A Summer in Europe: The Experience of a Lifetime

By Christina Kennedy

"I don't know. I'm not looking forward to working at the same old job again. I'd really like to do something different."

If you are looking for something exciting to do this summer why not start planning now? If you've ever considered a trip to Europe, now is the time to go.

The Providence-in-Europe summer study tour based in Pietrasanta, Italy is celebrating its 12th summer this year. Under the direction of Fr. Richard McAlister, OP of the art department, the trip is open to both PC students and others with an interest in learning more about the Renaissance in general.

The tour includes various stops in five major European countries. The first stop is London. There, you are free to explore the Thames River and the ancient buildings which shadow its banks.

After four days in London, the group travels by bus along the original pilgrimage route to Canterbury Cathedral in England. The village skyline is dominated by the elegant and delicate lights of the city below create a romantic mood by which to enjoy your delicious dinner. Paris also includes a number of the finest museums and galleries in the world. There is Notre Dame which is a work of art in and of itself, the Louvre which houses the Mona Lisa and the Venus di Milo and, on the other end of the spectrum, there is the Pompidou Museum which represents the avant-garde side of the art world.

An overnight train to Toulouse brings you the area of Southern France with its gently rolling farmlands and quaint villages. This area is especially significant to PC because it is here at Toulouse that St. Dominic founded the Order of Preachers.

The group stays at Aujeaux in the Centre Cultural and is required to do the domestic housework.

Dorm Council Election Nominees

By Karen MacGillivray

Dorm Council nominations were held last Wednesday, Thursday and Friday in all resident dorms on campus. Upperclassmen circulated petitions trying to collect enough signatures to be nominated for the position of president, vice president, social chairman, or treasurer of their dorm. Elections for six of the ten dorms will be held next Thursday.

There will be no election held for Meagher, Mc Dermott, Stephen, or Raymond Halls, as only one person has been nominated for each position in each dorm. The officers in Meagher Hall are: president, Kathy Walsh, '82; vice president, Lynnmarie MacMillan, '83; and social chairman, Michelle Gallon, '82. Mc Dermott Hall officers are: president, Chris Feinheidael, '83; vice president, Michael Galante, '82; social chairman, Matt Johnson, '83; and treasurer, Kevin Flynn, '83. Raymond Hall officers are: president, Jim Spinnelle, '82; vice president, Reed Chisholm, '82; social chairman, Joe Fratesi, '83; treasurer, Brian Murphy, '83; and Jim Sullivan, '82, is the new president of Stephen Hall.

The Dorm Council consists of representatives from the 10 dorms who deal with problems particular to each dorm. They also organize dorm parties and participate in the organization of the Battle of the Dorms. Each member of the council must have lived on campus for at least two semesters and must maintain a 2.0 cum. The council is on the Resident Board, and president of the Resident Board, Tim West, is a member of Student Congress. West remarked, "The council is very important to dorm life. A lot is missed in this year in the dorms because of the drinking age. We need to think of alternatives to getting drunk. We need imagination; the Colonel's Corner could be used for many things."

Sunday, October 19 the Providence College Student Congress passed a resolution approving a proposal for a lottery system to assure incoming freshmen of on-campus housing.

The resolution, presented by Dennis McEnery, student representative to the Committee on Administration reads as follows:

"Be it resolved that the Student Congress sitting in session October 19, 1980 endorses and supports an initial limited lottery of small proportion in order to widen the opportunity of freshmen to participate in on-campus living."

Upperclassmen would be unfortunate to "bumped" off campus to allow available rooms to all freshmen. The Flynn, president of the Off-Campus Resident Board, noted the importance of the "lottery" being proportionate to avoid creating a "junior college campus." A site that is primarily freshmen and sophomores.

A resolution submitted by Ken McCuneagle, treasurer of Student Congress, was unanimously passed. The resolution called for the allocation of $1,800 to the Class of 1984. The reason being that all the other classes have had the opportunity to raise money through various events. This however, is difficult for the freshmen because of the new drinking age. The amount of $1,800 was determined when the Congress member presents resolution on dorm lottery.

Safety Forum: Common Sense and Concern

By Peggy Hogan

Common sense and concern were the key words last Thursday night, October 9, when the Safety and Security Committee, along with the Women's Advisory Council, sponsored a forum entitled, "Aprehension plus Awareness equals Security."

Organized by Jackye Sierman of the Counseling Center, the forum sought to increase safety consciousness and to make students aware of some problems and possible solutions.

Rev. Thomas R. Peterson, O.P., president of the College, opened the meeting by saying, "There is a problem on our campus, we can't deny it."

Father Peterson was referring to the recent assaults on Providence College coeds. He stated that the school administration is doing everything possible to make the campus safe. Additionally, lights along the off-campus bus run, are two suggestions, but "common sense and concern must be shown by all in the community."

We have to look out for each other, as well as looking out for ourselves. Father Peterson asked.

Physics Students Honored by Professional Society

Wednesday, October 15, five Providence College students, were treated to dinner by the American Society of Heating, Refrigerating and Air Conditioning Engineers, Inc. Headed by Walter A. Murtaugh, O.P., faculty advisor to the Student Physics Society and Sigma Pi Sigma (the physics honor society) the students were invited to dinner and a speakers' presentation at the Heartland Inn and Restaurant.

Attending were Jeanne Holmberg, '81, president of Sigma Pi Sigma, Jim Maher, '81, John Farley, '82, Steve Fludder, '82, and Sheila MacFarlane, '82.

The students were offered the opportunity to meet and listen to presentations by a group of engineers.

Hilberg noted that this was the first such gathering and expressed hopes of holding similar functions in the near future. The experience was both enjoyable and informative for those attending.

PC's Student Congress: On Ethical Matters...

The ethics committee of PC's Student Congress has been the focus of attention and discussion among students during the past few weeks. The recent decision to suspend senior class president Dan Gaccione and his subsequent resignation have brought many questions from the PC community.

Many students on the PC campus are unaware of the exact occurrence preceding the suspension of the senior class president, as well as the purpose and function of the Student Congress ethics committee. Therefore, the Editorial Board of the Cowl would like to clarify this issue through the explanation of the purpose of the ethics committee, the circumstances surrounding this situation, and an analysis of the entire situation.

The ethics committee is composed of class presidents and various other members of Student Congress. This year Maryellen Gilroy chaired the committee. Its main function is to keep an accurate record and watchful eye over the duties of Student Congress members. These duties include such things as attendance at congress meetings and committee meetings, office hours, and working in elections. Of course, a congress member may be excused from a meeting and is not penalized for his or her absence. But if the congress member neglects his or her duties, he is penalized in the form of a cut.

The cut system works in this manner:

- 1 cut for an unexcused congress meeting absence
- 2 cuts for each unexcused absence from congress meetings, office hours, or election duties

The ethics committee keeps a running tally on the cuts received by members. When and if a member reaches the limit of two cuts he receives a warning from the ethics committee. If a member neglects his or her duties, he is penalized in the form of a cut.

To this date, a decision has not been made as to who will be the new vice president.

As far as Maryellen Gilroy knows, this is the first time in recent history that a Student Congress member has been suspended. She states, "The reason for this is that past Congress members have not enforced the by-laws." She also notes that there are presently two students on Congress with 1.5 cuts and one student with two cuts. The ethics committee will begin proceedings in those cases.

The Editorial Board of the Cowl realizes that the ethics committee, along with the Student Congress Executive Board, acted admirably in this situation, yet when compared to the by-laws, had little choice. The Editorial Board of the Cowl does commend Congress for enforcing its own rules in this case, for it is definitely a positive change away from past Congress precedents.

However, the third person of the ethics committee, Maryellen Gilroy, is also vice president of the senior class, and felt uncomfortable about being faced with the decision. Says Gilroy, "The reason I couldn't make the decision was because it would have been a conflict of interest. This is why I temporarily resigned as chairperson." By doing this, she turned the decision to the Executive Board of Student Congress. It was decided that Gaccione would be suspended (as actually the Executive Board had no "decision" to make for the by-laws specifically stated that he had exceeded the limit of cuts.)

A few days later a special congress meeting was held. Gaccione decided to formally resign, rather than appeal the decision. The Executive Board of the Cowl will continue to enforce the need for the resignation of Gaccione, as well as he would like to commend him for delivering his resignation speech with both sincerity and integrity.

As a result of this seeming complex situation, the president of the senior class is now Maryellen Gilroy, and there is a vacancy for the vice president. To date, this decision has not been made as to who will be the new vice president.

PC's Student Congress: Faculty

Let Those Students Go!

Once the opening of Koffler Hall, home of PC's business department, there have been many questions raised by both faculty and students as to its accessibility. The question, "How can I possibly make it from my religion class in Harkins to my management class in Koffler in only ten minutes?" is commonplace among PC students.

Although this seems at first glance like a minor concern, the problem of a travel time of ten minutes between classes, especially in the case of Koffler Hall, has caused much inconvenience to both students and faculty. Students frequently arrive late to class and are irritating and disturbing to the professor, the students, and the flow of the classroom material.

While the Editorial Board of the Cowl feels that ten minutes is sufficient time in which to change classes, we also have become aware that many faculty members have been holding their classes later than the designated dismissal time.

Therefore, the Cowl Editorial Board would like to urge all faculty members to adhere to the dismissal rules, and end classes on time. Compliance with this suggestion will allow students to arrive at their next class on time, whether it be in Koffler or Aller- lus Magnus.

From the editor's desk...

Here at Providence College we are blessed with many talented students. These students can be found in the classroom, the theatre, the gym, or wherever else their abilities take them. However, to be totally successful, they need the support of their fellow students. "Friars." Making the Dean's List, winning the big crowd, or putting on a great performance is much more meaningful when people take notice.

This weekend, Harkins Hall auditorium, the Theatre Arts Department is putting on another fine production. It's a new, lively musical entitled "Working," which deals with the pride of American laborers. Not only is it great entertainment, but it's also a great value at only $1.50 per ticket with your PCID.

Another way to support your fellow "Friars" is by buying season tickets to BOTH hockey and basketball home games. This year the combined ticket price is only $10. This means all the thrills of Big East basketball and ECAC hockey can be yours for about 50 cents per game.

Remember that PC's best fans are its own students. With our support we can make "Friars" the best name around.
Dear Editor:

I am writing this letter at the residence desk of the residences of East Village where I am living. I have decided to submit this letter concerning my recent experience with the security force.

The next thing he told me was that he would have to take the student to the police station. Eventually, the security force believed that the student had acted promptly. I called the Providence Police Department. The procedure used by the security force is very questionable. Are there grounds for such a situation? Who are the students appearing in front of in view of these situations?

With such a problem still existing, our security forces, how are we to get help? I feel it is time for the security force to start assuming their responsibilities. After all, that is what they are getting paid for.

I apologize to the students working for the security force. Obviously this is not their fault.

The students who are dealing with such situations are those paid "security officers".

Recently a friend visited from Boston. We became coincidentialists and got Big Alice's to the test. And off we went. We were greeted and waited on by one of the proprietors, Charles Cox. We were pleasantly surprised at how

Musical “Working” Opens Theatre Season Brilliantly

By Mitch Vogel

Working: It’s a great experience. You should try it sometime. It’s also one of the best musicals that the Providence College Theatre has staged, and one that will be performed again this weekend. Under the direction of John Garriott, the play transforms itself from a production that barely made it to Broadway to one that comes alive in Harkins Auditorium.

The play is about the working people of the world, and about people from every profession—from housewives tohookers. And while the musical is a genre of fantasy, this one deals very much with the “real world”, a world that deals with the dreams and disappointments of the “common man.” To quote from the program would be more effective in describing the basis for the dialogue of the play: “The characters of Working are non-fictional characters. Their names have been changed but their words have not. Even in the case of song lyrics, the writers have tried to remain as faithful as possible to the character’s original words.”

Patricia Hogan and Fr. Haller make Stephen Schwartz shine with their obvious talent of being able to transform music and dance into ambition and lost dreams, turning little jobs into important ones, and finally providing support and inspiration so that these workers become proud of the work that they do. And in light of that, I too have something to point to—my article. (You’ll have to see the play to understand the last sentence.)

This play that opened the Providence College Theatre season began amidst the cheers of a satisfied audience. The entire weekend was characterized by overall enthusiasm with a “job well done” and Harkins Auditorium could not complain of a lack of attendance. The great staging, timely lighting, and well-balanced sound are hand in hand with a commendable musical performance in this real-to-life drama of real-to-life people.

The play will be running again this weekend. Friday through Sunday. Curtain time is 8:00 P.M. in Harkins Auditorium. If you haven’t seen the play yet (even if you have) take advantage of it the second time around. You can’t beat the price given the quality of this play that the actors have “worked” so hard to produce.

The vegetable is growing in Europe

By S.J.J. (“Veget”) McGuire

The vegetable, like a good number of the Class of '82, and a number in each class before us, I have chosen to spend one of my four years of undergraduate study away from home. I can understand both the appeal and the anti-appeal of PC rugby players and a few very competent language teachers who have opened the doors to a year of study in Europe for me. By more coincidence than destiny, the son of an Irish-French father and a Polish-English mother happens to speak Portuguese as a second language. I am today a junior in the Faculty of Letters of the University of Coimbra, in Coimbra, Portugal.

Sixty days ago a TWA with a load of sleepy passengers touched down in Lisbon at 6:25 a.m. in the morning. Neither the city nor the airport was crowded at this hour (can that only be a bike-riding Colonel DelCorso or a group of rugby players “beginning” to celebrate a victory the day before? I could appreciate), and I stumbled out into the capital city hoping that someone might - know what “Coimbra” was, and, if I were very lucky, where it could be found. On the map it was close to Lisbon but “close” is a word that describes the distance between Raymond Hall and the Physic Memorial Library, and that was nearly always too far for me to walk! I looked for a taxi, but no ride was to be had. I hitched a suitcase that seemed a lot like my own to the taxi-cab driver off the road and “uncomfortably” involved? Yes.

First impressions are indeed deep and I do not think I will ever forget the slice of shoe images that flashed in front of my wide open eyes as I travelled within Lisbon, between Lisbon and Coimbra, and within Coimbra by cab, train, and foot. It made any shorter by the Siwyshus-like task of hugging all my luggage in the taxi (after which once dotted the globe with colonies and created massive cathedrals with such gold and silver that the rest of Europe looked with wonder and awe, today cringes as the world and its histrionic mainstays it with the classification as a “third world” nation. Is it any wonder that such a people feel somehow robbed, somehow cheated? Is it any wonder that such a people feel somehow robbed, somehow cheated? Is it any wonder that such a people feel somehow robbed, somehow cheated?

On the 125 “Monumental Stepe” (a name quite appropriate to the effort I need to get up them daily) I let my feet feel out after another left wing leap: “Vota APV!” (Alianca Povo Unido or Unitad People’s Alliance). Not far away a building is splashed with an ominous sign: a red flag with a “psi”, the fork shaped letter I missed to indicate psychol "psi", the fork shaped letter I missed to indicate psychol “psi”, the fork shaped letter I missed to indicate psychol “psi”, the fork shaped letter I missed to indicate psychol “psi”, the fork shaped letter I missed to indicate psychol “psi”, the fork shaped letter I missed to indicate psychol the letter “Psi” was so painted underneath, may contain two “Psi” but spell out not how what man thinks today but how he thought yesterday. The abbreviation for the “Partido Popular Monarquico”, (the party which supports the return of the monarchy to Portugal). Unlike the slightly removed. Slightly uneasy, very apathetic the youth of Portugal, the youth of Portugal, the youth of Portugal, the youth of Portugal, the youth of Portugal, the youth of Portugal, the youth of Portugal, the youth of Portugal, the youth of Portugal, the youth of Portugal, the youth of Portugal.

Henry Paul Rocks Alumni Gym

The Henry Paul Band, one of the newer southern rock bands to emerge upon the rock and roll scene, performed before an enthusiastic yet sparse crowd in Alumni Hall on Friday, October 8. As a frequent "warm-up" for coming albums Gray Ghost and Feel the Heat, the band transcended this role as "second fiddle" in a dynamic concert that featured a show that infected the audience with a severe case of "southern rock fever." Although they contracted to play for almost four hours, total playing time did not exceed two and one-half hours. The coordinators of the Harvest Ball expressed their dismay at this lack of professionalism on the part of the band.

A special thanks should be extended to the Dillon Club for their efforts and success in making the Harvest Ball an over-all memorable experience. Jane Siviera, Ann-Marie Palumbo, Jean Siviera, David Angel, Lisa Ferrucci, and Tom Piazzak all contributed to help make this event on that in many ways could be compared to a party right out of Fitzgerald's Great Gatsby.

Oktoberfest—1980

Oktoberfest
A Symbol of Unit for PC

By Bill Sullivan

For the past “half dozen or so” years, Providence College has made a tradition out of something that takes an incredible amount of planning, organizing and finances. This tradition, based on the goal of uniting the PC community, is found each fall under the banner of “Oktoberfest.” A German custom, a German name, and an international attendance (of surnames) from the faculty, alumni, and student body created an atmosphere that is diverse, friendly, and even infectious. This year over 2400 people came to enjoy this atmosphere, and to engage in mingling with old classmates, talking with friends, and dancing to the sounds of either the “Rhode Island Bavarians” or the “Mertz Brothers.”

The Slavin Center was comfortably crowded on the evening of Friday, October 11, a testimony to the efficient manner and effective advertising that Fr. McPhail and his staff display each year in organizing and “pulling off” this extravaganza. Fr. McPhail believes that the crowd, while large, was not excessive, but rather was the maximum number that he felt could be admitted without destroying the “congenial and comfortable” atmosphere. A large number of Alumni returned for the Oktoberfest and many burned the “midnight oil” (a conservative estimate to say the least) visiting old classmates and friends in off-campus apartments, and indeed constituted a significant percentage of this “congenial” crowd.

Yet the night was made great by people of every age group—from students to “old timers.” The difference in ages was accompanied with the equally diverse types of food and beverages present. Yet perhaps the most interesting dichotomy was the music. Upstairs in ‘64 Hall one need not have been in a Munich Tavern or Hamburg Inn to appreciate the native costumes and native sounds coming from a band that lived the part of a real German folk group. Polkas and other less well-known variations (and inventions) soon became the fare for anyone venturing out onto the dance floor. Alumni Hall catered to the less adventuristic spirits with its usual fare of rock-and-roll music provided by the Mertz Brothers.

Yet even without any music Oktoberfest would still retain its main purpose—to unite the PC community. Fr. McPhail commented that it provides “an opportunity for upper-class students to meet with recent graduates and also serves as a home-coming for recent (and not so recent) Alumni.” He also feels that the “basic format is good,” but that positive and practical suggestions will be considered if ways can be found to make it even better than before.

It has often been said that variety is the spice of life. Oktoberfest happens to be the response that PC has exhibited toward that end, it is the means by which variety is somehow transformed into the savory flavor of a united PC family.

Providence's Majestic Theatre: Home of Trinity Square

Familiar to the theatre-going public is the Majestic Theatre nestled at 201 Washington Street in Providence. The extravagant building is the result of Alton and Burton Emery. The two brothers dreamed of building the biggest and most lavish theatre in Providence. On April 9, 1917 their dream came true when the brilliant Majestic Theatre was opened to the public.

Since then, the Majestic Theatre has come full circle through the ages and has proven to be a versatile institution from generation to generation. In the early 1900's, the colorful liveliness of vaudeville adorned the Majestic's stage. During the next half century the Majestic Theatre mirrored the movie-making era of America.

With the 1930's and the sound revolution, the Majestic Theatre continued to prove its versatility and became the place to see and hear the increasingly popular 20th Century Fox and Warner Brothers "talkies."

The late 1940's, however, greeted a turn towards television and the decline of great movie houses and consequently Providence's Majestic Theatre underwent full scale remodeling.

Today the theatre sports a horizontal division which provides for two individual and distinct performing areas. The downstairs theatre accommodates an audience of 297 and the upper theatre provides for an audience of 900.

The Majestic Theatre with its facade of Italianate white terra cotta, its glasswork canopies, and its impressive interior of early French influence retains a taste of the glorious past.

Inside The Arcade: Class Comes to Downtown

By Ronnie White

By now most of you have heard about the Arcade but have you been there yet? If not, let me entice you.

First, do you like eating? Of course, everyone loves to eat. Do you like shopping? Well, maybe not but at The Arcade it's fun!

There are three wonderful levels to explore with all sorts of shops to browse through.

The Arcade itself embodies the detail and charm of past craftsmanship as well as the crisp clean lines of design today. Passing through the "glass canopies" on either end of the building you immediately sense the natural light that filters through the skylights. On the first level your taste buds get a big treat: armed with about $6 you can taste foods from around the world. There's Baby Watson where you can enjoy the famous cheesecake----or flavors); or the delicious strollers in about E100 Douglas Avenue, Providence.

The Arcade after its $5 million dollar "face-lift".

Sweets for a great selection of chocolate, jelly beans and fresh salads-----in both cases you choose the fixings. If you do dizzy sweets, check out Cardoos for a great selection of chocolate, jelly beans and cookies. For that special person in your life spell out how you feel in big chocolate letters--LOVE.

From Panfanjeaux, the students take a day trip to the pre-historic caves of Lascaux. Here after an 800 yard underground walk, lit by flashlights, you come upon larger "rooms." On the walls here are drawings, the same drawings as in bison and other animals done 12,000 years ago.

Monte Carlo, Monaco is the shortest, yet most anxiously awaited stop of the trip. The long, steep winding road up to this tiny country offers a magnificent view of the lavish resorts of this area of the Riviera: "playground of the rich and famous."

The Hotel Metropole provides accommodations and a special fare for the group while in Monte Carlo. Here the group is treated to food so sumptuous that bellhops serve by bellhops in crisp white uniforms.

A short walk will bring you to the casino, where if you are 21 or older may try their hand at the slot machines, dice or card games. Many of the students even left with a few extra "francs" in their pockets!

The following day though, those "francs" might be changed to "lire." The Italian border is a short half hour ride from the Monte Carlo Casino.

Here the landscape changes from the handsome hotels and buildings to terraced vineyards and modest farmhouses.

The town of Pietrasanta, the next stop on the "Autostreda," the group soon arrives at Pietrasanta. After a sigh of relief and a feeling of "we finally made it," you are warmly welcomed by the Bigi family who run the Pensione La Campana. This will be your "home" for the month of July.

Cambiaso {* "stitching" of the studio*} which is a short walk from the Pensione is here where Domingo, the main character, Mclynn, O.P., creator of the Pietrasanta Program, lived and worked. You may know Fr. Mclynn, O.P., who works on the St. Martin and St. Dominic which are here on the FC campus. St. Dominic is on a hill in front of the president's house and St. Martin is set between Martin Hall and the library.

The center of the Italian Riviera are a short bus or hike ride from the studio. From San Marino de Pietrasanta, the group may visit the basilicas of San Giovanni in Marziale and Santa Marinella for the mountain and you are actually walking in the clouds. Gingersnap, making your way along the rocky path bordered by endemists and green grass on one side and fresh snow on the other, the climbers reach the crest whereupon they become witness to some of the most awe-some scenery in the world.

As far as the eye can see, there are huge craggy white-capped mountains. To the right is the Austrian range and in the distance is Switzerland. Later that night, you and the rest of the group may go to the Hofbrausbrau for some German beer and a "chore". The next night is the time for saying goodbyes to the new friends that you have made on the trip.

From Munich, it's back to Frankfurt where the plane then back home. When you step off the plane, you are so tired you may case you may be, you are met with many mixed emotions. Yes, you are so happy to be back home, yet there is an almost indescribably yearning to be back in Canterbury or Paris or Florence. Your thoughts turn immediately to your future trip "as soon as I save the money again..."

Field Hockey Squad Leaves Holy Cross Out in the Cold

The Providence College Field Hockey team continued their winning ways by upsetting Holy Cross last Wednesday and Bentley yesterday afternoon at Had­ dricken field. With five games remaining, of which three are at PC, the team record stands at 8-2. They continue to improve both offensively and defensively and coach Kate Denning is optimistic about the remaining games.

In the win over Holy Cross last Wednesday, the Lady Friars combined strong teamwork and excellent defense as the girls came up with a 2-1 overtime victory over the Crusaders. At the end of regulation time, the two teams were in a deadlock with Holy Cross goal being scored by Captain Linda Wage. In the overtime period, Jackie Glaska sparked a Friar attack with the winning goal. Rita Frazer had the assist. The defense played superbly, led by the ever present Rita Fraser. Eight saves. The Lady Friars are a well-rounded team, looking for­ward to a strong finish.

The Falcons of Bentley traveled to Providence yester­day, only to find themselves vic­tims of the same strong team­work that left Holy Cross in de­feat. Linda Wage was once again excellent, scoring twice. The defense continued to play superbly, led by the ever present Rita Fraser. Eight saves. The Lady Friars are a well-rounded team, looking for­ward to a strong finish.

Coach Denning and her girls look forward to a big game tomorrow against the University of New Hampshire, at: UNH. Then, on Saturday, they travel up to face the girls from Chestnut Hill. After that, all of the black and white’s games are at home.

Congratulations to
Ann Manchester ’75

Lady Booters Beat Salve Regina, 4-0

The PC Lady Booters upped their record to 3-0 last Saturday when they beat Salve Regina by a score of 4-0.

The Lady Booters encountered some problems early in the first half as the Salve defense was very well organized. Hallie Haberman, goalkeeper for the Lady Booters, was not needed and the Salve forwards were not able to get a shot on goal.

In the second half, Ray Treacy, the Lady Booters' center forward, scored Salve's first goal on a penalty kick. This was enough with ten minutes left in the game.

The Lady Booters' goalkeeper, Hillary Brown, was not needed and the Lady Booters' defense was solid throughout the game.

Lady Netters Too Much for UConn

The Lady Friars tennis team extended its winning streak to 11-0 this season, and made its连续 winning streak of 15 the longest streak in women's athletics history at Providence College. This accomplishment is all the more impressive as it comes via an excitant upset over perennial powerhouse University of Connecticut. The net women played collectively their best match of the season in the featuring the Huskies in a squeaker. Nancy Curtin played almost flawless tennis in dominating highly respected Tracy Bertman in the number one singles position, and Patty Carver also made her opponent look easy as she won in straight sets, 6-4, 6-2.

Lisa Tutunjian and Linda Duchaine made two exciting comebacks as they each dropped the first sets 6-4, but then rallied to win the second and third sets 6-2, 6-3. The final heroes of the day went to the solid first doubles team of Ann Marie Mann and Diane DeSaulniers, who outlasted the UConn women to clinch the third set and the match. It was a thrilling victory for the whole team and sent them into the BLAIV state tournament with a record of 9-0. The R.I. women demonstrated as well as expected coming in second to a strong Brown team. Individualss Nancy Curtin moved to the semi-finals before losing to Harvard's eventual winner, Ellie Freeman.

Bog Holds Committee Evaluations

After working together for six weeks, the Board of Governors received the final reports of the committee evaluations and summarized basic problems to be resolved. The current Board unanimously approved the committee communications. Additional recommendations and recommendations for meetings were made aside from the general meeting.

Another hurdle for Bog members is the prohibition of alcohol for those working at Bog functions. The BOG is the only organization that is exempt from hiring bartenders. Rev. J. Stuart McPhail, O.P. director of student services, addressed the Board and expressed his concern of Bog respectability and credibility. Father McPhail explained "if you go wrong at a mixer, workers need to respond quickly and intelligently. "Students highly regard their activities."

The BOG is responsible for almost all major PC social functions.

Overall, BOG has had few problems organizing with two things: the BOG and the BOG. The BOG has maintained low prices for student tickets.

The Board approved a proposal by the Dillon Club for use of '64 Hall to sponsor a Ground Round Night featuring Bill Gannon on November 20.

This Saturday, October 25, the BOG will present the first "Weekend Coffeehouse" in '64 Hall. Mike Joyce reported the "Henry-Cluff" concert was well attended and a good success despite a financial loss. Nick Gianquinto announced the "Molly Hatchet" concert will be on Saturday, October 26 with the "Winterland Gym. About 250 tickets have been sold.

Approximately 300 people attended the movie presentation "The". This Sunday, the film committee will present "The Jerk." Sue Trainor and Cheryl Carmamula reported the BOG- sponsored nightly schedule for performances is in the printing stage.

Don Connor reported that last Saturday's "Student Entertainment Night" at the Last Resort was a success. This Friday, October 30, the Last Resort will host Tom Stankas. Tickets will go on sale Thursday at noon.

The Advisory Board approved the BOG's request to hold the "Thursday Night" event in the college Cross-Country Center Ice Machine.

Nancy Schiano reported that 14 tickets have been sold for the "The Big Leav-

Golfers Swingin' Capture Big East

Up until this point in time, the sports pages have been filled with the doings of teams such as the football, soccer and cross-country. But a talented group of golfers right here at PC have given sportswriters their share of ink this fall.

Unlike the Saturday afternoon-provided that a football game attracts, a golf match gets few, if any, spectators. After Coach Joe Piro's and his team captured the Big-East Golf title, it's about time sportswriters got some recognition.

Friars on Winning Kick... Squash U. Mass, Tie B.C.

To say that last Wednesday's game between the Providence College Friars and the Minutemen of the University of Massachusetts was a game between two teams having trouble putting the ball in the net would be a great understatement. Both PC and UMass entered the game with records hovering around the .500 mark. When the contest was over, it was the Friars who had found a temporary cure to their lack of scoring disease, as the Friars pleased the big crowd.

UMass had not been scoring too much regularity either. The Minutemen traveled to Providence sporting a 4-6-1 record; all six of those losses were set up by Martin Hayes, who slipped to 625. Reardon, who was 10th last year, announced a year ago, would have broken par regularly, and it was good to have Tom Biga returning to form.

As with all PC-BC sporting events, this was a friendly fire. The boys from Chestnut Hill came into the game with enough room for an impressive fourth place in the tournament. The boys from Smith Hill, however, did not seem phased at all by the doings of teams such as the Providence College and University of Connecticut.

The Eagles came out and controlled the first half of the game, but did not really have an abundance of good scoring opportunities. Boston College controlled the midfield area, Providence, against the wind, seemed unable to make even the short pass. Boston College forwards and midfielders were beating the Friars to the ball. Despite all of these observations, the Providence College backliners, Peter Chenette, from anywhere, were protecting their goalkeeper, Peter Chenette, from any real danger.

On the weekend of October 2 and 3, at the Agawam Hunt Country Club, Providence College captured the Big-East Golf title, defeating runner-up St. John's by 18 shots. John's had defeated Providence by one stroke a year earlier. PC senior Peter Chenette played spectacular golf, as he captured the individual trophy. Reardon fired a 78 on the first day and a 73 on the second day of play. Teammate Mike McGlasson placed second, just two shots behind Reardon.

On the opening few minutes of the half, it was BC who seemed the better team. Boston College controlled the midfield area, Providence, against the wind, seemed unable to make even the short pass. Lady Harriers Primed for New England Meet

The Lady Friars Cross Country team started off the season with a strong win over four other teams at Fitchburg State with Junior co-captain Sue Ratcliffe setting a new course record with her first place finish.

Next, the cross country team moved on to place second at Boston College at Franklin Park. Standouts for PC were Julie McCroie, Sue Ratcliffe, Oona Mulligan and Sheila Barry. The Friars were again strong at the Rhode Island State championships at Bryant, placing second to URI. Freshman Dianne Swick was the first PC runner across the wire, finishing third. Providence College proved strong at their last meet before the New England's. Nine teams met at Holy Cross where the Friars placed first, followed by Holy Cross and Southern Connecticut State. Outstanding in their finishes were Julie McCroie, Dianne Swick, Sue Ratcliffe, Oona Mulligan and Sheila Barry. PC stole the first four places with Barry taking sixth.

Next week, the Lady Friars travel to the New England's at Franklin Park in Boston. With their fine record, a good showing by the girls is expected.

In every Friar football game the scoreboard could either be the offense or the defense that dominates the action. Saturday at the Agawam Hunt Country Club, Providence and Massachusetts were a game between the Providence College and University of Massachusetts. The Friars outscored the Minutemen 27-6 in a game that was won on the shoulders of a solid defense.

During the opening few minutes of the half, it was BC who seemed the better team. Boston College controlled the midfield area, Providence, against the wind, seemed unable to make even the short pass. Boston College forwards and midfielders were beating the Friars to the ball. Despite all of these observations, the Providence College backliners, Peter Chenette, from anywhere, were protecting their goalkeeper, Peter Chenette, from any real danger.

Lady Harriers Primed for New England Meet

The Lady Friars Cross Country team started off the season with a strong win over four other teams at Fitchburg State with Junior co-captain Sue Ratcliffe setting a new course record with her first place finish.

Next, the cross country team moved on to place second at Boston College at Franklin Park. Standouts for PC were Julie McCroie, Sue Ratcliffe, Oona Mulligan and Sheila Barry. The Friars were again strong at the Rhode Island State championships at Bryant, placing second to URI. Freshman Dianne Swick was the first PC runner across the wire, finishing third. Providence College proved strong at their last meet before the New England's. Nine teams met at Holy Cross where the Friars placed first, followed by Holy Cross and Southern Connecticut State. Outstanding in their finishes were Julie McCroie, Dianne Swick, Sue Ratcliffe, Oona Mulligan and Sheila Barry. PC stole the first four places with Barry taking sixth.

Next week, the Lady Friars travel to the New England's at Franklin Park in Boston. With their fine record, a good showing by the girls is expected.
