Winning Attitude is the Key

By Michael Castorino

New coach Rick Barnes hopes to stabilize the roller-coaster ride the Friars have been on the past couple years.

After reaching the pinnacle of college hoops, Providence fell straight down. In the 1986-87 season, Providence was 25-9 under Rick Pitino. In the 1987-88 season the Friars were 11-17 under Gordon Chiesa. This was the biggest nosedive in college hoops last year.

The Friars became a disgruntled group. This was typified by both Marty Conlon and Cal Foster leaving the team. The players looked as if they were on punishment when on the court. The season ends, and so does Gordie Chiesa's coaching career at Providence.

Enter Rick Barnes. Fresh off a twenty-win season at George Mason University. The smooth talking man from down south seems to ease the unsettled team. Look in the distance, can you see the phoenix rising up, a winning attitude is reborn.

This attitude is more powerful than people think. Last year's Friars had streaks of brilliance, with a winning attitude, these streaks could strike often. They must avoid blowouts on the road.

Setting realistic goals, the Friars should get an NIT bid because of their easy non-conference schedule. Here is a rundown of key returners.

GUARDS

Eric Murdock - named to the Big East all-freshman team last year, Murdock looks to improve on last year's performance. Coach Barnes: "He is a highly competitive player who wants to be even better." (10.7 ppg, 3.8 apg)

Carlton Screen - Screen has much to prove this season. After a sterling freshman season, Screen was not given ample playing time last year. Coach Barnes: "He is the catalyst for the team and someone who has to create scoring opportunities for everyone. He is a hungry player who wants to prove himself in the league." (6.6 ppg)

Chris Watts - now that the freshman year is over, Watts should develop into a solid scorer. Watts has great range. Coach Barnes: "Chris has worked very hard on his strength and individual skills. He has put himself in a position to be a big factor for us." Quinton Burton - A prop 48 casualty his freshman year, Burton had flashes but didn't get totally on track. He should return back to form and have a good year. Burton is a thoroughbred. Coach Barnes: "Quinton just got his feet wet last year and we expect a lot of continued improvement from him."

FORWARDS

Cal Foster - Foster must learn to channel his athletic ability in the right direction. He will be needed with the Friars' thin front line. Coach Barnes: "We might call on him to play in the post at times and he has to be ready to make adjustments."

Darryl Wright - Last year Wright's play was spotty. A lot was expected after his fantastic play in the 1986-87 NCAA tournament. This is Wright's last chance to show he is a top player. Coach Barnes: "This is the year that Darryl Wright has to lay it on the line. He wants to have great influence of the team in his last go-around." Marques Bragg and Marvin Sadler - These two freshmen will have to make contributions this year if the Friars are to be successful.

Setting realistic goals, the Friars should get in NIT

PIVOT MEN

Marty Conlon - Conlon brings back his 13.2 ppg average. He toured Europe this summer with the Big East All-Stars and played very well. Marty has bulked up and should be the big gun for the Friars. Coach Barnes: "We are excited about Marty coming back to the team...He's a very good Big East forward."

Abdul Shamsid-Deen - Shamsid-Deen is a raw talent that must develop this year. If his individual skills improve, so will the Friars. He is an important member of the team. Coach Barnes: "He has become more intent and works hard to develop his individual skills. He has to rebound and score for us."

by Kerry Anne Ryan

New Friar Basketball coach Rick Barnes is sort of like the substitute teacher you had in high school, the polite UPS man who delivered a package to your door, or the mild mannered man you meet in the lumberyard.

In fact, before beginning his illustrious career as a basketball coach, Barnes dabbled in all of these odd jobs.

Hard work, perseverance, commitment; plus constant support from his wife Candy; these are the ingredients that has made Rick Barnes what he is today—the newest coach of the Providence College Friars.

After graduating from college, Barnes decided that he wanted to stay with the game of basketball.

"I play and have always been involved with athletics," he said during a break in his busy schedule. "After college I really wanted to stay involved with the game in some way."

"Staying involved" meant working weird hours in off-beat jobs in order to get in some coaching time. At one point, Barnes "worked for UPS from 4 a.m. to 8 a.m., substituted from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. and coached at a local academy in my home town," he said.

Barnes was soon hired as the volunteer assistant at Davidson University and his erratic working hours continued.

"I worked from 6 a.m. to 12 noon at the lumberyard, and then coached at Davidson. I was basically in charge of the summer camp and study halls."

Barnes slowly moved up within the coaching ranks and was eventually hired as the part-time assistant at Davidson. "I was eventually hired as the part-time assistant at Davidson," which was actually full-time with part-time pay," he said jokingly. Barnes finally landed a legitimate full-time job when he moved to George Mason University, where he got involved in a "work from the ground floor up" operation under head coach Joe Harrington.

"It was the best experience," said Barnes. "Joe let me work and get involved with all aspects of the program."

But soon, bigger and better endeavors were beckoning Barnes. He coached a year at the University of Alabama, and then a year at Ohio State under former Boston College coach Gary Williams. When the head coaching job at George Mason opened up, he happily returned.

KERRY-ANNE RYAN

"I really thought I'd be there for a long time," he said. "It was beyond my wildest imagination that after one year I would get this kind of opportunity."

The "opportunity" was the chance to coach the PC Friars, a Cinderella type Big East team who had a heralded past, made it to the Final Four in 1987 under now NY Knicks coach Rick Pitino, but then fell below lofty expectations in the 1988 season under former coach Gordon Chiesia.

Barnes is being heralded as a breath of fresh air to the Providence basketball program and is very enthusiastic about the upcoming season. He says that he does not see coaching as a "job", but rather enjoys it immensely.

"My staff and I have a good chemistry," he said. "If I haven't done anything else right, at least I hired a great staff who is committed to the program, is self motivated and self disciplined."

A typical day for Barnes is hectic. He's up at 5:15 a.m. and drives from his East Greenwich home to PC in time for the 6:45 a.m. practice. After, he maps out his afternoon practice with his staff. Then, it's off to practice for several hours in the afternoon and hopefully he's homework bound for dinner with his wife and two children, four year old Nicholas and nine month old Carly. At night, Barnes burns the telephone lines, making key calls to potential recruits and their families and several coaches.

Barnes claims that he doesn't know the meaning of "pressure" because for him, "pressure is what you put on yourself. Part of my job is to deal with people. I want to win and get the job done. I don't think about not getting it done."

Barnes philosophy of a good basketball coach boils down into three principles: 1. Recruitment, 2. Great communication and great motivation and 3. The technical part of X's and O's.

"The recruitment is tough," he admits. "Probably the easiest part of the game is the game itself."

During the season, Barnes will repeatedly face off with more established coaches, such as St. John's Lou Carnesecca and Georgetown's John Thompson. But Barnes isn't worried.

"You just have to be yourself," he said. "Be yourself and believe in what you're doing."

Barnes cites the people he's worked under as the major influences on his career, and stresses the learning aspect of coaching as key.

"The smartest and wisest coach does a good job and learns as much as he can," he said. "If you ever stop learning, you're finished. If I don't know the answer, I'm not afraid to ask any questions."

And Barnes does ask questions. "If I see a team playing on TV and I see something I like, I'm not afraid to call the coach and ask him about it."

Barnes' short time at PC has been a pleasant one and he thinks that the students here are the most enthusiastic he's seen.

"I don't know if I've seen any other students as fired up and enthusiastic as the ones at 'Midnight Madness,'" he said. "I've been at a lot of schools. I like the quaintness and closeness of the campus. The students are pretty into what they're doing and they're conscious of their work."

As a coach, Barnes puts his emphasis on education and time management, organization and doing the best you can do. And Barnes is going to do the best he can, especially in front of the fans, who are looking for a winning season.

"I like the fact that people are really into it," he said. "They live and die with every shot. It's a double edged sword. There are going to be some people who are going to doubt me. But it's a part of coaching!"

Overall, Barnes thinks that PC is filled with "really great people" and everyone has shown great interest in the program. He's ready for the season to begin.

"The worst thing that can happen to us is to look back in March and say that we could've done better," he said. "We're going to surprise a lot of people."

MEN'S BASKETBALL

HERE WE GO AGAIN: PRESEASON TOP 20

By Michael Castorino

Here we go again! The college hoop season is about to get underway with all the thrills, chills, spills and thrills.

Louisville is in the top position, but not by a consensus margin. There will be many changes in the national polls as the season goes on.

The Big Ten and the Big East look like the top two conferences in the land. The Big East enjoyed a superb recruiting year by pulling in three of the top five freshmen in the country.

The University of Connecticut is my surprise team of the year. Ranked seventh in the MC rankings, the Huskies will become the ninth and final team to receive a bid to the NCAA tournament in the eights. Watch for Cliff Robinson to teach the younger centers in the conference a valuable lesson.

Finally, I choose Mark Macon of Temple as my player of the year. His amazing athletic ability along with a superior court sense makes Macon my choice. Watch for Alonzo Mourning (Georgetown) and Billy Owens (Syracuse) to become the two top freshmen this year.

1. LOUISVILLE "Never Nervous" Pervis Ellison led his Cardinals to a national championship when he was a freshman. He is now a senior and he could repeat his feat of 1986. LaBradford Smith should blossom into one of the premier guards in the country. The Cards grueling non-league schedule will pay dividends when the tournament rolls around.

2. MICHIGAN Last year Michigan was a year too young, this year they're ready. After rusty first years, Terry Mills and Rumeal Robinson should tear up the Big Ten. With graceful Glenn Rice bringing his 22.1 ppg back, the Wolverines should make a run at not only a league title, but the Final Four too.

3. GEORGETOWN Alonzo, Alonzo, Alonzo. This 6'11" man-child has become one of the most heralded freshmen in recent years. Add names like Charles Smith, Mark Tillmon, Anthony Allen, Jonathan Edwards, Jaren Jackson and a few other Hoyas blue-chippers, you have a potent mix. The last time they failed was held in Seattle, the Hoyas walked away with the title. Don't be surprised if they do it again.

4. NORTH CAROLINA Returning all five starters, the Tar Heels could bring Dean Smith his first National Championship since the Jordan-era. With J.R. Reid and Scott Williams leading the top frontcourt in the land, the Heels should go a long way. If King "Uncle Ben's" Rice can find a jump shot, they could be unstoppable.

5. IOWA The basketball crazy state of Iowa will have something to cheer about this winter. With BJ Armstrong and Roy Marble leading the way, the men in gold and black will win at least twenty games. The addition of a quality middle-man, 6'10" Matt Bullard gives the Hawkeyes a solid shot at the Big Ten title.

6. DUKE Despite the loss of Kevin Strickland and Billy King, the Blue Devils should enjoy another great season. With Danny Ferry and Robert Bricey leading the charge, the well-coached Devils will fight North Carolina again for the ACC title.

7. CONNECTICUT Surprise, Surprise, Surprise, or is it? Return five starters from last year's NIT Championship team; add secret deluxe Chris Smith and John Gwynn and here's a team that will turn some heads (or should I say dunk on some heads). If Cliff Robinson can fit his ego into the Hartford Civic Center, the Huskies will be tough.

8. ILLINOIS This group of greyhounds should run up and down the Big Ten, challenging Michigan and Iowa for the top spot in the conference. Led by Kenny Battle, (15.6 ppg) Lou Hensen may sport the best group of athletes in the country. Watch Marcus Liberts to emerge this year.

9. FLORIDA STATE No, Bobby Bowden isn't the coach and they will not lose to Miami. Led by George McCloud (18.2 ppg), and three other returning starters, the Seminoles will have Tallahassee rocking to basketball style. Watch Tat Hunter to humiliate opponents with his thunder dunks.

10. OKLAHOMA Recovering from the upset handed to Oklahoma last year in Kansas City is priority one. Watch for Steve King to lead the country in scoring while Mookie Blylock should lead in steals. Coach Tubbs has a fountain of talent in Norman.

11. SYRACUSE Say goodbye to Rony Seikaly. That's good news for the Big East, right? Maybe not. Freshman Billy Owens may be one of the best recruits ever to don the orange. With Sherman Douglas and Derrick Coleman returning, Coach Boheim will enjoy another fruitful season.

12. UNLV Despite the fact that the Runnin' Rebs lost four starters, they will still field a powerful team. Stacey Augmon is the only returning starter but Tark the Shark always has talent. Watch for UNLV to win the Big West without much trouble.

13. MISSOURI The Tigers will not miss Derrick Chievous as much as one might think. Without Mr. Showboat, Missouri may have a chemistry that has so far eluded this team. Doug Smith (6'10") will have to become the leader of this crew. If I said the Tigers would be knocked out in the first round of the NCAA tournament, would I be redundant?

14. GEORGIA TECH Tom Hammond's is a powerhouse down low, if he can focus his energies in the right direction, watch out for Tech. The Yellow Jackets have three juco players coming into help soothe the loss of Duane Ferrell.

15. TENNESSEE Dyron Nix thought that he was top player in the SEC last year. Unfortunately for Nix, the voters felt Wil Perdue was. This year Nix will leave no doubt while the Vols take the weakened SEC.

16. ARIZONA Sean Elliott should make a run at player of the year in route to leading his Wildcats to a PAC-10 title. There is no way they can repeat last year's 32-2 season, but the sun will shine in Arizona. 17. FLORIDA If Dwayne "I'm the tallest punk in America" Schmitz and Livingston Chatman decide to play the second half of the season, the Gators will be tough. The home-grown talent coach Norm Sloan has brought in should pay off at tournament time.

18. WEST VIRGINIA It's time for a change in the Atlantic 10. Chris Brooks and Darryl Prue must take their games to the next level to dethrone Temple. After a solid freshman year, watch for Brooks to become the Major Harris of the hoops team.

19. CLEMSON If Marion Cash can give the Tigers a perimeter game and Elden Campbell continues his sterling play, Clemson will make the ACC a four-team race.

20. STANFORD It was 1942 when Stanford won the NCAA Tournament, the Cardinals have not participated in the event since. Stanford Todd Lichti and his other chums should end this streak.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

THE COWL'S FEATURESS BIG EAST PREDICTIONS

Michael Costarino

1. Georgetown—Alonzo Mourning is just one of the ridiculously talented Hoyas. This team controls their own destiny.

2. Syracuse—Put Derrick Coleman and Sherman Douglas together with a prime-time recruiting class and you come up with humiliated opponents.

3. Connecticut—The Huskies have made the move to big time. Cliff Robinson and Phil Gamble should lead the NIT champions to the BIG tournament.

4. Villanova—The backcourt duo of Doug West and Kenny Wilson will help keep Coach Massimino's blood pressure down. Tom Gries must continue improving.

5. St. Johns—Despite losing their backcourt, a rich crop of New York City talent should keep the Redmen respectable. A team of the future.

6. Pittsburgh—Jason Matthews and Rod Brookins could lead the graduation depleted Panthers to the tournament.

7. Boston College—Dana Barros could be the BIG EAST player of the year. New players will help the Eagles soar to new heights.

8. Providence—Please forgive me, the Friars have to prove themselves all over again. I hope they prove me wrong.

9. Seton Hall—The Pirates escape from the BIG EAST basement will be short lived. The loss of Bryant, Major and Salley leaves a hole too big to fill.

by Renee Duff

1. Georgetown—When you return six of your top eight scorers, combine that with one of the nations strongest recruiting classes and John Thompson, how can you go wrong?

2. Connecticut—Returning all - of their starting lineup along with Cliff Robinson at center, this could be the team to beat come tournament time.

3. Villanova—Whether the Wildcats can "find a way" this season and try for the NCAA again will depend on Gries, Wilson and West's performances.

4. Syracuse—The most uncertain spot is center, and that's where I'll put them. With Seikaly's departure, questions of who'll play there and where else have been flying.

5. Seton Hall—Though hit hard by graduation, P.J. Carlesimo may be able to live up to last year's praise and finish in a decent position.

6. Pittsburgh—Don't expect the impossible from a team the lost names like Smith, Lane and Gore, but they definitely aren't heading for a disaster.

7. Boston College—With Barros returning, he could be the key to a new trend in B.C. basketball.

8. Providence—Anything can happen here—we'll just have to have faith and wait & see.

9. St. Johns—Looking to rebuild the backcourt with a group of freshmen may give this team some problems when it comes down to the wire.

By John Lipuma

1. Syracuse—The Orangemen will rise to the BIG EAST title for two reasons: One, Derrick Coleman is about to erupt for a Walter Burre type of year. Two, Sherman Douglas will vent out his anger from being cut by John Thompson for the Olympic team by lighting it up every game he plays.

2. Georgetown—Talent. 6-10 freshman Alonzo Mourning is already being compared to Pat Ewing, but the Hoyas inconsistent shooting will plague them.

3. Villanova—Nova isn't flashy, but they play good, solid basketball. The senior backcourt of West and Wilson and a beefed up 7-2 Tom Gries puts the Wildcats just a step below Syracuse and Georgetown.

4. Connecticut—They return all five starters and they won the NIT last year. Could make the NCAA tourney in '89.

5. Providence—A change in attitude is more powerful than most people believe. After the Friars dismal season last year, they can only go one way; up. Rick Barnes has made basketball fun again for the 88-89 Friars, and their play will show it. If PC gets off to a fast start, watch out. A winning attitude is contagious.

6. Seton Hall—This is a gift. The Pirates will crumble without Mark Bryant—they are without his scoring, leadership and clutch play.

7. Pittsburgh—No team can lose a Lane, Smith and Gore and rebound the next season. Sean Miller is solid, but he's not a franchise.

8. St. Johns—Tough times lay ahead for Louie. The loss of Harvey and Porter has taken the wind right out of his sails.

9. Boston College—BC and Dana Barros are one in the same. He can't do it alone.

By Steve Foster

1) Georgetown—Alonzo Mourning could be the single biggest impact player in the Big East since Patrick Ewing. He'll bring the inside game back to the Hoyas. Also, John Thompson no longer has the USA team on the back of his mind. G-Town will be a national title contender.

2) Syracuse—The Big East's second best freshman will come in the form of Phil Owens. He can play anywhere on the court. Combined with Douglas and Coleman the Orangemen could be a force. However, Jimmy Boehem will never win the big one!

3) Villanova—Seniors Doug West, Kenny Wilson and Gary Massey will combine with a much improved Tom Gries to show that last year 24-13 record was no fluke. Watch for Rollie's magic to surprise.

4) Connecticut—6-11 senior center Cliff Robinson leads a veteran UCONN team coming off a season which saw the 20-14 Huskies capture the NIT. Fellow seniors McCloud and George will have to have big seasons for UCONN to repeat last year's performance.

5) Pittsburgh—Take away Smith, Gore and Lane and what do you have? Two sophomores named Miller and Matthews. Good, but not nearly enough to contend for the top.

6) Providence College—Backcourt is strong with Murdoch, Screen and Waitis. However, the frontcourt won't be able to compete against the Mournings and Colemans of the conference. Rick Barnes will turn last year's disaster around, but it will be three seasons before the Friars will see the Final Four again.

7) Boston College—Dana Barros is another great impact player.

Beasley and Benton will need big years for BC to surprise anyone, however Barros will keep them out of the cellar.

8) St. John's—Louie lost Baldi, Porter, Harvey and Lewis in the off-season, and Prop 48 will keep freshman guard Chuck Spraling and his 34 pp out for this season. Who does he have left? Not enough to do anything this year. Sorry, Lou.

9) Seton Hall—The loss of dominant Mark Bryant, James Major and Martin Salley leave the Pirates in the dumps of 9th place. P.J. will have to suffer through this one and wait for 6-9 sophomore Anthony Avent, Prop 48 victim, to come of age.

By Phil Barret

1. Syracuse—So much talent and experience. Nobody has better athletes. Best recruiting class in the BIG EAST. Billy Owens is NICE.

2. Georgetown—Alonzo could be one of the top players in the country this year. Always successful with non-stop pressure.

3. Connecticut—Cliff Robinson is an NBA first rounder and will control inside and Tate George on the outside and Tate George on the point will control the tempo.

4. Villanova—Gries resurging. Doug West and Kenny Wilson are very talented, but will they produce?

5. Pittsburgh—Lane and Smith are too much to lose. Matthews, Brookins and top caliber player Bobby Martin will take up some slack.

6. St. Johns—Harvey and Porter lost to grades, Jones to graduation. Malls Sealy will be a huge bright spot.

7. Seton Hall—Heavy losses to graduation, but athletes are in abundance.

8. Providence—Must play hard every game. Guards will carry the team. Marvin Saddler will help inside play, along with Bragg.

9. Boston College—Dana Barros will go off. Coroy Beasley has exciting ups, but after that...

MEN'S BASKETBALL

PC's Newest Dynamic Duo

By Kim Rainis

As basketball season quickly approaches, all heads in the Civic Center will turn in anticipation towards PC's newest faces on the court—Marques Bragg and Marvin Saddler. Will these young players provide the spark needed to ignite the dormant Friars of the 87-88 season who were unfortunately plagued with numerous coaching problems, player disputes and overall discord? Both freshman players agree that a "definite turn around" is the goal set in their minds, as well as the rest of the team and coaching staff.

Marques "Marley" Bragg, a 6'6", 210 lb. hoopster, comes to the PC franchise from Clifford Scott High School in East Orange, New Jersey. Bragg chose Providence because it was in the Big East Conference and because "Seton Hall was practically around the corner from my house." Playing the position of "power" forward, (the forward whose back is always towards the basket and whose job it is to mix the action up under the boards), Bragg comes to PC with a set of astonishing statistics. In just three seasons, he was able to score 1053 points and go up to the boards for a total of 871 rebounds. In his Senior year alone, Bragg averaged 25.9 points and 17.0 rebounds per game. During his high school basketball career, Bragg was awarded many honors including being named to Second Team All-Star, First Team All-Group 3, First Team All-Conference and First Team All-City. He was also a member of the varsity football team on which he played both offense and defense and the President of his Junior class. On top of all these outstanding attributes, Bragg also graduated in the top ten percent of his class (20/200). According to Head Coach Rick Barnes, Bragg is a "bruiser who can bang with anyone." Bragg is anxiously looking forward to NCAA play and promises a great season for the players and the fans.

The other member of PC's new "Dynamic Duo", is 6'7", 220 lb. Marvin Saddler who hails from St. Joseph's High School in Trumbull, CT. As a junior, Saddler showed great promise as he managed to accumulate 18.8 points and 15 rebounds per game. As a senior, Saddler not only averaged 22 points and 15.5 rebounds per game but, also managed to block 98 shots setting a season record. At St.

Joseph's he became the school's third all-time scorer (knocking teammate of the past and present, Chris Watts, out of the Top Three) and became the second player ever to score 1000 points and grab 1000 rebounds. Saddler was awarded numerous honors as a result of his stellar high school basketball performances including High Honorable Mention All-America, Two-Time MVP Connecticut Conference, Two-Time All-State ("It represents the entire state and is, perhaps, the most difficult to be named to.") Saddler chose PC over Boston College, Connecticut, and Tennessee because of the "strong family setting apparent in the organization itself and between the closeness of the players." He also states that he is looking forward to playing with his past teammate Chris Watts because they are "familiar with each other's style and playing patterns which makes it easier to achieve harmony and success on the court."

Will the optimistic attitudes and talents of these players affect the PC Friars this season? Most fans think so and look to them as the bridge gapping the space between the past's failures and future's hope.

1988-89 FRIAR PREVIEW

By Scott Pianowski

If one thing is certain about the 1988-89 Friar ice team, it is this: youth will be served. With some key losses, especially on offense, the fate of this year's club will depend heavily on some very talented freshmen and sophomores.

"We're a young team, no doubt about it," admits head coach Mike McShane, entering his fourth season behind the Friar bench. "The new freshmen will certainly get a chance to play."

Sorely missed will be last year's co-captains, Gord Cruickshank (29 goals) and Shawn Whitman, who have graduated. Winger Tom Fitzgerald (19 goals), who opted for pro hockey, will also be missed. That trio combined for 56 of the 135 goals the Friars scored last year, a whopping 41 percent. McShane looks to his all-sophomore first line Mario Aube (11-9-20), Lyle Wildgoose (12-19-31), including a seven point effort, and Pat Madigan (7-12-19) to pick up some of that slack.

"I expect this line to surprise some people," said McShane, concerning his young but talented top line. "They'll do a good job."

McShane also has high expectations for his second line, which teams sophomore Paul Flaherty (7-8-15) with promising freshman Rob Gaudreau and Mike Boback. "Mike looks like he'll make a lot of things happen; he's a great playmaker," notes McShane.

"And Gaudreau has all the tools to be a goal scorer in this league." Throw in Flaherty, one of the top hustlers in Hockey East, and you have the makings for a very profitable line, indeed.

The third line teams assistants captain John Ferguson and junior winger John Butterworth with sophomore Mike Dempsey. This line should produce many bruises on the bodies of Hockey East foes, as all three like to play the physical.

Defense could be key

One area in which the Friars appear to be very deep is in the defensive core. Headed by Friar captain and all-american candidate, senior Jim Hughes (8-22-30), the Friars start the season with five capable veterans along with two promising freshmen blueliners.

Hughes is a highly skilled player who is very strong in his own end as well as on the Friar power play, he will also provide needed leadership to this young Friar squad. Paul Saunderson (3-3-6) and Joe DiGiacomo (0-3-3) are two juniors who both played in over thirty games last year and will see lots of ice time this year. Sophomore Larry Rooney (1-9-10) will also be counted upon by Coach McShane, as will junior Steve Higgins.

Adding to the Friars talented defense core are incoming freshman Shaun Kane and Jeff Robison. Kane is a skilled two-way player, while Robison is a stellar defenseman. Both will log many minutes for the Friars this year. They combine with the veterans to make this position the strongest on the Friars as the season begins.

McShane also has depth in the goaltending position, which boasts experienced juniors Matt Merten (8-11-1, 4-5-2) and Mark Romaine (5-7-4). Both will see significant action this year. With consistent goaltending, the Friars could be poised for another marked improvement in the standings.

What does McShane see as keys for the upcoming season? "We first of all need a healthy season, that's always important," explains McShane. "With solid goaltending and impact from some of the freshmen, we could surprise some people. If we can stay in contention for the first half, we should be much improved come the second half of the year."

Much improved indeed, as McShane will get back four talented juniors, Rick Bennett, Jeff Serowik, Todd Whittemore, and Dave Guden. Bennett and Serowik, in particular, will be a tremendous lift.

The Friars have a lot of ability, and if many of the question marks fall into place, they could experience another pronounced improvement as a year ago. With many talented ice men on this year's roster, they promise to give the faithful at Schneider Arena another exciting year.

High Expectations for Kane

By Pete Mayer

When the PC hockey Friars lost defenseman Shawn Whitman to graduation last May, Shawn Kane was just getting ready to step in on the Providence defense. Kane, a freshman from Holyoke, Massachusetts, will wear number 4 for the Friars this year and will fill in as a dominating physical presence on the Friars blue line. At 6'3", 190 lbs, he can smother an offensive attack or start one of his own.

"Hopefully, I can contribute offensively. The team needs some scorers," said Kane. In a Hockey East exhibition game against Lowell, he contributed a goal and an assist in a 2-0 Friar win. Coach Mike McShane has put Kane on the 2nd power play unit, in hopes of utilizing Kane's booming shot and fine play-making ability. Last year for the Springfield Olympics of the New England Junior Hockey League, he scored 56 points in 45 games.

With his own offensive input, Kane feels this season will be a good one for the Friars, "if we can hold on in the first half of the season." The loss of four players due to academic and disciplinary reasons has hurt the Friars early and since their return won't be until late December, Kane and the rest of the team will have to pick up the pace. Kane said, "it's going to pull us together, and we'll have to stick together in order to be successful."

Kane will be one of the top 6 defensemen this year, and he credits the older players on the team for helping him fit in. "The guys have really taken the freshmen under their wings. I was first paired with (captain) Jimmy Hughes, and he's helped me a lot," said Kane.

Along with the Friars fans keeping an eye on Kane this year, another man has a keen interest in the freshman's year. Lou Nanne, general manager of the Minnesota North Stars, made Shawn Kane his 3rd round pick in the year's NHL entry draft. "I know it's going to take a lot of hard work to make the pros," said Kane. Nanne has told Kane to develop his skills here at PC, and the Stars' scouts will keep an eye on him.

As for wearing Whitman's number 4 Kane said, "I've worn number 4 all my life, so I'm thinking about who wore it before but who is wearing it now. I put a lot of pressure on myself." Some of Kane's hits this year will remind PC hockey faithful of Whitman, while some of his rushes will remind New England hockey followers of another great defenseman who wore number 4: Bobby Orr. The Friars face ECAC foe St. Lawrence Friday night at Schneider Arena before embarking on a three game road trip against Boston University, Minnesota-Duluth, and the top team in the country, Minnesota.

Hockey East: No Runaway This Time

By Scott Pianowski

Last year, the Hockey East race was not a particularly close one, as the Maine Black Bears clinched the league title on Feb. 6 (the earliest in HE history), ending Boston College's three-year reign. However, Maine coach Shawn Walsh looks for a tight race to the wire this time around.

"This should be the closest race we've ever had," said last year's Hockey East coach-of-the-year, "Every single team could conceivably finish first or second. There will be great parity." Other coaches agree.

"You could roll the dice for the top three spots," explains Boston University coach Jackie Parker, whose Terriers should be in that top three.

"I don't think it will be a runaway like last year," adds Northeastern's Fern Flaman. "It's there for every team, and that is what will make this league great."

Here are how the teams stack up, as Hockey East gets ready for its fifth season:

Predicted Order of Finish:

- 1) Maine
- 2) Boston College
- 3) Boston University
- 4) Northeastern
- 5) Providence College
- 6) New Hampshire
- 7) Lowell

1.) Maine Black Bears:

Shawn Walsh's Black Bears won the regular season title in a walk last year, finishing 14 points ahead of second place Northeastern, but this year it won't be nearly as easy. Gone are three All-Americans—center Mike Golden, defenseman Jack Capuano, and last year's player-of-the-year in Hockey East, Mike McHugh. However, returning to the fold this year are Hobey Baker Award candidate Dave Capuano, the league's leading scorer last year with 34-51-85 goals-assists-points numbers; and last year's freshman-of-the-year, Mario Thyer (24-42-66). They combine with winger Christian LaLonde (20-31-51) to make up Hockey East's most dangerous line.

Maine has another strong point in goal, which is the domain of junior Scott King (25-5-1 record, 3.10 gaa), another all-Hockey-East selection from a year ago. Incoming freshman Keith Carney (defense) and Martin Reboitaille (center) are expected to get it of playing time this season.

2.) Boston College Eagles:

Last year was the first season in Hockey East's four year history that Len Ceglarski's Eagles did not find themselves perched atop the league standings at year's end. However, Ceglarski has a good nucleus to work with this year, including senior goalie and tri-captain David Littman (11-16-2, 4.03), senior defenseman and tri-captain Paul Marshall (12-23-55), and sophomore center David Emma (19-16-35). The return of sophomore defenseman Greg Brown (10-27-37 in 86-87), who spent last season on the US Olympic Team, is a plus.

As always, Ceglarski has a superb recruiting class. However, the gem of that class, Thyer Academy star Jeremy Roenick, instead opted for a pro hockey right before training camp. Center Steve Heinze (a Bruins third-round selection in 1988), and defenseman Joe Cleary are two who are expected to make their presence felt.

The Eagles should be back in the hunt this season, after last year's disappointing finish at Chestnut Hill. Eagle fans trekking to the new Conte Forum will not be disappointed by the maroon and gold this year.

3.) Boston University:

Last year, with ten freshmen on the roster, Jackie Parker's Terriers got off to a poor start, dropping five straight at one point. However, the Terriers then caught fire, winning nine of eleven. Coming into the Hockey East playoffs in a high, they then were stunned by the Providence Friars 3-2 and 6-4 for an early exit from the post-season.

This year, Parker's boys should be a force to be reckoned with. The top seven Terrier scorers return, headed by senior captain Mike Kelfer (26-27-53), junior center Mike Sullivan (18-22-40), and sophomore winger Joe Sacco (14-22-36). Shawn McEachern and David Sacco (Joe's brother) head a list of four outstanding Massachusetts schoolboys that will be wearing the red-and-white this season.

If Parker gets a solid season from sophomore netminder John Bradley (4-4-0, 4.5999), his troop could be the team to beat in Hockey East this year.

4.) Northeastern:

The winners of last year's Hockey East Tournament, with a thrilling 4-3 win over favored Maine, will have a lot of question marks this season. Tournament MVP, and All-American goalie Bruce Racine (11-7-4, 3.96), a four-year standout, will be sorely missed. His spot will be taken by senior Rich Burchill (only 6 GP last year), or highly touted freshman Tom Cole from Woburn, Mass. Coach Fern Flaman also will miss his top two scorers from last year, Kevin Heffernan and David O'Brien, as well as defenseman Brian Dowd and Claude Lodin, all of whom have graduated.

Junior Harry Mews (16-23-39), one of the league's trickiest playmakers, will provide scoring punch, as will captain Dave Buda (21-17-37) and Brian Sullivan (20-12-32). However, it will be the play of whoever emerges as the starting goal tender, as well as the defensive core, that will dictate how far the Huskies go this year.

5.) Providence College (see separate article)

6.) New Hampshire:

When you finish seventh in a seven team league, you can't get any worse. That's the good news for Wildcat fans this year, as Bob Cullen's crew hopes to improve on last year's dismal record.

Cullen is a story himself, having recovered from a heart transplant. He points to his experienced goal-tandem of Pat Morrison (HE all-freshman last year) and Pat Sztrum as a strong point. Another all-freshman choice from a year ago, Chris Winnes (17-199-36), is a rising star. Junior Jeff Lazaro (4-13-17) anchors an inexperienced defense.

Freshman recruit Dominic Amodeo, Joe Flanagan, and Adam Hayes will be given ice time this year to help last year's lowest scoring team in the league. The 'Cats will be improved, but a finish higher than sixth is asking too much.

7.) Lowell Chiefs:

No question, the Lowell chiefs were hit hard by graduation. Nine Chiefs, all impact players, are gone, headed by Hockey East's all-time leading scorer, Jon Morris (177 pts) and starting goalie Dave DeFino (14-14-1, 4.22). What's left?

Coach Bill Riley, entering his 20th year at Lowell, does boast a couple of snipers in forward Craig Chartron (22-18-40), and Jeff Flaherty (27-12-39). However, his forward ranks drop off sharply after that, and goals could be a problem. Riley believes that senior goalie Ken Stein and freshman Mark Richards will do a capahl job in net, but they may not be able to compensate for a weak chief at tack. A rebuilding year.

Friar Fanatics Growing

By Mike Luchon

The Friar Fanatics, which currently has 90 members, is PC's official athletic student booster club. The object of the Friar Fanatics is to promote student participation at basketball and hockey games. Both Coach Barnes and Coach McShane feel that the students' support plays an important role in their team's success and the Friar Fanatics would like to help in anyway.

This year the Friar Fanatics, along with the Athletic Department, are planning four hockey trips and six basketball trips. The hockey trips planned are: Nov. 8 at B.U.; Nov. 30 at Northeastern; Feb. 15 at UNH and Feb 21 at B.C. The basketball roadtrips are: Dec.

7 at B.C.; Jan. 28 at Syracuse; Feb. 1 at St. John's; Feb. 14 at Villanova; Feb. 25 at Seton Hall and a possible roadtrip to the Big East Tournament the weekend of March 9. Also the Fanatics plan on holding a hockey towel night and a URI "Revenge Rally" the weekend of Dec. 10. Tickets for road trips will be sold one week in advance of the game. The first two days of the sale will be for Friar Fanatics only, then tickets will be sold to the rest of the student body.

The Friar Fanatics urge all those who are interested to join the club. We are asking for a $10 membership fee which will go toward a club t-shirt and toward subsidizing the costs for the road trips. Some of the benefited you will receive by being a Friar Fanatic are you will have first priority for seats in the student sections and you will have first priority at filling the seats available for road trips. So if you are interested in going on roadtrips, I urge you to join. If you are interested in joining, drop off your name, box number, phone number, t-shirt size and $10 in Friar Box 2012 or come to the next meeting. Come out and support the Friars.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL 88-89

At Least Worth a Look

By Renee Duff

"I challenge the students of Providence College to come and watch us once, and I guarantee that we will be hooked." This bold statement made by Head Women's Basketball Coach Bob Foley is an invitation extended to anyone who falls into the category of those who believe that the men of PC are the only ones who can play basketball, and gives a good indication of the confidence that he holds in this year's Lady Friars.

Foley wants to make it clear that his team is not in competition with the men, but just that he thinks PC students would be making a big mistake if they didn't give the women's basketball team a chance. He feels that there is another form of entertainment on campus, and he's willing to bet on it.

This year's women's basketball team is more exciting than any other has been in the past. They possess tremendous ability and pack a lot of excitement in their plays. The Lady Friars of '88-'89 will be a great team to watch. New speed and shooting ability has added a dimension which was missing in the team last season.

Providence will benefit tremendously from the addition of freshman guard Tracy Lis, one of the nation's top incoming freshmen, led the country in scoring as a sophomore (30.0 ppg) and junior (42.3 ppg), and finished second in the nation this past season with a 42.8 average. She finished her career as the State of Connecticut's all-time leading scorer (male and female) with 3,681 points, which ranks her second on the all-time female high school scoring list nationally. Lis was named to the Converse All-American Team, and twice was selected Miss Basketball in Connecticut and Natsmith Player of the Year. Lis led Killingly High School to a 23-1 mark and a state championship her senior year. She is an excellent playmaker along with having an amazing outside shot. Lis is a smart player. The Lady Friars also add to their roster another excellent freshman guard in Ann-Marie Kennedy. Kennedy is a perfect role player who should fit into the Friar system well. She is a team-oriented player who can play both point and shooting-guard. Kennedy was named to the Washington Post All-Met Team and second team All-State. She is also an excellent student; she was named Academic All-American with a 4.0 g.p.a.. Kennedy was only the second player from Amundale High School to have her jersey retired.

Re-joining the Lady Friars after being redshirted last year is Stephanie Cole. Cole sat out last season with a stress fracture and she looks to be ready to go for the 1988-89 campaign. Cole is a hard-nosed player with excellent defensive skills. She may be a little rusty after a year layoff, but she knows the system and should progress quickly. Cole is a USA-Today Honorable Mention All-American and was named her conference player of the year while a senior.

Althea Osbourne is also coming back from a red-shirt season. Osbourne has the natural ability to dominate the inside game. Osbourne will be counted on for rebounding and aggressive defense.

Another new member of the team this year is walk-on Pam Healey. She will be a great help to the Lady Friars by backing up Shanya Evans at point guard. Healey has good ball-handling skills and is solid defensively. She is an opportune find for Coach Foley.

These new additions to the Lady Friar roster combined with the experience of returners Liz Lawlor (captain), Stacy Brown, Helen Jesse, Andrea Mangum, Dottie Van Gheen and Shanya Evans should make Coach Foley's team the most exciting in the Big East.

Coach Foley feels that this team "is going to shock people." Kennedy, Lis, and Cole will add much more shooting depth to the likes of Jesse and Evans who have both tremendously improved their games. This should open up the inside.

Playing inside for the Lady Friars is Liz Lawlor, Dottie Van Gheen, Stacy Brown, Andrea Mangum and Althea Osbourne. When asked about the inside, Foley commented "I have no idea who will start because they are all good. Everyone has taken on a new attitude and they're all playing out of their heads." Foley went so far as to say of his team "if this intensity of play continues, we will win the Big East." A tremendous all-around improvement has been noticed, and new attitudes are going to be key.

"Awesome" was how Foley described the Lady Friars' defensive game, and commented "this year we're going to stress defense. Last year we relied too much on offense and worried too much about scoring. This really made a difference for us because even when we were scoring, we couldn't stop our opponents. This was our biggest fault."

A problem the Lady Friars faced last season was that although they were able to put points on the board (79.5 per game), they yielded the same amount (79.8) to their opponents and were unable to stop them defensively. In some instances last year, a "lack of defense" cost Providence some victories in close games.

"We have the type of players who can do a lot of things for us offensively and defensively that will make us a better ball club," he continues. "We want to make it difficult on our opponents to defend us as well as score on us." Guards Helen Jesse, Shanya Evans and Stephanie Cole will be the keys in the backcourt to the Lady Friar defensive strategy. They will be the intimidators on defense and this, Foley points out, is where it all begins. Jesse had 62 steals last season, while Evans had 38.

"We're going to attack our opponents everywhere on the court," Foley remarks. "Playing defense is an attitude. The staff and I are going to stress team-oriented defense in practices and make it fun for the players to learn. In turn, defense will make our offense."

Foley commented on the Big

East League, saying that it was the most exciting ever. The league is well balanced and every game at Alumni will be a good one. "The students will see some great basketball and I think that to spend a night at Brad's is a mistake when Women's basketball is playing."

Foley honestly believes that the Lady Friars, if they continue to play with the intensity they have shown in the first two weeks of pre-season, have the potential to win the Big East. "We have the potential best players in all the Big East. Shanya Evans is the potential best point guard in the Big East, Andrea Mangum the best big person, Helen Jesse the best guard etc., if they want it."

Foley, who is aided in his coaching duties by two former PC women's basketball players Doris Sable and Joanie Powers, comments that their addition adds much enthusiasm to the program. "With their help, practices are going so well," said Foley, "the kids respond well to them and really like them. I'm seeing improvements everyday. As former players, Joanie and Doris understand the plays and know what the kids are going through. I think having them as my assistants puts us at a tremendous advantage."

This year the Lady Friar Basketball team looks more exciting than ever. Newcomers combined with returning talent could be the key to PC's success this season. This will definitely be an exciting team to watch, and as Coach Foley urges, "just give us a chance, you won't be disappointed." I certainly would bet on that.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL 88-89

TRACY LIS: "I'm Just One of Twelve"

By Phil Barrett

Tracy Lis is one of the best high school basketball players to ever step foot on the court. She has compiled an incredible list of accolades and accomplishments. Her honors include being named to the Converse All-American Team, Coca-Cola Player of the week (only girl), a New England All-Star and Connecticut Miss Basketball (2 years) just to name a few. Lis piled up an unheard of 3,600 points and was an All-State performer for three years. The accomplishment she is most proud of leading Killingly High to an easy victory in the 1988 Class L State Championship game. This victory was exceptionally sweet because they beat the team which had knocked them off in the playoffs the year before. Lis extends much of the credit for her team's success to Head Coach Krot and assistant Coach Graves for being relaxed and providing a closeness within the team. Lis was named MVP of the tournament in her last game and she was ready to take the college world by storm.

Lis narrowed her college choices to Providence and Fairfield in the beginning of her senior year. She did not want to bring along any schools into believing she might attend. USC and Auburn were among the over 150 schools that sent letters to the Lis residence. Lis chose Providence mainly because it is only 27 miles from home. The nearby location will allow her family, who have been so supportive in her life, to see her play. "It wouldn't be fair to them if I went far from home," Lis said. PC being in the Big East and the small school atmosphere which surrounds the college were two other aspects that Lis liked. Lis did not want to be a number in a big school and on her visit to PC the team and Coach Bob Foley made her feel at home.

Lis certainly was not a number back in Killingly, Connecticut. Her first experience with basketball came at the age of eight when her father signed her up in her first league. She loved the competitiveness of the game and began to play whenever possible. At the age of 12 Lis played for the Killingly All-Stars, traveling to Baton Rouge and Puerto Rico. She was the only girl of 1,000 players in the International Tournament, from which 17 players were chosen for the International All-Star team. Lis was the first girl in 32 years to be selected as an All-Star. Lis also played 3 years on the Junior Olympic Team and was captain at age 16. Lis had this to say about the 1992 Olympics, "It is too far in the future to think about now. It will take a lot of work and dedication."

Despite all of her honors, publicity, and accomplishments, Lis realizes she is starting over and is not looking to score 40 points a night and be the star of the team. "I am just one of twelve girls working hard to win the Big East. I am starting over again as a freshman with new goals to accomplish," Lis said. Lis also realizes she can improve her game on a couple of aspects, "I can work on my quickness and getting lower on defense." Unfortunately, Lis is a victim of negative perceptions by some people. It's the same perception many prolific scorers fall under; they cannot or do not bother to play defense. Lis thinks this is unfair pointing out she scored many points on steals. Lis is confident she can play up to Coach Bob Foley's expectations.

Overall, Lis likes the team's chances to excel this year. The girls are working hard, but having fun at the same time. There is no doubt that Lis has a great understanding of the team cohesion and spirit. She acknowledges her accomplishments, but she is very aware of her role on the team. Lis emphasizes academics and the value of a good education reflecting another challenge she must face. The impact Lis will have on PC is only a matter of time and she will contribute to the college in many ways. Her response to a press release saying she could rewrite the PC Basketball record books sums up her refreshing attitude, "I just want to give 100%, do what the coaches ask, and if it happens, it happens."

ANDREA MANGUM:

Shooting for the Top

By Renee Duff

Andrea Mangum, Junior 6-2 forward for the Lady Friars, will be a leading factor in PC's quest for the number one spot in the Big East. Mangum is a gifted and talented player who is considered the most versatile athlete on the team and a major key to their success in 1988-89.

Mangum finished last season off second in the scoring column as she averaged 12.7 points per game. She has all the skills to be a great defensive player, and her shot blocking, rebounding and foot speed make her a threat at both ends of the court. An experienced player after two seasons in a starting role, the Lady Friars will be looking to her as a leader in their attack and defense of opponents.

Possessing a soft outside shot and the addition of the three-point shot at the end of the season last year will make Mangum a major threat to opponents on offense. Her exceptional rebounding skills have placed her ninth on the career rebounding list with 503 and will be a force to contend with on the boards this season.

It has been said that Mangum should be a strong contender for conference honors this season. She commented, "I've set my goals to get the high honors this season. I'm working hard putting in the extra time to see that I fulfill them."

After a brilliant rookie season, Mangum had a somewhat inconsistent sophomore season. When asked what happened, Mangum explained, "Last year was one of my worst years." "There were problems on the team with all of us not communicating," she continued, "we were not together as a team and without any we can't work well or accomplish anything. I personally need that unity in the team and with the coaches to accomplish my goals. We didn't have that and it hurt all of us."

Mangum has high hopes for the impending season and is optimistic for the Lady Friars future. "We're a young team, but we have the ability and skills to be successful," said Mangum, "we will take the Big East because this year we all have that as our goal and then to go on from there. We now have the unity and togetherness missing last year and we are all friends. I think this new feeling will take us far."

The new attitudes surrounding the Lady Friars can be in part attributed to the addition of new assistant coaches Doris Sable and Joanie Powers. Mangum added her thoughts saying "I think that Joanie and Doris were great choices. They are both young, practically our age. They can talk to Bob (Foley) and know where we're coming from being that they played themselves." Mangum also added in a comment about Doris that "I played with Doris as a freshman and she knows how things go, but now I have to respect her in the context that she's my coach, and the same for Joanie."

Mangum looks forward to the upcoming season and what it will bring. "I think all the new players will help us a great deal, especially Tracy Lis from whom the press are expecting great things." Mangum and the Lady Friars are shooting for the top of the Big East, and it seems though they are all fired up to achieve this goal.

A Changing of the Guard

The Coaches

Head Coach Bob Foley.

Doris Sable

Assistant Coach Joanie Powers.

Doris Sable, a 1987 Providence College graduate and former Women's Basketball standout, had been named assistant Women's Basketball Coach at her alma mater. She joins third-year Head Coach Bob Foley on the 1988-89 Lady Friar staff.

Sable, a native of Manasquan, New Jersey, is the school's all-time assist leader with 602 and ranks as the fifth all-time leading scorer with 1,372 points for a 12.1 career average. In addition she owns school records for most assists in a game (12), in a season (224) and for free throw attempts in a season (152) and career (440). Sable also held the Big East career assist mark with 306 that was eclipsed this past season by Seton Hall's Kathy O'Reilly.

Sable received many honors in her senior year as she was named to the Big East All-Conference Team, the Kodak All-District I Team, and shared Providence College Co-Female Athlete of the Year honors with teammate Mary Burke, the school's second all-time leading scorer.

"The addition of Doris to our staff will certainly be a big plus for our program," Foley says. "She's a team player who knows the Providence system better than anyone. Doris will complement our staff and make our program better." Joanie Powers, also a former Providence College Women's Basketball standout, has also been named assistant Women's Basketball coach at her alma mater. A four-year letter winner, she replaces Cathy Parson who resigned to become Assistant Athletic Director and Head Women's Basketball Coach at Christopher Newport College in Hampton, Virginia.

"Their addition to the staff is a great asset to our program," Foley says.

Powers is the second former Lady Friar Basketball player to join fourth-year Head Coach Bob Foley, and now former teammate Doris Sable.

"Prior to coming to Providence, Powers was head coach at Massasoit Community College in Brockton, Massachusetts where she coached for one year (1987-88). Last season she guided her team to a 18-7 record and the Massachusetts Junior College State Championship before being eliminated in the first round of the NCAA Region 21 Tournament.

A starter at forward for the Lady Friars during Foley's first season (1985-86) as coach, Powers is the school's 11th all-time leading scorer with 1002 points and stands 9th in career rebounds (566). A versatile and all-around player for Providence during her career, she also finished with 248 assists.

"Joanie will be a big asset to our program," Foley says. "I feel very fortunate to have been able to hire someone of her caliber and experience at such a late date. She knows the school, system and program."

WOMEN'S HOCKEY

High Hopes for '88-'89

by Steve Foster

The 1987-88 PC Women's Ice Hockey team fell just shy of winning the ECAC tournament last year when they lost the Northeastern University 5-3.

This season, the Lady Friars are shooting for the same type of season, only this time they'd like to do last year's 20-8 record one better.

Coach Marchetti puts as his goal, "...to participate in the ECAC tourney at the end of the season." This is seemingly a modest goal as PC only lost four players from last year's team to graduation. Leading goalscorer Lisa O'Brien will be a tough loss, but Marchetti thinks that his incoming freshmen crop will compensate for the losses.

"I'm cautiously encouraged with this year's additions to the team...we strengthened ourselves in the goal position, and even though we were hurt by graduation offensively, I feel we have the forwards to fill the void."

Defensively, the Lady Friars four starting defensewomen have each had at least a year's experience.

The biggest competition PC will face this season comes from Northeastern and New Hampshire, but with many teams improved this year in the conference, Marchetti doesn't know who else might pose problems for his Lady Friars.

"Either way, we feel that we are going to be highly competitive this season." With the nucleus of the team returning, that's exactly what we should see.

Heather Linstad, captain of the 1988-89 Lady Friars hockey team, will be counted on this season for her leadership on the ice.

Meet Heather Linstad

by Steve Foster

Women's Ice Hockey team captain Heather Linstad is described by Coach John Marchetti as "...a very good hockey player both offensively and defensively. She will definitely set a positive example on the ice for the players."

A three sport athlete in soccer and softball as well as women's ice hockey, Heather was elected captain of this year's squad by her teammates. "This just exemplifies her popularity among the players."

Linstad was fourth on the team in scoring last season, and one of the three 20-goal scorers for Marchetti proving that she has the talent to go with the leadership qualities she possesses. As the coach says, "Heather has an underlying spirit which I feel is a must to be a good leader."

With both the coach and her teammates behind her, Heather Linstad leads the 1988-89 Lady Friars into a season which should be exciting, competitive and hopefully successful.

SWIMMING 88-89

by Steve Galucci

The Providence College Men's Swimming and Diving Team will look to improve on its most successful season ever last year. The 1988-89 squad will return 14 letter winners from its 5th place BIG EAST team of a year ago. The Friars have also enjoyed its most successful recruiting class by bringing in eight new members to the team.

The team will be anchored by its' experienced group of veterans, including co-captains Jay Holbrook and Wayne Bowden. Wayne was the 1985 BIG EAST 1650 meter champion and will attempt to become the first Friar ever to qualify for the finals at the University of Pittsburgh in February. Wayne currently holds school records in four individual events and is a member of the 800 meter Freestyle Relay team that also holds the school record. Jay will look to improve on last year's BIG EAST performance where he finished in the 200 meter Freestyle and scored in the 100 meter Freestyle. Jay has anchored every Friar relay since coming to Providence and is a member of four relay teams that hold school records.

Also returning for his senior year of competition is Paul Soligon. The Friars will look to Paul to provide stability in his specialty, the Butterfly. Paul, like Wayne, will attempt to final in the 100 Fly at the Big East tourney for the fourth consecutive year. Paul is the New England record holder in the 100 meter Butterfly Short Course.

The Friars will count on seniors Trent Theroux and Dave Hardy to shore up the squad's Backstroke unit. Trent holds the school record in the 200 meter Backstroke and Dave competes in a variety of events in the Dual Meet Programs.

The Providence women's swimming team finished 3-6 in dual meets last year and is continuing to be one of the most improved programs in the East. The Lady Friars had their best showing ever at the Big East Championships finishing fifth. At the National Catholic Invitational, the Lady Friars placed fourth, while taking sixth at the New England Championships. For these efforts, Head Coach John O'Neill was named BIG EAST Women's Coach of the Year.

O'Neills' program has just begun to flourish. The Lady Friars have nine freshmen joining the squad, while losing only two to graduation. Leadership will be provided by co-captains Teresa Agnew and Susan Manco. Manco was named to the Big East Academic All-Star team a year ago.

The top swimmers on the team also return. Junior sensation Cindi Luciani comes off a stellar sophomore year. At the National Catholic Invitationals, Luciani turned in one of the best single performances ever by a Lady Friar swimmer, capturing all four individual events in meet record time. Also returning is sophomore Karen Crossman, another star from last year's Big East meet. Crossman won the 100 backstroke and took fifth in the 200 meter individual medley. With a hard working group of seniors and a talented crop of underclassmen, Coach John O'Neill encourages the entire student body to come out and support the PC Swimming program, as they continue their climb up the BIG EAST ladder.

John O'Neill, PC Swim Coach.

The Coaches

by Steve Galucci

Entering his fifth year as Aquatics Director and Head Coach of Men's and Women's Swimming is John O'Neill. At 25, O'Neill is the youngest head coach in the Big East Conference. A native of Cumberland, Rhode Island, O'Neill graduated from Springfield College in 1981. That same year he began his coaching career as an assistant at Brown University. During this time, O'Neill also served as an assistant at the Little Rhody Aquatic Club, one of the most prestigious clubs in the Northeast. O'Neill received his Masters Degree in Education from PC in 1986 and began the Swimming program five years ago. O'Neill is responsible for the daily operation of the Taylor Natatorium and all related activities. O'Neill is also involved in a childrens Learn to Swim program, adult lessons, advanced life saving courses and various other community services.

Joining Head Coach John O'Neill for the 1988-89 season are assistant coaches Peter Soloman and Al Belluche. Soloman, a former All-American at East Providence High School and a NCAA Qualifier at North Carolina State, returns to Rhode Island after a successful term as Head Coach of the Tar Heel Aqua Races in Raleigh, North Carolina. Developing both Junior and Senior National Qualifiers with his club team, Soloman will handle the coaching and recruiting responsibilities for the Friars' fast growing program. Al Balluche, a 1988 graduate of PC will handle duties on deck as he begins his fifth straight year with the Friar program. Al is familiar with all aspects of the program, as well as the college itself. Both Belluche and Soloman will greatly enhance O'Neill's strong program.

MEN'S INDOOR TRACK ON YOUR MARK

By Laura Naughton

The Providence College Men's Indoor Track Team has high hopes for the coming season. Having lost only 4 lettersmen to graduation, this year's squad has great talent and potential.

Last year's team also did well on the season, capturing 3 first places in New England and sending two members to the NCAA Championships. At the New England's meet at Boston University last February, John Evans qualified for the NCAA and captured a school record by placing first in the 800 meters with a score of 49.77. Frank Conway also broke a school record with a first place finish doing the 1500 meters in 3:43.04. Also for Providence, John Duggan ran the 3000 meters in 8:09.1 for a first place in New England and to qualify for the IC4A.

In the NCAA Championships in Oklahoma City, the top performers from Providence were Frank Conway, who ran the mile in 4:02.16 for a 5th place finish and John Evans, who ran the 800 meters in 1:51.42 to place 4th in the preliminaries.

On the season, Frank Conway shined as he became Providence College's fifth indoor track All-American in the mile, joining John Treacy, Geoff Smith, Jerry Deegan and Steve Binns. He was also selected as PC's Male Athlete of the Year and first New England Collegian to run a sub-four minute mile.

This year's Indoor Track team has the potential to send even more people to New England and the Nationals. Here's a quick look at the 1988-89 Indoor Track Team:

Captain: John Evans
A senior from Liverpool, England. As a freshman, John was the Big East Champion in the 800 meter and placed 8th at the NCAA's in the 1000 meters. John missed his sophomore season due to knee surgery. As a junior, John captured the 800 meter at New England's, and the Big East 1000 meter. John's hopes for this season are to win the 800 meter in the NCAA's.
John Allen

John is a senior from Limerick, Ireland. He captained the nationally ranked cross country team and has improved tremendously over the past year. John runs the 5000 meter (14:35) and the 3000 meter (8:23). His hopes for this season are to run 14:10 indoors, and to run well at the IC4A Championships.
Sean Keohane
Sean is a senior from Boston,

Laura Naughton

Mass. Sean also captained the cross country team. Sean runs the 800 meter (1:54) and the 1500 meter (3:51.7). His hopes for this season are to stay healthy and to run the 1500 meter in 3:45.

Frank Conway
Frank is a junior from Glenties, Ireland. An All-American in the mile, he is the fastest indoor New England Collegiate ever (3:58.2). He can also run the 3000 meter in 7:58. He is one of the top runners in the country. His hopes for the season are to win the NCAA 3000 meter.

John Duggan
John is a junior from North Kingstown, RI. He was the RI High School Champion in the mile, and the cross country champ. He broke the NE Championship record for the indoor 3000 meter last year with a time of 8:08.1. He also ran very well at the IC4A Championship. His hopes for this season are to qualify for the national 3000 meter.

Bill Mullaney
Bill is a junior from Thurples, Ireland. Bill is one of the top rated junior athletes in the world. He competed in the World Junior Championships in Canada last July. As a freshman he captured the New England indoor 1500 meter title, his best time being 3:43.8. His hopes for this season is to break the 4-minute mile.
Mike Scanlon
Mike is a junior from Walpole, Mass. Last year he ran a 4:00 mile indoors. He placed second in New England in the indoor 1000 meter, and 3rd in the Big East in the indoor 1500 meter. His hopes for the season are to qualify for the nationals in the mile.

David Burke
David is a sophomore from Tullamore, Ireland. In his first year of track he will be one of the top runners in the 3000 meter (8:27) and the 5000 meter (14:29) in the Big East and New England.
Niall Murphy

Niall is a freshman from Kildare, Ireland. He is the son of marathon champion Paddy Murphy. He had a brilliant freshman cross country season and should see some great improvement in track times. His hopes for his first season are to run well over the 1500 meter (3:54) and the 3000 meter (8:27).

Scott Cody
Scott is a freshman from Cambridge, Mass. He was a Mass High School Super-Star, a high school All-American in the 5000 meter. Just coming off of knee surgery, he hopes to regain his form, stay healthy and run well in the 5000 Meter (15:09).

Kevin Hillary
Kevin is a sophomore from Mahopac, NY. He missed last year with a glandular fever, but should contribute greatly to this year's team performance.

Bill Sullivan
Bill is a sophomore from Hartford, CT. He runs the 1500 meter (4:02).

James O'Brien
Jim is a freshman from Harrington Park, New Jersey. He does the 800 meter (1:57).

Eric Beauschesne
Eric is a freshman from Chelmsford, Mass. He placed 3rd in the High School Mass State Championships over the 2 mile (9:38).

Todd Buckley
Todd is a freshman from Peabody, Mass. He placed fourth in the Mass State Championships in the 2 mile (9:45).

John McCarthy
A junior from Metuchen, New Jersey. John is a tough runner in the 5000 meter and the 3000 meter (8:58).

Frank Conway should play a major role this season after being named All-American in the mile event.

MEET COACH TREACY

By Laura Naughton

Ray Treacy is in his fourth season as the men's and women's cross-country and track coach at Providence College. Treacy graduated from Providence in 1982. The brother of Olympic Silver Medalist, John Treacy, Ray collected All-America honors three times in cross-country while at Providence. He was also the New England cross country champion twice and won the indoor 5,000 meters at the Big East Championships three times. The talented distance runner was also the IC4A champion in the 10,000 and 5,000 meters in 1981 and 1982 respectively.

Ray Treacy captained the Friars in both his junior and senior years at PC, and was a two-time Academic All-America selection. Treacy is a native of Villierstown, Ireland. He is a former Irish National Junior Champion and a past member of the Irish National Cross Country Team. He currently resides in Warwick with his wife, Lisa, and his son, Michael.
