PC Students Clean Up Elmhurst Area

By Colleen Carson

A "clean-up crew" of about 80 Providence College Students took to the streets of Providence's Elmhurst section on Saturday, September 16, 1989 to clean up more than a dozen streets which surround the college. The students who initiated the program, which is the first of many clean-up programs, were members of PC's Student Congress and Board of Programmers. They focused their efforts on the streets where the majority of the college's off-campus residents live. This included a large clean-up crew on Eaton Street, which gave up special concentration to the lower section of the street, where it intersects with Douglas Avenue. The other streets which were rid of trash were Douglas, Admiral, Huxley, Tyndall, Elmhurst, Pinehurst, Oakland, Pembroke, and Radcliff.

The day began at 11:30 a.m. with breakfast in Slavin Center "Pit". The students were then divided into groups of five and given a map of the area. Each group was in charge of one street or section of a street. The clean-up lasted until 1:30 p.m. and obtained press coverage by channel 6, 12, and 10 and the Providence Journal. The clean-up was generally regarded as a success by all who participated.

"We noticed a lot of support by the neighbors in our efforts to clean up the area. One man was on his lawn and he stopped to thank us," said BOP members Ann Kingston and Patty Gallagher.

"The idea of a clean-up is definitely good, but it isn't new. Unfortunately I feel that the press tried to make it into propaganda for improving PC off-campus student relations with other residents," commented Matt Gaffney, president of BOP.

According to Providence College Student Congress President Jeffrey R. Coughlin, the neighborhood clean-up is part of an effort to improve the relations between PC students and the Elmhurst community. "We have sponsored this neighborhood clean-up for many years," said Coughlin. "We want the community to know that we do care about our neighborhood, and that we are making a concerted effort to alleviate some of the off-campus problems."

Fr. Fergus Reaches Out To Students

By Mary M. Zurolo

Located down on lower campus, near the Fennell Gates, a newly painted trailer has been stripped of its wheels and named the Off-Campus Housing Office. It seems to stand sentinel between the Eaton Street area and the encroaching grounds of Providence College. However, it is not this structure which serves to link the college community with its neighbors. Rather, it is the person who is soon to set up office hours there. Father Kiernan Fergus, newly appointed off-campus minister is sincere when he says, "Students are my business from a very close point of view."

Indeed, Father Fergus spent his first few weeks at PC riding a bicycle through off-campus neighborhoods stopping students and neighbors to introduce himself and explain the nature of his work which is strictly pastoral. He commented, "I have no dealings with the disciplinary board. I am conscientious about the welfare of off-campus students, interested in their concerns, and there to improve their lot."

Father Fergus has been available to students at each of the three major institutions where he has served during the past twenty-three years. He is a member of three fraternities and several college bands and has participated in quite a few student governments. He claims, "The way I operate is to get into the lives of other people."

Most recently, Father Fergus acted as pastoral minister at Frostburg University in Maryland. There, he was also an honorary member of Phi Mu Alpha Symphonia, a men's professional music fraternity. He also belongs to Tau Kappa Epsilon, the largest fraternity and Alpha Phi Alpha, a black fraternity founded in 1906. During his sixteen years at Frostburg, Father served as an active member of the jazz band rehearsing and going on tour with the students. Prior to serving at Frostburg, Father Fergus also served at Old Dominion University in Norfolk, Virginia and at the University of Miami.

Father Fergus says, "My style of ministry is to get involved in every student event from student government to fraternity parties and meetings. I am always available to students and will be at as many student events as possible, most likely wearing my collar and habit for high visibility."

Commenting on the off-campus problem, Father Fergus noted that PC's off-campus problem is not that different from other ones he has seen. "The density of students in three decker houses continued on page 2

He's So Nutty

Phantom Friar Wins Sports-Nut-of-the-Year Award

by Kerry Anne Ryan

Everybody knows that the Phantom Friar is a nut. However, now he's a nationally recognized nut, winning the title of Fisher Nuts "Sports Nut-of-the-Year" last week at the national championship in New York.

The Phantom, a.k.a. J. Duffy Dwyer, was one of five finalists vying for the prestigious title. Dwyer won the contest by one point, narrowly edging out Bernie "Mr. Yardsticks" Sherman, who has held a yardstick at the De Witt Clinton High School (Bronx, N.Y.) football games for the past 55 years.

During the competition, the contestants were called upon to convince the judges that they were America's 1989 Sports Nut-of-the-Year. Two segments, verbal and participatory, were conducted. Each contestant had no more than three minutes total to tell the judges, consisting of national league umpires, sportscasters and sports personalities, why they loved sports, what they do in their "love affair" with sports, and what special contribution they make as a fan. Dwyer's friend entered him in the contest after hearing about it at the PC/Miami basketball game last season. "He pointed it out to me, and we laughed and kidded about it," Dwyer said. "I said, 'Do whatever you like.'"

Amazingly enough, Dwyer qualified as one of the five national finalists. During the competition, Dwyer wore his Phantom outfit and made a special flag (himself, no less) for the competition. He correctly answered a trivia question about Friar Basketball (Q. Who did the Friars beat in the 1975 NIT? A. St. John's University) and successfully completed an obstacle course consisting of a hurdle jump into a recliner, a slam dunking contest and a nut eating contest (Fishers, of course) while continued on page 2

Renovations Around Campus Improve Atmosphere

By Colleen Carson

With the beginning of a new school year there are always changes to be expected, and PC is no exception. The Physical Plant and Student Services were extremely busy over the summer with many new improvements around campus.

To begin with, a complete renovation was done to Joseph Hall. The first floor was redone, and new offices were constructed for the Residence Staff. The second and third residence floors have also been totally refurbished. New hallways, staircases, bathrooms, sprinklers, heating system, and wall to wall carpeting are among the many additions to Joseph Hall.

Other renovations which were done in residence halls took place in Raymond Hall and Guzman Hall. New windows were installed in Guzman, and a new heating system and sprinklers were installed in Raymond.

Windows were also installed in the front wall of Alumni Hall. The Dean's office in Harkins Hall also had some major renovations done to it this summer.

A new higher fence has been placed between Hendricken Field and the Priory parking lot. This was done to avoid damage to cars in the parking lot and to remove obstacles on the field which may injure players.

On lower campus, a new and better electrical system has been installed which enables an individual building's power to be shut off instead of the entire lower campus.

One of the major changes around campus is the landscaping and sodding done near the library, Slavin, the Grotto, Moore Hall, and Mural Lounge. The new grass, bushes, and flowers planted around these buildings took much effort to put in and are a definite improvement to the overall atmosphere of PC. Fr. McPhail hopes that these efforts in beautifying the PC campus will be appreciated and maintained by the student body.

Presidents Forum on Culture and Values Sponsors Three Speakers

The President's Forum on Culture and Values, a series of lectures by distinguished guest speakers, will sponsor three addresses during the fall term 1989. All lectures will take place at 7:30 in Lecture Room III of Moore Hall on the PC campus. All lectures are free and the public is invited to attend.

Jacqueline Fleming, noted author, professor and psychologist, will deliver the opening lecture, "On Being in the Minority," on Monday evening, September 25, 1989. Dr. Fleming, a member of the psychology faculty at Barnard College in New York City, is perhaps best known for her study, Blacks in College. The book, published in 1984, was the product of seven years of research.

Her current research involves a comparative study of how students, both black and white, perform on college and graduate school entrance examinations.

As a graduate student at Harvard University, from which she holds her Ph.D., Dr. Fleming traveled to Kenya to study the role of women in the national development of their country. She continues to study the role of black women today in the United States.

Two other lectures will be delivered by other distinguished guest speakers on October 25, and November 15 respectively. A lecture

Doctor Jacqueline Fleming to Speak on being in the Minority September 25th entitled "The Surprising Genius of Gerard Manley Hopkins" will be delivered by Norman Mackenzie, emeritus professor of English at Queens University, Kingston, Ontario. The lecture will be presented in observance of the hundredth anniversary of the death of the English poet.

The topic "Social Participation and Economic Rights: An Ethical Challenge to American Culture" will be addressed by David Hollenbach S.J., on Wednesday evening November 15. Hollenbach is professor of moral theology at the Weston School of Theology in Cambridge.

As the national winner, Dwyer receives a sports fan's dream package: a 25-inch color TV, reclining armchair, one-year subscription to three sports magazines, binoculars, seat cushion, recognition at a hometown sporting event, a one-year supply of Fisher Nuts and a dinner with Ron Luciano, a major league umpire for 14 years.

"I played it up the whole time," said Dwyer, who takes graduate classes at PC. "The judges complimented me on my energy and enthusiasm and my pure love of sports".

"Even if you took away my costume and mask, I would still be a sports fan."

all in the Eaton Street area aggravates the problem. The residents have complained about past loud and disruptive behavior from students." However, Father Fergus stresses that such behavior occurred in the past.

Father believes that the on campus events will be a positive influence in reducing off-campus behavioral problems. "Most off-campus students I have talked with want to attend events in order to meet and socialize with their friends. Overall, drinking does not seem to be the main reason why students would attend an event."

In addition to his pastoral work, Father Fergus will also be teaching the History of Theology and Basic Catholicism. "Father Fergus has a different approach in class. He can relate ancient theology to today's world and ask kids what they're going through. It's not like being in class but more like talking with someone on an individual basis," says Chris Quinn, a student in Father's religion class.

Monica Silva, also a student in one of Father's classes says, "Father is not there to push stuff down throats, but there to advise students. He is a welcome change from a normal teacher."

Father Fergus is a resident of Guzman Hall 2A and can be reached at 2186. He says, "I love my job as off campus minister. One of the highest compliments I ever received was when one student said, "You don't seem like a Roman Catholic priest. You seem more like a father."

First Stag Dance Held on Campus Seen as Success

By Colleen Carson and Mary M. Zurolo

The first on-campus stag dance to be held in recent years took place Friday, Sept. 15 from 8:00 to 1:00 in Peterson Rec Center. About 2800 tickets were sold for the event which was sponsored by BOP and Student Congress. Entertainment was provided by a rock band called "The Clique." A live DJ also contributed to the musical atmosphere.

"We had a great time and feel that there should be more events on campus like the Stag Dance. The participation was great and affordable," said Andrea Pinnette and Jen Andrade, two sophomores who attended the Stag Dance. "We were glad that the school made an effort to let us party on campus and that they are being more realistic about drinking among college students."

BOP is planning to have a Halloween Stag Dance next month.

It is not known whether holding on-campus events like the Stag Dance reduces off-campus behavioral problems. Nonetheless, Fr. McPhail reprted another successful weekend in regard to the off-campus problem. "No arrests were made this past weekend," said Fr. McPhail.

Upcoming Student Congress Elections

Student Congress would like to announce that elections for the Apartment Complex, Residence Board, and the Freshman class are coming up. Sign-ups will be held Thursday, Sept. 21 and Friday, Sept. 22 in the Student Congress office. Each student needs 50 signatures to be eligible for a nomination. The campaign period for all nominees will be from Friday, Sept. 22 until Wednesday, Sept. 27. During this time, students may put up posters around campus to let other students know who you are and what position you are trying to obtain. The final election will then be held on Thurs., Sept. 28 in lower Slavin for positions in the Apartment Complex and the Freshman class. The election for Residence Board will be held in Raymond Hall.

"It's time for the Freshman class to elect its leadership for the upcoming year. Those leaders will be responsible for starting the class direction and unity," said Paul Nelson, Chairman of the Elections Committee of Student Congress.

Vampire Crew Drains PC

The Providence College Knights of Columbus Friar Council will sponsor a blood drive on behalf of the Rhode Island Blood Center on Wednesday, September 20, 1989 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in Slavin Center '64 Hall.

For the past four years, Providence College has had the highest percentage rate of student participation in blood drives of all colleges in the state, a distinction marked each year with the presentation of a trophy to the PC Friar Council by the Rhode Island Blood Center. PC's Knights of Columbus Friar Council also won an award from the state Knights of Columbus organization for collecting one half of all of the blood donated through council drives throughout the state for 1987-88. During that year, one of the PC Knights of Columbus blood drives garnered 248 pints, a record for a one-day college blood drive turnout which has yet to be broken.

The Friar Council's goal for next week's drive is to collect at least 200 pints of blood for the Rhode Island Blood Center. Blood drives are conducted by the college's Knights of Columbus organization twice each semester and attract approximately 200 student, faculty, and staff donors each time.

About 30 members of PC's Knights of Columbus Council will orchestrate next week's blood drive. As in past years, blood donors will be treated to pizza and soda donated through the courtesy of Domino's Pizza and Coca-Cola.

Disciplinary Hearings Conducted

The full Committee on Discipline met in the spring semester to hear charges placed against a Providence College student by the Assistant Vice President for Student Services. The name of the student cannot be released because of the Buckley Amendment. The student was found guilty of the following charges: being intoxicated and/or underage drinking, verbal abuse of security personnel, disorderly conduct, failure to comply with the directions of college officials, namely security personnel, and physical abuse of security personnel. The student was also found guilty of the charges of participation in and/or contributing to the destruction of the property of other members of the college community namely a four-door blue Ford Escort, license plate New Hampshire 438291 and a two-door maroon Chevrolet, license plate Massachusetts 357JXG and conduct which adversely effects the college and its stated goals and stamps the offender as an unfit associate of the college community.

The student, a resident of Raymond Hall was in violation of the Residence Hall Handbook section XXIII, Alcohol Beverages Policy #1 (drinking under the legal age) and #5 (disrespectful of the rights of the property and physical well-being of another as a result of drinking).

The penalty for the above charges was suspension for the 1989-1990 academic year, entrance sophomore year upon return in September 1990, disciplinary probation for one academic year upon the student's return, one hundred hours of community service during the disciplinary probation period, attendance of an alcohol awareness program and, making restitution for property damage.

Films To Be Shown By Political Science Department

The Providence College Political Science Department will be hosting a series of films throughout the semester. One of the first films to be shown will be "The Marriage Of Maria Braun" on September 26 at 7:30 p.m. in Moore Hall III. The next movie, "The Killing Fields" will be shown October 3 at 7:30 p.m. in Moore Hall III. The admission to these films is free and all are welcome to attend. There will be an announcement each week as to upcoming movies presented by the Political Science Department.

Lindsey Remembered

To the Family and Friends of Keith- Sean Lindsey:

In my seventeen years as Director of the Martin Luther King Scholarship Program at Providence College, this is without a doubt the saddest and most difficult issue that I have had to confront. Keith was a very special student to me.

I knew Keith from the time he transferred to Providence College in 1985 and met regularly with him on an academic and advisory level. Never did I have to reprimand Keith for not keeping his appointments with me, for not attending class regularly, or not maintaining an outstanding academic record.

I quote now from recommendations I wrote on Keith's behalf as he sought admission to graduate school. "Keith is superior in ability, motivation, initiative, emotional stability and integrity. Of the hundreds of students whom I have met - both black and white - Keith ranks in the top two percent as a well-rounded, whole person. Keith is a very articulate young man. Having spent his junior year studying in Fribourg, Switzerland greatly expanded his knowledge of other cultures and peoples. As he learned from them, so too did they learn from him, truly an American Ambassador."

Of the many recommendations I write each year for students, very few take the time to write a personal note of thanks. Although it is not necessary because it is a part of my work, when a student takes the time to do so, I become aware of another positive facet of the student, a credit to the student and his upbringing. Keith was such a student.

An outstanding athlete and a model student, Keith was one whom I would like to see other students emulate - both at Gonzaga College High School and Providence College. It was my joy, privilege and pleasure to have worked with him.

So, on behalf of the president, Rev. John Cunningham, the administrative staff, faculty, student body, alumni, and the entire Providence College Community, I offer my condolence to all here assembled. We will continue to pray for the repose of Keith- Sean and that God, in his infinite kindness, goodness and love, will help us to help each other in this very dark hour. Many God richly bless and comfort each of us.

Sincerely,
Robert H. Hamlin, Director
Martin Luther King Scholarship Program

Alarming Consequences

It didn't take long. Someone pulled a fire alarm the first weekend back to campus.

I understand that returning to school and being with one's old friends is an exciting time. I understand it when people plan exciting things to do. What I don't understand is that there are people who choose to do an exciting (because it is illegal) thing such as pulling a false fire alarm despite all the good reasons for choosing not to do such a thing.

The reasons for NOT turning in a false alarm seem to me to be compelling, which is why I am always both disappointed and actually stunned whenever someone chooses to get excitement in this way. Off the top of my head, turning in a false alarm is a bad thing to do for the following reasons:

1. The Providence Fire Department sends at least two trucks in response to any alarm at PC - two trucks that will not be able to respond elsewhere in the event of a real emergency. Someone who pulls a false alarm is responsible for an injury or death resulting from the more limited response the Fire Department is able to offer in such cases.
2. It costs the City of Providence approximately $500 each time the Fire Department responds. Expensive excitement, stolen from the City.
3. The City's firefighters put themselves at risk whenever they rush to the site of an alarm. In the past, the Providence Fire Department has lost one of their firefighters as they responded to an alarm which turned out to be a false alarm (not at PC). The person who pulled that alarm undoubtedly never intended to do such serious harm, yet he bears responsibility for the death of a firefighter and the grief of his widow and orphaned children.

4. Pulling a false fire alarm is against the law, punishable by a fine of up to $500 or imprisonment for up to a year, or both.

5. On campus, false alarms have the effect of discouraging students from leaving the building when they hear the alarm. In the event of a real fire, this could be disastrous. 6. Evacuating a building is such an inconvenience whenever it occurs, but especially at night. However, that is NOTHING compared to what some of us go through when a fire alarm is sounded. Let me give a couple of examples:

Some of us (me, for example) bear serious responsibilities for the safety of the students on campus, and we take that responsibility very seriously. If I lost a student to a fire because I did not enforce the rules recommended by the Fire Department, or because one of my staff slipped up, my responsibility would be more serious.

Most of us can drag our bodies - even when 90% asleep - out of a building when we hear a fire alarm. However, we have a few handicapped students on campus: some who can't hear very well, see very well, and some who can't move very well. Try to imagine the terror they must be feeling as they wait to see if an RA comes to tell them it is a false alarm and not to worry; or if flames appear, and they need to wait for someone to help them into the shower until the Fire Department can get them out of the building.

I believe that people who pull false fire alarms, or who tamper with fire extinguishers which set off smoke detectors (which sets off the fire alarm), or who tamper with other fire-safety equipment which makes it worthless until it can be replaced, do so for the fun and excitement of it. I really believe that they do not think of the harm or tragedies which can come of their actions. No virtuous human being would risk their friends' property or lives for fun and excitement. No virtuous human being would allow their friends to do so either.

I feel very strongly about this offense because of the potential harm to our students. I feel very strongly that our students should not tolerate this behavior, as they would not tolerate an assault on one of their friends, but would instead intervene or report such acts. I feel so strongly that I will send students who pull a false alarm, or who, in tampering with fire safety equipment, discharge an alarm, to the Disciplinary Board with a recommendation for a very serious penalty. I will give reward of $200 to a student who informs my office of a pulled alarm when the student has been successfully dealt with by the Disciplinary Board. I ask our students for their support in this so that we, as a community, can show the few individuals who do not care about their fellows that they need a remedial course in Common Decency.

PC's Pigskins Are Back... And Before I Forget

On Monday night, I was asked to attend a meeting of the Fighting Friars football team. As of this week, the team has been officially reinstated on the club level. At this time, the team has approximately 60 committed members and is aggressively seeking more. There will be just one practice, and from then on, games will be played as many as 5 times a week. At this time, the team is not allowed to conduct hitting drills, so the games will be of the flag nature. However, captains Mike Scire and Dan Fitzpatrick have strongly expressed their desire to suit up a contact team for either this spring or the fall of 1990. Their ultimate goal is to keep alive a sport that has a strong student body interest, along with excellent alumni support. As of Tuesday, the team has been allocated funds from Student Congress, and hopefully this will help these gridiron giants to realize their dream; Division III football at PC. For more information, please contact Dan Fitzpatrick and Paul Reardon at 272-1132, Mike Scire at 272-5516, or Todd Cropsey at 273-0039.

By the way.....
Let's replace the statue of Mr. and Mrs. Slavin with a golden replica of the wonderful individual who invented The Last Resort.

Does anyone know what the poor underclassmen have been doing since Marshall Law has been imposed on Eaton St?

All the cosmetic improvement on campus are a great touch, but bushes and trees don't put smiles on the faces of the poor freshman who have been doubled up in a Fennell matchbox.

Brian

Although this past weekend's stag DANCE (not bash) was a moderate success, there was obvious room for improvement. On top of my list is the termination of those professional bartenders and their sour pusses.

It's a sad day in America when two lowlife scums like Jim Bakker and Barney Frank are able to get away with what they have done.

Why is it that AT&T has given out no less than 5 telephone exchanges: 861, 831, 272, 273, 351 for the 2.5 miles that represents the off-campus neighborhoods?

Who gave PC security the authority to roam off-campus, bang on doors in the middle of the night, and demand quiet?

What I wouldn't give to be a fly on Nancy P's wall if she ever gets a copy of last week's masterful COWL.

When was the last time the PC field hockey team lost during the regular season? These girls are a powerhouse year in and year out.

What possible reason could there be for the building of that giant glass partition in Mondo Cafe.

What possess some of the individuals who write on the President's page to use this newspaper as an opportunity to convey personal messages? The other 99% of the school could care less, and anyway, that is why we have all these wonderful telephone exchanges, for those private moments. Just thought I'd ask.

The 1990s: Time For A Change?

With the 20th anniversary of Woodstock last month came a flood of flashbacks and memories from the 1960's. Anti-war protests, civil rights marches, and hilarious cult films such as, Harold and Maude, were all products of this generation. The youth of the 60's advocated peace, love, nonmaterialism, and outrageously different ideals and values than their parents, a time often envied by today's youth, as well as sensationalized by yesterday's.

Then came the 1970's, characterized by the Watergate scandal, conservatism, movies like The Graduate, and music from The Bay City Rollers. People were concerned with appearances, family life, and once again materialism. The youth of the 70's wanted to be like their parents; they shared their hopes and dreams. Certainly not a generation remembered for originality, the 70's discouraged behavior and attitudes out of the norm and encouraged concern for life and conservative involvement in politics.

Finally, there are the 1980's. Labeled as the "Me Generation" and often a "Placid Generation", the 80's are associated with star wars, the Reagan Administration, the tragic explosion of the Challenger Space Shuttle, movies like Wall Street,

Lisa

music from Madonna, and the AIDS epidemic. The youth of the 80's never seemed to get involved with national political issues, or environmental problems, or even local issues that effected them directly. How many sit-ins do high schools organize, and how many protests are held on college campuses across the country? Are we really that satisfied with life and not at all worried about our environment? Or are we just waiting for someone else to make our decisions for us?

The 1990's are three months away, and it's time to make some changes. Our families may never be able to swim in the oceans; the ozone layer is deteriorating; homeless families are everywhere, raising children in the streets. Not to mention that the nations war on drugs seems to be outnumbered. How can any human being with pride in his or her nation, not care? It is imperative that our generation expresses its concern and, most importantly, does something to change and improve society. Get involved with life. Write letters to your congressmen. Participate in peaceful marches and protests. Make your opinion known! Use your right as an American citizen to change and conserve nature.

An End To All Those Rumors

If I couldn't laugh, I couldn't live

Everyday since I arrived at Providence College, this quote by JFK has run through my mind. And I laugh. It's ironic I suppose, or maybe the reality of the situation hasn't hit me yet. I still look around and think that any day now, I'll be packing up and going home. That whole idea of college life and independence feels somewhat like summer camp. All those stories about life at school were grossly exaggerated.

Granted, one could probably find a party on any given night- but this sure isn't the "Animal House" that I'd been warned about. Drunken fools have yet to serenade or "moon" me, (certainly not to my dismay) and studying is not the unknown word.

The most misleading rumor I was warned of referred to the quality of the people on a college campus. How the students are always intoxicated, and how the guys are here for only for one thing; (and its not a study date) and how you never know who to trust. I think that whoever started this rumor is an insecure, socially unstable person. I have never met a friendlier group, so completely different, yet so close in my entire life. I am very grateful for the friends that I have made. Sure, every guy isn't a prince, and every person isn't completely trustworthy, but there is no need to be paranoid.

Kristen

It's also pretty ironic that although the whole idea of adulthood has been thrust upon us, we are still being led on a leash. A leash with notches in it to represent things like parietals, resident assistants, and rules and regulations that frankly dispute the idea of adulthood.

And so perhaps the students can band together to dissolve the invisible, and introduce true adulthood to the PC campus. Parietals would be dismissed- let's face it folks, there are co-ed colleges that even have co-ed floors by room, and the quality of their students is not so radically different. Rules and regulations would be to protect the students, not neglect them; and R.A.'s would be friends and not babysitters.

Maybe then I wouldn't laugh so much when I thought about it all. But, I suppose that's unrealistic also.

Scoop Says

By Jeffrey Coughlin

First of all, I would like to thank everyone who attended the Stag Dance last Friday evening. It was a momentous occasion in the history of P.C. and a great experience. The Stag is back and better than ever. I hope everyone that came had a good time. There will definitely be more of these event in Peterson Rec. If you came and did not have a good time, give us a chance. This was the first time we put on a dance of this calibre and their were some glitches. Next time, I guarantee all the problems will be ironed out. Overall, the dance was a huge success, and I would personally like to thank the B.O.P. for all their hard work.

Another P.C. tradition is happening soon. MIDNIGHT MADNESS will be October 14, 1989. In case you do not know, Midnight Madness is the first Friar basketball practice of the season. It happens at midnight to add to the excitement of another promising Friar campaign. Al McGuire is hosting, so you know this will be a fabulous event.

One of my big themes this year is involvement. We have the Freshman Class, ACC and Residence Board elections coming up next Thursday. Anyone who is interested in getting involved in Congress should come to the Congress Office in Slavin, Room 214. If you are not interested in run-

Apartment Complex Council

by Bob Serino

In November of 1988 the Apartment Complex Council (A.C.C.) was established in an effort to create an organization that would cater to the needs of those residents in the on-campus apartments. Some past social events sponsored by the A.C.C. have been pizza parties, ice cream sundae nights, and a spring cookout.

This year the executive board includes Chris Molinari (vice-president), Sarah Forbes (treasurer), Meredith Coffey (secretary) and myself. We look forward to working closely with the residence staff of the apartments, which is headed by Joe Hanrahan, and planning more events, more frequently that are of interest to the residents. The ACC would also like to pursue the construction of study lounges and recreation rooms for each of the apartments. It is apparent from last year that these two rooms are essential - they would provide an academic and social area that the apartments ideally require.

We hope that anyone who is interested in getting involved will run for an elected position; elections are coming up soon. If you have any suggestions, please feel free to contact one of us, or your head resident. Thanks, and have a good year.

Residence Board News

By Mary Toscano

Welcome to life in the Residence Halls at Providence College. Here at P.C., the Residence Board tries to make it as enjoyable as possible. We will plan various events to make your year entertaining and memorable. Among them are Battle of the Dorms, a funfilled, competitive afternoon of interhall athletic events resulting in a champion male and female hall. We will have to see if Aquinas and Joseph can defend their titles! Blind Date Balls are another favorite, a prom-type event, for which your roommate sets you up with the guy or gal of your dreams. You better start looking now. At Christmas time, we sell Tuck-ins. You purchase one for your roommate and someone of the opposite sex tucks them in, gives them a candycane, reads them a bedtime story, and a goodnight kiss. Siblings' Weekend is another project of the Residence Board. Events will be planned to share with you younger brother or sister. You can show them just what college life is like. And for those nights when you need to escape your room for a little while, there is always Colonel's Corner located in Raymond Hall beneath Mural Lounge. If you want to play pool, ping-pong, videogames, or want to watch TV, this is the place to be. Be sure to stop by and check it out once we open, which, hopefully, should be soon. The Residence Board is also here to listen to any problems you may have in your hall. We will do our best to solve it. Give us a try. We hope that you have a great year.

Presidential Profile

by Caroline Fargeorge

Although most people know or know of Thomas S. Kaplanes, I thought that it would be good to write an article for those unfortunate souls who have not had the privilege of making Tommy's acquaintance. Tom has served on Student Congress since he was a freshman here at P.C. Freshman and Sophomore years he served as a representative of the class. Junior year he was Vice-President and this year he is serving as Senior Class President.

Tom, who is of Greek origin, comes from Worcester, Massachusetts. He is twenty-one years of age and enjoys life-guarding, which he did this summer in Greece. Tom is very active in Student Congress and feels that S.C. is a great way to get involved, as are other organizations, such as IAB or OCRO. "Getting involved helps you develop skills and meet new people" Tom said.

He feels that Student Congress is probably the "most significant organization" at P.C. and it does a lot of good, although this is not always recognized.

Tom is very excited about Senior year. The class officers, both old and new, are dedicated, responsible, and very willing to help and learn. All the officers work well together. Tom says that Senior year is "the best year of the best four years of your life", and he hopes to make it as successful and memorable as possible.

Matt's Message

by Matt Gaffney

On behalf of the Board of Programers, I would like to thank everyone who attended the Stag on Friday night. It is our hope that each of you enjoyed yourself and will be willing to accept an invitation to attend a second event like this one. Presently we are planning to sponsor another Stag to celebrate the Halloween season. In past years an event similar to this was held in Slavin, however it was done away with prior to the arrival of the Class of 1990, so none of us have experienced what was reportedly one of the most exciting affairs of the year at one time. With a few changes of procedure and your continued support we will be able to provide regularly scheduled events that the entire student body can enjoy together. As always, we invite anyone who has suggestions to stop into the B.O.P. office to see us.

Please allow me the distinct pleasure of making the following announcement:

On Friday December 1, 1989, the Board Of Programers is Proud to Present

10,000 Maniacs

Commuter Board

by Chris Tucciarone

Welcome back to P.C. Are you aware of the new commuter lounge? Slavin, Room 111, is especially for you. We have a TV, a stereo, and even a refrigerator. You are welcome to come in any time - just make yourself at home. This is an opportunity to meet fellow commuters and make friends. However, this is not just a club where all you can do is sit around. This is your way to get involved in many social events. We are interested in forming our own Commuter Intramural teams. (If you are interested, please let us know.) We are also planning some traditional parties and some possible trips. If you have any suggestions, we have a suggestion box for you. We look forward to meeting you... Good luck this semester.

The Police Perspective: An Interview With Capt. Collins

by Dan Walsh

Captain Edward J. Collins and Lieutenant Fitzgerald of the Providence Police Department granted The Cowl an interview to better explain their perspective towards the problems associated with the Elmhurst neighborhood. They both want the student body to know that they are pulling for them, and they truly hope to go through the semester without any further arrests. Captain Collins honestly stated that he does not want to arrest the students and possibly jeopardize their academic pursuits. Moreover, he realizes that when a police officer confronts an individual for an unruly action, that the consequences can dramatically alter that person's life. The goal of the police department is not to break through the students' doors like stormtroopers to fill a nightly quota. Rather, they hope to establish a tranquil setting where all residents benefit.

For this reason, Collins and his officers always want to make the right decision in all situations. He explained that everyone assigned to this detail are familiar with the Elmhurst neighborhood and have experience dealing with students. He wants the students to be aware of the fact that they will "base their decisions on what they see at the time of the incident". He emphasizes that he does not want the situation to deteriorate into an ugly atmosphere without concessions made by each side; however, he cannot compromise the principles of the law for the students. The constant pressure applied by the residents, the city officials, and the media to "do their job" places them in an unenviable position. They must live up to their duties, but the arresting of students is "distasteful because you are basically dealing with good kids, who because of alcohol, have placed themselves in a situation that requires us to uphold the law."

Therefore, there will continue to be a heavy police presence throughout the semester. Lieutenant Fitzgerald cites the extra patrols as the reason why there was such a noticeable degree of quiet in the neighborhood throughout the recent weekends. The reinforced patrols "will surely impact the rowdiness" stated Fitzgerald. The Captain congratulates the off-campus students for their recent attitude towards the problem, and he hopes they continue to display such behavior. Collins believes this will happen for the following reasons: the powerful voice of the Elmhurst Association, the extra police patrols, more on-campus events for the students, and the Administration's new disciplinary approach towards student misbehavior. The most vital role must be played by the Administration who, Collins believes, will determine the future by their decisions.

He applauds the College's new policy towards those students who blantly upset public unity. Although the penalties are severe, he acknowledges that the greatest influence upon the students is the disciplinary sanctions imposed by the College. Therefore, he is pleased with the Administration's decision to expel a student for a totally irresponsible act. Captain Collins recognizes that students fear expulsion more than a night in jail because of the incredible consequences associated with such a penalty. The type of student that forces the College to act in this manner deserves expulsion, according to Collins, because this individual is contributing to the blacklisting of P.C. which negatively affects every student.

Indeed, Collins acknowledges that many incidents arise because this is the first taste of freedom and independence for many of the students. He compares this situation to travel with the military which creates for the individual "an air of superiority" that is not easily relinquished. He believes that it is essential for the student to develop his new freedom and independence, but he must attain it in a reasonable manner—without breaking the law. This can be achieved, according to Collins, if the student treats their P.C. community like their own home. He asks the students to consider the problems of the neighborhood as if they existed in their own community. "How would they and their family react to obnoxious partying and urination in their own back yard?" Collins asks. Moreover, Lieutenant Fitzgerald states that it is "just a problem of common courtesy". Both officers believe the students have the ability to turn the situation because they are beginning to make a conscience effort to see the neighborhood as "their home".

Furthermore, the harassment that many students have been experiencing from angry residents will hopefully end. Captain Collins and his force do not appreciate the numerous false calls any more than the students who receive them; however, this was expected. Collins acknowledges that this is a "kind of revenge for the residents who have become fed up with the past problems, it is unfortunate and solves nothing". He adds that this type of behavior will only augment the hostile feelings that exist; therefore, to create a peaceful community, both elements must cooperate together to achieve the needed solutions. The disintegration of the stereotypes and negative verbal blasting that each group has experienced will result in a higher quality of living for everyone.

Along the same lines, the days of the "profit keg parties" cannot continue, according to Lt. Fitzgerald, because of its disruptive impact upon the neighborhood. "Common sense will tell you that these parties cannot exist because of our increased presence and the strongly enforced noise ordinances". It is then up to the courts and the College to determine the proper punishment for these types of parties. There is nothing wrong with those students who are of legal drinking age engaging in a modest party, but a party of "one hundred and fifty crazed students will be investigated" states the Lieutenant. Moreover, the patience of the residents is very thin at the moment, and they will not hesitate to call the police.

In closing, Collins remarked that the "P.C. bashing and the ten keg party must end" in order for the various elements that comprise the Elmhurst Community to live together as neighbors. Both officer's believe in the ability of the students to overcome the disturbances, and live up to their potential as a young adults. Cpt. Collins reiterates that it is not the objective of the Providence Police Department to arrest as many students as possible on a given weekend. The patrols are not meant to harass the students, but to help create a less tension-filled environment. The new attitude of the students has raised the confidence level of the police, especially Captain Collins, who truly feels that a new relationship will develop. The Administration's relaxed attitude toward on-campus events, and their tough disciplinary approach will create a new campus life, one that is hopefully totally devoid of police intervention.

A Weekend In Review

by Caroline Fargeorge

I just wanted to talk about this weekend. Friday night, as about three thousand of you know, was the Stag Dance. All in all, our first alcohol included dance on campus (in a while), was a success. Except for a few immature students, who have not learned to take no for an answer yet, most of the students had a great time, and were well behaved.

Saturday, was the Student Congress-BOP clean-up of the Elmhurst neighborhood. The school has received good publicity for this event. We hope that students' behavior off-campus will not ruin the first good publicity the school has received in a while. It amazes me that most students do not care when other students tarnish P.C.'s name when they get in trouble off-campus and act irresponsibly. You do not think they are hurting you, but listen up - they are - so do something about it. Take a stand. Get involved and see what you can do, but DON'T JUST SIT THERE!

Again, I would like to thank all of you who acted in a mature manner this weekend, especially at the Stag Dance. Hopefully, we can sponsor more of these events on campus. The Student Congress would also like to thank the Administration who made the Stag Dance possible. We are glad we were trusted with this responsibility and hope we have proven our maturity and our abilities. Again, thanks to all, for your support.

R.E.M. Tour Hits Great Woods

By Scott Pianowski

Continuing what has been a terrific month for concerts in this area, the four man band from Athens known as R.E.M. brought their act to Great Woods in Mansfield, Massachusetts this past Friday. And, despite having to please a wide variety of new and old R.E.M. fans alike, they managed to send the crowd of 12,000 home quite satisfied with a sincere, inspiring two hour set of better than 20 songs.

The band seems to have accepted, for better or for worse, that the commercial success of their last two albums, "Green" and "Document", has significantly changed not only their audience, but their concerts. Now, large stadiums, arenas, and concert halls are staple on the second leg of the "Green" tour.

Mind you, R.E.M. gives the impression that they would still rather be playing obscure clubs than large arenas. Early in the show, the message "Hello (your city here), are you ready to rock and roll?" was flashed on a screen behind the stage. Lead singer Micheal Stipe from time to time took to singing into a megaphone, or turning his back to the crowd as he produced the lyrics in his inimitable style.

The crowd didn't seem to mind these and other such eccentricities, mainly because the set managed to please everybody. The band opened with the commercially successful "Stand" and "The One I Love".

They also revived hits such as "Driver 8", "So. Central Rain", and "Fall on Me", songs that in the past disappeared from their live act mysteriously after they surfaced on the radio.

Good thing they revived them too, because the newer R.E.M. fans didn't seem to mind; when the band pleased its older, loyal fans with more remote songs such as "Begin can be, in the aaarrmmmyyyyyyy"), a twangy, faced paced "Pretty Persuasion", and right before they finished, an inspiring "Finest Work Song".

After "Finest Work Song", the band said goodbye with the quirky "Say Goodbye to Never", and then off they went.

This time around, the band has been bolstered by the addi-

the Begin" and "Coyahoga".

The band also seemed able to touch upon any mood you like, whether it be giddiness (during the political "World Leader Pretend"), or good ol' R.E.M. sarcasm (dedicating two songs to Exxon—"See No Evil", and "Turn You Inside Out").

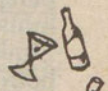

Other highlights included a blistering version of "Orange Crush" (prefaced by Stipe mockingly singing the Army commercial—"Be, all that you

tion of ex dBs guitarists Peter Holsapple, who also dabbled on the keyboards during the show. And although he didn't seem to have too much to do onstage, except occasionally jump around with guitarist Peter Buck or bassist Mike Mills, he certainly did nothing to destruct the chemistry of the performance.

That's important, for it's that band-audience chemistry that enables R.E.M. to perform a spectacular, intimate show to a number even as great as 12,000.

Leeds Theatre Opens for the Season

The Brown University Theatre celebrates the 90th anniversary of Sock and Buskin productions by opening the 89-90 season with Vinegar Tom by Caryl Churchill. Vinegar Tom examines the European whichhunts which left an estimated million women dead from 1500-1700. Churchill's drama examines the British whichhunts and the impact of them which may still be felt today through gender relations, political and religious power and the general human condition. As the 50th anniversary of World War II stares at us and we read and see the recounting of that war's holocaust, the audience member will be drawn to Vinegar Tom's unyielding timeliness.

Vinegar Tom is directed for Brown University Theatre by faculty member Tori Haring-Smith. She has assembled her cast of actors and singers from the university's undergraduate and graduate programs. John R. Lucas is the set and lighting designer and William C. Roche is the technical director. Deb Newhall is serving as costumer.

Vinegar Tom will be presented by Brown University Theatre for two weeks, Thursday September 21-25 and Wednesday September 27-October 1. All performances will begin at 8pm and will be held in Leeds Theatre, 77 Waterman Street (at the marquee), on the Brown University campus. Tickets are priced at $8 and may be reserved or purchased by calling the Box Office at (401) 863-2838 during business hours 11am-5pm. Tickets are very limited, especially for Saturday nights, so it is best to purchase early.

Trinity Square Repertory Company

In the downtown theater scene, Providence's two main theatrical outlets are waging the 1989-90 battle of the subscription series that highlight their differences. In one corner, there is the Providence Performing Arts Center and its highly commercial Broadway series. With mega-hits like "West Side Story" and "Fiddler on the Roof", it will provide a year of safe standards. Yet, for a more adventurous and intellectually stimulating series, there is the Trinity Repertory Theatre.

Under the new artistic direction of acclaimed theatre visionary, Anne Bogart, Trinity hopes to offer a season that spans locale and generations. There is a heavy ethnic diversity, with works from Russia, Chile, and Japan being featured. The season also encompasses an array of authors from Shakespeare to Brecht.

By Jacques LaMarre
Eight plays in all (four in the upstairs theatre, four in the downstairs), there is something for every taste. First, is the Russian drama "Summerfolk", directed by Bogart herself. Next, from the author of "Moonstuck", comes a comedy along the same lines called "Italian American Reconciliation." Author Maria Fornes directs her own Obie-Award winning play, "And What of the Night?" One of the potential high points of the season will be "Julius Ceasar" set in Kennedy-era Washington, D.C.. "The Obscene Bird of Night." follows Shakespeares spiced up classic. It is a look at life in retrospect by one of Chile's foremost authors. Renowned playwright Bertolt Brecht's first work, "Baal", a story of a vagabond, appears in March. A unique addition to the seasons calender is the Japanese Kabuki called "Benten Kozo." The grand finale will be a staging of Trinity's first Broadway musical with orchestra, "On the Town."

Date and ticket information can be obtained by calling the Box Office at 351-4242. There are significant student subscription discounts available. Daring and innovative, Trinity's twenty-sixth and Ms. Bogart's first season will provide many nights of provocative entertainment.

Multi-Media Art Show Exhibited At URI

Two exciting art exhibits are scheduled for Monday September 18, 1989 through Friday October 6, 1989 at University of Rhode Island. Joan Jonas, internationally recognized multimedia visual and performance artist, will have an exhibition devoted to the wide range of her visual art, "Works (1972-1989)" at the URI Main Gallery opening on Monday, September 18, 1989.

Her early studies of art history and sculpture (Museum of Fine Arts Boston, 1959-1961, and Columbia University, 1965, combined with her interest in Noh and Kabuki traditions of Japanese theatre and dance has contributed to her particular artistic perception. Within a minimalistic-like formal structure, Ms. Jonas employs a wide range of objects, props, sounds, and effects to create works with multi-layered images and meanings.

From her first video performance, "Organic Honey's Visual Telepathy" (1972), through "Vertical Roll" (1972), "Mirage" (1976), "The Juniper Tree" (1976), "Double Lunar Dogs" (1981), to her most recent video work, "Volcano Saga" (1989), Ms. Jonas has worked with a wide range of media: painting; sculpture; drawings; props; and prints. These, plus her notebooks and selected examples of her video programs, will be featured in this exhibition.

Since her first performance at the St. Peter's Church, New York in 1968, she has shown her work widely in the United States, Canada, and Europe. She has had shows at: the Leo Castelli Gallery, New York (1972); L'Attice, Rome (1972); Ace Gallery, Venice, CA (1972); Musee Galleria, Paris (1973); Stedelijk Museum, Amsterdam (1982); Carnegie Museum, Pittsburg (1987), and many more not mentioned here.

Also appearing at URI September 18th through October 6th are photographs by Boston Artist, Dana Salvo. This exhibition features Salvo's photographs and is entitled NICHOS Y NACIMIENTOS. Travelling with his wife Dawn, daughter Jahna, and a 4X5 view camera through tiny Indian hamlets in the central highlands of Mexico, Salvo created a series of exquisite color photographs illuminating altar constructions and nativity scenes found within the small thatched homes of these Mayan descendants.

SALVO has received; The Massproductions Award, from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities; the Ruttenberg Fellowship, from the friends of Photography in Carmel, CA; A Production Grant, from Eastman Kodak; and the Blanche Colman Award, from the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company. In addition, this project has received generous support from the Polariod Corporation. He has recently received a Guggenheim Fellowship and spent more time in Mexico.

All exhibitions are free and open to the public.

A Chance To Dance...The Red Brick Tavern

By Meg Neumann

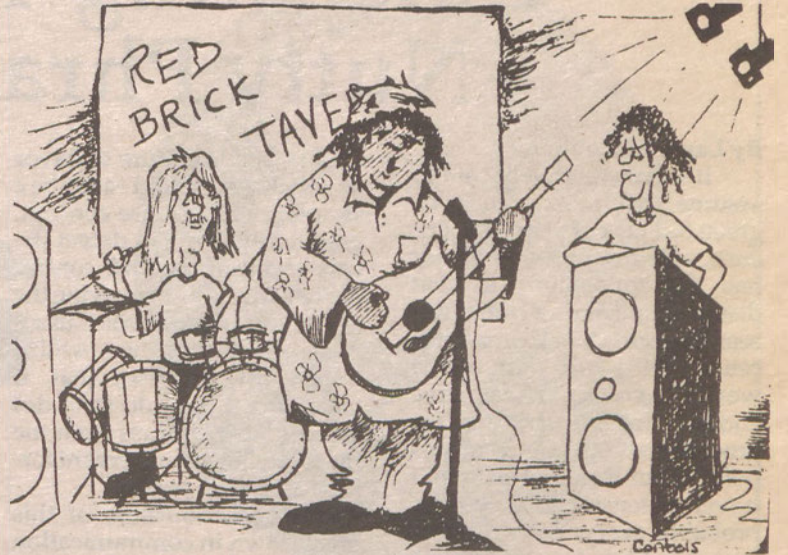

Are you looking for a change in atmosphere? Do you feel the need to dance? If you answered "yes" to either of these two questions, then the Red Brick Tavern is the place for you (No, this is not an advertisement, but I had so much fun there that I wanted to pass the news on to you). The Red Brick is located across the street from the Providence Civic Center and offers its guests something they just can't find at Louie's or Eagles—that is, space to breathe. The fact that the pool tables are in one room and the dance floor in another, means that the crowd is split up, which means more elbow room for you and me. You'll find that you will be able to hold a conversation without someone interrupting you with "Excuse me, I'm trying to make a pool shot," or the usual swing-the-stick-in-the-person's-face-until-he-or-she-moves-trick. So, if you see your friend across the room, you won't have to push and shove your way through the crowd for an hour—all you have to do is walk over. The atmosphere in the pool room is relatively calm and laid back. Everyone walks around talking and laughing with their friends and the major decision of the night seems to be whether or not you and your friend should engage in one more game of pool.

If you do get bored playing pool or watching others play, there is no need to stand around. A better alternative is to escape into the next room and venture out onto the dance floor. The mood in this room, is, to say the least, energetic. When I walked into the dance room, I felt as if I was entering one of the popular dance clubs in N.Y.C.. The floor was crowded, but this did not stop anyone from dancing up a storm. The Red Brick has a variety of bands that play during the week, including a Reggae band on Thursday nights. The band that played last Thursday kept everyone in high spirits, right up until the closing song at 1:00 a.m.. If you want to know what kind of band will be playing, all you have to do is call. The number at Red Brick is 751-7209.

If you think about it, the Red Brick Tavern is like two clubs in one. You can either hang out and play pool or go crazy on the dance floor, or, you can divide your time and do both. Another small, but positive aspect that I should mention is the cleanliness of the girl's room facilities. Yes, believe it or not the girl's room is well-lit and appears to have been recently painted. What more could you ask for? I expect to see you all downtown at the Red Brick during the next few weeks. The line at the door can get rather long, so its best to go by 9:00 p.m.. There is a cover charge for the band and, as expected, PROPER I.D. is required.

DWC...It's Not That Bad

By Megan Grennan

It's one of those embarrassing confessions you make with your head down and your voice mumbled, and only to your dearest and most trusted friends. You're supposed to loathe it more than broccoli, but I must admit—I LIKE CIV. Not that I'm thrilled to go to class every day, especially after a big night out, but I find much of it interesting. I feel like I've learned a lot of useful information that helps me make somewhat intelligent conversation. Many of the topics sound familiar to most people, but after sitting through a civ lecture it all becomes clear. My parents are both very well-educated, but when Satanic Verses was published, I found myself explaining the Islamic religion to them. Things learned in civ are basic facts that make us well rounded individuals.

Out of all my classes, civ is probably the easiest one to sit through. I am so busy writing notes that I don't notice how much time has passed. I don't really have to be at full attention either, as I would have to be in a class where the professor may call on me at any given moment. And even if I do have to miss a class on occasion (due to no fault of my own, of course), I can always march over to Meagher and listen to the tape.

I'll confess, I don't much enjoy cramming for the exams, struggling through the lengthy reading assignments or trying to whip off twelve page papers the night before the due date. But after we are tortured with these challenges to our intellect and stamina, we come away with a better understanding of the past and the world we live in today. Without our knowing it (and often against all our efforts to fight it), the course forces necessary information in our brains, much of which will never be forgotten.

Development of Western Civilization is not a fun course, but it is a useful one. It allows us to view all the aspects of our history at once, as no other class can. This not only makes the past easier to piece together, but the fact that there are four teachers makes class a little less routine. No matter what your major is, the wisdom received from the program is applicable to every day life. No, it's not easy to appreciate it now, but in the long run, I think we'll find that it was worth it.

P-I-E Oxford Director Visits PC

During the week of September 6-13, Mrs. Peggy Moran, Resident Director for the Providence-in-Europe program at Blackfriars, Oxford, England, visited the campus on a familiarization tour. Mrs. Moran, who has been the Resident Director on-site in Oxford since the program began in 1986, oversees the administration of the program and provides services to the P.C. students while they are abroad. Liaison with Blackfriars, location and supervision of housing arrangements, orientation on-site, excursions, and general assistance to students are some of Mrs. Morgan's duties.

A reception for Mrs. Morgan was held on Thursday evening at Dominic Hall and was attended by various college administrators and faculty members. Alumni of the program also attended to welcome Mrs. Morgan to the campus. Her visit included attendance at classes, discussions with college officials and faculty, and day trips to Newport, Sturbridge Village, and Boston. Mrs. Morgan felt that the week helped her to understand the P.C. students better and provided her with a sense of P.C.'s academic and social atmosphere. Mrs. Morgan, who holds advanced degrees in religious studies, teaches graduate students in religion at Westminster College, as well as serving as the Blackfriars Resident Director.

Blackfriars, a Dominican

House of Studies and an affiliated theological college of Oxford University, was founded in 1221 and is older than any of the Oxford colleges. Providence College students have had the opportunity to study abroad in this historic city since 1986, when four students participated in the inaugural year. In 1987, six P.C. students attended Blackfriars, followed by eight more in 1988. During the 1989-90 academic year, the following P.C. students will participate: Daniel Lynn, Peter Morrison, Matthew Bearer, Edward Connelly, Elizabeth Russell, and Kerry Reilly. They will depart from Boston on Saturday, September 30th and begin their studies at Blackfriars on October 9th.

Translating Those Nutty Phrases

By Laureen Connelly

It seems relatively safe to assume that most students, given our lack of years, experience, and resources, have not had the opportunity to visit distant countries, sail the seven seas, or appreciate the magnificence of the Wonders of the world. Let's face it—we have enough trouble paying for groceries at Valueland. At this point in our lives, we just don't travel extensively. Even so, probably everyone at a given time has been touched by regionalism, even within the microcosm of our own P.C. community. People from Massachusetts say "bubler" instead of water cooler or water fountain. Right here in Rhode Island, you order "jimmies" on your sundae as opposed to sprinkles or shots. And when you call Barbara's, do you ask for a sub, a grinder, a hero, or a hoagie? The point is, even immediately around us, we are forced to communicate with flexibility—to use the context of the sentence, at times, to maybe familiarize ourselves with vague or unfamiliar terms. Granted, whether one says soda, pop, or tonic will not create a massive communication gap between natives and out-of-state guests, but the fact remains; very often, many Americans do not speak in clear, direct, straightforward terms. We use allusions from history and literature to flavor or enrich what could easily be a simple, clear, concise concept. Frequently, we can detect the true meaning behind contradictory words by perceiving the nuance and tone of voice used. And sometimes, we utilize trendy little phrases that, if taken literally, could (and do) unavoidably confuse even the most intelligent, observant foreign-speaking person.

The seriousness of this breakdown in communication is exactly what prompted Jarold Kieffer, chairman of the board at the Senior Employment Resources in Annandale, Washington, to compile a 496 page shirt-pocket size book that translates the most common of those nutty phrases, titled "What Are Those Crazy Americans Saying?" Kieffer admits that a large percentage of Americans, himself included, constantly speak everyday English, sprinkled with idioms, colloquialisms, regional vernacular, and just plain slang. For most Americans, these expressions are easily comprehensible and are as ordinary as a hamburger on a menu. But for people who translate English literally, such as many older refugees and immigrants do, phrases like "foot the bill," "bury the hatchet," and "take it easy" only amount to linguistic dead ends.

Kieffer, like many other

Americans, never realized the urgency of this miscommunication until one day, about a year ago, when he asked one of his counselors (who is Vietnamese) to help him move a table.

"Give me a hand, will ya?" Kieffer said. The counselor, noticeably stunned, looked at his hands and blurted, "But I need them both!" To us, it sounds like a bad line from a low budget movie, but Kieffer points out that Americans generally aren't aware of how much difficulty idioms cause for foreign speaking people. Even President George Bush, at the highest level of communication, resorts to such phrases, frequently frustrating foreign journalists covering the White House who then must translate the president's lingo for the folks back home. He was once quoted saying, "Lighten up" in reference to the Soviets. Such a phrase is undoubtedly meaningless in Russian; nevertheless, he suggested they give it a try.

The existence of such a handbook obviously has no immediate relevance to the life of a P.C. student, but the fact that Kieffer recognized the magnitude of such an issue as important as communication and responded to it is commendable. And who knows, it may even provide Americans with a different perspective, a little insight on their language, and maybe even a little "food for thought..."

Resorting With the Class of 1990

By Meg Neumann

The first Last Resort, held on Saturday, September 9, was a tremendous success. Since freshman year, I have been hearing about how much fun these senior get-togethers can be. However, one cannot fully appreciate just how much of a good time these senior functions are until one experiences a Last Resort first hand. After "experiencing" the first Last Resort, I can say that the class of 1990 is definitely looking forward to the second Last Resort.

When I first walked into the Last Resort, I felt as if I had been thrown back in time to freshman year and was about to re-live that part of Providence life that we all treasure—a freshman mixer. Well, I was wrong. Upon entering inside, I realized that this night was going to be nothing like the freshman mixers I had attended in this building so long ago. I must say I felt a real bond between the members of the senior class at this event, especially when we all engaged in some of the games that Cliff Meyers, the entertainer for the evening, suggested. He certainly can't complain about a lack of participation on our part, now can he? One game in particular that everyone thoroughly enjoyed could go hand in hand with the song "Row Row Row Your Boat." That's right, Providence College now has its own official crew team whose members diligently practiced rowing gently down the stream at the Last Resort.

Other activities at the first Last Resort included sing-alongs to some of the old favorite T.V. show themes like, "Giligan's Island," "Green Acres" and "The Adam's Family." Cliff Meyers apologized to us, since some of the lyrics had accidentally been changed. It was amazing how these songs, which we had known all our lives, suddenly took on whole new realms of meaning. Some of the members of the class of 1990 even had the opportunity to make up their own songs and sing them in front of the class. Those who had the most original lyrics were rewarded with their very own Cliff Meyers t-shirts. T-shirts were also given away to those who participated in some of the other Cliff Meyers contests.

Overall, the first Last Resort helped to set a positive mood for this year's graduating class. On behalf of the class of 1990, I would like to extend great thanks to the B.O.P., and to anyone else who volunteered to help at this event. Not only did these students serve the drinks, but they also cleaned up after we all went home. I know that many-a-mop must have been used in the cleaning up process, since there was some sort of mysterious rain cloud going around drenching people all night. And everyone thought the weatherman said clear skies for that night....

ACOA Meeting Sept. 25th

The Student Development Center will begin a ten week psychoeducational group for Adult Children of Alcoholics, beginning during the week of September 25th. This group is open to students who have struggled to grow up with a parent who drank too much. Families who are troubled by problem drinking develop traits over time that often have an adverse effect on the emerging personalities of the members. Common experiences will be shared within the context of a confidential support group. Students will be helped to identify their own difficulties and to increase effective coping. Registration is taking place at the Student Development Center, Room 209 in Slavin. The time and date of the first meeting will be announced.

Intrarmural Update

By Mark Jessup
Football Preview:

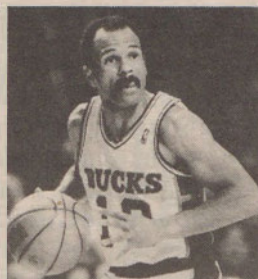

With the new football season slated to begin this week, several strong squads are vying for championship status. At the top of the heap, the Psycho-T's have the finest combination of talent, experience and chemistry, although their inability to win "The Big One" in past years has provoked some mild criticism from restless fans. Also not to be taken lightly, True Grit is sporting a few new wrinkles, revising their roster with the addition of some big name free agents. Team Enforcer Eric Diliberto adds: "They turned down my suggestion to incorporate more violence into the league, but I'm going to do it anyhow." Another team stockpiled with talent and experience, The Untouchables, rounds out the Big Three in strong fashion. The combination of size, speed, and knowledge of the game had them knocking on the door last season, and, according to representative Tom McCain, the team is "better than ever." Other contenders include The Macho Pigs, The Krotch Krickets, and of course Rod Strickland.

Football rosters are still being accepted in the IAB office and will be until Friday, September 22. Be on the look-out for mixed doubles tennis and the October debut of ultimate frisbee.

Lady Friars have Stormed to a 5-0 Start.

Friar Field Hockey Rolls On

Ladies Notch Three Wins, Improve Record to 5-0

by Beth Albertini

Providence Field Hockey increased its record to 5-0 overall and 2-0 in Big East play this week with strong defensive wins over Connecticut, Villanova and West Chester.

The Lady Friars began their initial Big East season last Wednesday against Connecticut. In a game which featured great second half defense, Freshman goalie Debbie Hagie came up with 11 saves as the Lady Friars were victorious, 2-1. Freshman Lynne Campbell scored with 7:08 left in the first half, with an assist by Karen Krawchuk. Connecticut tied it halfway through the second half, then the defensive struggle began, with both teams fending off numerous offensive attacks. Debbie Barnhill scored off a corner from Cami White with 6:41 left in the game. Providence protected their lead skillfully, as Connecticut seemed to come up with chance after chance.

Over the weekend, the Lady Friars travelled to suburban Philadelphia for games against Villanova and West Chester University.

Riding Cami White's three goals, Providence came away with a tough win at Villanova on Saturday. After the first half of play, the Lady Friars found themselves facing a 2-0 deficit. Junior Cami White answered the challenge in the second half, coming up with three goals to win the game. Karen Krawchuk and Kristen Manneheim added assists as Debbie Hagie turned in another strong game in goal, with 11 saves. The win was the Lady Friars' second straight in the Big East.

Sunday's game versus West Chester was a virtual repeat of Saturday's win. Once again, the Lady Friars were down 2-0 at halftime. Cami White starred for Providence with two goals. Her five goals for the weekend earned her the Big East Player of the Week. Karen Krawchuk turned in one goal and two assists. Jacqui Stokes added one assist in the 3-2 win.

"It was a tough game defensively," said fourth year head coach Jackie Gladu. "West Chester took us out of our style of play, but we kept digging deep to get that third goal."

The Lady Friars are now ranked number one in the Northeast region, with the national rankings coming out today. They are 2-0 in the Big East with games remaining against Boston College and Syracuse. Thursday's game versus Massachusetts will also be a crucial game for the Providence stickgals.

Volleyball Goes Big Time

By Todd Tucker

The 1989-90 school year marks the second year of the PC Men's Volleyball Club and our official entrance into the New England Collegiate Volleyball League, or NECVL. Last year, despite many hassles, we pulled together to a .500 season, and with all of our starters returning, we are expected to be one of the best teams in the league. We plan to have a 15-17 game schedule, playing such teams as Boston College, Boston University, University of New Hampshire, University of Connecticut, Holy Cross and University of Rhode Island, and compete in three league tournaments.

We will schedule an informational meeting within the next three weeks and try-outs will take place in early November. If you are interested or have any questions, contact Todd Tucker at Friar Box 3380 or 865-4171.

PC Racquetball Looks To Reach New Heights

by Karen Pennacchio

Don't look now, but another year of Friar racquetball is upon us. Coach Steve Myer has not wasted any time in preparing for this '89 season. Practice began last week for both the women and the men. Women's practices this year are every Monday and Wednesday, 6-8 pm. The men's team will practice on Tuesdays and Thursdays. The team has four courts reserved during that time, so come early to reserve a court during those nights.

Coach Myer expects a more confident and mature team this year. With the improvement of such players as George Meschi, Tom Fay, Al Padilla, Julie Girard, and Kate Clancy, the team expects to reach new heights and hopefully surpass last year's successful season.

With many of last year's stars gone, the Friars will have to work twice as hard. The men's squad lost their number one player, Jimmy Salvato, as well as quality veterans Garrett Silvia, Reid Greco, and Ken Silvia. Coach Myer hopes some of the new additions will fill the voids.

"Newcomers Chris Nordin, Matt Curtin, and Maureen Bakis are playing well, and will hopefully win some matches for us this year," said an enthusiastic Coach Myer.

Myer will be helped with the coaching chores this year by PC graduate Lynn Terracino, who graduated just two years ago. Terracino is a former number one player for the Friars.

All involved will be working hard to lead the Friars to yet another successful year. Last year, PC finished 13th at the World Collegiate Championship, held in New Orleans, Louisiana.

Lady Friars hoping to serve up a winning season

By Kathy Imhof

The Women's Tennis Team hosted Rutgers University in a match played on Sunday morning. In the closely contested match, Rutgers prevailed, 6-3.

Due to early morning wet courts, the three doubles matches were played first indoors in the Peterson Rec Center. Team captain Kerry Maloney, a Big East Academic All-Star award winner last year, teamed up with freshman Laura Tozza for a win at second doubles, 7-6, 2-6, 6-4.

The six singles matches were played outdoors at the conclusion of the doubles matches. Freshman Jenn Comstock and Becky Lewicki each won their matches at fifth and sixth singles, respectively.

In a conversation with Assistant Coach Glenn Gamma, it was pointed out that the Lady Friars lost only one senior to graduation, captain Velina Rhodes. This year's team has two senior and three freshman starters.

Although the Lady Friars have started off slowly (currently 1-4) with a win over Rhode Island and losses to Seton Hall, Boston University, Fordham and Rutgers, Head Coach Carl LaBran-che hopes that the team will be able to improve on last year's record of 5-10 in the fall season and 2-4 in the spring. Sixteen matches remain to be played in the Lady Friars schedule.

The team is looking forward to wins against their toughest opponents Boston College and Holy Cross, and to doing well in the ITCA Tournament in Princeton, New Jersey on November 3-5.

The Lady Friars are in action this week, hosting Brown on September 20, Hartford on September 21 and Vermont on September 23.

Mens Soccer Notches First Win

by Brian DeCesare

The Providence College men's soccer team has opened its 1989 season all evened-up at 1-1-1.

After losing their first game of the year to URI last Wednesday, and tying UNH on Saturday, the Friars rebounded with an impressive 4-2 victory over the Merrimack Warriors on Monday of this week.

In the Merrimack win, the Friars started out sluggishly. Merrimack took a quick 1-0 lead four minutes into the game. After PC's John Martin nearly scored midway through the half, the Friars finally tied the contest on a goal by sophomore Jeff Caiola, off a feed from Tony Barreira. PC almost seized the lead in the final minute of the half, but a scoring attempt went wide.

The Friars wasted no time in the second half, as Caiola tallied for the second time just 30 seconds in. However, Merrimack's Joe LoCoco struck back just 10 seconds later. As Merrimack threatened to take the lead, but with PC goalie Jim Morris out of position, Friar defender Tim Bennett saved a goal with an unbelievable kick-save.

PC then took the lead for good on a goal by freshman Jeff Van Tiem 12 minutes later. Good defense and excellent goaltending by Morris proved to be the difference. Hani Henein added an insurance goal for the eventual 4-2 final.

In last week's games, Jeff Caiola's goal put PC ahead 2-1 against URI, but the Rams tied the score just before halftime. The Rams eventually won the contest 3-2, despite a good defensive effort by the Friars.

The Friars fared better against UNH, with that match ending in a 1-1 tie. PC outshot the Wildcats 17-14, while Friar goalie Morris made seven stops in goal.

Having had a taste of victory, defeat, and a tie, Providence hopes to have better success as they begin a tough four-game road trip at Brown this Wednesday.

Mens Tennis Clipped By Georgetown At Big East Championship

by Scott Pianowski

There's an old cliché in sports: it's better to be lucky than to be good.

Well, this weekend, when men's tennis traveled to the Big East championships in Weekapaug, R.I., the Friars were good enough to capture the crown, but not quite lucky enough. Georgetown captured the title, edging the Friars for the top spot 38-36, marking the second consecutive season the Friars were the bridesmaid in the Big East men's tennis championships.

"We played better tennis than I thought we were capable of playing," said a confused Carl LaBranche about the weekend developments. "I'm disappointed, but very, very proud... I just can't imagine us playing better."

The results of the weekend are confusing, indeed. Providence managed to win four of the nine flights, and bested Georgetown in four of their six head to head matches, yet still finished second.

The main difference: while PC beat Georgetown four times, practically no one else could beat the Hoyas all weekend. Of the other six teams in the tournament, only Villanova, at number two singles, managed to down Georgetown. And although the Friars captured 19 of 24 matches over the weekend, they came up just short.

Despite the bitter defeat, the Friars turned in some splendid performances. Sophomore Jeff Morneau was a double victor for PC as he captured both number three singles (6-4, 5-7, 6-2 over Ingo Schoenboerner of St. John's), and number three doubles (he teamed with Mike Gagliardi to down Steve Fishbach and Jamie Ribman of Georgetown, 6-3, 2-6, 6-4).

The singles victory was particularly impressive. In the semifinals he overcame four match points to outlast Georgetown's Kirk Haggerty 3-6, 7-6, 7-6. For his spectacular weekend, Morneau was tabbed as PC male athlete of the week.

"Every time I see him (Morneau) play, I'm more and more amazed," raved LaBranche.

Just as amazing in singles was Fernando Romero; the reliable senior captured number one singles with a 6-4, 4-6, 7-5 victory over Georgetown's Greg Belzberg. The final Friar champion, sophomore Paul Mandeville, dropped St. John's Rob Stang 6-4, 7-5 for the victory in number five singles.

One major blow for the Friars was flights one and two doubles. PC returned Big East champions in each flight, but both the number one doubles team of Romero-Andy Garcia and the number two team of Richard Lowther-Mandeville were defeated in the semifinals.

The semifinal round was doubly crude to Garcia, as the immortal Hiro Takata of BC upset the PC co-captain in the semifinal round of number four singles. The same Takata played dead in the final, losing 6-1, 6-1 to Georgetown.

"Our team looked so strong going into the tournament that we figured that we could survive one or two upsets and still win the tournament," said Garcia. "Our team produced, but Georgetown made no mistakes, no early upsets, and even though we beat them head-to-head, no one else could beat them."

"When push came to shove, Georgetown executed," noted LaBranche.

The Friars may have not captured the title, but they still feel they are the best team in the Big East. When they travel to D.C. in the spring, they intend to establish themselves once and for all as the premiere team in the Big East.

Coach LaBranche says simply, "We'll go to D.C. in the spring ... and we'll win."

Lady Friars Topple Yale, 3-1

By Renee Duff

Lady Friar soccer improved their record to 2-0 after a 3-1 victory on the road at Yale last week.

Earlier in the week, the Lady Friars defeated Stonehill at home in their first game of the season.

Head coach Gerry Guay commented on the match with Stonehill indicating that his team played well.

"We controlled the game, but I think our timing was off. We could have had a few more goals, but overall we played decently. The heat could have been a factor, (the temperature rose up into the 90's that day) and I had to make a great deal of substitutions just to give everyone a water break."

After this first victory, the Lady Friars traveled to Yale where they defeated them 3-1.

Junior forward Lisa Lyons put Providence on the scoreboard first with a goal at the 30:08 mark of the first period. Senior Theresa Owens assisted on the goal.

Senior tri-captain Lizanne Coyne gave Providence a 2-0 advantage just before halftime at 42:09. Sophomore midfielder Leslie Danehy had the assist. Lyons netted her second goal of the game on a rebound of Eileen Farren 5:34 into the second half to put the Lady Friars out in front 3-0.

Junior goalkeeper Pam Woolford got her second win of the season and made 11 saves in the game.

Coach Guay commented that "we played much better. Yale has a good size field and this gave us room to work." The Lady Friars displayed nice movement on the field, and played very organized, clean ball.

"We've been working on playing more organized and getting our movement together," Guay added, "and this work showed against Yale. We still have much work to do, but this is just a step."

The Lady Friars will travel to face UCONN on Wednesday, September 20 and Coach Guay is optimistic. "UCONN is a strong team that plays an amazingly deliberate game. We should be able to give them a good game even though they have beaten the teams they have played soundly. If we can play our game well and put it all together cleanly, this will be a good test."

The Lady Friars are off to a great start this season, posting one of the best early season records in many years. Coach Guay, when asked about this improvement stated that "we only lost three players this season, and we should do well."

Coach Guay also indicated that a change in the schedule has helped account for the success so far this season. "Usually we play in a tournament at UCONN in the very first part of the season, and although we play well, we usually end up in the hole 1-2 by the end. By not playing such a tough tournament right off, we allow ourselves to play a few games before we face the really tough teams," added Guay on this schedule change.

The team is a young one with only three seniors starting, and Guay is pleased with the performance of many of his players. "Pam Woolford has come in to replace injured Shannon Swezey in goal and has done just a wonderful job. What she gives up in height she makes up with good movement in the goal. The rest of the team feels confident with her in goal and she has done a fine job so far."

"Chris Tiffany has been great at sweeper and our shooters have been shooting more and hitting, unlike last year when we took the shots but couldn't put it in the net."

This week the Lady Friars hope to improve on their record once again, and keep up the trend they've been on.
