Army ROTC Program Reflects Changing Student Attitudes

With world affairs being seen as increasingly uncertain and college students across the country showing more concern for America's world role, Army ROTC Basic Camp this past summer was not only healthy in numbers, but thriving in spirit, according to Colonel Stiepoek, Professor of Military Science here at Providence College.

Army ROTC's two-year program is a means by which college students can make up for military science courses they have missed. The two-year program allows qualified students an opportunity to attend the Army ROTC's Basic Camp. No, Basic Camp is not the Army's basic training. As a matter of fact it is significantly different. Basic Camp is military training for students with officer potential and a willingness to give Army life a try.

"Student priorities are changing and attendance at Basic Camp reflected that fact," Colonel Stiepoek said.

"At ROTC Basic Camp we got a feeling that students were following through with a new sense of responsibility," the PMS added. "Focus on American interests abroad, especially in the Middle East, has created a new attitude among many students. They want their contributions to have meaning, and they want to prepare themselves for the future," he said.

Students want to develop their leadership skills and Basic Camp can start teaching them those skills. They get a feel for what the Army is, what it does, and how a soldier lives, all done without an obligation to serve.

"Students who think they may be interested in becoming an Army officer take it in the summer before their junior year and they are paid for their training," explained Colonel Stiepoek. "It gives them the opportunity to see if they think Army life is for them. And we're proud of the number who decide that it is for them. Last year PC sent 10 students all of whom returned to enroll in the Military Science III class this school year."

"Army ROTC is a chance for students to explore many ideas, techniques, and their relationships, but mostly they learn about themselves," Colonel Stiepoek continued. "We get them working on real problems — problems to be solved with people."

Students interested in the Army ROTC Two-Year Program (academic freshmen or sophomores) begin with the six-week Basic Camp at Fort Knox, Kentucky, the summer before their junior year. The purpose of Basic Camp is to give students an overall view of what Army training and discipline are all about. Since there's no obligation to enroll in the Advanced Course after Basic Camp is completed, students may use it as a barometer to tell them if Army life is really what they want.

As a cadet who recently attended Basic Camp said, "Before Basic Camp I asked, why not give it a try? I didn't have to join up if I didn't want to. But when it was all over, I knew it was for me. I really liked Army life."

Also, students who attend Basic Camp can compete for Army ROTC two-year merit scholarships.

"My scholarship paid for my full tuition, my lab fees, and my books," said one of last year's graduates, speaking with understandable enthusiasm.

All students in the two-year program get a living allowance of up to $1,000 each school year regardless of whether or not they have scholarships.

"Of course," said Cadet Vito Buonamano, "the financial benefits made me take a closer look at ROTC. It eased a lot of pressures. And it's a big help, especially while I'm pursuing my major."

The academic benefits offered by the Two-Year Program — with its emphasis on leadership and management training — is another aspect students look at more closely.

"This pays even more dividends," Cadet Buonamano added. "I know that's what employers are looking for."

"As professional officers, we obviously have a stake in the cadets' success," said Colonel Stiepoek, "because the students who are willing to prove themselves are the students who will look for the highest all-round standards in those around them. In a sense, the Army is no different from any other organization — we want to fill our ranks with well-rounded, quality people."

"It really feels good to be able to work with people and share with them," said Cadet Buonamano. "I've learned to be flexible, but organized. That's definitely one advantage."

Students interested in the Army ROTC Two-Year Program should contact CPT Jay Johnston at Providence College, 865-2471.

McBrien's Memo

Good Night Classes

Day students here at PC may no longer be able to take night courses, according to a memo which was recently sent from Rev. Thomas H. McBrien, O.P., dean of undergraduate studies, to Rev. Thomas R. Peterson, O.P., president of the College, and the Committee on Administration. The memo stated the following: "There are presently 572 students enrolled in 126 courses in the School of Continuing Education. After serious consideration over several years this office now requests a change in policy. We recommend that with the next semester no day school students with the sole exception of second semester Education majors who are practice teaching, be allowed to register for courses in the School of Continuing Education. We should like to inform the student body as soon as possible."

According to Father McBrien, the School of Continuing Education is a separate entity at Providence College. It has its own budget, faculty and dean. Night courses taken by day students are not paid for separately and as a result, the night school receives no payment for those students enrolled in night classes. This creates quite a burden for the School of Continuing Education.

In addition, each semester the Dean's Office is flooded with students who are interested in enrolling in night courses, and thus cannot devote as much time to students with other curriculum related problems.

Father McBrien explained that all students, with the exception of second semester senior education majors, should be able to fit the available day classes into their schedules so that no need for night courses is created. In addition, all courses present in the College catalog and course selection booklet will have to be made available by the given departments in the day school so that no student will be forced to take a night class due to cancellation of the same course in the day school. Father McBrien concluded, "The departments will have to provide courses because that's what students are paying for in tuition."

No action has yet been taken by the committee on Administration regarding this memo.

Faculty Senate Passes Fine Arts Requirement

By Karen MacGillivray

Two proposed pieces of legislation created lengthy debates at the Faculty Senate meeting last Wednesday.

Two bills were presented to the Senate by Dr. Carol Crafts, chairperson of the Academic Affairs Committee. Since students will have four new course openings in their junior and senior years where the five course curriculum is implemented, she explained, the committee stressed using these additional credit hours to provide flexibility in the student's program.

The first piece of legislation concerned a general degree requirement of three credits in fine arts. The objective of this bill include developing sensual perception, imagination, and an understanding of at least one fine art form. Dr. Crafts explained that the bill would provide balance in a student's education, while advancing general education in accordance with the "global mission of the school." The various departments which would be included with this new requirement are music, English, history, studio art, and theater arts. The courses would have to be approved by the core curriculum committee, Dr. Crafts continued, but the Academic Affairs Committee was of the opinion that enough faculty members and classroom seats would be available for the courses. She added that several departments have already committed themselves to this program.

A lengthy debate ensued after the presentation of this proposal. Several faculty members from the departments concerned with the program presented their views to the Senate body. Ms. Jane Lunn-Perel of the English department explained that the bill would involve simply redesigning many courses already in existence. She also stressed the practical application of the courses in everyday life.

Rev. George Robillard, O.P., of the philosophy department, however, doubted the academic possibility of implementing the program. He felt that a one-semester course could not meet the objectives of the requirement. Dr. Crafts explained that the committee felt students should be provided with an introduction to fine arts and that it would be possible to achieve those ends. Mrs. Alice Hauck of the art history department added that the introduction of courses in her department began at the ground level and that the lack of a fine arts requirement was a great disservice to the students.

Dr. Charles Duffy, chairman of the English department, felt that administrative problems concerned with the proposed plan were similar to those of previous programs and could be resolved. He added that the English department hopes to offer five sections, which would hold up to 150 students, and stressed that the program should be implemented soon.

After a lengthy discussion, the Senate voted in favor of the bill. It will now be sent to Rev. Thomas R. Peterson, O.P., president of the College, for approval.

The second piece of legislation concerned a free elective requirement. This bill would require all students to complete nine credit hours as free electives outside of their major. This was proposed by the Academic Affairs Committee to protect to the student's right to select courses in their area of study as free electives outside of their major. This was proposed by the Academic Affairs Committee to protect to the student's right to select courses in their area of study as free electives outside of their major. This was proposed by the Academic Affairs Committee to protect to the student's right to select courses in their area of study as free electives outside of their major.

Dr. Francis P. McKay, president of the Faculty Senate, announced at the meeting that Father Peterson had approved two bills sent to him last November. They concerned a general degree requirement in philosophy and a special college reading and study skills course. They will be implemented beginning with the fall 1982 semester.

There were two committee reports. The Elections Committee recommended that no election be held to fill three vacant positions on the Core Curriculum Committee, because only three faculty members had indicated interest in running. The three potential candidates were also from the three divisions of the Faculty Senate. The Senate did not accept the committee's recommendation, however, and an election will be held.

Dr. Francis O'Brien reported for the Faculty Welfare Committee that a survey went out to faculty members with a 36 percent response. He added that 42 proposals were sent to the Administration.

Dr. James Tattersall, Committee on Administration representative for the Faculty Senate, reported no change in reporting quarterly grades and suggested that the Senate invite Dr. D'Arcy from the Financial Aid Office to address a future meeting.

Hogan, Brian P. Kennedy, a junior, agreed adding that "... during the 1980 presidential campaign the group had been active in the campaign effort of Senator Edward M. Kennedy during the primary." Hogan continued, "Although the Senator was unsuccessful in his bid to capture the nomination, working in his campaign was a fantastic learning experience."

One of the main aims of the group, which at this time consists

RA Positions for '82-'83

The Residence Office announced that applications are available starting today for Resident Assistant candidates for the fall of 1982. Colonel Andrew DeCorso, associate director of residence, stated that the Residence Office "expects to appoint at least seven male and ten female RAs" for the fall semester this year. In addition to these 17 positions, which will be vacated by graduating seniors, the Colonel commented that another few may be opening up.

Interested students in the Classes of 1983 or 1984 are eligible for the positions if they have an overall grade point average of 2.25 or above as of fall 1981. Students are expected to maintain that average throughout the semester(s) of their employment. Students do not need to be in the PC work-study program to be eligible for an RA position.

According to Colonel DeCorso, the resident staff is seeking students with "high integrity, leadership abilities, reliability and good judgment." These qualities are necessary to the proper execution of those responsibilities included in an RA's day to day activities, he explains.

The position of Resident Assistant is not an easy one according to those RAs spoken with. It requires a minimum of 20 hours of duty per week, and usually more. As payment, RAs in the past have received full room and board, but as of next fall RAs will receive only partial remission of these charges.

Interested applicants may pick up applications beginning today in Joseph Hall, Room 201, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. Completed applications must be turned in by Thursday, February 25, 1982, at the Residents Office.

Resident Assistant candidates will be interviewed following the deadline for receipt of applications. These interviews will be conducted Monday through Wednesday, March 15-17, 1982. A schedule of the date, time and place of the interviews will be posted on all dormitory bulletin boards prior to that week.

All appointments and rejections for the RA positions will be made before Dormitory Room selections, which will take place on April 19-21, 1982. Questions concerning RA applications or procedures for interviews should be directed to the Resident Office.

The Resident Office would also like to congratulate the seven students chosen for RA positions for this semester. They include: Mark Dempsey, '83; Timothy Hanewich, '83; Jill Simonson, '82; Lisa Thibault, '83; Karen Kogut, '84; Margaret Dwyer, '84; and Patricia Rose, '83.

Congress Makes Proposal to COA

Activity Fee May Increase

Every student here at Providence College pays a Student Activity Fee annually in addition to tuition costs. It is a payment which is used for providing social activity on campus through the organization and allocation of both the Board of Governors and Student Congress. For the present academic year, this fee is $39, which is the lowest it has been in the past eight years; at its highest in the same time period, the fee was $75.

A resolution was passed at Sunday's Congress meeting which will propose to the President and the Committee on Administration that this fee be raised to $65 as of next year. According to the proposal, made by Student Congress Treasurer Liz Flynn and BOG member Dennis McEnery, the Student Activity, or College Union fee, would rise to $65 for the 1982-83 academic year, and then would increase in subsequent years in proportion to increases in tuition costs.

Resolution proponent McEnery stated that "each year there's a cut-back in services to the student because of limited funding." He explained that those organizations utilizing the funds available, namely BOG, Student Congress, and allocated clubs, simply have not had enough to provide what social organizers feel are sufficient activities for students. Figuring the cost of inflation and the nature of those activities which they are seeking to provide, McEnery added, there simply is not enough money to work with.

Liz Flynn explained that the proposal was made in hopes that a general policy level will be established to provide the needed funds. In addition, she commented, "This way we'd automatically deal with it on a year to year basis."

Congress president Dave Mikula stated that the proposal is an important one because the Student Activity Fund is "the most visible part of the College budget." In order for students to see the results of it, good social programming must be provided, but this can only be achieved with adequate funds, which is the chief reason the proposal has been made.

Among other business conducted at the meeting, Mikula announced that a Rat committee was established to plan alternative events in the Rathskellar. The committee has planned to have an open night at the Rat on Monday, February 22, the first night back from the winter break. No liquor will be served so that all students can be admitted. The fireplace will be lit, and food from Mural will also be served. The event will run from 9 p.m. to midnight, and depending on the success of these nights, which will be held every Monday, plans for other non-alcoholic events may be formulated.

Rob Giovino announced that three new clubs were approved by the Congress legislative committee last week. These include a wrestling club, Applecom (a computer club), and Students for a United Ireland.

The Academic Research Committee has representative Greg Gebos, Congress representative for the Class of 1984, as representative to the Faculty-Senate. Gebos will serve as liaison between students and faculty, and will be able to provide student input to Faculty-Senate decisions.

Susie Rogers, lifestyles committee chairperson, reported that work is beginning on plans to acquire a laundry room, coffee room, and typing room in various spots on campus for the use of off-campus students. In addition, she stated that approximately 5300 was raised in last week's lifestyles raffle to be contributed to Big Brothers and Sisters for a van.

Democratic Club Comes to PC

A move is afoot on campus to reactivate the College Democrats of Rhode Island—Providence College Chapter (CDRI-PC). Thomas P. Hogan, a sophomore who has been active with campus activities, has announced that an organizational meeting will be held on Wednesday, February 10, at 6:30 p.m. in Slavin 112.

"With the upcoming general election those PC students who are interested in aiding the Democratic Party need an outlet for their willingness to participate," said

Hogan. Brian P. Kennedy, a junior, agreed adding that "... during the 1980 presidential campaign the group had been active in the campaign effort of Senator Edward M. Kennedy during the primary." Hogan continued, "Although the Senator was unsuccessful in his bid to capture the nomination, working in his campaign was a fantastic learning experience."

One of the main aims of the group, which at this time consists of a core of six members, will be to identify those students who would like to work for the Democratic Party, then to meet with the candidates running for office, and finally to endorse and work for the election of said individuals. A long-range goal of the group would be to organize a coalition of college Democratic groups into a unified and effective organization.

Counseling Center Advises

"Strive to be Employable"

By Cathy Jahn

Worried about your future? Questioning a career? Do you have problems adjusting to college life? If you answered yes to any of these questions, there is a place on campus available to help you work out these concerns.

The Counseling Center in Upper Slavin Center offers a variety of challenging workshops and self help programs as well as personal counseling sessions concerning almost any college or work related situation. The Center can provide not only vocational advice and information, but acts as a sounding board for students and tries to help them develop personal skills and strengths.

There are five men and women employed at the center; three are vocational counselors and two are placement officers.

According to Jacqueline F. Kiernan, Counseling Center director, "We're concerned with total development of the student." She explains that students do not necessarily that students do not seek their resources but that they can simply want to work to develop themselves.

One aspect of the Counseling Center is to help students with personal issues. Kiernan noted that a number of students come to the counselors at the center for help with family or roommate related problems, peer pressure and especially in the case of freshmen, dealing with adjustments to a new place.

Counselors at the Center also help students who are either undecided majors or who question the major they now hold. To a large extent they do this by challenging the student to discover his own abilities and interests. According to John Hogan, one of the Center's personal/vocational counselors, "We generally try to help them see how they feel and then see their options." Ms. Kiernan added that the counselors try to help the underclass student find a major that he or she is interested in and then they can worry about finding a job to fit these interests and major later on.

In helping students who are concerned about their major, Counseling Center workers commented that undecided students need exposure to various types of work fields. Kiernan explains that students "need to gather information about themselves and the different departments at the College."

The Counseling Center can direct students early on to make valuable contacts in the various academic departments within the school and to gather information necessary to form the right individual program. Counselors at

Crime Watch!

By Tom McGair

Drugs and their effects, arson, child abuse and even the parking ticket crackdown in Providence are just a few of the topics which "Crimewatch," a PC radio show, will be discussing.

"Crimewatch" is a public affairs program which will be presented by WD0M 91.3 FM radio. Host Tom McGair will be discussing major issues that affect all of us in Rhode Island.

This week, Tom's guest will be Lieutenant Devine from the Providence Police Department. He will be discussing the problems of drinking and driving.

The program will be broadcast every Thursday evening immediately following the 6 p.m. news. It will be an informative news show discussing major critical issues of our day, so don't forget to tune in.

the Center believe that "knowing the end of the process and the opportunities that will be available makes it easier for students to decide what direction they're headed in and thus choose a major."

In addition to personal contacts, students can be exposed to work fields through various seminars and workshops which the Counseling

"According to John J. McGrath, Coordinator of Placement Activities, the goal of the placement officers is 'to make the student highly employable.' He explains that the student has to be authentic to be employable and needs to develop confidence in his own strengths and skills."

Center offers periodically throughout the year, as well as the Career Information Center within the Center itself.

A great deal of the work the Counseling Center does, however, involves Career Placement for senior students. Counseling Director Kiernan noted that Providence College has one of the largest recruiting programs in the East. She added that recruiters are particularly pleased with PC students because they seem to be "better prepared and better qualified students."

Placement work involves not only recruitment, however. Students can receive help with resumes, preparation for job interviews and can attend career related workshops. According to John J. McGrath, coordinator of placement activities, the goal of the placement officers is "to make the student highly employable." He explains that the student has to be authentic to be employable and needs to develop confidence in his own strengths and skills in order to be authentic.

McGrath stated that this is an important transition to make from school to work in order for a student to be successful in a job campaign. He commented that employers "expect more from college graduates today — more on the behavioral level than on the educational level." Their expectations are concerned with devotion to decisions and motivations and Placement officers are therefore concerned with issues of autonomy and self-esteem in developing a whole student. According to McGrath, the ability to make a commitment is a key factor in a student who is job hunting.

McGrath also stated that it is important to understand that the Counseling Center is not a job machine. Instead it "challenges a senior to get going, and wake up and face the issues." Initially, seniors are therefore asked to attend group workshops which will then give them direction in starting their job campaigns. Individual sessions are important later on, McGrath explained, for feedback on work already done and preparation for improvement in the future.

Underclassmen interested in seeking career-related jobs while still in school may also find some help in the Counseling Center.

McGrath noted that SELP, which stands for Student Experiential Learning Program, is a program started by Rhode Island which can offer students jobs throughout the year. It can initiate apprenticeship programs for students in almost any field. McGrath commented that although the student will not be paid, he can get high quality experience and good credentials for future employment.

Finally, Counseling Center officials commented that students are "beginning to realize that they need to take the time to prepare themselves for a future career." They advise that this is important for all students who will eventually be entering the job market and invite all students to take advantage of the services they can offer.

New Ideas Proposed:

Race to the Rate

If, like so many 18 and 19 years olds at PC, you have tried in vain to partake in the merriment of our one and only Rathskellar, you will finally be able to satisfy your curiosity.

On Monday, February 22, Club 21, alias The Rat, will mark a milestone in the history of its existence at Providence College, when it opens its doors to all PC students, regardless of age, for a night of non-alcoholic entertainment.

Judy McNamara, secretary of the Class of 1983, stated that a Rat Committee has been revitalized, in order to "make the Rat more accessible to all Providence College students." McNamara continued that the committee is comprised of six other students, Mark Caffrey, '82; Joe Solomon, '84; Sean Sullivan, '84; Joe Frates, '83; David Mikula, '82; and Cheryl Morrissey, '82.

The committee is also being backed by three members of the College's administration, Rev. Gerald J. McGreevy, O.P., vice-president for student services, Rev. John A. McMahon, assistant vice-president for student services, and Lana Arcaro, secretary to Father McGreevy.

Hoping to create a coffeeshouse type of atmosphere, similar to those in the Last Resort, entertainment will most likely consist of a guitar player, and there is a possibility that there will be waitresses serving pizza and other such refreshments. In case no one has noticed, the Rat also has a fireplace which has never been used. With permission, and weather permitting, the fireplace will be yet another aspect of the Rat's new image.

While February 22 will be the first time underclassmen have been allowed into the Rat, it will also be the last, unless all students exhibit enthusiasm for the idea by going to the Coffeeshouse.

If the night is successful, the committee hopes to eventually make it a weekly occurrence, possibly utilizing the wristband policy so that students over 20 can drink while socializing with underclassmen as well.

There will be a $1.00 cover charge to compensate for expenses with any extra money going into a "Rat Fund" to pay for long range renovation plans, which include the expansion of the Rat into the courtyard area to make room for more of its patrons.

The Rat Committee has laid the ground work for what could be an enjoyable and unique entertainment alternative, giving underclassmen the opportunity to socialize with their over-20 year old peers. What better way is there to bridge the drinking age gap than in the comfort of our own campus pub?

Letters

We Are A Family

Ask Very Rev. J. Stuart McPhail, O.P., a director of special events, what he thought about the dinner dance at this year's Parents' Weekend, and he'll answer you in a word, "Spacious!"

This seems to be the general consensus of everyone who attended the function, particularly those upperclassmen who can recall the usual dinner in crowded Slavin Center followed by the joint across campus into an even more mobbed Raymond Cafeteria.

Father McPhail commented on the noticeable difference in this year's event by saying there were in the area of 1700 people in the fieldhouse with room for a 1000 more.

This meant that almost twice as many parents and their offspring were able to partake in Saturday night's festivities, as in previous years.

When the location of the dinner dance was first announced there was some concern that the floor of the fieldhouse might be damaged by cigarette burns or spilled alcohol. However, Fr. McPhail was happy to report that a cleaning crew has thoroughly examined the floor and found it to be in excellent condition.

Although the weekend was highly successful in all aspects, it was not setting a precedent for future events. That is, Father McPhail explained the next Parents' Weekend may be held there, only because of the unusually large numbers of people that were in attendance. Mixers, Oktoberfest and similar functions would still be held in Slavin Center, leaving the Peterson Fieldhouse for the purpose for which it was intended: athletics.

The Editorial Board of The Cow expresses its thanks to all those who made this past Parents' Weekend the memorable event that it was.

Lack of Beneficial Input

Dear Editor:

The student body here at PC really makes me laugh (or maybe I should say cry). Everyone is screaming apathy, apathy, but that's a farce, too! There isn't a lack of student input at PC, there is only a lack of beneficial input at PC. Everyone just sits around waiting for one of the student leaders to make what they feel is a mistake and then they give their personal input.

Wow, what a great help that is to the rest of the PC student body. Where are all of these complainers and "do gooders" when capable people that they elect are asking for advice?

No decisions whatsoever are made without the consideration of the student's welfare. The people making these decisions are not making them for their own personal glorification. The people making decisions for the students are doing it with the best interest of the students in mind. These decisions cannot be made unless these leaders know what students want.

Please voice your needs, wants and ideas to people before something is done. Don't just sit back and wait to complain. It is very difficult to put yourself into someone else's position and say how much better a situation would have been handled by you unless you know the facts. Nobody is afraid to answer a question or point you in the direction of someone else who can answer that question for you. Just ask! Find out why things are being done and if they are legal before you complain about them. Student organizations are just that, organizations for students. They desire and seek your help. Be there with that help instead of with complaints. Once again, Student Congress and BOG have weekly open meetings. Attend and give and receive knowledge.

Commentary

Editor's Note: Please respond to this letter, you will be the one to suffer if this legislation passes.

To the Editor:

The U.S. Department of Education has proposed a series of rule changes that may adversely impact on your school's participation in the National Direct Student Loan Program.

The proposals, which were published in the Federal Register on January 7, 1982, (Vol. 47, No. 4 at p. 908) would reduce new money to schools with default rates of more than 10% by the amount the institutions failed to collect from their students. Institutions with default rates of more than 25% would be barred from receiving any new funds.

I strongly support an increased effort to improve collections from former students, but innocent students should not be penalized. These proposed rules seek to circumvent the legislative mandate for the program through rulemaking and would seriously injure deserving students. I believe that the Department should not be an adversary, but should work closely with the schools involved in a constructive effort to significantly reduce the default rate.

Comments on the proposed rules, which would take effect for the 1982-83 academic year, will be received by the Department until February 22, 1982.

I urge you to make your views known by writing Margaret Henry, Office of Student Financial Assistance (Room 4018, ROB3) 400 Maryland Avenue SW, Washington, D.C. 20202-3454.

Attention:

PASTORAL COUNCIL MEMBERS

There will be a general meeting on Thursday, February 11 in Slavin 102 at 6 p.m. This is a very important meeting because the election of the officers for next year will be held at this time, (nominations and elections will be held that same evening). The election procedure does not run for more than one hour and will not interfere with the mixer that is planned for later that night. Every member of the Pastoral Council is urged to attend for the quality of the club depends on its officers.

JACK ANDERSON AND JOE SPEAR

WEEKLY SPECIAL

Weird case of the CIA and the missing McNells

By JACK ANDERSON and JOE SPEAR

WASHINGTON -- The Central Intelligence Agency routinely engages in activities that would strike the average American as a bit sinister. And the man in charge of sinister operations at the CIA is the chief of covert operations.

That's why the agency's professionals were more than a little dismayed when CIA Director William Casey appointed a rank outsider as head of covert operations in May 1981. The CIA's darkest secrets were about to be laid bare to someone who might not appreciate how the spy agency had operated over the years.

As it happened, the man Casey appointed to head covert operations, Max Hugel, was quickly forced out. He was accused of illegal stock deals he had made as a private businessman.

There was some suspicion at the time that Hugel had been sandbagged by the old pros in the CIA. The idea was that they didn't want an outsider sticking his nose into their business.

This theory gained more credibility when the two men who blew the whistle on Hugel disappeared soon after. They were two brothers, Samuel and Thomas McNell.

Given the questionable nature of some of the CIA's undercover operations, there was a possibility that the McNell brothers had been done away with by the agency. Why the spooks would hit the men who had gotten rid of Max Hugel was never quite clear. But in the tangled world of espionage, the suspicion thrived.

Indeed, things got so weird at one point that the body of a third McNell brother, Dennis, was exhumed to make sure that he had not been the victim of foul play. The autopsy showed that he died of natural causes.

Still, the two McNell brothers who blew the whistle on Hugel were missing. But now there is evidence that the McNell brothers are alive and well and living in Dallas.

A former business partner received a Christmas card from Samuel and Thomas McNell from the Texas city. In the holiday greeting, the brothers apologized to their former associate for taking it on the lam. They asked for his forgiveness.

They especially asked to be forgiven for taking $3 million from their oil and energy company before they disappeared from the scene.

But there's still an unsolved mystery. The man who got the Christmas card from the McNell brothers didn't tell anyone about it. But all of a sudden he received a call from the FBI asking if he had heard from the McNells. He told the G-men about the Christmas card.

This may not have been a CIA operation, but it sounds kooky enough to have been.

MOB "THREAT": There were some disturbing press reports last week that the mob may be threatening the key witness against Labor Secretary Ray Donovan. The witness is credible, he has already been used by the Justice Department to convict corrupt union officials.

He was the secretary-treasurer of Blasters Union Local 29 in New York. This is the union that supposedly was slipped $2,000 by an official of Donovan's construction firm at a luncheon in Donovan's presence.

The former union official's name is Mario

Montuoro. He has given the Justice Department sworn statements that Donovan's company lavished gifts on officials of Local 29. A special prosecutor has been appointed to look into the allegations.

Now, law enforcement sources have disclosed that Montuoro's charges against Donovan have angered the Thomas Luchese crime family. The Mafia godfathers have reportedly put out a contract on Montuoro. They are willing to pay a half-million dollars to silence him -- for good. Justice Department officials are taking the death threats seriously. They have talked to Montuoro about seeking refuge in the Witness Protection Program.

What makes the story even more intriguing is that Local 29 is allegedly under the control of Samuel Cavalieri. His name is listed in Justice Department documents as a member of the Luchese crime family.

In other words, the same mob that allegedly controls Local 29 has now threatened Montuoro's life.

EXECUTIVE MEMO: The Central Intelligence Agency prides itself on keeping a low profile -- so much so that its budget and personnel figures are kept secret. But we've seen a top-secret review of the U.S. intelligence community which reveals that the CIA's annual budget is more than $1 billion. About 25,000 people work for the agency.

The Department of Education is refusing to spend a third of the $60 million it was appropriated last November for library programs. Department officials say they're just following the president's edict to be frugal, some Capitol Hill insiders say they're breaking the law.

Parents' Weekend

Moms and Dads Have A Grand Ol' Time

By Ellen Clerkin

This past weekend, as most freshmen and several "orphaned" upperclassmen will glumly attest to, was Providence College's annual Parents' Weekend. The Big Event to which all upperclassmen's parents received invitations during Christmas break, began on Friday night with the opening of the PC Theatre's production of Cabaret. The sellout crowd received quite a treat as the PC group put on an excellent performance. Following the musical, a reception was held for parents in '64 Hall.

Saturday morning riots of parents and students could be seen roaming the campus. Parents who had previously limited their stays on campus to dropping off a ton of essentials and a kiss good-bye, or a return to retrieve twice that amount, were given the grand tour, highlighted by the Campus Gem, the Peterson Recreation Center. At one o'clock the men's volleyball team took to the court in a tri-match with Bradford College and Brandeis University.

At two, the men's hockey team faced off against the University of Maine. The PC pucksters put on a tremendous showing, trampling UMaine 11-0. The crowd was one most fans are unaccustomed to — a rather quiet but nevertheless spirited bunch. A small token group was present in section "S", and despite many vain attempts to describe their antics to Mom and Dad, they could not fully appreciate them until the end of the third period with their rousing chant of "winning team/losing

Women Speak Out

Joanne, Darleen, Cheryl and Ann-Marie — a warped version of Charlie's Angels? Hardly. These four PC women are the officers of a brand new organization known as LAW: that is, League of Aware Women.

The League of Aware Women, at an organizational meeting held in Slavin on Feb. 3, made their intentions clear. They are a group of campus women who are concerned with problems affecting them as well as the PC community and are trying to find constructive solutions to those problems.

LAW defined themselves as "an informational, educational group." These women feel that we all should be aware of the still-existing problems women face on the PC campus as well as in the "outer world."

The meeting was informal, each woman taking a turn at expressing her view on an issue or a particular problem. One of the purposes of this organization is to serve as a support group, especially in cases of discrimination, which, unfortunately, still occur within the PC community.

LAW pointed out that they do not want to be regarded as any kind of radical group; they merely want to make their presence known.

These women feel that together, their voices will indeed be heard.

One woman raised the question of resistance from others, especially those who do not understand the league's purpose. In response, the officers did admit there was a little twist in order to hold the meeting. They have yet to present their club to the Student Congress and establish a constitution before they may legitimately appropriate funds.

These women are aware that everything has to be done by the book, slowly and gradually. Controversy, as well as resistance, is inevitable. However, these women are prepared to face the controversy head-on and maintain a strong stand.

Among some of the activities that the League wants to plan are: lectures sponsored by the group concerning prevalent issues, trips to various places of interest and ways of making important information available to both men and women. Another interesting question that was raised was whether the new League was affiliated with the PC Women's Advisory Council. The officers answered this negatively, stressing that the league is not out to undermine their efforts but wants to see certain things done,

PC's Cabaret

An Old Chum With A New Twist

By Steve (Veg.) McGuire

The new twist is the PC twist. On Feb. 5, in Harkins Auditorium, the PC Theatre/Music Program opened with "Cabaret" and closed with a thundering round of applause. To enter the theatre was to enter a Berlin bistro of 40 years ago, flavored with gaiety and merriment, degradation, love, promise, illusion...and terror.

Like the theme, the PC production included both delightful and unpleasant moments. Seated among the smoke and ribaldry of the Kit Kat Klub, the audience was teased by a troop of scantily dressed young ladies and bid "Wilkommen, Bienvenue, Welcome" by the dwarfed, gruesome, Master of Ceremonies (J. Coggins). Virtue is harder to personify than vice, and Coggins' thick paste-colored makeup and harsh voice left no doubts as to the Emcee's swing of the moral pendulum. Strutting out, calling to the stage his burlesque beauties ("Each and every one a Virgin"), sending waiters scurrying, the Emcee summed up the mood of the Kit Kat, and of pre-WW II Berlin: adventuresome, deliciously full of vice.

Seeking this adventure, the handsome American writer Cliff

Bradshaw (Jim Lambert) arrives in Berlin, procuring material for the novel too often stillborn. Lambert only gradually earns a place in the hearts of the audience, as we come to identify Bradshaw with the "good guys". Lambert's voice — steady, masculine and pleasant, combines well with that of Mary Ellen Baxter, who enriches the play with a superb portrayal of Sally Bowles, burlesque superstar. Let us forget that a musical demands a good voice, Farrell has chosen her parts well.

Bradshaw's adventures start even before he arrives, for he meets the intense but pleasant Ernst Ludwig (Joseph Trimble) at the customs house. Smuggling brings the two closer together and introduces Bradshaw to the boarding house run by Fraulein Schneider and the Kit Kat Klub.

The elderly spinster Schneider (Elizabeth Whelan) proved to be practical and motherly, haggling for a decent price, content that her boarder was a nice young man. Teutonically harsh on the outside, Whelan created a character whose heart was as soft as whipped cream. Three cheers to Ms. Farrell called it a night and bade their rug-cutting offspring goodbye. All agreed that the evening was a success as well as a lot of fun.

Sunday at 1 p.m., Mass was held in St. Pius for students and their parents. The standing room only crowd listened with chuckles as Father Peterson in his homily appealed to the parents to donate to their favorite charity — us! Following Mass, the weekend was brought to a close with a buffet brunch in Lower Slavin.

To all who attended, Parents' Weekend was a special time shared with those who are responsible for us being here. It gave us a chance to spend some time with Mom and Dad, have a lot of fun and show them a bit of our home away from home. Hmmm, wonder if they'll let me have the car Friday night?

for selecting Elizabeth Whelan; three cheers to Whelan for becoming one with her role! Yet Whelan's true beauty as an actress only is revealed when she is perfectly complemented by Fraulein Schneider's friend then lover then fiancé, Herr Schulz (Wally Dunn). Dunn is the most formidable presence on stage, portraying an elderly Jewish fruit merchant, ensnared with Fraulein Schneider, innocent, timid, idealistic. But his naivete does not mask true honor and courage, courage that will be needed because trial and tribulation await Schulz, the Jew, the prosperous Jew in an epoch when a frustrated Germany looked for a scapegoat.

Love can blind the courageous...temporarily. Dancing together around a pineapple given to Fraulein Schneider, Dunn and Whelan perform magic on stage. With much grace and somewhat less than perfect voices, the couple subtly announced that they had stolen the show and would only reluctantly give it back. After all, is there any sight more romantic than that of an elderly couple dancing around their pineapple?

Schulz and Schneider do not

TODAY'S ROCK REVIEW

By James Tully

Editor's Note: Today's Rock Review will be featured weekly in The Cowl complete with record reviews, upcoming concerts in the Providence area and the top five albums of the week.

Shake It Up -The Cars-

The Cars annual album is out and like the previous three (The Cars, Cando and Panama), it is receiving its share of playing time on radio stations all over the country. This fact is no real surprise considering the success of their past albums. Shake It Up, though, has one major flaw that should be very apparent to their followers or even the common listener, and that is the same sound on almost every song.

Shake It Up starts off with the catchy song "Since You're Gone." This song sets the trend for the remaining songs, and that trend is about the loss of love. Lead vocalist, rhythm guitarist, and writer Rick Ocasek seems obsessed with a woman whom he can't live with, nor without. This theme is especially true for the songs "Victim of Love," "This Could Be Love," and "Think It Over."

Probably the best song is the commercially successful title song, "Shake It Up." "Shake It Up" is an upbeat song featuring good rhythmic drums by David Robinson. Ocasek again demonstrates why he is one of rock's most respected vocalists on "I'm Not The One" with his addictive haunting vocals. Both of these songs are on side one.

The highlight of side two is the tune, "Think It Over." Again, Ocasek is possessed by a woman and asks her to think over their relationship. "Think It Over" is helped tremendously by the keyboard work of Greg Hawkes. The other songs on side two, "A Dream Away," "This Could Be Love," and "Maybe Baby" do not receive as much airplay as others, but are likeable songs although they will never win The Cars a Grammy Award.

Despite their repetitive sound and simplistic instrumentals, Shake It Up is generally a good commercial album. Ocasek will never write about serious issues as other groups have, but who really cares? What Ocasek does is give the public good, fun music and he does it very well. Shake It Up is a worthwhile investment in today's market of skyrocketing album prices.

If you're involved in an intramural sport, be prepared for an unexpected slump.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20)

Rejoice! You are going to find a required text in the bookstore for under $20!!!

Aries (March 20-April 20)

You will find out that an upcoming term paper assignment has been postponed until April! This will provide you with an excuse to celebrate at Brad's.

Taurus (April 20-May 21)

There is a strong possibility that this week you will find something in your mailbox other than a note from BOG or the Residence Office.

Gemini (May 21-June 21)

Prepare yourself for some embarrassing moments this week. For example, there is a good chance that as you bid farewell to your latest love outside your dorm you will be serenaded by a group of beer drinkers who have been recently thrown out of the Rat.

Cancer (June 21-July 22)

In the near future you will be thrown out of the Rat. Shortly after, you will join up with some companions and serenade young, loveless couples who are saying their goodnights outside McViney Hall.

Leo (July 22-Aug. 23)

When you go downstairs to do your laundry, the laundry room will be empty (a once in a lifetime occurrence.)

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 23)

That job interview you've been fearing will go over so smoothly that you will practically be offered the job on the spot.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)

That cute little puppy who has become a permanent resident of your apartment will finally grasp the significance of spread newspapers.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 22)

That professor who always calls on you is in for quite a surprise this week. You are finally going to answer one of his questions correctly.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

An exam you have been dreading for a long time will not be as difficult as you had imagined; it will be impossible.

Capricorn (Dec. 21-Jan. 20)

You will set a new record for making it from Harkins to Koffler, only to discover that you have left all your books back at your desk in Harkins 208.

Steve's Still a Jerk

By Susan Young

On Saturday, February 6, the Class of 1985 sponsored the movie, The Jerk, starring the ever-popular Steve Martin. An adequate number of people turned out to see the "wild and crazy guy" in this rags 'n' riches story.

Steve Martin plays Navin Johnson, a poor child who grows up in a black family. Because he feels he does not fit in with this family's culture, Navin Johnson goes out into the world to find his "special purpose." He encounters various ridiculous situations that are utterly unbelievable; yet, because these predicaments are so ridiculous, Navin Johnson acquires his wealth and marries the girl he loves, Maria, portrayed by Bernadette Peters.

The comical parts of this movie are few. Much of it is boring and falls below the rating of a quality film. However, by the end of the movie, Martin has truly convinced the audience that Navin R. Johnson is a jerk.

All in all, the movie was a valid attempt to provide some form of entertainment for those not involved in Parent's Weekend. The title of this movie is The Jerk, and it lives up to its name!

personal lives for rebirth, regeneration, and recreation in Christ. It is a time for new life to appear in us and for old frozen attitudes to disappear. It is a time for sowing, so that one day, the Day of the Lord, will be a harvest of the richest abundance for us in the Lord.

How happy we are when we finally get around to cleaning out our closets and drawers, when we rearrange our rooms and improve our surroundings, when we finally get around to answering letters we owe to our friends, or when we clear off our desks which have been piled high with work. Each one of us can think of any number of other things that are dreaded tasks, but once done really make us feel great!

Well, really, that's what Lent is about: Taking time to clean up our lives, to rearrange our priorities and values, to make peace with our neighbor, with ourselves, and with God. It is not such a drudge of a job since it is much like being in training or dieting in that we know the end result will bring us the desired happiness we seek. So we can bear with the short period of the preparation in order to attain our goals. One important difference, however, is the preparation in Lent, for the Joy of Easter is permeated with the Steadfast Love of God in Jesus and in His Holy Spirit. This love is the guiding light in the darkness of Lent shining into the brightness of the Resurrection.

Let's take courage in the knowledge of this Love. And let's all start together on Ash Wednesday, which is two weeks from today. Let's make it a community effort. Let's take time to pray, take time to sacrifice and take time to

'Tis the Season to be Holy

By Fr. Adrian Dabash, O.P.

Once again we are approaching the Holy Season of Lent. It is a time of preparation — a time for getting things together for Easter and the joy of the Lord's Resurrection. It is much like the kind of experience we are going through this week. We are all looking forward to the week off. We are preparing and getting everything in order so that we will be totally free to really enjoy the week's vacation. We want it to be perfect. Our preparation will not go unrewarded. It will be worth the time to do it.

Lent is an ancient word for Spring. Spring is in a sense a season of preparation, or more accurately, a time for new beginnings. Spring is a season of rebirth, of regeneration, of recreation. It is a time of new life! The season of Lent is also a springtime in our own have a monopoly on love in Farrell's magical world, and strange things can happen to American writers in a Berlin cabaret. Sally Bowles, British starlet, thrives on the beautiful illusions of the city's nightlife, where the masses flock to see her pretty face and legs while the Nazis slowly gain power. Tired of her old lover, Max (John Farley), Sally latches onto our novelist, and all is bliss in Berlin. Or is it?

Sally and Bradshaw exchange tender words. Schulz entertains his friends with an old Jewish story at his engagement party (singing "Meekies"). Dunn is at his very best, and the irreverent Kit Kat Klub Emcee dances with two transvestites ("I like it! They like it!"). But a young blond boy (Aaron Burr) sings a very disturbing song, a song that Fraulein Kloste (Patricia Carver) will sing again to honor Herr Ludwig, who now proudly wears a red band around his arm with a swastika: "Tomorrow Belongs to Me." For tomorrow, as we so clearly begin to see, would not belong to our lovers but to the party Ludwig endorsed. Bradshaw, seeing the powder keg before the explosion, elects to return to America, bringing the newly pregnant Sally. But the old chum has forgotten the lesson Sally tried to teach him, for to her, Life is a Cabaret. Returning to the Kit Kat, Max and dancing and deception await her. Her unwanted burden is aborted at the price of her exquisite fur coat, but for Sally Bowles, freedom's price is never too steep. The parting scene is warm, touching, magnificently well acted. Baxter's tears and attempts at cheer demanded the skills of a fine actress. Along with Whelan and Dunn, she proved to be a necessary link in the chain that bound "Cabaret" together.

Fraulein Schneider, no longer blinded by a young girl's frivolous thoughts, elects to survive. Leaving Herr Schulz costs her, deeply, and her pain is evident. "What would you do?" she asks Cliff, and the audience must struggle to answer the question for itself. Schulz, with bravery and incessant hope, accepts what should not be out of love for Fraulein Schneider, and looks to better days. "Governments come. Governments go. Let me peel you an orange."

And as the American begins his lonely journey home, the music begins again (superb musical accompaniment by Father Haller and his orchestra throughout); the dancing starts. Sally leads the ribald crew to song, and the waiters swirl by, prepared to serve the drinks. Here life is beautiful. Ladies telephone gents and ask them for a dance. The gentlemen, waiters, and the dwarfed, gruesome Emcee wear swastikas. Life is a cabaret, old chum, life is a cabaret.

Just Ask OUR OPINION

Dear R&P,

I like this guy who I have been friends with for a long time very much. Do you think it would be wrong or out of place if I sent him a card on Valentine's Day as a token of my affection for him, or would that be too forward?

Stumped Valentine

Dear Stumped,

If you really like this guy and he doesn't realize you have feelings for him this would be the perfect opportunity.

Dear R&P,

I want to go with a guy who I have been friends with for over a year now to our dorm blind date dance. I know he'll go but I also know we'll end up more than just friends and I don't know if I want that to happen.

John Treacy Making Tracks

By Chris Lydon

In 1974, when I was asked in Ireland what was Providence College, he would probably have been met with a blank stare. However, thanks to John Treacy and others; Providence College is now one of the few colleges that people in Ireland do know about. This is due in a large part to the reputation that Treacy has given to the school with his long list of accomplishments in and out of the sport of running.

For Treacy, "Providence College was virgin territory in terms of running; only one other Irishman, Mick O'Shea, had ventured overseas, and that was the year before." As a 17 year old freshman, John did not know what to expect from the strange place; but with the help of Coach Bob Amato, all the pieces began to fall into place.

By the time he was a senior, the stage was set for a unique accomplishment in college sports. In the NCAA Cross Country Championships, he finished second to Henry Kono; in the NCAA indoor 3 mile, a victory; and in the NCAA outdoor 10,000, a second place finish to Michael Musyoki of UTEP. That made Treacy a three time All-American in the same athletic year; and it wasn't even the highlight of his senior year!

In March, in Glasgow, Scotland, at the World Cross Country Championships, the 20 year old Treacy shocked the world by becoming the youngest person ever to win the event. When he returned to PC, he found that only his close friends understood the importance of his accomplishment; and as John remembers, "It did not have the same impact in this country as it did in Europe." He then repeated the victory the following year in Limerick, Ireland, to become the second youngest ever to win the Championship.

While he achieved the success that he enjoyed from running, it also led to a fierce desire to do well academically. "In order to run well, one must be disciplined and set high standards; I felt this carry over to my studies, and I became a bit of a workaholic as well." The hard work paid off, as he graduated from PC with a degree in Accounting and a 3.6 G.P.A.;

then went on to get his MBA with a G.P.A. of 3.9.

Currently in the country on business and to compete on the U.S. Indoor Circuit, John works for the Irish Export Board as a marketing consultant in the area of clothing. He called it, "an organization with lots of movement. There are offices in 23 countries around the world, and one is usually transferred abroad after two or three years working for the home office in Ireland." Possibly he could end up back in the country, in the New York offices.

This Friday in New York, Treacy will run in the Millrose Games 5000, with a field that includes two current PC stars, Geoff Smith and Steve Binns. "I can't believe the impact the race has had on the locker room," John said. "All anyone talks about is the race Friday night." With other top athletes Alberto Salazar, Suleiman Nyambui, and Nick Rose also in the race, Treacy would not pick a winner; but added, "It will probably be a world record, and, of course, there is the added dimension of the rivalry between Geoff and myself."

For the year 1982, Treacy has set very high standards for himself; the major goal will be to win back the World Cross Country Championship in Rome. Last year, he missed the event after he could not run for four months because of a bad injury. "It was hell. I became very restless, but I never thought of not being able to run again. I always thought the next day might be better and I'd be able to run again." The other goal he has set for himself is to win the European Championships 10,000 in Athens in September. "After the injury, I have as much incentive now as ever; after finishing 7th in Moscow (Olympic 5000) and being ranked 6th in the world in 1980, it was tough to go to nothing in 1981."

Is there a marathon in the near future for John Treacy? "Maybe if things go as planned during the summer, I would run New York in October; but if I didn't think I could break 2:10, I wouldn't run and waste my time." Such is the competitive drive of John Treacy.

As time goes on, Treacy feels more and more on himself as a coach than anyone else; though he does still use Bob Amato's expertise in the advisory role. "When I first came to PC, he (Amato) had a lot to do with my training; but as time went on, I got a better working knowledge of my own body, and no one knows your body like yourself."

After spending most of the past seven years in the United States, John is now living in Dublin, Ireland; and it leads to the obvious question, where does he prefer to live? "It is great to come back to PC to train with the guys, but once you get into a routine, it is easy to be comfortable and train anywhere. It all goes back to discipline." That statement sums up John Treacy best; an athlete who takes each aspect of his life seriously, and through a disciplined approach, has been able to be a success not only on the track, but in life as well.

Orangemen Cool PC, 86-87

By Richard Testa

It usually happens. When your opponent's center gets in foul trouble and has to sit out for quite a spell, most of the time you're in good shape. Last Saturday in the Carrier Dome at Syracuse, PC found themselves in this situation.

Unfortunately, the Orangemen's backup center, Sean Kerins, scored 22 points and grabbed a ton of offensive rebounds as he led SU to a 86-71 victory over the Friars. The final score is in no way indicative of the way the game played. However, the outcome puts Providence at 9-11, 1-7 in the Big East. PC is tied with Seton Hall for seventh. The biggest stretch of this season starts tonight.

Andre Hawkins, the 1981 New York State school-boy player of the year and the Orange's starting center, was in foul trouble early in the second half and coach Jim Boeheim decided to substitute one of his many big men. The score was 54-44 at the time. In fact, the Friars had been playing remarkably well. PC led by as many as six points twice in the first half at 19-13 and 23-17. Forward Marlon Burns and center Otis Thorpe were working reasonably well and maintained some control under the boards. When SU made an eight point run with seven minutes remaining and went up 29-26, the Friars did not fold and took back the lead at the half 36-33.

Again, as the second half began, the Orangemen went in a run, outscoring PC 8-1 and led 41-37. PC came back one more time and forced three ties, with Ron Jackson providing much of the scoring during that stretch. The score was knotted at 49 when Boeheim's replacement, Kerins, threw in two of the 16 points he would score in a burst that put the game out of reach. With 8:53 remaining, the Orange went up 61-54. SU maintained that spread and extended the lead to nine, 76-67, with 1:41 remaining. Then PC was forced to foul and the game was over.

To analyze the run further, Kerins went seven of nine from the field and controlled the game from the defensive end as well. He also intercepted a few key Friar passes that would have made the game closer had PC been able to capitalize on those possessions. Kerins really provided all of the talent that was supposed to be missing since the Orange's leading scorer and rebounder, Leo Rautins, was saddled with an injury. The Friar play was admirable in the first half and the famed matchup zone of coach Joe Mullane seemed to be working well.

However, Syracuse had a lot more movement in half number two and found many holes in the defense under the boards. PC was led by Jackson, Thorpe and Billy Fields, who had 17, 14 and 11 points respectively. Besides Kerins'

22, the Orange were helped by junior Red Bruin's 18 and Erich Santifer's 16 points.

As mentioned before, the most important part of the regular season is upon the Friars. Three Big East contests at home could show how much they've improved over the past few weeks. In fact, the next six days could be dubbed "Revenge Week." Tonight Providence takes on Boston College at the Civic Center. The Eagles won at Chestnut Hill last month 62-59 when they made a key steal late in the game. BC is 3-6 in the conference, not playing nearly as well as last year when they won the season title with a 10-4 mark. However, they did beat SU in Syracuse.

Saturday afternoon's contest with Seton Hall is part of Homecoming Weekend and the Pirates will be hungry. They haven't won since their thrilling last second victory over PC when Dan Callandriello buried a 15-footer for a 66-65 win. Ah, Revenge Week.

Another Monday Night Big East Game of the Week will be played at the Civic Center, February 15. The St. John's Redmen, who won 76-62, early in January, will appear with their new hero—guard Chris Mullin. It'll be rough.

Yet the Friars have a good chance to win all three games—they really do. Three wins will surely boost their record, but more importantly a terrific homestand will boost team morale for the rest of the season. It is, therefore, the most important stretch of the season. Keep your fingers crossed.

★LENT

hope in the new life that is given to us in the Holy Season.

In your journey through Lent you will find many things available to you in your personal preparation.

On Ash Wednesday there will be Communal Penance Service in '64 Hall at the Slavin Center at 1:30 p.m. Individual confession will be available and there will be distribution of Ashes during this Service. It will be an opportunity for all of us to celebrate the love and forgiveness God has for us in this Son.

You are asked to give up a meal today. It is a day traditionally when we here at PC fast and donate the money to the poor. This fast in the past has helped our neighbors in their needs by the sacrifice offered here.

Also on Ash Wednesday there will be Masses at 9:35, 10:35, 11:35 a.m. in Aquinas Chapel. The 4:30 p.m. Mass will not be celebrated in Aquinas on Ash Wednesday but rather in '64 Hall in the Slavin Center. There will also be a Candle Light Mass in Aquinas Chapel at 10:30 p.m. Ashes will be distributed at all the Masses.

Daily Masses during the week in Lent will be celebrated Monday through Friday in Aquinas Chapel at 9:35, 10:35, 11:35 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., and on Saturday, the daily Mass will be at 11:35 a.m. in Aquinas Chapel. On Monday evening during Lent, Stations of the Cross will be held at 7 p.m., in Aquinas Chapel.

Every Tuesday during Lent there will be a Candle Light Mass at 10 p.m., in Aquinas Chapel. There will be five different preachers for the five Tuesdays of Lent and they will be: Very Rev. Thomas R. Peterson, O.P., Very Rev. Thomas E. Ertle, O.P., Father Dominick Rover, O.P., Father John Rossi, O.P., and Father Giles Dimock, O.P.

The Sacrament of Penance or Reconciliation will be available on every Wednesday evening in Aquinas Chapel from 7:30 p.m. and from 10:30-11 p.m. Confessions are also usually available a half hour before all the Sunday Liturgies and anytime upon request.

During the Lenten Season other events are also forthcoming such as a Lenten Musical Concert in Aquinas Chapel to be presented by Father Haller, Sister Gail Himrod, Father Prest, and the musical department, at a date to be announced. There will be a Scriptural Presentation at another time during this season. Also there will be an annual student retreat which is scheduled sometime in March. It will be a weekend retreat. Further information will be published soon. If you are interested in the retreat, and want more details stop by the Chaplain's Office.

It should be noted that in the Diocese of Providence all the Fridays of Lent are days of abstinence from meat. A complete Lenten Season Schedule will be available after the break and will be placed in your P.O. Box.

Well, this is a brief preview of Lent and some of the things that will be available to you. Remember, my friends, Lent is a time for fasting, almsgiving, and prayer. The most important of these is prayer. The end of all of this is a new and stronger relationship to God. May God's love and peace guide you in this adventure.

PC Skaters Rout Maine, 11-0

By John Corey

The next time the Black Bears of Maine are scheduled to travel to Schneider Arena for a contest with the Friars, they will think twice about making the trip. Saturday afternoon the Friars crushed Maine University, 11 to 0. A crowd of 3,000, including many parents, watched and were delighted with the Friars' performance of four goals in the first period, five goals in the second period and two in the final twenty minutes of play. The PC defensive corps also proved themselves admirably with goaltender Mario Proulx stopping 36 shots and earning his third shutout of the season.

Sophomore Gates Orlando started off the PC blitz with a goal at the 5:31 mark as he let go a 25 foot wrist shot by the Maine goaltender. Jim Colucci had an assist on this goal as he set up Orlando at center ice. Jeff Hamilton then scored three minutes later as he was set up by Tim Army and freshman sensation Rich Costello. This was the first of Costello's three assists in the game. With excellent forechecking the Friars pinned the Black Bears in their own zone for most of the game. This forechecking led to the next PC goal as Paul Guay scored with help from Anderson and Kurt Kleindorfer. Forward Jim Rushin finished out the scoring in the first with a shot which deflected off the goalpost to the left of the Maine goalie.

If the first twenty minutes of the game were not enough, the second period's results put no doubt in anyone's mind who would emerge victorious. Kurt Kleindorfer scored the first of his two in the period just 18 seconds into play with a ten foot slapshot. Anderson received an assist as he made the key pass from behind the Maine cage. Senior Jim Colucci had the next tally with an unassisted goal at the 1:29 mark. Steve Anderson made the score 7-0 when he was set up by Kleindorfer. Anderson had one goal and three assists in the game and so did Rich Costello who set up the next goal by Bruce Raboin. Kurt finished out the second period's explosion at 19:21 from Guay and Anderson.

The key to this win was strong skating and forechecking by the Friar forwards. Although PC outscored Maine, the Bears nearly had as many shots on goal as the Friars (40 to 36). The difference was that PC was shooting from ten and fifteen feet and Maine was firing in shots from the blue line and from the center of the rink. At the 9:22 point of the last period, Jeff Hamilton slipped in his second goal of the game from Army and Costello. The final goal of the game was an unassisted goal by Rich Costello at 12:26.

This made the final score 11 to 0 and the Friars had won their most lopsided game of the season. This team effort by PC showed everyone that they can do the job which remains for them to do this season. If the Friars continue to play at this pace for the remainder of the season it will make things much easier for a defense of their E.C.A.C. title.

With this victory the Friars record now stands at 15-10 and 1 with an 8-7 record in division one of the E.C.A.C. The next PC contest will be on Wednesday night as they continue their homestand with a game against Northeastern. Northeastern is a team which the Friars definitely have to defeat if they want the home ice advantage in the post season tournament. Providence will also play two games during the mid-winter break as they battle the Bruins of Brown University on February 16 and a strong E.C.A.C. team from up north, St. Lawrence, on Saturday, the 20th.

Syracuse Edges PC in Late Minute Surge

By Christine Merlo

Coach Joe Mullany Jr. has a lot to be happy about these days. First of all, his Lady Friars have improved substantially within a year; and secondly, his team has posted an outstanding record of 19-6, with three of the losses coming from nationally ranked teams. Obviously, the Lady Friars have perfected their skills under the experienced guidance of Coach Mullany and Assistant Coach Lynn Sheedy.

The aggressive caliber of play demonstrated by the Lady Friars has allowed them to become nationally known among outstanding women college basketball teams. Despite PC's hard work this past weekend, the girls lost their sixth game of the season to a tough Syracuse team, 70-64.

The first half was an exciting one as both teams seemed to be offensively and defensively matched. Sophomore Kathy Finn and Junior Kerry Phayre led the Lady Friars offensively as they sparked the team into establishing a four point lead after the first quarter. At the half, PC had increased its lead by 10 points, 35-25.

The second half was entirely different as it proved to be Syracuse's time to take control. With 7:15 left to play in the game, they tied PC, 48 to 48. Syracuse's offense provided the points needed to challenge the Lady Friars. Although the game was tied, PC never let up as their exceptional offense and defense rallied back to tie the score again with less than five minutes to play in the game. This time, the Lady Friars could not contain Syracuse from scoring. Syracuse seemed to consistently provide the needed energy. Syracuse's Kim Dick and Ann Flannery each had 18 points and PC's Kathy Finn was the game's high scorer with 23 points.

The next home game will be tonight at 5:45 when PC will meet UNH at the Civic Center.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Root the No. 1 ranked Lady Friars hockey team to victory on Saturday, February 21st, as the girls face off against UNH. The game starts at 5:00 p.m. and will be dedicated to Fr. Richard Vahey, long time patriarch of PC hockey.

Lady Friars Stride To Five Way Victory

By Chris Lydon

The Lady Friars indoor track team, paced by winners Mary Beth Reynolds, Sue Ratcliffe, Sue Montambo, Maura McGuire, Julie McCrorie, and five second place finishes from Jean Fiore, defeated four other schools in a five-way meet held last Thursday at Southern Connecticut State College. Also included in the meet were Central Connecticut, Eastern Connecticut, and Fairfield.

As in the victory the week before over Tufts, the team relied on several people doubling and tripling in events in order to claim the victory. Maura McGuire began by winning the high jump with a leap of 5'2", while teammate Liz Noble took second with a jump of 5'.

McGuire then went to the long jump, where she took fourth with a jump of 15'; second place finisher Jean Fiore, who took second with a 16'9" effort, and ahead of Katie Mehrling, who took sixth with a 16'9" leap. Mehrling also took sixth in the 55 meter dash with a 8.1 second performance; and finished seventh in the 200 meter with a time 30.9.

Mary Beth Reynolds took first in the 400 meter with a time of 62.4, while Mary Evans was third in the event with a clocking of 65.9. Both Evans and Reynolds also took part in the 4x200 meter relay that took second, along with Jean Fiore and Liz Noble. Reynolds then competed on the 4x400 relay that took second; she led off, was followed by Fiore, Noble, and Sue Montambo.

Montambo qualified for the New Englanders after her winning performance in the 800 meter run; she led from the gun, and finished in a time of 2:21, five seconds faster than a week ago at Holy

In addition to the relays and the long jump, Fiore also picked up two other second place finishes in the 55 meter dash and the 200 meter. Her times were 7.5 and 27.69, respectively. In addition to Fiore in the 200, Mary Evans took fifth in 30.47, and Suzanne Burbank took eighth in 31.4. Burbank also took fourth in the 55 meter hurdles with a time of 10.4 seconds.

In addition to doubling efforts in the sprints; there were other fine performances turned in by the middle distance runners. Julie McCrorie won the 3000 meters with a regional qualifying time of 10:15; and will be able to travel to West Virginia in March to compete in the Division I Regionals. The Lady Friars also had Sue Ratcliffe third, in 10:56.6, Julie Morand second in 11:46.6, and Rosie Greenslade fifth in 12:47.

Ratcliffe also won the 1500 meter run with a time of 4:58.5; while Julie Morand ran her second personal best in as many weeks with a third place, 5:12.5 performance, and Rosie Greenslade took seventh with a time of 5:47.

The final score showed that the Lady Friars narrowly defeated Southern 48-44, while the other schools trailed far behind; Central with 16 points, Eastern with 11, and Fairfield with 5. The fine team effort was again the result of the multi-talented group of athletes, capable of scoring in many diverse events.

The Lady Friars next meet will be Sunday, when they compete in the Holy Cross Invitational at Worcester. With a number of girls having already qualified for the New Englanders, the strong competition at this week's event should allow others to qualify as well.
