O'Connor Reports No More Night Classes

Committee on Administration representative Jim O'Connor reported at Sunday night's meeting that they received a copy of a memo from Rev. Thomas McBrien, O.P., the dean, on behalf of the Dean's Office, which recommended that day students no longer be allowed to take night courses. According to O'Connor, there are 572 students in 126 night classes with the School of Continuing Education. The Dean's Office would like to cease allowing students from taking night classes because they feel it affects the quality of the classes, and there is no real need for day students to be taking night classes. The COA will be responding to the memo in the near future.

Living up to the many expectations which were created in the past few weeks, Student Congress began efforts to reorganize by approving a number of changes to its Constitution at Sunday's meeting.

The amendment, which was unanimously passed at the meeting, provides for five standing committees as opposed to the former seven. The committees now include legislative, ethics, finance, academic research, and lifestyles. Each of the committees will have a chairman, who will be appointed by the president of Student Congress in concurrence with the Executive Board, and subject to the approval of Congress by a majority vote. Members of each committee will be delegated through the same procedures.

In addition to committee changes, the ethics committee on Congress made a number of changes in its rules for Congress members with regard to their responsibilities.

In a search committee report, Jim McGuire stated that a group of finalists for the position of vice president of academic affairs has been presented to Rev. Thomas Peterson, O.P., College president. He stated that the committee will be selecting the individual for that office within the next few weeks.

Fr. Bond Stricken

At approximately 2:45 a.m. on this past Friday morning, Rev. Robert E. Bond, O.P., suffered a heart attack at his residency in Stephen's Hall. He was immediately rushed to nearby St. Joseph's Hospital for treatment.

According to Rev. Thomas R. Erile, O.P., prior to the heart attack, Fr. Bond had been in the Coronary Care Unit since he was admitted last Friday. His condition is being monitored carefully, but there is no word as yet on his recovery.

Father Bond is an assistant dean here at PC, and teaches courses in literature for the English Department.

Although Father Bond is not allowed visitors, students may send cards to him via any of the Dominicans living on fourth floor Harkins, or they may be sent directly to St. Joseph's Hospital, Broad Street, Providence, R.I.

Students are also asked to note that Rev. Dennis C. Kane, O.P., is now recovering from surgery at the Lacey Clinic in Massachusetts. He is a professor of philosophy here at PC.

PC Big Brothers and Sisters

Dancing to Raise Funds

By Tom McGair

The second annual Big Brothers and Sisters Dance-a-thon took place here at Providence College on January 29 and 30. It was held in '64 Hall from 7 p.m. on Friday night to 7 p.m. on Saturday night.

"The money we raise will go towards a van," said Maryanne Howley, president of the PC Big Brothers and Sisters organization. A mixer was held on Friday evening from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. in addition to the Dance-a-thon. This helped to raise additional funds for the van.

"Chorduroy," an energetic four man band, was cheered on by the dancers and added spirit to the Dance-a-thon. "I could dance to these guys all night," said Matt Wolf, one of the marathon dancers. Another band, "Talus," performed on Saturday from 2 to 7 p.m.

Last year, the Dance-a-thon raised about $1,500 for the Big Brothers and Sisters. In addition, the Student Congress raised between $800 and $1000. "We won't know exactly how much money we've raised this year until the middle of next week," Howley commented Friday night.

Howley would like to thank WDOM-91.3 FM Radio, "Chorduroy," "Talus," and all of the people who helped out. "Without them we wouldn't have had the Dance-a-thon."

This year, more than 400 PC students submitted applications to work with the children in the program, but more than half were turned down because "we the organization) couldn't reach more of these children," said Howley.

"I felt a need for these children to be helped, and that I could assist them," added Howley. She is grateful for all the help given to her which allowed them to help the children out so far this year.

In addition to sponsoring the annual Dance-a-thon, Big Brothers and Sisters feed an estimated 150 children per week.

There are 150 members of the PC Big Brothers and Sisters organization. The program runs each year from October through May.

OCRO Handbooks Out

By Karen MacGillivray

Having trouble with your landlord? One step in the right direction is going down to the Off-Campus Residents Organization in Slavin 122, and picking up the Handbook for Tenant-Landlord Relations.

This handbook is a copy of a manual composed by the RI Consumer's Council, Mr. Edwin P. Palumbo, a member of the PC faculty, is the Executive Director of the Consumer's Council, and it was with his permission that the manual was reprinted for PC students through the efforts of Steve Duryea, president of the Off-Campus Residents Organization.

It is, as the handbook states, "a layman's explanation of the various housing provisions in state law as applicable to landlord-tenant situations." The handbook explains leases, security deposits, rent, what to do about repairs, eviction, and moving out of an apartment. It also describes how a landlord or tenant can recover costs for repairs in a small claims court, and what a landlord must provide, according to a housing code checklist. In the appendix, there is also a list of various organizations that are designed to help landlords and/or tenants.

The handbooks have been assembled and, although they are not yet ready for distribution students can stop by and pick up the handbooks for reference now in looking for off-campus apartments for next year.

Father Dore's Birthday

By Cathy Smith

Rev. Vincent Dore, O.P., celebrated his 82nd birthday on Sunday afternoon, Jan. 31, 1982, with residents of Dore Hall.

Father was present for the dedication of a plaque bearing pictures of the last three classes of Dore Hall residents. Following the dedication there was a party in the lounge of Dore Hall. Birthday cake and ice cream were served.

Father Dore was a member of the Class of 1923, the first graduating class of Providence College. He returned to PC in 1931 as a professor of sociology. In 1933 he became chairman of the sociology department.

Father has held a number of offices here at PC. He served as athletic director, and was treasurer of the College in 1941. Father Dore was also dean of studies in 1945. Father Dore served as president of PC from 1961 to 1965. He is currently the Chancellor of Providence College.

Fresh Ideas & New Approaches Pastoral Activity

By Mary Little

Rev. Adrian Dabash, O.P., has recently been appointed head chaplain for the Providence College campus, and like anyone in a new position, he brings fresh ideas and new approaches. Father is no stranger to the Chaplain's office, having been connected with it for nearly 10 years. Father Dabash will be continuing Father Erle's work, stepping out now and then for art classes. Father Dabash wants to concentrate on student involvement in many of the service groups and committees on and around campus and raising the awareness of students to church feasts and holy days.

There are a variety of groups and activities that offer students a chance to become involved with the spiritual community here at PC. Included are: The Legion of Mary, Knights of Columbus, Big Brothers and Sisters, Prayer Group, CCD teaching, mass lectures, and of course, the Pastoral Council, whose members are responsible for

BOG Loses Manager in Last Resort

On Friday, January 29, Mark Caffrey resigned from the Board of Governors as manager of the Last Resort.

According to Caffrey, the resignation was prompted by differences in opinion among his fellow workers and superiors regarding the execution of policy in the Last Resort. Caffrey stated that these differences were not with respect to his own duties, but he did admit that BOG members "felt that I broke these (college) policies."

After considering the matter for some time, Caffrey decided to resign. "I resigned because I felt that it was best for everyone," he commented.

Caffrey has been a member of the BOG for four years and manager of the Last Resort since last year.

BOG Cultural Spotlight

By Cathy Graziano
BOG Staff Correspondent

The Board of Governors is set up to be the cultural as well as social organization for the student body. Committees of the Board are divided up to provide diversified forms of entertainment for the College. One of the hardest working of these committees is the lecture committee.

Patti Silva, a senior, and Ed Shea, a junior, head of the lecture committee of the BOG. This year Patti and Ed have worked hard to provide a wide range of subject matter for the lectures, in an attempt to reach everyone in the PC odd jobs and office hours, and are a great help to the chaplain. With such a diversified choice of activities there seems to be no real reason not to be involved in one way or another. The problem is finding the niche you're most comfortable in, and if you want suggestions Father Dabash has them.

As Lent approaches, Father Dabash would like the opportunity to explain the significance of the season and deepen its meaning for the students. To make this holy time more meaningful, different liturgies, student retreats, and other services have been planned as a means of spiritual renewal. More details will be announced soon. Father Dabash will no doubt develop more ideas as he moves ahead in his new position and will keep us informed. We wish him luck as he begins to initiate his ideas.

Help Clothe Poland

On January 15, 1982, Governor J. Joseph Garrahy announced that a Polish Relief Clothing Drive has been established to aid the people of Poland in their time of need. In a ceremony at the State House in the Governor's Office, the Governor proclaimed January 17, 1982 — February 12, 1982, as Polish Relief Clothing Drive Days in Rhode Island. The Governor said "many Rhode Islanders have friends and loved ones who now live in Poland. We share their concern and pray for their safety."

Jean Babry will serve as chairperson of the Polish Relief Clothing Drive in Rhode Island. General Leonard Holland will serve as general coordinator and the Rhode Island Heritage Polish Subcommittee will serve as a catalyst for the volunteers.

Donations of adult and children's clothing, children's shoes, bedding and diapers will be accepted beginning Sunday, January 17, 1982, and ending Saturday, February 12, 1982, at

PC Joins Rank of "ARISE"

As an adjunct to the recent realignment of Student Congress, President Dave Mikula and the Executive Board have decided to join with other area colleges and universities in a program called ARISE, the Association of Rhode Island Students. Mikula appointed Pat Conley, vice president of the Class of 1984, to represent Providence College in this Association.

According to Conley, the coalition serves a three-fold purpose: "Foremost, the Association attempts to bind area campuses together by relating events taking place at the schools and sharing future plans." ARISE also serves as a forum for the discussion of problems and concerns confronting students, administrators, and student governments. Lastly, and perhaps most importantly, the ARISE representatives hope to act as a lobbying group. "We feel that such a network of students with unity of purpose is definitely a force to be reckoned with," Conley related.

Those subjects which are being addressed by ARISE include the proposed budget cuts affecting financial aid and the Rhode Island state drinking age. In response to the budget cuts, letters were sent to two of Rhode Island's Congressional representatives, Senator Claiborne Pell and Senator John Chafee. According to Kathy Walsh of URI, ARISE president, the responses from both senators have been positive. Both oppose the cuts and have vowed to fight them if they remain in present form.

In regard to the drinking age, ARISE is proposing the use of 3.2 beer on area campuses. This beer contains 3.2 percent alcohol and may be consumed legally by underage adults. This could serve as a viable alternative to students effected by the present laws, but Conley stated that "Its use is still very much in the planning stages." Aside from these major considerations, ARISE is also working on a voter-registration to be held on campus statewide.

A Spring Weekend is also being planned by ARISE for this May. Members of the group hope to draw attendance from all schools in an effort to promote comradery. ARISE brings together delegates from Providence College, Brown, URI, CCRI-Warwick, CCRI-Lincoln, Roger Williams, Bryant, Barrington and RIC. Meetings are held bi-monthly and are hosted by each institution in turn.

The next meeting of ARISE will be held on Tuesday, February 9, at 7:30 p.m. at the Bryant College campus. Suggestions from students are welcomed and encouraged. They may be left with the Student Congress from 9:30 to 4:30 daily, or in Friar Box 720.

Needs No New Reps

Each year an increasing number of junior year students leave PC second semester to participate in the Providence-in-Europe program. As a result, each year certain vacancies are created by their departures, and this year is especially a problem. Four of the Class of 1983 officers and representatives to the Student Congress will be going abroad in February, a situation which leaves a significant gap in class representation.

Last week, Class of 1983 President Greg Pigeon formally announced that he and the remaining officers had decided against filling the positions "with the best interests of the class in mind."

At the Student Congress meeting this past Sunday, Pigeon explained that it is "easier not to pick four more people." He stated that the remaining five officers and reps felt there was no fair way to pick replacements, which left an election as the only alternative. However, Pigeon pointed out that setting up an election would take two weeks to complete. Further, "due to school vacations and the Executive Board Elections, this would leave only three weeks for the new members to become involved in the process of Student Congress before the new class elections."

1983 Class officials did not feel that these circumstances allowed for any significant contributions on the part of new members in such a short period of time. As a result, they concluded that their best action would be to wait until elections take place in late March and early April.

Class officials are comfortable with their decision, as they explained that there are numerous juniors available to help them out, should any major class decisions need to be made prior to the election of new officers.

Pentagon Lowering Boom Campus Research Censored

By Enoch Needham and Carrie Mulaly

Editor's Note: In last week's issue of The Owl, an article appeared concerning military funding for scientific research on college campuses. In a follow up article of this issue the college press service reports on academic freedom and publication concerning this research.

"Here it comes," whispered the professor to a reporter sitting next to him at the recent American Association for the Advancement of Science (AAAS) convention. "They're going to say why we should like having the boom lowered on us."
Indeed, Admiral Robert Inman, deputy director of the Central Intelligence Agency, proceeded to tell the assembled AAAS members why they should submit the results of their government-sponsored research to the government for censoring.

As the Pentagon replaces the National Science Foundation as a regulator of academic research, professors are worried about being subjected to constant censorship. The issue has become even hotter as the government increases its sponsorship of military spending on campuses.

Inman presented a frightening scenario of the government giving millions of dollars to a university lab, which develops a vital piece of knowledge that, if not pilfered by a foreign student on the campus in the employ of his or her own government, would eventually fall into the wrong hands (as published in an academic journal.

Foreign Studies Program

The Guide to Life Abroad

How would you like to spend this summer discovering the culture, history, and the people of Tahiti? Learning the art of mosaics or cooking in Italy? Studying health care in China, wildlife management in Kenya, or marine biology in Jamaica? And, possibly earn credit for it?

These and some 900 other summer foreign study programs are outlined in The Learning Traveler: Vacation Study Abroad. The book describes programs, sponsored by United States and foreign colleges and universities and private organizations, in every part of the world. All programs listed are scheduled to take place between April and October, and may last from three days to three months. Many of the programs include time for your own travel and exploration.

Perhaps you would rather study abroad for a longer period — a semester or academic year — The Learning Traveler: U.S. College-sponsored Programs Abroad: Academic Year, is your gateway to over 800 semester and academic year abroad study programs sponsored by accredited U.S. colleges and universities.

Published by the Institute of International Education, the Learning Traveler series are the only books with complete listings of study abroad programs. They are aimed at college students and concerned adults of all ages. The guides list everything you need to

The issue has become even hotter this year as the government dramatically increases its sponsorship of military spending on the nation's campuses.

And as the Pentagon replaces the National Science Foundation as a regulator of academic research, professors are worried about being subjected to constant censorship. But federal money — even with strings attached — is about the only money available to the academic community these days. "Many of us (researchers) find it's a choice between having a job and violating the very principles of academic freedom that created our jobs in the first place," says Dr. George Mariel, the University of Chicago professor who predicted Inman's boom-lowering speech.

The Department of Defense (DOD) will spend an estimated $709.7 million for research on college campuses in 1982, up from $495 million in 1980.

For all research, including that done by the private sector, the DOD will spend $20 billion. The National Science Foundation will distribute $1 billion.

Most of the Pentagon money will go to the hard sciences like physics, engineering, chemistry, and math. But professors getting the money wonder how much of their completed research will be deemed "secret" for national security concerns and barred from publication in the academic community.

Many of the major research universities adopted rules during the late sixties and early seventies that prohibited their people from doing any research that could not ultimately be published.

"Our position as a university," explains Joe Sayers of Wisconsin's engineering department, "is that if it (research) is done, it will be published."

A Wisconsin professor is in the middle of an emerging challenge to that policy. The Air Force is considering trying to ban publication of engineering Professor Shien-Ming Wu's research, which he did in 1980 under a $100,000 Air Force grant. Sayers says the university is determined to publish Wu's work. The Air Force is still deciding if it will pursue the issue.

Most of the Pentagon money will go to the hard sciences like physics, engineering, chemistry and math. Professors getting the money wonder how much of their research will be deemed "secret" for national security concerns and barred from publication in the academic community.

The government, however, is actively pursuing tighter control of other kinds of research. In 1980, the Pentagon told colleges to keep foreigners out of certain kinds of government-funded electronics research. The same year the National Security Agency (NSA) suggested ways of keeping a lid on cryptography research, where recent breakthroughs in technologically breaking codes have been dramatic.

In response to the government concern, the American Council on Education helped create a Public Cryptography Study Group, composed of NSA and academic officials.

The purpose of the group, according to David Kahn, who has authored two cryptography books, was to encourage cryptologists to censor themselves voluntarily.

After initially rejecting research guidelines, last February the group voted to accept non-binding voluntary strictures as well as a professor could publish the work even if the group advised against it.

Since then the group has reviewed about 25 papers, Kahn says, and censored none.

But Kahn sees the panel itself as a threat to academic freedom.

"This is the first step toward anti-First Amendment legislation," he contends. "It's the opposite of what the whole national security issue is all about."

Kahn claims that NSA officials have warned professors that if the voluntary censorship system doesn't work, they will sponsor legislation that would bring cryptography research under firm government control.

The Reagan administration, added George Washington University Professor Marc Cleh at the AAAS convention, tends to favor censorship over the free flow of ideas and information.

"It is not our intention to slow down or impede research," explains Dave Tisdale, a member of the NSA policy staff.

The voluntary censorship panel "was set up because academic researchers, unless they have worked for the government, won't know what needs to be classified or not. What we are doing is offering assistance."

"If we received a paper that caused a problem — and we don't expect that to happen — we would go to the professor and engage in personal discussions, and try to reach an accord," Tisdale says.

"Let me stress that we don't feel very many papers will even be a problem," he adds.

To Kahn, the number of papers is beside the point. "I'm opposed to institutionalized censorship. If there is harm in national security, the loss if far outweighed by the benefits of freedom and open discussion."

Student Loans in '81 Are Limited in '82

More students borrowed more money under the Guaranteed Student Loan (GSL) program from fall, 1980, to fall, 1981, than ever before. Some observers attribute the high increases in the number of GSLs to an impulse to "climb on the ship before it sinks" as much as to the need to borrow more to meet higher tuition costs.

Under Reagan administration cutbacks, however, fewer students will be eligible for GSLs in the future. Consequently, "this is probably the last year we'll witness this kind of growth in the GSL program," says Skee Smith, a spokeswoman for the U.S. Department of Education.

The Education Department, in its just-released preliminary report for the 1981 fiscal year, says it guaranteed student loans worth a record $7.7 billion, up 39 percent from fiscal year 1980.

$2.3 billion new loans in 1980 multiplied into $3.5 billion loans in 1981, Smith reported. The average loan was $2,196, up from $2,091, in 1980, according to the report.

Smith attributes the big increases to expanding awareness of the program. "Until a couple of years ago, not everyone could get a GSL. As more students hear about it, they apply for it."

The dollar volume of the program has increased by half each of the three years since Congress let students from higher income groups start getting GSLs.

But one Education Department official, who requested anonymity, feels Congress' recent re-narrowing of GSL eligibility caused the 1981 rush to get GSLs.

Students and financial aid advisors, the official speculates, wanted to "climb on the ship before it sank in 1981. It was the last time they could get a GSL for sure." Loans available for 1981 will be much more limited.

Congress in Action:

Book Swap On The Way

With the second semester barely underway, many students are still suffering from the effects of the high cost of textbooks. It is especially disheartening to spend large sums on brand new books, knowing that in a few short months most will be redeemed by the Barnes and Noble bookstore at less than one half of their original price; if they are redeemed at all.

The problem, however, is not new, and is a source of aggravation to the students who feel they are being "ripped off" by the bookstore year after year. Finally, a plan is in the works which could prevent students from spending ridiculous amounts of money on texts.

Judy McNamara, secretary of the Class of '83 recently proposed that the Student Congress organize a student "book swap." The plan consists of setting aside a time (preferably during finals), and a place (preferably Slavin Center), in which students could get together and swap books among themselves rather than dealing with the bookstore and its high prices.

McNamara commented that students could "barter" to determine the re-sale prices, resulting in a better deal for both buyer and seller, than if they had gone through the bookstore. Students would also be able to sell paper-backs to those who need them, whereas the bookstore will generally not buy back such books.

Although the plan requires incredible organization on the part of the Student Congress, it cannot be enacted without the cooperation of the entire faculty as well. It is essential that teachers inform the Student Congress of what courses they will be teaching the next semester, and what books will be required. Naturally, books not previously used, will have to be purchased in the bookstore.

McNamara noted that a massive publicity campaign is also necessary to make students aware of the "swap" and the types of books that are available for re-sale. Congress would like the "swap" to start immediately following this April's registration, so that students can purchase their books for the fall semester. If successful, the plan will hopefully become a bi-annual event.

The Editorial Board of The Cowl emphatically endorses this proposal. Anyone who is aware of the skyrocketing cost of a college education, can certainly understand the motives behind this plan. The Cowl encourages both students and faculty alike to do their part in making the PC book swap a success.

"I'll swap Chaucer, Civ II and a Bio text for the Incredible Hulk or Spiderman."

THIS LEARNING WORLD

by Dr. Richard Meisler

"What do you expect of us?"
"The course is easy once you understand what the teacher expects."

"Are we expected to come to every class?"
Our preoccupation with expectations, a polite word for requirements, is driving us completely out of the business of education.

My wife and I are considering sending our nine-year-old son to a new school. The teacher wanted him to take an IQ test. Her reason was, "I can expect more from a child with an IQ of 115." Without expectations this teacher was lost. Her job was to have expectations.

One of my students, after a conversation about books she might read, asked whether I expected her to buy the books. I offended her by laughing nervously when I said I didn't care whether she bought them or took them out of the library. I apologized, and she explained that some of her professors expected students to buy their books and underline them.

This same young woman had just returned from nine months on an Israeli kibbutz. She had been the first woman to do several kinds of hard manual work, and she had had a love affair. She was adult and competent. But now that she was a student again, her adulthood didn't count and she wanted to be told whether to buy and underline, or borrow or remember.

That same evening I got a call from another student who was scheduled to do an independent study with me. He has a family, a full time job and a small business of his own. He is independent, able and talented. His first question was, "What do you expect for a four-credit independent study?"

I know a professor who was very proud of his first meeting with his department's new graduate students. "I told them what we expected," he said to his colleagues. Dedication. Hard work. The incredible thing about the episode is that his platitudes may have been taken seriously. Most courses begin with the professor describing his expectations. It is done in a tone of great gravity, and the students strain to understand. Experts on pedagogy all agree on one thing: the teacher must be clear about his expectations.

It has become natural for us to think that education consists of meeting the expectations of another person. Person A, the teacher, does the expecting. Person B, the student, performs. If performance doesn't conform to expectations, or if it doesn't appear to conform, there is a problem. We start to ask

Goodbye "Hubie"

Dear Editor:

To: All Those Who Have Enjoyed The Last Resort:

We, the undersigned, would like to take this opportunity to express our sincere thanks to a close friend.

For the past two years Mark Caffrey has devoted himself to providing the PC student body with one of its most popular forms of entertainment.

Those of who were fortunate enough to be a part of The Last Resort will certainly cherish those memories. Others, who were simply guests are grateful for a job well done.

His unselfish dedication to the Board of Governors and to the students, was not easily observed, but each weekend its results were enjoyed by many. For most of us The Last Resort entails four or five hours of pleasure on a weekend night, for Mark it has involved countless unseen hours. Its success over the past two years is due entirely to his efforts and determination.

Mark's resignation should not leave any of us blind to the service and true inspiration he has provided and above all, we must and shall remember and follow the fine example he has set. "Hubie's" active involvement on the BOG and The Last Resort will truly be missed. However, his name will forever be synonymous with The Last Resort and we will remain forever grateful.

Sincerely,

'83's Decision Unconstitutional

Dear Editor:

The Constitution of the Student Congress states that "... any office that is vacated must be filled within 14 days." This is quite clear. It does not say that the remaining officers have the option of filling them, it places a duty upon them to do so.

It seems ironic that shortly after passing the bill to extend the term of office to cover the important spring semester, the Class of 1983 will be left with only 5/9 the representation afforded to other classes. Should an important matter come before the Congress during this time, the Class of '83 would have less representation than the other classes.

Finally, we would be noted that the Congress has known of this possibility for months and has had adequate time to develop a procedure to fulfill the requirements of the Constitution.

In the future, officers intending to leave office should vacate the office in January, with a new election held to fill the four month period from January through April.

Respectfully yours,
William Palmer '83

WEEKLY SPECIAL

The New Immigrants

By Fr. Paul Newpomer, M.M.

The Statue of Liberty rises from the waters of New York Harbor. She is, in the words of Emma Lazarus, "A mighty woman with a torch..." and her name, Mother of Exiles."

The statue and Lazarus' poem, "The New Colossus," are symbols of our heritage as a nation of pilgrims, immigrants and exiles. But are we, as a nation, living up to the demands of those symbols and that heritage? Thanksgiving season seems a good time to reflect on Lazarus' words, etched onto the Statue of Liberty.

"Give Me Your Tired, Your Poor"

The dozen or so Salvadorans — men and children — rested in the pseudo-shade of a desert cactus in the harsh, open spaces of Arizona. They were tired. They had traveled by bus, by truck and on foot to get this far. Tiredness was nothing new to them. In their native land they had toiled endless hours in a small field trying to grow enough corn for survival. They had worked for starvation wages on the coffee and cotton plantations of the wealthy. Now they fled hunger and the military. As they rested they wondered how much further they would have to walk to find shelter and whether immigration agents would discover them and send them back to their devastated homeland.

"Huddled Masses Yearning to Breathe Free"

The group of Haitians had huddled in the darkness, waiting for the right moment to get into a fragile boat and push off from the shore of their island nation. They watched fearfully for the police, who would certainly stop them, place them in jail, maybe even torture them. The open sea between Haiti and Miami was dangerous, but not so dangerous as remaining in Haiti.

"Send the Homeless, Tempest-Tossed to Me"

After long hours at sea the sense of time and place vanishes. There is only a weary watch for the shores of the United States. And the journey will end if the tiny boat is not intercepted and turned back to retrace the dangerous journey. And if forced back to Haiti, then what? The danger of being classified an enemy of the state is even greater once they have sought to escape.

"I Lift My Lamp Beside the Golden Door"

Once in the U.S., Haitian and Salvadoran refugees have a further problem. They are classified as economic rather than political refugees. As such they are not eligible for the status of "voluntary departure" that would enable them to remain here until they feel it safe to return home.

Thanksgiving is an appropriate time to write to President Reagan and protest his order to turn back Haitian refugees at sea. It is a good time to write to members of Congress in support of House Resolution 126 which supports granting Salvadoran refugees voluntary departure status.

The Statue of Liberty should represent for these new exiles, too, the idea expressed by Lazarus' poem.

"From her beacon-hand glows world-wide welcome."

A Modest Proposal for Fennell Hall

For many cold mornings now, I have been faced with the cumbersome task of walking from Fennell Hall to class on Upper Campus. These treks over seemingly insurmountable snow drifts and generally unpleasant terrain have left me bitter and aggravated. I have since vowed to improve this uncomfortable situation and I am proposing a comprehensive plan to deal with this problem.

My first suggestion is to run a shuttle bus from Fennell to Upper Campus. These busses should run from 8:10 in the morning to 4:10 in the afternoon with a special optional bus for dinner at Raymond Cafe or a late snack at Mural Lounge.

My second suggestion would require a slightly larger financial commitment by the administration. This bold plan would involve moving Upper Campus 2,000 yards closer to Fennell or more practically, moving Fennell 2,000 yards closer to Upper Campus. This proposal would create a new area called "Middle Campus". Since Parking Lot D would be eliminated, the administration would be forced to build a parking garage. Financial estimates of this new garage (to be named the Father Walter J. Heath Memorial Parking Complex) run between $3 and $5 million.

The third option is to build a heated tunnel between Fennell and Gazman, similar to the one between Fennell and Dore. Financial estimates of the tunnel also run into the millions.

The administration is thus left with three options, the least expensive and most practical of which is to run a shuttle bus between Fennell and Upper Campus. Fellow Friars of Fennell unite! We have nothing to lose and transportation to gain! This is indeed a modest proposal.

Aftermath of Paris embassy hit stirs new fears at State

WASHINGTON -- A few days ago in Paris, an American lieutenant colonel named Charles Ray was shot and killed as he left his apartment to head for work at the American Embassy. An unknown assassin simply walked up to him, aimed a pistol at Lt. Col. Ray and shot him in the head.

The shocking thing about Ray's murder is that he was a man you wouldn't expect to be on any assassin's hit list. He was one of four assistant military attaches at the U.S. Embassy in Paris. By anyone's definition, he was a middle-level official.

This is what has the top echelon at the State Department climbing the wall.

On Nov. 12, 1981, the acting U.S. ambassador in Paris, Christian Chapman, was the victim of a similar attack. A lone gunman confronted Chapman as he was leaving his home to go to work. The would-be assassin fired six shots at Chapman. But the acting ambassador ducked behind his car and all the shots missed.

The attack on Chapman was a failure, but it led the State Department to tighten security for top American officials in Europe.

The success of the tighter security measures is what is now driving the State Department to despair. With top U.S. diplomats better protected, anti-American terrorists apparently have decided to make middle-level U.S. officials their targets. That's how the State Department experts interpret the murder of Lt. Col. Ray.

Obviously, there is no way that bodyguards can be provided for every U.S. diplomat in Western Europe. This means that every American stationed in Europe, from ambassadors to file clerks, is a possible target of murderous terrorists.

CONGRESS IS TO BLAME -- Whatever the cause of the Jan. 13 plane crash here in Washington turns out to be, we can tell you who's really to blame for the tragedy. It's the members of the United States Congress. Let us explain.

National Airport is cramped into a tiny area on a river bank. It is flanked by high-rise buildings. The runways are too short. And just a few hundred yards beyond the runways, planes must clear bridges crowded with commuters.

National Airport is not only kept open; it's one of the most congested airports in the country. Why? Investigators for the General Accounting Office know why. They have just completed an investigation of the airport. Their report hasn't been written yet, but our reporters have talked to them.

The story can be summed up in one word: Congress. National Airport is controlled by congressmen. It's their private fiefdom. It's wonderfully close to Capitol Hill. In normal traffic, a congressman can get from his office to National Airport in less than 15 minutes.

That's why National Airport is still operating. That's why it handles as many as 1,000 flights a day. And that's why Dulles Airport, a 45-minute drive away, is still not used to capacity after nearly 20 years.

The GAO investigators point out that National, unlike other airports, can't generate its own revenues for improvements. It must go to Congress for all its money.

Why is this important? One example, directly related to the recent horror:

One of the survivors said the pilot tried to abort the takeoff, but ran out of runway. For the past few years, National Airport officials have been trying to add a safety zone at the end of the runway. But Congress put politics ahead of safety. Not until this year did the lawmakers finally approve the funds. And the money can't be spent until next year.

That's no way to run a railroad -- or an airport.

HEADLINES AND FOOT-

NOTES -- The Soviet Union has stationed a combat brigade of 3,000 soldiers near Havana. There's also a huge, Russian-built intelligence facility on the island. From it, the Soviets can monitor communications throughout the United States and Latin America. The Russians sometimes hear the U.S. ambassador's telephone calls even before officials in Washington do.

Nearly two years ago, an American journalist named Jon Anderson was arrested in Peru on trumped-up drug charges. He was uncovering official corruption at the time. While he waited in jail for 18 months, we wrote about his plight. Now we are pleased to disclose that he has finally been released. Peruvian police, it seems, finally admitted they could not prove the charges they had lodged against him.

President Reagan has apparently run short of jobs as political payoffs for his friends. So he recently nominated a longtime fundraiser friend, Eugene Lipp, to the National Transportation Safety Board, where he'll have to make decisions on aircraft safety. But Lipp's talents lie in marketing, sales and public relations -- not in aviation technology. Some suspicious senators have told us they might not go along with the nomination.

Dance Fever, Blisters, etc.

All Night Long...

By Jean Ludwig

The Big Brothers and Sisters Dance-a-thon was a big success! The dancing started at 7 p.m. Friday night and those of us who made it were dancing until 7 p.m. Saturday night.

There were about 32 dancers in the beginning and in the final count Saturday night, 24 dancers were still standing. The dancers were not the only people staying up for 24 hours, however. Special thanks go to our moral supporters: Ellen, Joe, Paula and others. On top of it all was Mary Ann Howley providing food, wake-up calls and most importantly, Ben-Gay.

Friday night the music started out with Chorduroy, a band from PC. The mixer gears helped everyone keep dancing until 2 a.m. This driving force was greatly appreciated by everyone involved. The dancers then danced to the sounds of WDOM. More special thanks go out to the DJs. The dancing ended with more PC sounds from the band Talus.

A few people were returnees from the first annual dance-a-thon: Steve, Michelle, Kat, and Kelly. They put up with the pain for a second year.

Standouts for the evening:

1. Drew's radiator jumping.
2. Jump rope.
3. Sean's partner on a chair.
4. Pajamas!
5. Anne and A.J.'s constant beeping, even outside!
6. Kelly and Kat, together again.
7. We're havin' a party!
8. Real food: burgers, cookies, fruit, grilled cheese as opposed to last year's donuts!
9. Our Saturday morning visitors.
10. And most of all-7 p.m. Saturday night!!!

Once again a lot of hands went into this event and also much love for "the kids." Thanks so much to everyone involved.

P.S. My back is killing me!

I May Never Return Again

By Judy McNamara

The next time you hear from me I'll either be on a train passing through Zurich or maybe even sunning on a beach in the French Riviera. Anyway, I'll be very far away, too far away to stir up any Providence dust or write silly articles about ice being nice.

Yet as each day passes by, I grow lelier about the thought of missing PC. I mean, who could ask for anything more, being at school and not attending classes, sitting at the info desk chatting with passers by and being wined and dined by friends that promise to miss me. But lately I think they're all getting a little anxious. "So Jude, when are you leaving anyway?" "How long will you be gone. You mean you'll be back next year?" "Only five months. When are you leaving again?" "Oh just go to Europe, please."

Well, I am really going and I am really excited. Since some of my senior friends have decided to take out a life insurance policy (in case I die in a plane crash), I thought I'd leave a short but sincere will.

To Jane McAuliffe I leave the exciting and thrilling job of being Features Editor of The Cow. It's been fun but I leave my messy desk to you, Jane, and all my General Hospital photos too.

To MB Holland I leave my favorite seat in the Kat and Brad's and Louie's and wherever else I have acquired my favorite seats. She's going to need them without me around as a stable figure in her life.

To Pat Conley, I leave my seat at the info desk, since he spends so much time socializing. It's the best spot on campus to meet people. So, Pat, sit down and chill out. I leave my earn seat to you.

To Dave Mikula and Rob Giovino, I leave my ability to calm the storm and never stir up any issues and, of course, a handkerchief for all the tears they shall shed when I am gone.

To Greg and Jean and Judy and Dan and Brandy, my tendency to be patient and never fly off the handle and stay sober at class mixers and keep people from being violent and help Greg break up fights.

To Mrs. Greene I leave 10 pounds of black licorice and freedom from having to type my resume and business letters next year, since I'll be gone.

And to Fr. D., no more hysterical phone conversations about advice on everything from A to Z.

To Joe Bascetta I leave my knack for being ethical and to little Al my ability to whisper during exams.

To Ed Quin, I leave my photo album so he may keep my self and my many "friends" fresh in his memory.

To Carol Anne, I leave a bottle of Mr. Clean and to Stasia a pound of those unique brownies she's so very fond of.

To Bryan Jones, a book on How to Avoid Gump and to Jimmy O'Connor a pseudo engagement ring for whenever he's ready to hear no. And to Dunna, some new sleeves for his lovely ski coat.

To Gavin and Frank I leave my brother's deflated football from Thanksgiving of '79 or better yet, nothing absolutely nothing.

To Peter, peter pumpkin eater, I leave some scotch 'n water and to Jimmy Murph, a little lime.

To Jean G, my pearls and nightgown; they make for a great combination, and to Julie V. a free trip to Europe, please come and visit.

To Sean Sullivan I leave my black garter belt and to Jay Sullivan, well he knows. To Greg Gebb, I leave 69 green M&M's and to Beth Kelleher, her car. I'm so kind. To everyone else that I might have left out, don't worry, the longer version is tucked away in my secret hiding place.

If the life insurance policy pays off and all those silly seniors (and Bryan) collect all that luscious money, they can go suck an egg. Because I'll be back to have resumes typed and articles censored and parties broken up. So when I get back with three thousand pictures and three million stories, don't get too excited, I may never return!

A New Frontier at PC

By Jane McAuliffe

"What's your major?"

"American Studies."

"American Studies? What's that?"

All too often I have heard this response whenever I tell people what my major is. Therefore, I have taken it upon myself to inform those of you who are not familiar with this new program as to what it is.

The Providence College Faculty Senate originally signed and passed legislation on this interdisciplinary program last spring. It began with informal discussions among various professors who designed a program which provides a different and more diverse liberal arts education by allowing the student to reach into a number of specialties from the American perspective.

★DEFENSE

want to contribute our tax dollars for defense. The assumption made by the existence of military forces is that we need to be defended.

The overall question remains, disputely to what extent. Secondly, we need to be better informed. The numbers exist; I have seen them as graphs in news magazines. What do they really say? That question is not impossible, just very difficult and complicated. Pros and cons on defense can be argued forever. The problems of today might be solved tomorrow. What will happen in the 1980s is a question that will only be fully answered in retrospect.

According to Dr. Brian Barbour, official head of the program, there are 21 students from the Class of '84 who are enrolled. When asked about the program's progress thus far he commented, "Of course, the ultimate success depends upon the graduates of the program, but so far the administration has been cooperative and the students very responsive."

The new major is loosely constructed, allowing the students to concentrate on those courses that adhere to his or her career goals. The required courses include: one year U.S. history, four specialized American Studies seminars and four American Studies electives, which are chosen from a special list. Both the seminars and the electives are taken in the junior and senior year, while the U.S. history requirement is usually filled in the sophomore year. This leaves several free electives in which the student may fill school requirements as well as take courses that appeal to his or her interests.

Dr. Barbour stated that he felt the program is adequate at its current size when asked if he felt it would be expanded. By keeping the program fairly small, it allows for more individualized attention in regards to seminars.

Graduates in American Studies can expect excellent preparation for careers in journalism, government, communications, civil service, law and their constituent fields. Many choose to go on to master's programs or law school.

For the liberal arts student who is looking for a change, American Studies makes a nice alternative.

Is Your Mother Calling You?

Two years ago, the Legion of Mary, a worldwide organization of lay men and women, was established on the PC campus. This organization provides Catholic men and women with a chance to offer their services to their pastor to aid him in serving the Christian community.

The PC branch of this organization is unique in that it offers its services outside of the bounds of the college community. Specifically, Legionaries offer their services to parishes such as St. Pius in teaching CCD or visiting shut-ins, or serve the wider Providence area in visiting nursing homes and hospitals. In such visitations, Christ and Mary are preached, occasionally explicitly, but more often in the compassionate presence of the Legionary to those in need of consolation, healing, or knowledge of God's love for them.

As an organization, the Legion of Mary has three objectives. Primary among these objectives is the personal sanctification of its members through a growing relationship with Christ and the imitation of the virtues of Mary. Secondly, the Legion seeks to spread devotion to Mary. Many Christians have grown up with sketchy knowledge of Mary or her place in salvation. Yet, knowledge of Mary and devotion to her can open a new avenue for growth in the life of any Christian. Finally, the Legion of Mary seeks to inspire its members to respond to their baptismal call to serve their fellow Christians. The sharing of the trials of Christian living is perhaps the most effective cause of personal growth in the Legionary, as it provides an immediate opportunity for a Christian to see the effects of mutual Christian love existing in an atmosphere of hope and faith.

PC men and women who seek to learn more about the Legion of Mary, or are interested in joining on a trial basis are invited to attend any of the weekly meetings of the organization. Meetings are held at 7:30 p.m. every Thursday in the secretary's lounge on the ground floor of Harkin's Hall. If one is interested and cannot attend one of these meetings, contact Joe Lovett at 274-1185.

Kelly's Keane Komments

A new club exists on our campus called "The Student Apathy Group." I'm not sure of the present enrollment, but it increases daily.

Apathy simply means "indifference" and to have it amongst the student body is a very dangerous thing.

"What d'ya mean we're not involved...? I went to a mixer..." "But do you care about Student Congress, BOG? How they're run or where our money goes? What's BOG stand for?"

There is a strong tension between and within different clubs on campus. Maybe this wouldn't be if students took the time to ask a few questions.

Does anyone at PC care anymore? Whoever picked the obnoxious chairs for the union and why did they try to steal them Friday night?

What is Congress doing lately. Why do some of its members wish to resign?

And BOG meetings aren't supposed to be a comedy show. These organizations are for the students and are open to all of us, though you will never know it. They're lucky if their own members attend. Excuses for the apparent lack of motivation include, "...the drinking age, girls are on the Board and SC's president missed the first two weeks of meetings and it's been downhill ever since..."

I don't know the reason but if people stopped gossiping about people and events and started caring, maybe we'd notice a change.

Ask questions...get the facts and do something for PC. Apathy is one thing we don't want to have a dedication ceremony for.

Colorful Confusion

As I watched the sunshine melt to tea
And heard the purple moon
I wondered what would become of me
If mud would rain from one to noon.

And if time arrived before it came
Jupiter would surely laugh
For when the ocean cries for fame
The clock hums tunes of never and a half.

Life Is A Cabaret

By Brian Ellerbeck

Question: What has 16 legs, wears fish-net stockings and dances in nightclubs? Well, while it may be disputed whether or not the Reagan Cabinet fits the above description, a forthcoming event in Harkin's Auditorium certainly seems to bear a clue. No, it's not the Richard Simmons all-male revue, or a modern remake of Trinacchia's Banquet.

The answer is the chorus line in Providence College Theatre's production of Cabaret. Yes, folks, the same hit musical which gave theatrical stature to a very short Joe Gray, and made Liza Minelli a household name, is coming to Harkin's Auditorium, and is expected to arrive for the 8 p.m. curtain call on opening night, February 5.

Based on the book by Joe Masteroff, Cabaret is a musical adaptation of the play I Am a Camera, written by John Van Druten.

By no means is Cabaret merely a cast of Marlene Dietrich lookalikes. Set in 1929-30 Berlin, when Hitler gained an increasingly attentive audience, the musical unfolds; and in the decadent splendor of a German nightspot, the "Kit Kat Klub", we begin to record and follow the stormy romantic adventures of an attractive club singer, Sally Bowles.

As the musical moves from the club stage to a boarding house, then back to the club again, three portraits emerge: Sally Bowles' whimsical romance; the rather macabre setting of the "Kit Kat Klub"; and a vivid glimpse of Germany itself, where the Nazi influence was becoming increasingly dominant. Add some great lyrics by John Kander and music by Fred Ebb, and Cabaret comes alive, with a chorus line to literally "dance the night away."

Cabaret is directed by Mary G. Farrell, with scenery by Jim Eddy, lighting by Judith Weaver, costumes by Marina Flynn, choreography by Patricia Hogan, and musical direction by Rev. R. L. Haller, O.P.

Cabaret will appear on February 5-7, and after vacation, on February 26-28. Tickets are $4 each, and $2 for students. For reservations or further information, call the box office at 865-2327.

The Question of Defense?

By Sue Robertson

Monday evening at the Last Resort, Colonel Robert C. Stiepoek, chairman of the military science department, explored military aspects of the 1980's as part of the continuing series of faculty lectures sponsored by the BOG. Col. Stiepoek touched upon several key concerns that, if not already, should be on our minds.

Perhaps an effective system for obtaining knowledge is to ask questions. Did you know that at least 26 percent of the tax dollar goes to defense? Is this amount necessary? History has shown us that war cannot seem to go for any significant time without warfare.

What is the purpose of all this? Col. Stiepoek stated in terms of analogy an objective on our defense: if one owns a car, one usually protects that car by taking out automobile insurance as a safeguard against accidents, which do happen. Instead of a car accident, an international accident of sorts may occur. What is our insurance? Our military forces. The thought to be considered is how much we are willing to pay for our insurance. Better yet, how much should we pay?

Finding an exact figure is extremely difficult. The numbers are available, but the extra factors are complicated. When President Reagan took office, for example, he listened to all the standard information about Soviet forces. The clear fact is that the Soviets have significantly larger forces than the United States. Matching the manpower is impossible. Soviets have capabilities we do not possess. Still, by all means, our days are not numbered! The old cliché teaches that quality is better than quantity. With this in mind, one may come to the understanding that the balance of power may not lie in the greater number of, say, tanks the Soviets hold.

We spend most of our defense money on salaries for the military. Reagan justified increasing this amount for reasons of wanting to keep experienced people in service.

We have volunteer forces and simply cannot afford to train people only to lose them after their tour of duty is over.

With the ability to use nuclear bombs, why bother building our defense conventionally? Col. Stiepoek pointed out that those who plan defenses, among other important elements, ideally work to be prepared for anything. Another thought to toss around is that of appearances. Suppose the Soviets invade one of our allies in Europe. The troops presently there could not last long. Still supposing, we send more forces thus allowing for the possibility of the aggressor's backing down. The perception of strong forces is something to be considered.

Basically, two ideas remain foremost. As Col. Stiepoek suggested while mentioning Veterans' Day briefly, if we look to the past and recognize the sacrifices we have made, we must also look to the future and the extent to which we

Thoughts While Shaving

By S.J.J. (Veg) McGuire

In preface to this week's "Thoughts": I confess to my astute, critical, (if not often caring) body of readers that my thinking has been infected by nostalgia. Pleasure, an odd concept to define, can be both salubrious and deliciously full of vice to all people at different moments in their lives. Firm in this belief, I set forth to talk, this week, of the wholesome pleasure earned when one is fortunate enough to return to a home where the student is no longer a too-often seen face, but rather a loved and welcome guest. Incurred too long in this chilly ocean side state, a brief voyage one state away has rekindled in me a sentimentality and has re-etched upon my face the smile of someone who is happy where he is, in spite of, or rather because, he carries with him the knowledge that he could be as happy somewhere else.

My desire, as always, is not to "komment" on that which is only relevant to me, but rather to make you, the thoughtful readers that you are, nod your heads and say "Yes, I've observed this, too!"

The freshman year "Coming Home" is often done with a mixture of reluctance to miss a good party, tolerance of parents that miss us more than we miss them, our own desire to engage in family activities, the desire to escape meals we know will vastly improve when we get that apartment off campus, and the need for that five or ten dollars grandma will slip into our empty hands before we leave, empty hands from last weekend's party expenditures and this week's pizza deliveries. Sophomore and junior year "coming homes" are somewhat of the same flavor, although now it is our own cooking that we wish to escape, (no longer so sure that it is better than that which we were forced to consume at Raymond). Our visits have become less frequent, and the outstretched hand to the father who knows we will waste whatever he gives us on food and drink (but lovingly gives it anyway, no matter how much he may grumble) learns to feign reluctance. We are, after all, practically totally independent!

Senior year visits to the home ranch, then, become very different in outlook, expectancy, and character. They are less necessary than truly desired, less frequent, more enjoyable. If the home crowd missed us more than we did them the first few years at college, by now the missing has become mutual. Because they are very used to our not being around, they are delighted when we are! Do I deceive myself? I think not. Are these experiences common, shared by most of those who read this column? I believe so, and I hope so.

And the outstretched hand, which has learned that to pretend independence is no longer necessary, belongs to a man or a woman who realizes that it is a good thing to need someone, a better thing for someone to care for to feel that we need them. For true independence, which shortly awaits us, will carry away that feeling, that intimate bond that financial dependency brings. And now, in transition toward persons who will need our parents only in nonfinancial ways, we can begin to see the sweetness of needing them in other ways, more important ways.

A weekend home has spawned in me this nostalgia, and this nostalgia lives on in me. A drink with my dad, a talk with my mother about future plans (that's not one of those who doesn't want grandchildren!) a chat with my younger brother about what college may hold for him next year, a few too many pieces of cake my grandmother made: these are the salubrious pleasures I spoke of, the quiet happiness in which I swim.

Of course, the bill Grandma slipped me as I left may come in handy at Louie's . . .

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

Aquarius
Jan. 20-Feb. 18
Things are looking up, Aquarius! Pressures that were building last week tend to ease up now. Take advantage — get out there and have some fun!

It's going to be your tough week. Leo. Friends will be the cause of much inconvenience. Try to be patient and things will work out. Be good to yourself and take a Mural break.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Pisces
Feb. 19-Mar. 20
Pieces, don't let little things get you down this week. Persevere, keep the spirits up and things will turn in your favor. Good week for business relations and social life.

You're up in the clouds, Virgo, and it's easy to see why! Things have been gliding along at a smooth clip. Just make sure you don't forget your studies. Good week to work out at the fieldhouse.

Libra Sept. 22-Oct. 22

Aries
Mar. 21-April 19
Aries, you will find studies dragging you down this week. Keep on plugging and you'll get through it. Do yourself a favor and blow off some of that tension with a good run at the fieldhouse.

You've been caught up in your work, Libra, almost to a fault. Be easy on yourself this week and take some time out for those people who care.

Scorpio Oct. 23-Nov. 21

Taurus
April 20-May 20
Quit being so stubborn, Taurus; and open your eyes to those around you! If you remain too opinionated, you may run into some real conflict. A close friend might need a shoulder, so be receptive.

This week promises to be a hot one, Scorpio! Academic matters and social life take a positive swing. Be prepared for a surprise when you least expect it!

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Gemini
May 21-June 20
Look out, world; Gemini's a human dynamo this week, sweeping past in a whirlwind of activity! Tensions that have been nagging begin to take a back seat. Love relationships look promising.

Some trouble ahead, Sagittarius. Brace yourself for a disappointment. By trying to keep a positive outlook, things won't seem so bad. Work off some of that tension with a good tennis game.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

Cancer
June 21-July 22
It's time to let up on your feverish pace and put your feet up, Cancer. Be sure to look at things realistically and don't lose your head. Someone close may need your help this week.

Hard work and determination pay off this week, Capricorn. Pressures ease tremendously and that certain someone has you smiling ear-to-ear! Just don't get so high that you float away. Be optimistic—things will work out.

The Last Resort: Always a Pleasure

By Jimmy Spellissy

On Saturday, January 13, the Last Resort opened its doors to another fun-filled night of partying.

As usual, many of the old diarchs of the Last Resort, including myself, could not wait for another "hazardous to your health" Saturday night of drinking, dancing and merry-making. But, would any of us give up a ticket to the Last Resort on a Saturday night for our dear life? The most probably answer would be "No."

The band that was playing was called Aces and Eights, a very talented group of musicians whose diversification in music went from the Four Tops to the Rolling Stones. Aces and Eights got everyone rocking and rolling so that there was not enough room to twist and shout!

The Board of Governors has done a superb job in the organization, controlling and remodeling of the Resort, so that the patrons as well as the workers feel like the atmosphere is that of an Apré Ski Lodge with discussions in their progress of social and sometimes even academic progress, rather than that of a campus bar.

But, honestly, the thing that makes the Last Resort click is the friendliness of the people who have supported the Resort and have made it into a type of tradition on the Providence College Campus.

So if you have some free time and a little extra money, get yourself down to the Board of Governors office in Lower Slavin and invest your money in a guaranteed good time. You will be glad you did!

What a happy bunch.

Don't Feel Like Skiing?

(STOWE, VT.) Although it may be hard for some skiers to imagine, occasionally some people just don't feel like skiing. They may want to take a day off the slopes during their visit or they may simply want to stop skiing before the lifts stop running for the day.

A total destination resort, Stowe offers plenty of other things to do. For example, there's cross country skiing if one wants to get off alone in the peace and quiet of the lovely wooded countryside. Four major touring centers offer over 150 kilometers of terrain.

Or perhaps a game of tennis. The Racquet Club has four indoor courts just a few miles down the Mountain Road from the ski area. Reserved on an hourly basis, the Club also has professional instruction and tennis equipment and clothing available.

The Stowe Village ice skating rink is under cover and offers another quiet way to relax. If one doesn't want quiet, a hockey game can usually be put together on short notice whether with the Stowe Slugs or the Mother's Broom Hockey squad.

If one feels like doing anything athletic, there is a wide variety of shops to visit in Stowe. From the General Store which offers at least one of everything to clothing boutiques to arts, crafts, jewelry, and even a pipe shop.

Or how about a trip through the Shelburne Museum, only 40 miles from Stowe. Open on Sundays during the winter months, the Webb Gallery, Memorial Building, Vermont House, and Variety Building offer period furnishings, and collections of quilts, textiles, glass, ceramics, scrimshaw, furniture, dolls, and painting.

Even if you do ski all day, there is lots of nightlife in Stowe. Acres

Ski in The Den at Mansfield Base, offering piano music and free popcorn, The Stuberl in Spruce House, or the Fireside Tavern at the INN. Later on join the fun at the Matterhorn with its disco music. And after dinner at any one of 35 restaurants, move on to The Baggy Knees which provides live rock bands, The Rusty Nail with its mechanical bull, Sister Kates for music and comedy by Rock King, B.K. Clarks for live jazz, or any one of many quiet lounges such as The Buttertub at Topnotch.

Day or night time, there's an abundance of things to do in Stowe, on and off the slopes.

(STOWE, VT.) Skiers who also happen to be interested in gourmet cooking will find the perfect week in Stowe.

The Stowe Gourmet Ski Holiday is offered by the INN at the Mountain in conjunction with the Culinary Center of Vermont. Included are six nights lodging at the INN, five days of unlimited use of all lifts on Mansfield and Spruce Peak, a five-day comprehensive course conducted by the Sabine de Mirbeck Ecole de Cuisine of Sussex, England, six continental breakfasts, and five gourmet dinners.

The course includes five cooking demonstrations conducted by the master chef and five intensive practical sessions during which students participate in all facets of French haute cuisine meal preparation. Sabine de Mirbeck Ecole de Cuisine is conducted by Mme. Sabine de Mirbeck and her husband, Patrick Bassart, the son of Gordon Bleu Paris' Directrice Elizabeth Bassart, who has acted as a close advisor to the de Mirbeck School since its inception.

The Stowe courses are conducted by a member of the school's regular European staff. The classes begin each afternoon with a demonstration of a menu prepared by the master chef. Students then perform the "practical" session, participating, under the watchful instruction of the chef, in the complete preparation of the gourmet meal to be enjoyed at dinner.

The package is designed for a skiing couple, one of whom would like to participate in the gourmet cooking course. The classes begin at 3 p.m., allowing participants to fully enjoy skiing during the day. One and two week packages are available and skiing class lessons may also be included in the program.

Dear R&P:

I've been having a long distance relationship with this guy in Indiana for about eight months now. We write to each other and call each other just about every week. He seems to be very serious and devoted to me but my feelings for him are changed. In fact, there's this guy that goes to PC that wants to go out with me and I with him. I don't know what to do. If I go out with him I'd feel as though I were cheating on my boyfriend in Indiana. Please help!

Hopelessly Un-devoted

Dear Un-Devoted:

Having a long distance relationship is hard but in order to see if your feelings for your boyfriend are true and lasting, then we'd say that you should go out with that new guy in your life. If it turns out that you like going out with other guys, then tell the guy in Indiana of your intentions. You don't have to have one or the other — if you handle it the right way you can have the best of both worlds. Good luck!

Dear R&P:

What do you think about a girl who constantly borrows another's clothing, sometimes even ruining them without caring a bit? Yet she makes a big deal when the other borrows something of hers!

Naked Knucklehead

Dear Naked:

From how you signed the letter we could tell that you realize your, how shall we say, stupidity. Tell her straight out that you don't want her to borrow and ruin any of your clothes again unless she straightens herself up.

Lady Friars Skate By BC Eagles, 15-0

Providence College's women's hockey team, number one in the nation, held true to their ranking last Monday as the Lady Friars skated to a 15-0 victory over BC. Providence totally dominated the game with Barbara Luther and Mary Beth Crook getting the shout-out — the girls' third of the year.

Freshman Donna Salvoni led the PC contingent with a hat trick and two assists. It was an awesome display of offensive power with accurate passing all night. Eight other girls besides Salvoni also figured in the scoring — Sue Passander, Cindy Durley, Monica Glynn and Alexis Sgobbo — each had two goals, while Jackie Glader, Kathy McLellan, Mary Ellen Riordan and Mary Beth Hannon each scored a goal.

Goalies Luther and Crook made just three saves all night. Providence got off 54 shots. After 12 games the girls remain undefeated.

Dave Lasonde Leads Friars Past Lowell

By John Corey

Last Wednesday night at Schneider Arena, the Providence College Friars defeated the University of Lowell Chiefs, 5-3. The game was so slow at times that even the fans in Section S were silent. This contest marked many firsts, including debut of sophomore goaltender David Lasonde. Lasonde was forced into action when goalie Mario Proulx was suspended in the Boston College game last Sunday afternoon. Lasonde didn't take long to prove himself as he faced 33 shots by the Chiefs. He turned away all but three. Lasonde also picked up an assist on one of the Friar's goals.

Lowell started off the scoring in the first period with a goal by Mike Carr who fired a point blank shot by Lasonde. Before the Lowell goal, the PC goalkeeper came up with two sparkling saves on an early Lowell powerplay. Meanwhile the Friars began to show periods of offensive pressure with scoring chances by Kurt Kleinenndorst, Rich Costello, Tim Army and Mike Bolstad. PC finally got on the board with seven minutes left in the first period. Freshman Dave Wilkie shot in a rebound to the left of the Lowell goalie for his first varsity goal.

This weekend they travel to Montreal to take part in the Concordia Invitational Tournament. Other teams playing are the University of Toronto, York University, John Abbott, New Brunswick, Colby and Cornell. Cindy Durlly, the team's second leading scorer states, "We are the defending champion but will have to still work hard to win." Teammate Sheila Guinee comments, "We work hard every day in practice and will be prepared to face off against anyone we meet."

Monday of last week NBC's "The Today Show" took notice of Providence talent in traveling here to PC to feature the Friars on National television. Along the local circuit, "PM Magazine" is also expected to spotlight the number one team in the nation.

Thus far, just 16 goals have been scored upon the Lady Friars all season. With such superb statistics how can the Lady Friars lose.

The Friars opened the second period on a power play goal with 29 seconds elapsed. Kurt Kleinenndorst tipped in a Mike Toppanzini slapshot to make the score 2-1. Rich Costello made the score 3-1 a little more than a minute later with a shot off a faceoff in the Lowell zone. Steve Rooney had an assist on the Costello tally. During this period and for the entire game PC would begin to carry the play and then suddenly let down giving Lowell many scoring threats. Kleinenndorst scored the prettiest goal of the night on a two on one break as he flipped in a wrist shot from 15 feet. Steve Anderson made a key pass to Kurt on the play. With the score 4-1, Lowell replaced their goalie.

Lasonde was beaten on two other occasions but didn't have much of a chance on either shot. The final Friar goal came with five seconds left in the second period as Paul Gays scored on assists from Gates Orlando and Lasonde. With this win the Friars improved their record to 12-10-1.

foul in the process. Dayton scored a hoop, 62-62.

Triple overtime had a little of everything. Lomax's free throw put PC up 65-64 with 10 seconds left. Dayton's play did not go as planned, the shot missed and in the ensuing struggle for the rebound, Otis was charged with a foul — while going for the ball — with no time remaining. Terrible call. Lucky Kanieski made only one of two free tosses. 65-65.

In quadruple overtime, Lomax's five footer with four seconds left put PC up 69-67. Again Dayton called time, threw the ball to half court and called time. They had three seconds with which to work. A long pass went off the Flyers' Kanieski's hands — and into George Morrison's, who, having nothing better to do under the basket, laid it in. Was it planned that way?? 69-69.

In quintuple overtime, PC was trailing by five a few times, yet had an opportunity to win the game and another chance later to tie — but fell short. 79-77. If anything else, the Friar play was superb from beginning to end.

They know now that they can be competitive away as well as at home. Dayton is no slouch — they only lost to DePaul by two. The Friars are definitely playing with more tenacity this year. In future contests, they'll benefit from this overtime pressure experience.

However, to return to the UConn game and to expand on a point made earlier, it seems that the Friars have found five players who work well together. Those five that started the second half will not be able to play all 40 minutes (or more) of a game, yet it seems that they were indeed playing team basketball to the fullest. In this age of comparisons, another will not be too great to muster. This Friar five seemed to have the height and scoring punch, the greatest amount of those, since the Friar teams of the mid-seventies.

PC plays at Syracuse this Saturday night, televised on TV-12, and return home for next Wednesday's meeting with Boston College. Incidentally, PC has never beaten Syracuse, Connecticut and Seton Hall since they've been members of the Big East.

Lady Friars Bounce 2 Wins

By Christine Merlo

Friar fever is alive and well in women's basketball. This past week, the Lady Friar's won both of their home games, as their record now stands at an impressive 16-5.

The first of the two games was played on Tuesday, January 26, when the Lady Friars hosted the Big Green from Dartmouth.

In the first half, PC had no problem scoring. Co-captain Kerry Phayre made scoring easier for PC by moving the ball up the court successfully. PC's variety of excellent shooters, especially sophomores Kathy Finn and Laurie St. Jean, made defense difficult for Dartmouth. Although Finn and St. Jean scored many PC points, Dartmouth also had their own super-shooters. Dartmouth mainly looked to Gail Kozlarska, the 6'3" center for most of their scoring. Even though centers Laurie Buchanan and Jayne Beniworski played well against the senior co-captain, Kozlarska was the game's high scorer with 32 points.

The second quarter, with PC leading 34-24, much of the same style of defensive play was exhibited by both teams. PC's defense seemed as tough as it was in the first half with Kathy Finn and Co-captain Madeline McCoy making key rebounds and Rita Fraser coming up with several steals. The only problems occurring in the game were the excessive PC fouls. With 9:24 left in the game, PC had reached its foul limit as Dartmouth was shooting one and one. Five minutes later, sophomore Kathy Finn fouled out of the game. But even with their foul troubles the Lady Friar's were able to hold on to their lead and win the game, 62-50. PC's Laurie St. Jean was the team's high scorer with 16 points and Kerry Phayre and Kathy Finn followed with 12 points each.

Thursday night's meeting against UMass was an entirely different type of basketball game. In the first half of the game, UMass constantly threatened PC's lead. Several times throughout the game, UMass tied and proceeded to take the lead. The defense of UMass held tight reins on the Lady Friars, nevertheless, PC had their share of key defensive plays. In the first 30 seconds of the second half, PC held UMass from completing a play because the 30 second shot clock ran out. Defense was not the only thing the Lady Friar's excelled in; their offense also proved to be too much for UMass.

Finally, with 10:44 left to play, PC took the lead for the rest of the game. Excellent outside shooting by Kerry Phayre and Laurie St. Jean and two technical fouls called on the UMass coach, helped the Lady Friar's increase their lead. Aggressive offense and defense played by Madeline McCoy, Sue Altieri, and Jayne Beniworski made the Lady Friar's even tougher to beat.

The game ended with PC on top 63-52. High scorers in the game were PC's Laurie St. Jean with 18 points, Kerry Phayre with 16 points and UMass' Martha Ready with 29 points. The next game is on February 1 when the Lady Friar's will meet the University of Rhode Island.

...And Then Onto a Third

By Ellen Clerkin

The Lady Friars upped their record to 18-5 Monday night, squeaking out a victory against URI in overtime. The Lady Friars got off to a slow start, trailing 8-2 only minutes into the game.

URI's strong defense and stubborn three-quarter court press forced a number of PC turnovers and at the 16-minute mark, with score 12-4, it looked to be a long evening for the Providence contingent. A time out helped to organize the Lady Friars and they connected on a number of shots to stay in the game with nine minutes left in the game.

When students' lives are governed by the expectations of their teachers, they learn some combination of obedience and deception. They do not learn self-reliance, independence, the ability to learn on one's own. They do not experience the joys of learning, for these come primarily from pursuing one's own quest, and not from meeting the expectations of others.

Friar Six Blitzers Dartmouth Green

By John Brandolino

"What the Big Green has is not just a talented hockey team, but a team made up, overall, of exceptional athletes." That statement was written on the back of the PC/Dartmouth hockey program distributed at Sunday night's game. But just because the Friars trampled the Big Green, 9-2, doesn't mean that the statement is false.

Just because Dartmouth's number one goaltender never played a varsity game before this year doesn't mean that statement is false.

And just because there wasn't a single Green skater nearly as fast as our skaters doesn't prove that statement false.

And just because Dartmouth is 15 out of 17 teams in the ECAC, doesn't mean that statement is false.

And just because . . .

Well, maybe it is a lie. But the important fact is that Providence kept its playoff hopes alive by trouncing Dartmouth, 9-2, at Schneider Arena on Sunday. The Friars are now placed about 8 in the ECAC with Vermont, BU and Harvard nearby. Only the best eight teams out of the 17 squad field will be picked to participate in post-season play.

The Friars have seven ECAC contests remaining, all at home, and five of these involve teams with comparable or better records. Northeastern (7-4-1), St. Lawrence (7-4-1), Colgate (6-3-0), New Hampshire (9-5-0) and Vermont (6-6-1) will be tough opposition in defending the ECAC banner. Maine (2-12-0) and Brown (3-6-0) fill out the rest of the regular season schedule.

If Sunday's game against Dartmouth is any indication of the future, then PC is in great shape.

The pace was lagging in the beginning of the first period, and it seemed as if it would be a close contest. Dartmouth lit the scoreboard, first, when John Sedgewick capitalized during a 2-0-1 break just 3:58 into the game.

It seems Orlando tied things up at 5:46 until Peter Lavery put the Green back out in front with a high backhand that flew by Friar goalie Mario Proulx. With just 46 seconds remaining in the period, Paul Guay scored on a freak deflection making it 2-2, after one period of play.

The second and third periods saw a complete turn around in the tempo. The dominating Friars racked up four scores in the middle period and three more in the final 20 minutes — all unanswered — on their way to a 9-2 final.

The situation during the last two goals of the game was a good indicator of the talent difference between the two squads. Richie Costello's boon shot (which made it 9-2), both occurred during a four-minute span in the third period where both teams had two men in the penalty box. The 3-on-3 situation gave the PC skaters a chance to show their speed on the open ice. For the entire four minutes, PC controlled the puck and outskated their inferior opponents.

The penalties during that span, by the way, came as a result of a small brawl behind the Providence net. Freshman Steve Rooney was ejected, and therefore, missed last night's game against Division Two Salem State.

Now, the Friars wind down the regular season with seven important ECAC matches in a row. The first of those is on Saturday at 2 p.m. against Maine.

Battle of the sexes? Guess again, that's coach Joe Mullaney, Jr. and Lynn Sheedy, the central power behind this year's Lady Friars Basketball team. (Photo by Tom Bastoni)

UConn 'Tips' Past Friar Five In O.T.

During the basketball week everything happened in Friar games that could possibly happen. A whole season's worth of unbelievable plays and situations took place in the span of two games. There were overtime, last second shots, four minute stalls, important rebounds, razzle-dazzle moves, unbelievably awful officiating, and a couple of come-backs. Oh, yes, a little history was made also. In fact the only thing that didn't materialize was a PC win. The "magic" was almost there — it eluded the Friars at every key instance. The Friars lost at Dayton in five overtimes 79-77 last Thursday and were nipped Monday night by Connecticut 47-45 in OT. Providence is now 9-10, 1-6 in the conference.

The UConn game began on a sour note. PC was either forcing their shots or, because of the Huskies defensive pressure, not getting one off on each possession. Forward Cory Thompson led two scoring bursts that put the Friars in the hole. At one period, UConn outscored PC 13-6 and led at the half 31-16. In that half, PC never scored two baskets in a row.

The Huskies' center Chuck Aleksians made good on a free throw at the beginning of the second half and UConn had the biggest lead of the night at 16 points. Instantly, the two Friars who were to lead a tremendous comeback clicked on short jumpers. In fact, Ron Jackson and Otis Thorpe kept PC in the game as they answered Connecticut basket for basket. Billy Fields threw in two 20-footers and with 12:20 remaining, UConn led 38-30. Two minutes later, after two free throws by guard Karl Hobbs, Jackson cut the lead to five with a three point play and a jumper that was blocked and ruled goaltending.

A few possessions later, Thorpe brought the Friars to within four, 43-39, with four straight points of his own. He brought it to within two with 4:40 left on a layup inside UConn's front line. Connecticut went into their delay and when they were fouled two minutes later, missed the front end of a one and one. Fields tied the score at 45 with his five footer, which, as it turned out, led the Friars into overtime. Otis controlled the tap and PC held the ball effectively until 2:22 remained. They had a few opportunities in this stretch to find the man cutting underneath the basket, but UConn usually plugged those holes quickly. However, at that point, the Friars turned it over and the Huskies had the ball. They controlled their possession much the same way — looking for the easy shot only. However, the clock was winding down and Mike McKay missed his 10-footer with seven seconds remaining. The rebound headed for the sideline and Keith Lomax, who started the second half and got some key rebounds, also showing the crowd in the process that he could handle the ball well, went after the rebound and stepped out of bounds. On the ensuing play, the positioning was directed at Cory who missed his 10-footer. The carom went off the boards and was tapped in by Bruce Kuzemski, standing beneath the basket. It was the second Big East TV game of the week the Friars have lost this year at the buzzer.

The outstanding comeback, which excited the disbelieving crowd, was engineered by Jackson, who had 17 points. Thorpe and Fields added 14 to 10 points respectively. Ricky Tucker's four points were the only other ones scored by a Friar. The second half lineup of Thorpe, Lomax, Fields, Jackson, and Jim Panaggio, played the remainder of the game and had the cohesive look as a unit that perhaps Coach Mullaney has been looking for.

The longest game ever in PC history should never have been able to receive that distinction. Even though the Friars led by seven at the half and Dayton outscored PC 23 early in the second half, the teams basically played an even terms. Whenever a team got a lead towards the end of regulation, the opposition came right back. Dayton missed a last second shot and the game entered the first overtime. The score was 54-54. The key plays that follow must be recorded somewhere, so why not here?

Jackson's free throws with five seconds remaining in overtime number one put PC in front by two. Dayton called time, threw the ball to half court, and called another time. On the next play all of their players stepped out of bounds. PC ball. But Jackson was fooled into committing an offensive foul and two seconds still remained. The Flyers' Mike Kianeski hit a 20-footer.

In the second overtime, Jackson, all-everything this week, scored his 24th point and received his fifth

Lady Friars Run Past Tufts

The women's indoor track team, led by athletes scoring in more than one event, defeated Tufts University and lost to Holy Cross College last Saturday, in a tri-meet held on the small Holy Cross track. The difference proved to be the depth of Holy Cross, combined with the order of events, which favored the team with the greatest number of athletes.

Freshman Liz Noble got the lady Friars off to a good start, winning the high jump in 5'6", while senior Maura McGuire took second with a jump of 5'4". McGuire went on to win the long jump with a 15'10" effort, while Katie Mehringer took second with a leap of 14'4 1/2".

In the 1500 meter run, Julie McCrorie took second with a time of 4:57.3, while freshman Julie Morand ran a personal best 5:18 to take sixth. Senior Sue Ratcliff ran away from the field over the last mile to win the 3000 meter run in 10:20.2.

Freshman Sue Montambo won the 800 meter run with a time of 2:26.07, a mere .13 seconds ahead of Sharon Malley of Holy Cross, who finished in 2:26.2. In the 55 meter hurdles, freshman Sue Burbank, running the event for the first time, took fourth with a time of 10:38 seconds.

In the 300 meter dash, Mary Evans took fourth with a 47.5 effort, while Jean Fiore took second, but was later disqualified for going out of her lane, caused by the tight turns on the 160 meter track. In the 400 a while later, Mary Beth Reynolds took second in 63.6 seconds out of first, while Evans finished fourth in 66.1.

In the final event of the day the 4 x 400 meter relay saw the Lady Friar team take second in 4:27.15, with the team of Mary Beth Reynolds, Mary Evans, Liz Noble, and Sue Montambo.

Holy Cross picked up most of their points by running the 300, 600, and 1000 meter runs one after the other. It gave a team with the depth of Holy Cross the opportunity to score easy points; while a team like the Lady Friars, who rely on runners to double in events, could not score points in some of the events.

Coach Mark Skinkle called it a fine team effort, and feels that as the season progresses, more of the athletes will qualify for the New England Championships. The girls' next meet will be tomorrow, when they travel to Southern Connecticut State College, for a meet with Yale, Quinnipiac, and Southern.

Geoff Smith Wins Bermuda 10K With World Class Performance

By Chris Lydon

Geoff Smith, who last week was ranked second in the world for 1981 in the 10,000 meters on the track, has made it known to the running world that he is also a contender for top honors as a road racer.

Last Saturday, in an international road race held in Bermuda, Smith annihilated a world class field to win the 10 event in a course record 28:14. It was the second year in a row Smith has won the race. His time was just 19 seconds outside the world best of 27:55 held by Michael Musyoki of Kenya.

In addition to Smith, Ray Treacy and Brendan Quinn also travelled to Bermuda; and Treacy took sixth in a personal best 29:13, while Quinn, hampered with a cold, finished 16th in 30:08. Last week, Treacy was listed as having run the ninth fastest 20K in the country during 1981.

Smith's 47 second victory was also 59 seconds faster than his winning time of last year, 29:13. Following the victory last year, he went on to set a British National record for the indoor 5000 in the Millrose Games, with a time of 13:26, finishing third to Sulaiman Nyambu's world best 13:20 and Alberto Salazar. With Smith possibly in the best shape of his life, Salazar in the best shape, as well as Nyambu; and with the addition of freshman Steve Binns and PC graduate John Treacy, the Millrose 5000 should produce another world best this year.

Binns who had a fine weekend as he travelled to Dallas to compete in the Dallas Times Invisational two-mile. After leading from the gun, Binns tired over the last quarter, then held on for third in 8:36. He was beaten by the ever-present Nyambu who ran 8:28, and fellow Englishman Nick Rose.

For John Treacy, the weekend went just as he had planned, except for a small catch; he caught a cold. In Toronto for the Maple Leaf Games, Treacy led from the half to the two mile mark, then led Bruce Bickford of New Balance do the work, before kicking past him for the victory in a time of 13:44, on one of the slowest tracks anywhere.

At the Greater Boston Track Club Championships at Harvard Sunday, the rest of the men's team ran, and the big victory was supplied by Charlie Breagy, who won the 5000 in 14:28, after taking the lead with a mile to go. In the mile, five Friars toed the line; with Richard O'Flynn taking second in 4:12.7 and Jimmy Fallon third in 4:13. Richard Mulligan ran 4:16, newcomer Tim Engels 4:17, and Paul Moloney 4:18.

In the 800, Bill Keelan and Mike Arpin both qualified for the final, with times of 1:57.2 and 1:56.8, respectively. In the final, Keelan ran 1:56.7 and Arpin tired, running a 2:01. In the 55 meter dash Johnny McLaughlin advanced to the semi-finals before being eliminated, and then ran a 50.7 in his heat of the quarter.

Next week, at the Princeton Relays, Jimmy Fallon and Richard O'Flynn will compete in the Invisational 3000; and then the following week, the Millrose 5000.
