Title IX officer who shall make a preliminary investigation and attempt to solve the complaint through informal means."

If still not satisfied, the person "may file a formal complaint in writing with the chairman of the discrimination hearing board within 60 days after the employee, faculty member or student knew or should have known of the facts giving rise to his complaint."

A hearing will be heard within 30 days after that written complaint is filed by the hearing board. The complainant may have a representative or attorney at the hearing.

The board will then make a recommendation to the president of the college, who acts on those recommendations within 10 days.

The above procedure is for current employees, faculty members and students.

Prospective members of the PC committee may file a complaint with the affirmative action and/or Title IX officer, who will then report his findings to the "appropriate appointing officer." Where necessary, the affirmative action and/or Title IX officer will bring his report to the president of the college.

Forum for Ideas

By S.J.J. "Yeg" McGuire

In a past issue of the Cowl, (October 3), a small article, hardly noticed by the student body, has generated some discontent among some administrators. Under "Food Committee Revisions and Additions," I was quoted as saying "The idea that students are paying for meals that they aren't eating is upsetting to us." Fr. Heath, director of Residence, has made me more aware of our present meal-plan system, and this leads me to clarify that statement.

When the resident dinners are conceived of as a corporate unit, then they are consuming, according to Fr. Heath, "more meals than we are paying for." He has pointed out that Mr. Joseph Murphy, director of Food Services, almost always must ask for supplementary funds to cover extra costs each year; these extra funds coming from the operating budget of the college, and not from the board fee.

In addition, the price of the board fee is set not on the assumption that each individual will eat each meal, but rather on percentage figures which indicate how many persons are expected to miss meals.

Father Heath has also added that the college cannot know which students will be the ones to miss meals each month, and which students will eat more meals than the average. Fr. Heath has pointed out and I agree that it would be virtually impossible for each person individually for the meals they have eaten each month under our present system.

Perhaps it had better be stated that it is "upsetting" that some students are not, for some reason or another, eating as many meals as the average where others are eating more meals.

Along these lines, the food committee is proud to be an instrument working with the food service to help make some students more "able" or more inclined to eat the average amount of meals. There are several ways the administration provides for a student to be able to eat these missed meals. One policy of the Resident Office is to allow a student to bring his meal ticket to Alumni Cafeteria when his/her schedule does not allow time for lunch in the Resident Dining Hall. In addition, our job is to work with Mr. Murphy and his chefs to arrange the best possible meals so that students are sufficiently inclined to go to the meals that are available to them. Personally, and I am confident that I can speak for both Fr. Heath and Mr. Murphy, it is very distressing to hear the words, "Why bother, let's call E & J's." (I don't think that it is overpresumptuous to say that present and future PC students will be the ones making the payments on their new Pacer!)

We believe that much progress has been made toward making the meals more appealing, and give great credit to Mr. Murphy and his staff for these changes. Many "minor" accomplishments have been made (although nothing is minor to somebody whose taste buds determine his mood for the rest of the day.) These include new flavors of yogurt, iced tea, Tang at "donuts," macaroni salad at the salad bar, and innumerable others. We are most pleased with the administration's inclusion of the new alternate dinners policy, which we feel can be correctly called a "major" accomplishment. These things all work to make the student more inclined to go to the meals, and this is our goal. The Student Congress has also presented the Food Service with an alternate meal plan proposition, which is being looked over and considered in its very rough draft. If it becomes a reality, this too would work to provide the student with greater opportunity to eat the average amount of meals.

Therefore, it is incorrect to say that you are paying for any meal that you are not eating. The Food Committee's job remains, however, to work within the system to make the student more "inclined" to go to all the meals that he/she is able to go to now.

College or fied?

To the Editor,

Perhaps the rationale for a six million dollar field house is one that convinces the PC that the future is potentially bright. Maybe it is the hope of this multi-million dollar plan maintain at least a token liaison with the overshadowed, yet nonetheless existent academic life of Providence College. Perhaps a physical education teacher should be an addition to each civil military disasters of history reenacted for all in THE FIELD HOUSE (the Spanish Armada in the 25 meter swimming pool may be?). Evidently Mr. William Shakespeare, who wrote, "All the world's a stage..." is in error. It seems at Providence College almost all the campus is an athletic field. In fact, there is not a stage to be found! Pity. Is it the intent of the Providence College Corporation to strap the future students of PC into being athletic supporters?

Kelly's Keane Kommentts

By Kelly Keane

It is now midsemester and everyone should be more than well aware of the newly renovated building located on lower campus. It is called "Koffler Hall" and is used primarily for the Providence College Business Department. Much of the stop-and-go traffic ground in Harkins last year is virtually non-existent due to this new addition, which holds various classrooms, labs and offices.

What many people do not realize is HOW LONG it takes to get back and forth to Koffler. Recently, a memo was distributed to all teachers, stating that it takes 8 minutes to walk from Harkins

McVinney answers Dore

Dear Editor,

In answering the uncalled for letter to the editor in last week's Cowl, we hope we can relay our feelings without stooping to the level that seemed necessary to the three girls in Dore.

Their letter was an attack against Kelly Keane's column whose purpose was to help improve the living conditions in Dore by pointing out the obvious difference between it and McVinney. Most of us have lived in both dorms, as Kelly has, and agree with her point. We don't understand why Dore would resent any help they could get. There is always room for improvement.

Glad to be graduating

To the Editor:

The unanimous decision by the Providence College Corporation to construct a $5 million (at the least) field house has been heralded by some. I would like to,

however, offer a further suggestion which is undoubtedly suitable to this college. I propose that the area from Hendricks Field, through Alumni Hall and Raymond Field, down to Schneider Arena be turned into a giant Super Sports Center. Indeed, why not utilize all available upper campus property for this sole purpose? Subsequently, Koffler Hall should expand, and include all lower campus buildings in the business section, thereby triumphantly turning PC into an exclusive sports and business school. Really now, what difference does the existence of a theatre make anyway? The fact that PC often puts on plays from Civ is no matter. Superb directing, excellent staging, fine acting - where does it all rate? Is it a world to hide virtues at? Fine Arts at PC is dwindling, and will soon disappear from this "liberal arts" school. I'm thankful to be graduating in May.

Sincerely,
Martha Reynolds '80

Yearbook '79 defended

Dear Editor,

To those individuals who feel they have been let down by the 1979 Veritas yearbook, may you all be accounted for. Unfortunately it is the same old story. The ones who complain the most have the least reason to complain. First of all, let's establish some facts: 1) A yearbook is a representation of a "year" and the many facets that make up the year (fortunately the seniors play a large role but not the whole role) 2) Only ten seniors out of a class of about eight hundred and thirty had any participation in the construction of the yearbook - and that's less than 2%. When a class only involves 2% of its members in the formulation of the yearbook then the class obviously shows little interest in a representation of their years at PC. We must ask the question - "How much did you help in the yearbook's formulation? Most likely the answer is "very little, if any" because many of us on the staff do not know who you are for we haven't seen you in the office.

Getting back to the first point of the yearbook, that being the presentation of the year as a whole, there are many students who enjoy special events very much, such as Santana and Kenny Loggins, and wish to remember and bring back the feelings that they felt when experiencing a live concert. This can't be accomplished by an album cover.

As far as special individuals in the administration go, there are many to mention but our appreciation goes without saying. And in conclusion, graduation, commencement, and other activities often fall too close to the deadline, so that indepth presentations are impossible.

But for those of you who will continue to complain about the work of others throughout your whole life, we suggest the following: "Get off your duff and contribute yourself or else forever hold your peace."

Sincerely yours,
The 1980 Veritas Staff

Corporation criticized

Dear Editor:

A 5.5 million dollar field house now becomes a reality. Well once again it becomes clear where the priorities lie at this liberal arts college. The Corporation has decided that the PC students have a strong need for "new recreational area" and of course the term recreational immediately means sports!

I feel it is an insult and injustice that no funds have been allotted for the building of a theatre complex or for that matter any diversion from sports. Are all PC students jocks?

Providence College does have a Theatre Arts program. This program averages four productions a year. They are rehearsed and performed in Harkins Auditorium - when they are not removed due to the bookstore. It is an active program, yet virtually ignored by the hierarchy of PC.

Providence College is an educational institution, yet 5.5 million dollars is being spent, not on the education, or even "recreational" facilities, but on sports! The theatre department is educationally sound and broadens the knowledge of students. The physical aspects of putting on a production are overwhelming. Yet they receive no encouragement to keep up that department when decisions are made concerning the future of the college.

This new decision on the field house reflects the attitudes of the college toward enriching the student body. It shows that it is concerned with enriching its pocketbook.

The future PC student will probably be very diversified in his talents, he'll be able to swim, play volleyball, racquet ball, tennis, basketball and handball without ever having to go outside.

Hats off to the corporation. You really are broadening the horizons of Providence College.

Sincerely,
Kate Farrell '80

enjoyed the workshop and recommends it to all stress-stricken students at PC.

Mary Jo Flanagan, another student present at the workshop, said that the encounter motivated her to try experiments with relaxation and tension relief before and after studying. Phillips stressed that students should loosen up before studying, explaining that too much tension affects one's ability to concentrate.

Phillips expressed an optimistic feeling about his workshop. Students approached him after the meeting relating their interest in and appreciation of the workshop. According to Phillips, the turnout could have been better, but the group worked well together. Phillips hopes to offer the workshop again at the beginning of next semester.

Hall to Koffler Hall. The question of extending time between classes is now dropped and "distance" is no longer accepted as an excuse for tardiness.

The question I have is WHO measured this distance? How long were his/her legs? Which route did they follow? How fast was the spring and did they allow for a "cool down" period before entering the building?

Heaven forbid if you should hold the door for someone, or stop to say hello to a classmate. Any pause may be hazardous to your grade.

Some results of follow-up experimentation are as follows: —stopping to tie one shoe, 16 seconds; —double bow, 22 seconds; —tripping over speed bump and getting back up, 12 seconds.

Beware of these pitfalls during your journey: —getting behind someone on crutches on the Harkins stairs; —asking a question after class; —going to your room for a needed notebook.

Actually, eight minutes is plenty of time to get there, if we all just keep calm and concentrate on our objective. WE WILL reach our goal. Plan your time wisely and don't waste costly seconds.

And Heaven forbid if it should snow in Rhode Island.

Board of Governors receives, from the Student Activities budget, what is left over after other clubs are appropriated money. We were allocated $72,000 last year. Because we use money made on our events to sponsor more events, we actually programmed approximately $280,000. In essence, if we give up $4,000 to the classes, we are actually giving up $20,000 that would benefit the students."

The BOG feels that they provide such diversified entertainment, they reach virtually every member of the student body, and this loss of money would cut down on the alternatives to such things as mixers. "The BOG sponsors about 200 events per year," stated Clark, "while the classes save money mostly for two events in four years: Ring Weekend and Commencement."

Congress voted on this proposed resolution in a closed session. According to Kerry Rafanelli, president of Student Congress, the resolution was passed.

Bill Pearson, chairman of the Resident Board, announced that

Steve Cerrone is the new treasurer of the Resident Board. Also, according to Tom Corcoran, the BOG is sponsoring a Bingo in conjunction with Big Brothers and Sisters at 8:00 p.m. in '64 Hall on October 25. On this Saturday, October 27, a bus trip to Faneuil Hall in Boston is planned. The bus will depart at 9:00 a.m. The BOG will also present the movie "Magic" in the "Last Resort" on Sunday, October 28. There will be three shows, at 6:30, 8:30 and 10:30 p.m.

George West, president of the Dillon Club, reported that the Harvest Ball, which is being held on Saturday, October 27, is sold out.

Finally, Kerry Rafanelli announced a revised procedure for the allocation of dates to clubs. The BOG will get their traditional primary dates, such as Halloween, Spring Weekend, and St. Patrick's Day. The classes, in order of seniority, will then select one date with the Dillon Club following. The BOG will proceed to pick the rest of their dates, with the classes and Dillon Club receiving their second date afterward. The rest of the clubs on campus will then get their choices.

McDermott Hall refund effective

Due to clerical errors in computing floor damage fees, the Residence Office of Providence College over-charged students.

The Residence Office over-charged male residents who lived on the third floor of McDermott Hall. An over charge of $1.30 per student was included in each floor members dorm damage fee for the 1978-79 school year. According to Reverend Walter J. Heath, O.P., the director of Residence, the overcharge was due to clerical errors. The following students may claim their refund at the Director of Residence Office, Room 203, in St. Joseph Hall: David Daversa, Michael Ventricelli, Brian Nicholson, L.J. Manning, John Durkin, Frank Rasche, Mark Griffin, Charles Sherman, Albert Paladino, Joseph Dolan, Thomas Glynn, James Khinlan, Timothy Travers, Anthony Buglio, Augustus Nogueira, Stephen Kinney, Richard Ahern, Edmund Murray, Thomas Corcoran, William Lawrence, Walter Goula, Robert Ekstrom.

Senator Kennedy has been a good friend to the state of Rhode Island.

Garrahy told the class that he and all Rhode Islanders were "very concerned" about the situation at the University of Rhode Island in which five students face indictment on sexual assault and extortion charges. "Many parents of URI women called me personally because they feared their daughters' safety. My daughter Maribeth is a sophomore at URI and there is no question in my mind of her safety."

"I hope that this is an isolated incident, but precautionary measures are being instituted on the campus to prevent similar occurrences," said Garrahy. He mentioned an increased security force and lighting. According to Garrahy, URI, like any other educational institution, is not a sanctuary from the law.

New smoke detectors very sensitive

By Ned Cumminskey

"Even a fly can set off the new alarms." This statement was made by Rev. Walter Heath, O.P., commenting on how easy it is to set off the 432 new smoke detectors in the dorms.

"When we installed the detectors, that was one of the risks that we had to accept. Since they are so easy to set off, we will have to increase in the number of false alarms, either through mechanical failure or because someone is fooling with them," added Fr. Heath.

These statements were made in reference to a slew of false alarms which occurred on campus during the past few weeks. According to Mr. James Cunningham, Director of Security, "It is very hard to tell if someone has set the alarms off, or if they have gone off by themselves, when we first arrive at the dorm. The only way that we could tell if they have been fooled with, is if they are obviously damaged. By this I mean if the cover is off, or dented, or if the entire unit is hanging from the ceiling; then we would know that it was no accident. Otherwise it's very hard to tell for sure," stated Cunningham.

The problem is that these 432 detectors can be set off by the slightest thing. They are very sensitive and can pick up the slightest trace of smoke, steam from a shower, or any amount of dust can even set it off. Also, simply touching the detector, or having a ball or frisbee whack it will cause it to go off.

According to Cunningham, Father Heath, and Donna McCaffery, every resident student should be aware of this situation, and monitor their actions in the dorm hallways, especially if smoking.

"Fr. Peterson anticipated this problem before we installed the detectors but felt the added safety would more than make up for it. Since every detector is directly tied in to the alarm system to the fire department, every time one detector goes off we will have four trucks coming from the Providence Fire Department. This will present a problem if we have a number of false alarms, so it is important that we try to prevent that from happening before it starts," said Father Heath.

The real danger of this whole problem is that if every time the fire department arrives, it's for a false alarm, then if the real thing were to happen they might not respond as quickly.

"Up to now the situation hasn't been any worse than in previous years, so I'll be happy if it stays that way, but it only can if each student realizes how serious this situation is, and acts responsibly," Father Heath commented.

of the proposed swim club. The club concerned itself with the recreational aspect of the sport.

The success or failure of the club depends on one thing: interest shown by the students. If there is a large positive response, the club will become official; the official status will in turn enable the club to receive funds from Student Congress.

Since PC doesn't have a pool, the club has arranged to use the Rhode Island Junior College pool, located on the Lincoln Campus, Lincoln, Rhode Island.

The facilities at the Lincoln Campus also will be available to PC students on Mondays and Thursdays, 6:30 p.m. - 9:30 p.m., and on Saturdays, 2:30 p.m. - 4:30 p.m. Providence College also will have exclusive use of the swimming facility on Tuesday and Wednesday nights. The swim club will charge an activity fee of $1.00 per person, and provide free transportation. The next outing to the pool will be tonight, Wednesday, Oct. 24.

When and if recreational swimming does gain official status, a decision will have to be made as to whether the club will participate on an intramural or competitive level.

The swim club urges more student participation. Questions concerning recreational swimming may be referred to Frank Flaherty, Tom Pavelon, and Reverend John A. McMahon, O.P., the club moderator and PC Assistant Vice President for Student Services. The next meeting will be held in approximately one week.

Swim club proposed

By Ed Shea

Finally, implementation of a swim club might be realized here at Providence College. The several attempts made to establish such a club met with failure in the past. The ultimate decision now lies with the students.

Such was the consensus at the meeting of students interested in a swim club held October 10. Fifty-two people attended the meeting to discuss ground work and goals

Twelfth Night: "unforced and uproarious fun"

By Kathleen O'Neill

Struck down by the mid-semester blues? Catch the Providence College theater's sure cure!

The PC Theater's first production of the 1979-80 season is William Shakespeare's Twelfth Night. Dr. David Burr, managing director of Theater at Rhode Island College, will guest-direct the classic comedy which will be presented in the round by the energetic PC actors.

This super bright comedy spins the tale about Sebastian (Richard Lawrence), and Viola (Carol Smith), identical twins whose resemblance to one another is known that, except for the difference in dress, they cannot be known apart. While making a sea voyage together, Sebastian and Viola are separated by a shipwreck. Each believes the other to be lost at sea.

Viola, an uncommon beauty, is cast ashore on the coast of Illyria where she dons male attire and serves the Duke Orsino (Joseph Menino) as a page under the name of Cesario. The Duke is well-pleased by her first appearance and gracefulness of his new page, and sends Viola to pay court for him to Olivia (Wilma Mondy), a native woman whom the Duke has been unsuccessfully wooing.

A myriad of humorous mishaps shape up the play as Olivia becomes captivated by the charms of Cesario (Viola), and Viola begins to fall in love with Orsino.

The comedy of the play is enhanced even further when Sebastian shows up in Illyria and is mistaken for Cesario.

Enjoy a lively romp through Shakespeare's Twelfth Night. A sure cure cast of talented actors including F. Gorell, M. Tondreau, J. Weaver, K. Sabo, W. Dunn, J. Gianni, P. Cameron, D. Otero, K. Farrel, K. Corley, J. Cunningham, and G. Burr assures speedy (comedy) relief.

The play's action is masterfully complimented by the superb craftsmanship displayed in the set. Technical direction and lighting is by R. Scott Yulter, with scenic design by Carl F. Gudenus. Costume designer is Mary Farrell. Martha Reynolds is the stage manager.

The collection of characters in Twelfth Night is Shakespearean to the heart. Unforced and uproarious fun have been combined with a beautiful vein of poetic feeling to form an enchanting presentation sure to captivate an audience.

Twelfth Night will be presented in Harkin's Auditorium for five (5) performances, October 24th thru 28th. Curtain time is 8:00 p.m. Tickets for all performances are $1.50 for PC students. The box office, located in the rotunda of Harkin's Hall, is open from 5:00 p.m. till curtain on the evenings of performance. Ticket reservations and information may be obtained at 865-2327. Tickets will be available at the door. SEE YOU THERE!!

A lot of class

By Kathy Hansen

The professor strode into the "Trends in Abstract Philosophy" and their "Relationship to Literature" class, slammed the door, and chuckled. He had the gleam of class discussion in his eyes.

"I'd like to ask a simple question," the professor said, rubbing his hands together.

I knew he was lying. A simple question? Ha! The professor was an evil man.

I began to take notes furiously. When I could no longer write, I chewed on my pen, squinted my eyes, and glanced up at the ceiling at seven second intervals. The professor would not call on me. I knew he would not. I flipped through back notes and I adopted the "Thinker" pose. Most importantly, I avoided eye contact with him.

The class was silent. "Well?"

I looked up. The professor glared down at me. He knew. Somehow, he knew that I hadn't quite finished the assignment. He was out to get me. Maybe the whole thing was a communist plot. But I kept my wits about me.

"Did you want me for something, professor, sir?" I smiled at him brightly.

"I asked you what Nietzsche's reaction would be to Roland Barthe's reaction to Faulkner's Light in August?"

"I'm afraid that I never met either man, professor, sir."

"That is not the question at hand," the professor said, stroking his beard.

"Oh. Oh! I'm awfully sorry. I am. I just thought that I'd clear that up."

"Yes. I see. Now would you like to answer the question?"
"I'd love to. Really." I closed my notebook. "But I was just leaving."
"Leaving? There are 45 minutes left of class!"
"I know."

Providence College is comprised of an extraordinary student body. Not only academically proficient, they are extremely ambitious.

In order to succeed at Providence College, an extensive amount of time must be applied to studying. However, that does not inhibit the students from getting involved in extra-curricular activities.

Almost all the students are involved in one or more activities, depending on other responsibilities. Some students are involved in athletics, some in class politics, and others belong to various clubs.

Some of these organizations receive more recognition than others, but this does not make them more important. An example of a fairly unknown but

To New York and back with the BOG

On Saturday, October 20, the Board of Governors sponsored a bus trip to New York City. With an early morning departure, two busloads of students, several professors, and other PC affiliates, were dropped off at the Museum of Modern Art at 11:30 a.m., and were picked up for the trip home at 7:30 p.m., in front of Manhattan's Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Exclamations such as "I had a great day," and "New York has so much to see," were plentiful.

Once in New York, participants on the trip had free rein. Some spent the day visiting museums, some shopped, some took in various sights such as the Statue of Liberty, while others just hobbled with the locals.

The BOG also sponsored a trip to the factory outlets in Fall River, and presented the Three Stages Film Festival on Saturday. Both were well attended and very successful.

Tonight, the BOG will sponsor the Albuquerque Dance Theater at 8 p.m. in '64 Hall. Other BOG events for the week are BINGO, which is cosponsored with Big Brothers and Sisters, to be held Thursday at 8 o'clock p.m. in '64 Hall; Saturday's bus trip to Faneuil Hall in Boston, departing at 9 o'clock a.m.; and the movie "Magic," to be shown at 6:30, 8:30, and 10:30 p.m. on Sunday, in the Last Resort.

Brothers & Sisters

an important club is the Big Brothers and Sisters.

The Big Brothers and Sisters began twenty-five years ago. Fr. Paul Jeraia was and today is the advisor. The organization has expanded considerably over the years. As of now, it is composed of about 120 members. The president of the club is Nick Wood, Jane Viera is the vice president, the secretary is Sharon Maher, and Jane Pechulis, who was interviewed, is the treasurer. These elected officials work together with the club members to help underprivileged children.

Jane Pechulis said that each member is assigned a specific "little person" to spend the day with. Their basic task is to fill the gaps in the lives of the children.

"Mostly, the children are just looking for someone to talk to or someone that the feel is interested in them," Jane made it clear that the students are not trying to analyze the children; but they will give them guidance if necessary.

The club members are well organized. They meet with children from different organizations 4 days a week and entertain them.

On Monday's, children from Chad Brown come to Providence College. They meet with their assigned friend either to play in the game room, or to play in the gym. Before they leave, they eat in Alumni Cafe.

On Tuesday's students who possess the ability to speak sign language go to the Rhode Island School for the Deaf. Their main objective is to communicate with these children. Most of them are in desperate need of attention. Whether or not the students play with the children is unimportant.

On Wednesday's, children from the Fiskville Center in Cranston come to PC. These children are basically poor. They are lacking attention in various ways. They spend their time at PC playing and then eat in Alumni Cafeteria before returning back to Fiskville.

On Thursday's children come to PC from the East Providence YMCA. The club members are just basically interested in entertaining the children. They spend their time at PC the way the children from Chad Brown and Fiskville do.

The organization is expanding rapidly. The members are finding more ways in which to minister to the children. They are forming an Arts and Crafts Center at St. Mary's in North Providence, they are planning several different field trips for the children, and they also have parties for the children on Halloween, Christmas, etc.

These daily activities may not sound very important but the time the club members devote means a lot to the children. They enjoy coming to PC even if they just sit around and talk. It is an outlet for them to get away from their environment. Above all, it is a learning experience for both the students and the children. It is amazing how aware PC students are of underprivileged children. Students who have so much are able to realize how little some children have. More importantly, these students are willing to give what is precious to so many people. They are willing to sacrifice their time. Now they need a small portion of your time. Their main objective this year is to raise money for a van. They are very restricted because of transportation problems. In order to take the children on outings, they must borrow automobiles. Fr. Duffy, Fr. Morris, and Fr. Reid have been very helpful by lending the students their automobiles. However, the students feel it would be much more practical for them to have a van. The Big Brothers and Sisters have various fund raisers throughout the year. On Thursday, October 25, they are having BINGO-nite in '64 Hall. It is co-sponsored by BOG. Why not support the Big Brothers and Sisters by giving a small amount of your time.

Hello from Europe

By Peter G. Walsh
Fribourg Correspondent

"Bonjour monsieur. Entrez s'il vous plait..." And so I was greeted at the door by my new Swiss landlady in a barrage of ninety-mile-per-hour French. She speaks no English. Wow. At the time of this writing, we have been in Europe for eight days: four in Germany and four here in our new hometown of Fribourg, Switzerland. What we have experienced so far, I can only attempt to put into words.

We took off from Kennedy Airport at 7:30 p.m., Saturday, September 29. Seven hours later, we arrived in Frankfurt, Germany where it was morning. Voila jet lag. We were then driven by bus south, to Heidelberg, Germany, and we spent the night at a hotel just outside of the city. Heidelberg is famous for its university and its majestic castle, but we will always remember it as our first experience with a totally foreign culture.

From Heidelberg we travelled southeast to Munich, where the Oktoberfest, yes, the real Oktoberfest, was in its final week of celebration. The Oktoberfest is an annual tradition in Munich. It began back in the time of King Ludwig, to celebrate his marriage. And what a celebration it is!

Oktoberfest is a huge carnival, with all kinds of amusements and rides, but the highlight of the whole occasion is the eating and drinking in the enormous beer halls. Each one is about the size of a hollow Schneider Arena. Every brewery around Munich is given a beer hall at the fest, and they each decorate their respective hall. For example, the Lowenbrau Hall constructed a giant lion above its entrance, and every minute the lion would lift a mug and roar, "LOW-EN-BRAU!" Beer was served by the liter in tall glass mugs at $3.50 per mug.

Each hall is packed, so packed that it's difficult to find a place to sit. Dan Flynn and I found two seats at a table with some German girls and a couple of Austrian mountain climbers. The girls spoke a little English, and they translated our English for the Austrians. We sang and drank all night, and became great friends.

Oktoberfest is the time of year when the usually reserved Germans "go wild." Such parrying you have never seen, and it lasts for about twenty days.

After two days and nights in Munich, we travelled southwest to the resort town of Lindau. Lindau is a picturesque tourist town in southern Germany. We spent one night there in a fancy hotel on the edge of a lake. At 9 a.m. the next morning, we departed for Fribourg, Switzerland, our home for the next ten months. Fribourg is a small, yet historic city, with orange colored roofs on the houses, sloping hills, and cobblestone roads. One of the most magnificent pieces of architecture we have seen in Europe is the St. Nicolas Cathedral in Fribourg. It was built sometime in the 13-1400's, and towers above the city.

Part of the Fribourg population speaks German, but all of our group is living in the French speaking section around the university. We are in a sort of sink-or-swim situation with the French language. Most of our landlords do not speak English, as mine does not, and we are forced to speak French every day. It's very challenging, and sometimes quite comical, as we struggle through the language. You cannot help but laugh when your landlady describes the location of the shower, the mailbox, etc., and five minutes later you're in your room, scratching your head, wondering where the heck the bathroom is.

Donnelly to speak on advertising careers

By Sean Donovan

On October 30, the Marketing Club of Providence College invites you, both business and non-business majors, to attend an enlightening lecture given by Mr. William F. Donnelly. Donnelly, a 1951 PC graduate, started his career with W.J. Lynch Paint and Varnish Company. After rising to sales promotion manager in a brief period of time, Donnelly transferred to Mercury Mail

It has indeed been a challenging experience so far. Day to day, most of what we say, and do, and see is totally new: the customs, the language, the food. Our small group of PC students have become a family here in Europe, and we represent America in everything we do here. Only time will tell what this year of adventure holds in store for us. Until next time, au revoir, mes amis...

Advertising, as an aspiring sales manager. His many credits include such organizations as the PC Alumni Association and the Rhode Island Advertising Club, of which he is president. A past vice president of the Advertising Club, Donnelly has also held the esteemed position of treasurer.

This intriguing lecture should answer many questions dealing with the "real," the "outside" world.

All are welcome at the lecture, and refreshments will be served.

Saturday with GRE's

By Ann Sposato

Last year at this time, the letters G, R, E meant virtually nothing to me. But now, with a glimpse of the "real work" in sight, I decided to take some sort of positive action. "Graduate Record Exam - why not?" I thought.

Well, Saturday was the day. At 7:30 a.m., my singing alarm clock was blurring out Boz Scaggs' "It's Over." Could this be some sort of an omen? I moved about my room in a trance-like motion eyeing my roommates sleeping peacefully. Why do I do these things to myself?

As I stepped out of the dorm, I quickly fell into step with a dozen other squinty-eyed individuals heading toward Albertus Magnus auditorium. In a few short moments those squinty eyes were opening wide - many in shock. I flipped open to the verbal section and panic soon set in. Where did they ever find words like this?

Four hours and many unanswered questions later, the "all pencils down" announcement was made. I found myself pushing through the crowd to get out into the fresh air. Oh well, who needs graduate school anyway?

Lady Harriers, only third year, have best season ever

The women's cross-country program is only in its third year of existence but the girls have already built a winning tradition in New England cross-country competition. The Lady Friars have won two meets already this fall and have placed well in the other meets in which they have competed.

Last fall the squad was 5-4 in cross-country competition and they are well on their way to improving that mark this year. Coach Cathy Cerra has a lot of talent to work with and is utilizing it to the maximum.

Janic Cataldo, one of only three seniors on the squad, has been sharing most of the PC first finishes with sophomore All-Stater Sue Ratcliffe. Junior Sheila Barry has also been one of the squad's strong performers this fall. Credit should also be given to Carmen Ross, Linda Simshie and Oona Mulligan.

On September 22, the Lady Friars got their first chance of the year to show their stuff against some of the bigger schools of the northeast. The Lady Friars finished fifth in a field of twelve in a meet held at the University of Connecticut. Sue Ratcliffe and Janice Cataldo finished ninth and tenth respectively for the Lady Friars.

On October 4 and 6 the girls finished first of four in two separate meets. Framingham, Emmanuel, Fitchburg State, Brandeis, Williams and Assumption all fell prey to the PC runners. Janic Cataldo, Sheila Barry and Sue Ratcliffe juggled second, third and fourth place finishes among themselves in the two meets. Linda Simshie and Carmen Ross also finished high in these meets.

The high riding Friars were stalled somewhat when they ran into cross-town rival Brown. Brown knocked off PC in a duel meet held on October 13, and then bested the Lady Friars in the State Championships held on October 17. PC ran well in the States. Brown won with 26 points, URI was second with 44 and PC was third with 54. The Lady Friars had a strong showing even in this loss.

Last weekend the Lady Friars competed in the New England finals at the University of Vermont. They are also slated to run in the Eastern Regionals at Westchester, Pa., on November 3 and 4. The Lady Friars could do well in both of these meets. They are a young team so they could provide much excitement not only in the upcoming indoor and spring seasons, but also in the years to come.

Frisbee club

Ultimate frisbee, a fast growing game on college campuses all across the country, has come to PC this fall. In a game which few people realize has become an accredited college sport, players follow rules similar to flag football. The players attempt to move the disk down a 60 yard field into the endzone. Two 24 minute halves compose the game where wide open running and accurate passing are the keys.

Organized in the beginning of this year, the PC ultimate squad spent the first month of the season learning the rules to the game and working on offensive and defensive strategies. Their two opening matches were quite valuable in that the squad was able to pick up some real game experience as they fell to Bryant College and Brown University.

But in only their third official game, the PC squad defeated the '78 Rhode Island champions, Roger Williams, 17-13. Matt Hand and Tom Griffin were the playmakers while Larry McElroy and Dave Stetkiewicz were on the scoring end. The 18 man squad, who transported and coached themselves in the game, plan numerous other matches before the weather turns cold.

Lady Friars place 16th of 78

The surprise team of the tournament, however, was a senior-freshman combination of Sue Hubbs and Ann Marie Mancini. After easily beating a Wheaton combination, the Lady Friars combo was defeated by a UConn tandem. The experience of playing together helped the newly formed team immensely, as after their loss in an exciting three match set to UConn they went on to win seven consecutive matches against some of the strongest teams in New England. MITT, Bridgeport, Mount Holyoke, Assumption, Boston University, U. Maine Orono and the University of Vermont all met defeat at the hands of Hubbs and Mancini. Hubbs and Mancini reached the finals and were competing for fifth place out of 78 competing teams when they finally met a team that was just a little too strong. The number two seeded team from Harvard knocked off the underdogs 6-2, 6-4. It was by far the most successful tournament the Lady Friars have ever had at the New England...

This week the Lady Friars conclude their season with matches against Boston College and Connecticut College. Their record is now 8-2.

Harriers beat Brown, URI, sweep state championships

By Kevin Burke

On Saturday, October 13, the Providence College cross-country team took advantage of two state schools as the Friars raced their way to easy victories over Brown and URI. This "State Series" meet, which was the last regular season race for PC before the New England Championship on November 5, left the Friars with and 11-0 season record and extended their winning streak to 68 consecutive victories.

"There was no need for any of our guys to push themselves"

Neither Brown nor URI proved to be too much of a match for the potent PC team. The Harriers easily swept the first six places. Ray Treacy, Peter Crooke and Paul Moloney all tied for first place, covering the 5.2 mile Brown course in 26:35. Next in line for the Friars were Dave Ball, Jimmy Fallon and Larry Reed. All three runners tied for second place with times of 27:02.

"There was no need for any of the guys to push themselves. We were well aware of the strength of both schools and there was just no reason to go all out," said coach Amato, after the race.

Indeed with the New England just a couple of weeks away, the Friars do not want to risk any injuries. Until that big meet, which will be the final race of the fall, the team will be doing a lot of slow distance runs.

By Ed Ruhl

The PC girls field hockey team enjoyed an undefeated week winning three straight games and upping their record to 8-2.

Against the University of Bridgeport, the Lady Friars were trailing, 3-2, at the end of the first period. Top scorers Lynn Sheedy and Linda Wage netted the two Providence goals, but the speedy Bridgeport team was able to push three goals past netminder Marilyn Noble. In the second half the Lady Friars came out strong, smacking in four quick unanswered goals. Wage and Sheedy handled the scoring again, each netting two in the four goal outburst.

Barrington College was PC's next victim as they fell to the Lady Friars, 7-0. In this runaway contest, the scoring was more spread out. Sharon Clegg hit for three goals while Linda Wage and Jane Ladd scored one each. Marilyn Noble and Judy Vansholt combined for the shutout.

In what was to be their biggest challenge of the year, PC dumped Holy Cross, 5-2. The victory over the Crusaders was the first ever for the Lady Friars. Taking an early 2-0 lead on goals by Wage and Sheedy, the Lady Friars coasted past the Crusaders. Freshman Monica Glynn helped cap the victory with two second half scores. Glynn collected one score on a penalty shot. Goalie Marilyn Noble had a good game as did the precision offense of the Lady Friars.

With three games left in the season, top scorers are Linda Wage (18 goals), and Lynn Sheedy (12 goals). On Friday, October 26, the girls travel to Williams College for the Northeast Tournament to compete against teams from New York, Pennsylvania and New England. The last home game will be played October 25 against Boston University.

Friars place second overall Lyons retains title in State Championship

By Brian Otovic

The setting for the Rhode Island Intercollegiate Tennis Tournament was ideal from the Friars' viewpoint. As was the case last year, the weather was perfect. But more important was the fact that this year the tournament was held here at Providence College.

The situation proved very advantageous for Peter Lyons, as he successfully defended his title. Lyons, the top seed in the tournament, defeated a stubborn Scott Diehl from Brown University, 6-1, 6-4, 4-6, 2-6, 6-2.

Diehl, third singles player for Brown and a tennis recruit from southern California, earned his berth in the finals by defeating fellow teammate and Brown's first singles player, Harold Schaff, 6-2, 6-3.

Lyons took the individual honors, but Brown took the overall team title. Brown was first with 13 points. PC was close behind with 12 points.

The rest of the PC players also fared well. Bill Dinadio breezed in the first round, 6-0, 6-0, but lost to Diehl in the next round, 6-3, 6-4. Brian Shanley also fell in the second round. John Hare, another southern California recruit on the Brown squad, bested Shanley, 6-2, 6-3. Steve Chaffield lost a tough match in the second round to Mike Prete of URI, 7-5, 6-4.

In the consolation, Chris

Dimar of PC was the winner, beating Mike Tavares, 6-0, 6-0. The consolation players are all those who lost the first round, Dimar lost to John Keller of Brown, 6-1, 4-6, 6-0, and Tavares lost to Diehl, 6-1, 6-1.

Coach Jacques Faulise was very pleased with his team. "The weather was great, and with a little bit of luck, we could have been overall winners," Faulise

The fall season ended with the State Tournament last weekend but the netmen are still looking ahead to their tournaments in New York and Quebec next month.

Steve Brophy pulls ahead of the pack in last Friday's Road Race. Brophy remained in front and won the three mile race in 15:17.

VBallers Continue Strong Play

By Mary Gibbons

The Providence College women's volleyball team has been keeping quite a hectic schedule lately. In the past few days the Lady Friars have travelled to East Nazarene College, Connecticut College and Yale University. At East Nazarene the Lady Friars took on both the home team and the University of Lowell in a tri-match. The Lady Friars emerged victorious upon defeating the University of Lowell in two straight games. With that match as a warm up, the Lady Friars defeated the hostesses of the tournament in the next match, East Nazarene was a bit tougher to beat as they had the home court advantage and support from the fans. PC nonetheless downed their opponent in two out of three games.

Their next stop was a single match at Connecticut College, where PC overwhelmed the opposition with ease. The team pulled together and won three straight games in a best of five match. Everyone played exceptionally well to place Providence over Connecticut College in that match. Joan Fenneman and Trisha Curran led the team, supported by strong plays by Sandy Ratcliffe, Sheila Deam and Linda Leonard.

The Lady Friars went on to a tournament at Yale on Saturday, October 20. Their first opponent was the University of Bridgeport, whom they disposed of with ease. Everything seemed to be going well for them as they then defeated New York Tech in two straight games. The absence of two of PC's most important players, Sandy Ratcliffe and Kelly Keane, began to show when the Lady Friars were downed by Smith College in two out of three games.

The tides turned when PC overpowered Keene State in two straight games. Following that match there was an hour and a half wait for their next game against Central Connecticut in the finals. This turned out to be a fatal wait, for the Lady Friars were defeated in that match. Their battle for third place with Smith College was futile as Smith repeated their earlier defeat of PC and the Lady Friars fell to fourth place.

Despite the disappointments of the day and the loss of Ratcliffe and Keane, the Lady Friars made a fine showing in that tournament as they have throughout the season.

Brophy wins Athletic Board Road Race

Last Friday the Athletic Board sponsored a Road Race for the PC students and faculty. The course was approximately three miles long and was set up along the perimeter of the campus. Although turnouts were not as heavy as expected, there was still a good field for the race.

Dave Mulhern, organizer of the race, was beaten cleanly by Steve Brophy to take the honors.

Lady Friars win five straight Girls soccer club a reality

By Ellen Harrington

Fall at Providence College always brings a multitude of athletic activity. There is always something going on. A new soccer craze in the United States has brought the sport to college campuses all over the country, and PC is no different. This season brings a new twist, however. The girls, never to be outdone by the guys, have started their own soccer club.

The idea originated last spring with a small group of girls who were told that if they could get it organized and find a coach, they could take to the field. Led by team captain Sue Lind, they did just that. The faculty sponsor is Fr. Gino Bondi, and the girls are coached by Nick Bauer and Vin Gulsiano. According to Sue, "Soccer is my family sport. Both of my brothers play and both of my parents coach. The athletic department was really good with advice, and the guys' soccer coach Bill Doyle has given us tremendous support that we're very grateful for. Everyone's really enthusiastic, and we're looking forward to a good season."

The girls will play a few scrimmages this fall, the first being tomorrow at Brown. They also have promises for the spring from Salve Regina College, Bryant, and Rhode Island College.

Although the organization is run as a club, there is mandatory practice every day unless there is a conflict in schedule. Rumor has it that the coaches have been scouting the men's practices, and the girls are doing the same drills as the boys, along with running and skill work.

Practices are going well, and all the girls are willing to work hard, but the team right now is being plagued by a serious lack of funds. There is talk of fund raising events coming up, but there has been no definite approval yet.

Coaches Bauer and Gulsiano agreed that the team is coming along very well. Said Bauer, "Right now we're in the building stage, working basically on skills. We've got a great bunch of girls who are willing to work hard, including captains Sue Lind and Ellen Payne. We've also got some promising freshmen with Chris Murphy, Meg O'Brien, and Amy DerMarderosian. We're psyched, and we just hope that we get strong support from everyone."

Booters drop BC 2-0

When goalie Dave O'Brien went up to block a shot with less than 10 minutes to go in the 4-1 loss to Yale, the Friar soccer team's hopes for 1979 suffered a severe blow. O'Brien, fourth year nember for the Friars, suffered a separated shoulder and was lost for the remainder of the season.

A potentially bright season seemed to turn dim in that one instant.

Junior Pete Chenette has stepped in to the breach and has filled the netminding position admirably. Last Saturday, Chenette turned away 14 Boston College shots and shutout the Eagles, 2-0.

Jay Skelton, who has shown a knack for getting goals in games, scored both Friar goals in the game played at Boston College. Chris Garahan assisted on one of Skelton's goals and Bill Lawrence assisted on the other.

The Friars upped their season record to 4-3. On Wednesday, October 17, the Friars were handed a 1-0 defeat by UMass. The Friars were outshot by an almost 2-1 margin. The Friars were unable to sustain any prolonged offense and thus suffered their third loss of the year. Offense has been a problem for the Friars of late. They have produced only four goals in as many games over the past few weeks.

PC takes on Bentley on Wednesday, October 24, on Gay Field. The Friars will travel across town Friday night to take on the Bruins under the lights.

Kate Shea (2) finished first and Kathy Dougherty (1) finished second out of all the girl runners who finished the race. In fact, they were the only girls in the race.
